(2.) A commendation; a man that told me ALL THINGS that ever I did; a man that hath diſcovered himſelf to be God as well as man, in that he hath ript up and ranſacked my heart and life. He had diſcovered her lewdneſs to her, and thereby repreſented all other things to her as ſeen by him. There is here implied a humble ſenſe ſhe had of her ſinfulneſs, which Chriſt had given her a diſcovery and conviction of; and by his ſearching word ſhe underſtood that he was the ſearcher of hearts, and ſo commends him as a man that told her all things that ever ſhe did.

(3.) A concluſion, by way of interrogation and expoſtulation, Is not this the Chriſt? importing no manner of doubt about it in her own breaſt, but a ſtrong affirmation, pointing at him unto them. He had told her what ſhe was, and in this glaſs ſhe ſaw her own vileneſs; and he had told her what he was, and in this glaſs ſhe ſaw his glory: and by both theſe means he diſcovered himſelf to be the true Meſſias, the God-man, the promiſed Immanuel, God with us; and her heart being full of Chriſt, and overflowing with the living water of the Spirit that he had given her, it vented itſelf and ran over in his praiſe and commendation unto others; Come ſee a man that told me all things that ever I did; is not this the Chriſt?—— I ſhall endeavour ſome further explication of this text, upon a note of doctrine, paſſing over many others. What I mainly fix upon is,

OBSERV. That thoſe ſaving diſcoveries of Chriſt, that make perſons to condemn and abaſe themſelves to the loweſt, lead them, at the ſame time, to commend and exalt Chriſt to the higheſt.

Self-ſearching, ſoul-humbling, and ſin-diſcovering manifeſtations, iſſue in Chriſt-exalting commendations. I think it is remarkable in this woman, that kindly humiliation did not take place in her, till after that Chriſt had clearly manifeſted himſelf to her, ſaying, I that ſpeak unto thee am he. It is true, when Chriſt firſt diſcovered her wickedneſs and lewdneſs to her, ſhe appeared to be ſelf-condemned and convicted, ſaying, I perceive that thou art a Prophet; and a true Prophet indeed, that can tell me how many acts of lewdneſs I have been guilty of: her conſcience flying in her face, and ſubſcribing to the truth of what he had told her; but yet, as her firſt conviction appeared to be very partial and weak, in that, as ſome think, ſhe ſeemed to ſhift any diſcourſe about her own vileneſs, and ſtarted a queſtion relative to a national difference betwixt the Jews and the Samaritans, to divert that ſubject concerning her baſeneſs; ſo, I think, we may conclude, that her convictions before were very legal, driving her rather to her works and duties than to Chriſt; for, inſtantly ſhe falls a queſtioning him about the means of worſhipping God, as if when now ſhe was convinced of her ſin againſt God, her only way of obtaining his favour, was by endeavouring to pleaſe him by her duties of worſhip, whom ſhe had diſpleaſed by her wickedneſs and lewdneſs. And, indeed, the firſt airth that an awakened conſcience looks to, is the law, the firſt Husband. But now, when once Chriſt diſcovers and manifeſts himſelf to her, ſhe is kindly humbled under a ſenſe of her vileneſs; yea, and of all her heart and life-wickedneſs repreſented to her under that; and in the light wherein Chriſt diſcovered himſelf, ſhe ſaw all her abominations; He told me all things that ever I did. She is now humbled and abaſed to the loweſt; why? her ſenſe of ſin is not now partial, but full; He told me all things that ever I did. Neither is it now legal but evangelical; for it was now in the glaſs of a ſaving manifeſtation, in the glaſs wherein Chriſt diſcovered his glory and excellency that ſhe ſaw all her own filthineſs and deformity.—And while ſhe is thus debaſed and humbled by the diſcovery of Chriſt, how does ſhe commend and exalt him to the higheſt? She commends him to her neighbour-citizens, and puts the greateſt honour upon him, both as he is the true God incarnate, that by his omniſcient eye could ſee, and ſo declare to her, All that ever ſhe did; and as he is the true Meſſias, the anointed of God; Is not this the Chriſt?

The truth of this doctrine might be cleared from many ſcripture paſſages, That ſaving diſcoveries of Chriſt tend to make perſons condemn and debaſe themſelves, and to commend and exalt Chriſt, as it was with Job, chap. xl. ver. 4. 5. God having manifeſted his glory, he cried out, Behold I am vile; what ſhall I anſwer thee? I will lay my hand upon my mouth; as being unworthy to ſpeak in the preſence of ſuch a great and glorious one; therefore he adds, Once have I ſpoken, but I will not anſwer: yea, twice, but I will proceed no further. And chap xlii. 5, 6. I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear; but now mine eyes ſeeth thee: wherefore, I abhor myſelf, and repent in duſt and aſhes. See how the diſcovery of Chriſt makes the prophet Iſaiah to condemn and abaſe himſelf to the loweſt, and to commend and exalt Chriſt to the higheſt, chap. vi. 1, 5. He ſaw the Lord ſitting upon a throne high and lifted up, and his train filling the temple; then says he, Wo is me, for I am undone! because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts. To this purpose we may see Isa. xlv. 22,—25. Look to me and be saved, all ye ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none else. Well, what will issue upon that saving sight of Christ? Both the abasing of himself, ver. 23. To him every knee shall bow; and the high commendation and exaltation of Christ, Surely shall one say, In the Lord have I righteousness and strength: in him shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory, ver. 24, 25.—— But passing many other proofs, I suppose it will be found evident in the experience of all the saints, that every manifestation and discovery of Christ tends to work both these effects at the same time, even to make them condemn and debase themselves to the lowest, and to commend and exalt Christ to the highest.

This subject is very large, but I design, for shortening the work, to confine myself especially to the circumstances and effects of the discovery that Christ here gives of himself to the woman of Samaria, in the following method.

I. I shall show what we are to understand by Christ manifesting or discovering himself to a person.

II. What are these sin-discovering and soul-debasing effects of Christ manifesting himself; or, when may one be in case to say, that Christ hath told him all things that ever he did?

III. What are these Christ-exalting commendations, wherein such discoveries of Christ vent themselves; and so notice the particular import in what the woman here says, Come see a man that told me all things that ever I did; Is not this the Christ?

IV. I will shew the reasons of the doctrine, whence it is that saving discoveries of Christ have such a self-debasing and Christ-exalting influence. And then,

V. Make application of the whole.

I. I will speak a little of Christ's discovering and manifesting himself to sinners. And here I would confine myself to the circumstances of the discovery that he makes of himself to this woman, which wrought this effect in her, and which, in most particulars, will be found to agree with all the saving manifestations that our Lord makes of himself to his people, either at first conversion, or any renewed visit he makes to them. And here we may notice, 1. Some things relating to the means of the discovery that Christ makes of himself to this woman. 2. Some things relating the manner of it.

1st, There are some things in the context relating to the means of this discovery.

1. One of the more remote means was his taking occasion to come to a place where she was also to come, and so casting himself in her way, as it were. This is noticed very remarkably, ver. 4th of this chapter, where it is said, He must needs go through Samaria: Whatever other reasons there were for his going this way, here was a special one; he must needs meet this woman, and with those Samaritans, whom, on this occasion, he converted to the faith. If there be but one soul that Christ hath an errand to, the world will not keep him away from the place where that soul is. He must needs go through that place: there is a sweet necessity he lies under; he must needs bring a gospel-ministry there; he must needs bring gospel-ordinances where he has any souls to meet with, and discover himself savingly unto. They to whom Christ hath discovered himself will find a merciful providence exercised about them, in his ordering their lot so, that either they are brought to the place where Christ and his ordinances are, or Christ and his ordinances come to the place where they are.

2. A second more remote means of this discovery is our Lord ordering matters so as her secular errand is made the occasion of her spiritual good and advantage, ver. 7. There comes this woman of Samaria to draw water. Providence may be intending much mercy to those who are both very unworthy of it, and very unconcerned about it. Little was this sinful woman minding any other thing but to draw water; yet a happy providence made her to meet with the Saviour of sinners. Some have come to ordinances, as this woman did to Jacob's well, with no other view, save upon some secular and carnal errand; may be to draw the water of damnation to themselves, or to draw in some applause to themselves amongst their neighbours, or merely from custom and curiosity, little minding any saving good, which yet the Lord hath prevented them with.

3. A third mean of this discovery is, Christ falls a discoursing with her, and upon occasion of his seeking, and her refusing him a drink of water, he shews his pity and compassion on her, as an ignorant and unsensible sinner, having no knowledge of her real want and necessity, with respect to that better water which he had to give; and particularly he lets her know, that the well of living water was in his hand to dispense as he pleased; and that as he offers his grace before we ask it, so he will not refuse it to them who ask it upon his offer and promise: If thou hadst known, thou wouldst have asked, and I would have given thee living water. And besides, in his discourse, he commends his wares to her, ver. 14.; his gifts, his graces, his Spirit, as a well above all wells, a well of water springing up to everlasting life; and all to be freely dispensed by way of gift and donation. And this is the way he deals still with sinners in the free dispensation of the gospel.

4. A fourth mean of this discovery, is his working a work of conviction upon her conscience, by shewing her transgressions to her, and setting her sin in order before her, ver. 18.; and thereby discovering his prophetical office to her, and raising some esteem of him as a Prophet, ver. 19. The freest offers do not prevail with sinners, till they be convinced of their sinfulness and misery. Indeed, it is not every sight of sin that will convince the sinner; but Christ must set it home upon the conscience, and discover sin to them marked by his all-seeing eye, his all-searching eye; for the woman knew pretty well, how matters were with her, and yet, without any due sense, till he ript up and laid open her bosom, and made her see and understand that all her sins were naked and open unto the eye of him with whom she had now to do; and though she did not know him to be the Christ, yet she begins to have some high thought of him as a Prophet that had the mind of God, and by whom God was discovering her sinfulness to her. But it does not appear, as yet, that she ſhe perceived any thing in him above ordinary prophets; ſo gradually, by little and little, did he manifeſt himſelf to her. Only it is evident here, that in God's order and method of working effectually on the hearts of ſinners, as there is a diſcovery of ſin that goes before a diſcovery of Chriſt, without which perſons do not ſee their need of Chriſt; ſo the more that Chriſt diſcovers ſin, and touches the ſinner's heart therewith, it breeds the more reſpect and eſtimation of him, though it may be very weak and low at firſt.

5. A fifth mean of this diſcovery, is his opening up to her the nature of true ſpiritual and acceptable worſhip, ver. 21,—24. Here he gives her ſuch inſtruction as might tend to let her ſee that he was a Prophet above all prophets, that knew what changes were quickly to fall out with reference to the place of religious worſhip, and what ſort of worſhip God would have, what a Spirit he is, and what ſervice he requires. As faith comes by hearing, ſo diſcoveries of Chriſt, the glorious object of faith, come by the means of inſtruction and divine teaching, ſuch as the Lord Jeſus here gives this woman. And this paves way to

6. A ſixth mean of this diſcovery, namely, his working in her heart a kindly rememberance of and high eſteem for the Meſſias, ver. 25. The longer ſhe converſed with Chriſt, ſhe is the more enamoured with him. Though he diſclaimed the Samaritan worſhip, and declared they had no warrant for their religion; yet having, at the ſame time ſhewed that the Jewiſh worſhip was warrantable by the word of God, though yet their temporary way of worſhip was what his coming to the world was to give a burial to, and to aboliſh, upon which a more excellent way of worſhipping God was to ſucceed; I ſay, the more ſhe hears him ſpeak, the more ſhe is enamoured with his diſcourſe, and filled with great reſpect and regard to the Meſſias, from whom ſhe expected ſuch inſtruction as that, I know that Meſſias comes, which is called Chriſt: when he is come, he will tell us all things; not knowing as yet that ſhe was ſpeaking to him. She is ſpeaking with a very high eſtimation of him, as the great Teacher of his church, that would fully reveal the counſel of God concerning his ſervice and means of ſalvation. And now the woman, by theſe means, being brought to have precious thoughts of Chriſt, and to give ſuch a notable evidence of her faith concerning him, then he diſcovered himſelf, ſaying, I that ſpeak unto thee, am he. When people are brought to ſublime thoughts of Chriſt, then it is certain Chriſt is not far off from them.——Thus ye have the means. We ſhall,

2*dly*, Notice the manner of the diſcovery that Chriſt makes of himſelf, I that ſpeak unto thee, am he. Here is a clear manifeſtation and revelation that Chriſt himſelf gives of himſelf, I that ſpeak unto thee, am he. It is not ordinary for Chriſt to give ſuch teſtimony of himſelf; there muſt be ſome rare thing here: for, when John's diſciples came to aſk him, Art thou he that ſhould come, or may we look for another? He does not ſay, I that ſpeak unto thee am he; nay, but, Go tell John what ye hear and ſee; the blind receive their ſight, the lame walk, the lepers are cleanſed, the deaf hear, the dead are raiſed up, and the poor have the goſpel preached to them, Mat. xi. 5.; let him draw the concluſion from theſe premiſes whether I am he or not: but here he gives as clear a diſcovery of himſelf as in all the book of God, out of his own mouth. We know Peter gave a clear teſtimony, Thou art Chriſt, the Son of the living God; the Father gave a great teſtimony to him, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleaſed: but that Chriſt gave as clear a teſtimony of himſelf, is rarely to be found in all the New Teſtament: yea, this diſcovery of himſelf is the more remarkable, becauſe he forbad his diſciples, at that time, to tell expreſly who he was; and when Pilate and Herod, and others, aſk him, Who art thou? he either gave them a very dark anſwer, or none at all. Chriſt is not laviſh of his commendations in this manner; therefore, there is ſome ſpeciality here: and yet there is ſomething in the manner of Chriſt manifeſting himſelf to her that is common to all the children of God, to whom he ſavingly manifeſts himſelf.

1. It was in a word, a home word ſpoken to her heart, that he diſcovered himſelf; I that ſpeak unto thee, am he. It was by ſpeaking to her that he manifeſted himſelf; ſo it is in the word that he diſcovers himſelf to his own; that word that comes into the ear of others, comes into their heart. The joyful ſound goes through the very ſoul of the man, in a ſecret indiſcernible manner: this is plain in the caſe of this woman, both with reſpect to the word that he ſpake for her conviction, to diſcover her ſin; and in the word that he ſpake for her conſolation, diſcovering himſelf as the Saviour. In the former he had ſaid, I know this is not thy husband that thou haſt; the word went to her heart; that is a true word ſays ſhe, ſpoken by a true prophet, for I am living in whoredom. Thus God, in dealing with ſinners by his word externally, makes it have an internal ſound in the heart; he whiſpers in the ear of a ſinner, and makes him think, Alas! that is very true; I am juſt guilty of that ſin; I cannot reclaim againſt what the miniſter ſays; all is true; I muſt take with the charge of God's word. So with reſpect to the latter, when he diſcovers himſelf ſavingly, it is in the word of grace; it comes into the ear, but the finger of God ſets it down to the heart; The God that commanded light to ſhine out of darkneſs ſhines into the heart: and it is in the glaſs of the word that this light ſhines; beholding as in a glaſs the glory of the Lord.

2. It was a particular diſcovery; I that ſpeak unto thee, am he; to THEE: ſo when God, in Chriſt, diſcovers himſelf, it is a particular diſcovery; he calls his own ſheep by name, John x. 3. As the word of conviction is particular, ſo the word of grace is particular, as if God were dealing with none other but that perſon. O! has he ſpoken to thee, man; to thee, woman; in particular, by his word, and ſet it home upon thy heart?

3. It was an immediate diſcovery he himſelf made of himſelf. This indeed is not to be expected in the manner that the woman here was privileged with: but though it is not now in an immediate, but in a mediate way; yet where he ſavingly manifeſts himſelf, he takes the means in his own hand, and makes the ſoul find that it is none other but himſelf that is dealing with it; it is not the voice of men or miniſters, but the voice of God that it hears, 1 Theſ. ii. 13. The word comes with ſuch light, life, and majeſty, that the ſoul finds it is, indeed, the word of God; it has a heavenly eccho with it. And hence,

4. It

4. It was a clear and demonſtrative diſcovery; I am HE, ſays Chriſt to the woman. Saving diſcoveries are by way of demonſtration, as the word imports, John xvi. 9. Thus he manifeſts himſelf to his people, as he does not manifeſt himſelf to the world, who remain incompaſſed and inveloped with the clouds and miſts of groſs darkneſs and ignorance, amidſt all the literal knowledge they enjoyed.

5. It was a gradual diſcovery, by little and little, from one ſtep to another, till he made all his glory paſs before this woman: even ſo, where he manifeſts himſelf ſavingly, he does it gradually; His goings forth are prepared as the morning. The work that is very ſudden, ſeldom proves very ſound. It is obſerved of the bad ground, that the ſeed ſown did ſuddenly ſpring up; God's ordinary way of manifeſting himſelf is gradual; The path of the juſt ſhines more and more unto the perfect day. Then,

6. It was a ſenſible diſcovery that he gave of himſelf to this woman; her time was a time of love. After he had let her ſee that ſhe was lying in her blood, and in the puddle of pollution, and after he had filled her heart with precious thoughts of the Meſſias, the Deliverer, he would no longer hide himſelf from her. O how ſweetly and ſenſibly does he manifeſt himſelf to his people, when they are apt to think he is far from them! As this woman was ſpeaking of the Meſſias, as the glorious perſon whom ſhe knew not if ever ſhe would have the happineſs to ſee, Behold, ſays Chriſt, I that ſpeak unto thee, am he. O! ſays the ſoul, will I ever get a ſight of Chriſt? I know not if ever I will be ſo happy; why, then uſually he lets them know he is not far off.

7. It was a wonderful diſcovery he made of himſelf to this woman; there were many wonders in it: and, indeed, whenever Chriſt manifeſts himſelf to any ſoul, it will ſee ſome ſuch like wonders as ſhe ſaw. O wonderful, might ſhe ſay! is he ſpeaking to me, ſuch a poor woman as I am, and ſuch a baſe woman as I have been! Why, as there was no fibneſs, or relation, betwixt him and her, but on the contrary a ſtated enmity and alienation; for, the Jews had no dealing with the Samaritans; yea, but he muſt deal with her, though ſhe was no good woman; nay, a common whore, lying in whoredom. O wonderful! Though ye were never ſuch a great ſinner, yet Chriſt is content to ſpeak with you, for your everlaſting good; and it is an ill tale that may not be heard. Will ye allow Chriſt to ſpeak to you? Was it not wonderful that Chriſt ſhould ſpeak to this woman, in ſuch a manner as he did? How kindly does he ſpeak to her that he might gain her heart with his love, and kill her with kindneſs? One might have thought he would call her a baſe filthy devil, as it was ſaid to himſelf moſt blaſphemouſly; Say we not well, thou art a Samaritan, and haſt a devil? it was true of this woman of Samaria, ſhe was a Samaritan that had a filthy devil; yea, the Jews took all the Samaritans for incarnate devils. But does Chriſt call her ſo? Nay; and it adds to the wonder of his diſcovering himſelf to her, that ſhe was a ſlighter of Chriſt, he was undervalued by her; Art thou greater than our father Jacob? ſays ſhe, ver. 12.; yea, ſhe refuſed him a drink of cold water; yet he bears with all theſe affronts, and manifeſts himſelf to her, even to her: O wonderful! Do not ſeveral ſuch wonders take place, when the Lord comes to ſpeak and manifeſt himſelf to you, O believers, O ſinners? Are there not wonders enough to be obſerved concerning this glorious perſon ſhewing himſelf? He might dwell in heaven to all eternity, as he dwelt in heaven from all eternity, and be for ever happy: the Father was good company to him, and he needed none of your company; he had infinite delight in himſelf more than in all his creatures, yet for all this, that he ſhould ſpeak and ſhew himſelf to you. How wonderful is it? His diſcoveries are wonderful, in that he ſeeks nothing of us: it is true, he made the faſhion of ſeeking a drink of water from this woman, but that was only by the bye; he got meat and drink enough when he got the woman to himſelf; the great thing he was ſeeking was to get the woman divorced from all her baſe huſbands, and married to himſelf; yea, betrothed to him for ever: yea, Chriſt's viſits to ſome may be wonderful, not only to the ſinner, that gets them; but to the ſaints and diſciples, that ſee or hear tell of them. We are told here, ver. 27. that the diſciples, when they came, marvelled that he talked with that woman: though they durſt not challenge him, yet it was matter of offence to them that he ſo freely converſed with her. Chriſt can demit himſelf, and ſtoop ſo low to a poor ſinner as is marvellous to fleſh and blood: there is more kindneſs and humility in him alone, than in all his friends; they being advanced, by grace, are apt to forget themſelves, and to become ſo proud as to deſpiſe others, though they themſelves were once lifted out of the dungeon, and choſen out of the duſt. But then,

8. It was a powerful diſcovery that he made of himſelf to this woman, as appears by the gracious effects thereof. Now, her heart goes off all things elſe, ſhe forgets her water-pot; her mind is ſet upon ſome greater things; ſhe ran away to the city, that ſhe might invite others to follow him, who had ſo wonderfully manifeſted himſelf to her; and, indeed, all ſaving manifeſtations have a power attending them. The goſpel comes not in word only, but in power: Chriſt's word has a drawing power. He draws with loving-kindneſs, while grace and love is poured from his lips. This word, wherein he viſits the ſoul, has a gaining power, that wins the heart from all things, and makes Chriſt all in all. And his manifeſtations have a ſanctifying, transforming power; beholding his glory, we are changed into the ſame image; and eſpecially they lead to a ſelf-debaſing and Chriſt-exalting exerciſe. Which brings me to

II. The ſecond general head propoſed, namely, What are theſe ſin-diſcovering and ſoul-debaſing effects of Chriſt's manifeſting himſelf? or, when may one be in caſe to ſay, He told me all things that ever I did? It is true, this is a part of what the woman ſpake to Chriſt's commendation, as an all-knowing God; as well as to her own condemnation, as a vile ſinner, brought under a kindly ſelf-abaſement, by the diſcovery ſhe had of Chriſt, both as a kindly reprover, and a merciful Redeemer, a Chriſt, a Saviour.—To give light to this particular, I ſhall only touch at this, how all things are told, when only ſome things ſeem to be told? How can this woman ſay, He told me ALL THINGS that ever I did, when yet it was only her whoredom and adultery that he

he discovered? Or, when may the discovery that Christ makes of himself be so humbling and abasing, that when but a small part is mentioned, yet ALL that ever we did is discovered?

I answer; 1. It may be said consequentially; He told me all things that ever I did; that is, by plain consequence. As we may see what the conclusion is, when the premisses are related; what the root is, when the fruit is discovered; and what the fountain is, when the streams are discovered: even so, when Christ tells a person what evil fruit he hath brought forth, that person may easily infer, that he hath told him that he is an evil tree; and by the streams of wickedness in the life, he leads people thus to the fountain of wickedness in the heart and nature. When he tells one of the black smoke that comes out of the chimney of his heart; he tells also, by plain consequence, that there is a fire of corruption within; and then is one abased to self-abhorrence, when, by the discovery of one sin, in the light of a gracious manifestation, he is led, in a spiritually argumentive way, to infer his total deprivation, both in nature and practice; he may say, consequentially, at least, He told me all things that ever I did.

2. It may be said inclusively and virtually; He told me all things that ever I did. As he that offends in one point of the law, is guilty of all, James ii. 10. in counteracting the authority that enjoins all; so he that is humbled deeply for any one sin, may see therein, that he hath broken all the commands of God, and may be said, in a part, to have seen the whole. In transgressing of one command he may see his being a transgressor of all the commands of God, and a continual transgressor thereof in thought, word, and deed; because, as every imagination of the heart is evil, and only evil continually; so, out of the heart, as out of a bitter fountain, proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witnessing, blasphemy, and all other pollutions beside. All the sins of people are included, inclosed, connected together as links in a chain; so that when one link is seen, the whole chain may be said to be seen. Suppose a chain whereof some links are above the ground, and all the rest of it hanging down into a dark and deep pit; when the upper links are seen, in their connexion with the whole, then one may be said to have seen all, because all are included and inclosed in what he saw.

3. It may be said potentially, He told me all things that ever I did; because, by that one instance he gave a proof of his ability so to do. He that could tell me this, could tell me all; he that could observe this, hath observed all that ever I did, and can as easily tell me all as tell me a part; for none but the Searcher of hearts, that sees all my goings, could have told me this. He that can save to the utmost, can see to the uttermost.

4. It may be said representatively, He told me all things that ever I did; for this discovery represented all other things, all my other sins. This representation is like that which is made in a mirror; if one set a looking-glass before you to see a spot in your face, when you see that, at the same time you see all the spots there: so, when Christ sets the glass of his word before you to see such a particular spot and blot; in the same glass you have a view and representation of all the spots, and all the blemishes of your heart and way. For, we may conceive this representation like that which is made in a map; if one shew you, for example, a particular city in the map of the world, why, at the same time, he presents to you all the terraqueous globe; the whole world at one glance: so here, when, in the light of the Spirit, Christ discovers to you one sin, in the same map you see the whole world of wickedness, a world of atheism, enmity, unbelief, pride, self, and other plagues innumerable.

Thus in the day of gracious manifestation, wherein Christ, the Sun of righteousness, discovers himself, the sinner, that is privileged with it, cannot but see a black sight of himself, which makes him say, in effect, He told me all the ills that ever I did: he told me what I have been, and what I have done; that I have been a sinner in Adam, and a transgressor from the womb; that I have done evil as I could; and given innumerable instances of a carnal mind, which is enmity against God; and of an unbelieving heart, which is enmity against Christ; and of resistance to the motions of heaven, which is enmity against the Holy Ghost. When the sun shines into a dark house, by a small window, the beams discover innumerable motes and hovering particles of dust in that part of the house where the light is shining, by which we are made to see and understand that the whole house is full of motes and dust: even so here, when Christ, the Sun of righteousness, appears and shines in upon the dark dungeon of a sinner's heart, and discovers any motes and blots that are there, then it appears that the whole house, the whole heart and nature is full of the dust and smoke of hell; which makes the soul cry out with Job, Behold I am vile: and hence the more precious that Christ appears in any man's eye, the more vile does he appear in his own eye, and debase himself to the lowest; he thinks himself the most lothsome sinner that ever was seen, when Christ tells him all that ever he did.——So much shall suffice concerning the soul-debasing effects of Christ's manifesting himself, imported in that expression, He told me all things that ever I did: at one glance he gave me a view of all my sins that ever I was guilty of.

III. The third general head proposed, was, To shew, What are these Christ-exalting commendations wherein such discoveries of Christ vent themselves, and which are imported in the words of the woman here, Come see a man that told me all things that ever I did; is not this the Christ? Here, confining myself to the matter and the manner of the commendation in the text, notice,

1*st*, The matter of the commendation, or in what respects she commends Christ to her neighbours; and it is particularly in two respects which are very comprehensive. 1. She commends him in his natures. 2. In his offices.

1. In his natures, as the Man-God, or the God-man, that told me all things that ever I did. Here is his human nature; but, O she saw his divinity through the vail of his humanity; He told me all things that ever I did, and gave me thus an infallible proof of his being the supreme God. She was neither an Arian nor a Socinian; neither will any be so that gets such a discovery of Christ as she got. And surely the blasphemous Arians of our our day † bewray their ignorance, and want of true learning and ſpiritual knowledge, ſuch as this poor woman had. O but a little glance of Chriſt's glory can make a poor illiterate woman wiſer than the learned Rabbies, that were never taught of God, and yet think themſelves the only wits of the world. Thoſe to whom Chriſt diſcovers himſelf, as they will ſee, ſo they will commend him to others as God in our nature; God manifeſted in the fleſh. Whoever queſtioned but the Searcher of hearts, who knows all things, is the true and ſupreme God, that can give laws to bind the heart and conſciences of men, and then diſcloſe their hearts to them, and tell them all theſe things wherein they have violate and broken that law, in heart or way? Yet Chriſt is here declared to be ſuch an one; He told me all things that ever I did. Why, this can be no more denied, than it can be queſtioned whether it was the great God, the true and ſupreme God, that gave out the law upon mount Sinai? No-body doubts that, ſay you; why then, it is declared in ſcripture that it was this ſame Jeſus that did ſo; Pſal. lxviii. 17, 18. The Lord is among them, as in Sinai, in the holy place. Thou haſt aſcended on high; thou haſt led captivity captive; thou haſt received gifts for men, even for the rebellious, that the Lord God might dwell amongſt them: And of whom all this is ſpoken the apoſtle ſhews, Eph. iv. 8.; and every believer knows: He told me all things that ever I did; he told me all my ſins and tranſgreſſions of his law which he gave forth at mount Sinai. By a ſanctified ſight of ſome ſins he opened my eyes to ſee more and more; yea, to ſee all my ſins, and that I was nothing but a maſs of ſin, enmity, and pollution. And thus I ſaw the Revealer to be the true and ſupreme God, even the eternal Son of God, clothed with human nature; A man that told me all things that ever I did; a man that told me what none but God can do; a man that proved himſelf to be God, by an argument of power upon my heart and conſcience; an argument drawn from his omniſcient eye, and driven in upon my heart by his omnipotent hand.

2. In his offices he is here commended and exalted; Is not this the Chriſt? that is, Is not this the true Meſſias promiſed, propheſied of in the Old Teſtament? This is her Εὕρηκα, like that, John i. 45. We have found him, of whom Moſes in the law and the prophets did write: even ſo I have found him, might ſhe ſay; he hath been with me, and I have been with him. He hath ſpoken to me, and I have ſpoken to him. He hath not only told me what I am, and what I have been, and what I have done, but told me what he is; and I have found him to be God as well as man. And who is he then, but the promiſed IMMANUEL, God with us.—Is not this the Chriſt? that is, the Anointed of God, to the ſaving offices of Prophet, Prieſt, and King; this the word Chriſt eſpecially imports, and has a particular reference to. He is anointed, as a Prophet, to declare the mind of God; anointed, as a Prieſt, to make reconciliation with God; and anointed, as a King, to ſubdue ſinners to God; and make them friends that are enemies to God: He is anointed with the Spirit above meaſure; John iii. 34. To render him a fit Prophet, he hath the Spirit of wiſdom and underſtanding above meaſure; to make him a fit Prieſt, he hath the Spirit of love and compaſſion above meaſure; and that he may be a fit King, he hath the Spirit of power and of government.—Is not this the Chriſt? that is, the Sealed and Sent of God, clothed with a commiſſion from God to ſeek and ſave loſt ſinners, John vi. 27. Him hath God the Father ſealed; that is, authorized unto this work, according as himſelf declares, Iſa. lxi. 1. compared with Luke iv. 18. Is not this the Chriſt? namely, he that is anointed that he may anoint; anointed with the oil of gladneſs above his fellows. Believers are ſaid to receive the anointing: but there is a vaſt odds betwixt the anointing of Chriſt, and the anointing of believers; for, Chriſt is the fountain, from whom all the ſtreams flow; the ſun, from whom all the beams of grace ſhine: grace, in believers, is like water in a brook; but grace, in Chriſt, is like water in the ocean: grace, in the believer, is like broken beams; but, in Chriſt, it is like the bright centre of all light. He received the Spirit of all grace, for this very end to be beſtowed upon others. The firſt Adam brought an emptineſs on the whole creation; but the ſecond Adam came to fill all things and perſons, to fill Jew and Gentile, that of his fulneſs we might receive grace for grace. The oil of grace and gladneſs was poured out upon our IMMANUEL, of purpoſe that he might pour it down upon the barren mountains.——Thus we ſee in what reſpects he is here recommended, or the matter of the commendation. Let us view,

2*dly*, The manner of the commendation; or in what way ſhe does it. We may read, in the boſom of the text, ſeveral properties of this exerciſe of commending and exalting Chriſt, which ſaving diſcoveries of him lead unto. And,

1. It is an open and public commendation of Chriſt; for, ſhe went away to the city, and ſays, O people, Come ſee a man that told me all things that ever I did; Is not this the Chriſt? She being formerly a lewd woman, had given open offence, and open ſcandal to the citizens, and now, upon the diſcovery of her ſin, and the diſcovery of the Saviour, ſhe gave as open and ready evidence of her repentance and converſion, by inviting them all to come and ſee him that had given her a conviction of her ſin and vileneſs, and a manifeſtation of his glory and grace. Saving diſcoveries of Chriſt will lead people as openly to glorify and honour him, as they have before diſhonoured him.

2. It is an experimental commendation of him; ſhe commends him from her own experience and feeling; Come ſee a man that told me all things that ever I did: I have ſeen his face, and heard his voice, and felt his power; he has convinced and converted me; therefore, from my own feeling and experience, I commend his grace unto you. It is like that, 1 John i. 3. That which we have ſeen and heard, declare we unto you, that ye may have fellowſhip with us. It was ſomething like that of David, Pſal. lxvi. 16. Come and hear all ye that fear God, and I will tell what he hath done for my ſoul. Yea, he commends Chriſt not only to believers, but to others, as you ſee his reſolution is, Pſal. li. 13. Upon his getting a new viſit, and the Lord's reſtoring to him the joy of his ſalvation, and upholding him with his free Spirit, Then, ſays he, will I teach tranſgreſſors thy ways, and ſinners ſhall be converted unto thee. Thus Paul ſet forth the abundant grace of God from his own experience, I was a blaſphemer, a perſecutor, and injurious; but I obtained mercy,—and the grace of God was exceeding abundant, &c. 1 Tim. i. 13, 14. They that have experience of the things of Chriſt themſelves, will be moſt zealous in manifeſting the things of Chriſt to others, and in preſſing them to come to Chriſt, as having proof and experience of his grace; and, indeed, they can beſt ſpeak of Chriſt, to whom Chriſt hath ſpoken, and who believe, and therefore ſpeak.

† That Arianiſm was much upon the increaſe, about this time, both in Scotland and England, was formerly noticed, p. 322, 454.

was

3. It is a charitative commendation of Chriſt; ſhe is now filled with ſuch Chriſtian love to others, and particularly to thoſe ſhe was moſt concerned with, and intereſted in, that ſhe would have them all drawn to Chriſt. She ſaid to the men, Come ſee a man that told me all things that ever I did. Perhaps there were ſome of them ſhe had tempted to ſin and wickedneſs before, ſhe now would have them turned to Chriſt; a great change. They that have ſeen Chriſt cannot but deſire that others may ſee him too, they would have all to come and ſee. O that all the world would come and ſee, come and wonder, come and admire him: as Abraham commanded his children and ſervants to ſeek and ſerve the Lord; ſo if one that had got the diſcovery of Chriſt could do it, it would command thouſands to come and ſee him, and ſerve him. When Chriſt diſcovers himſelf, and ſpeaks into the heart of a man, it makes the man ſpeak good of Chriſt.—Again, a ſight of Chriſt's face ſmites the ſoul with a likeneſs to him in love; and hence the ſinner, immediately upon the revelation of Chriſt, is filled with a ſtrange love; a love of complacence to the ſaints, and a love of benevolence to the ſouls of others.

4. It is a judicious commendation of Chriſt, that iſſues from the diſcovery of Chriſt. And here ſeveral things point out the judgment and wiſdom by which ſhe commends Chriſt unto them. It is evident from the method ſhe takes, or would have them to take; ſhe is not content that they reſt upon her report only, but would have them taſte and ſee themſelves: ſhe knew that their love would not terminate ſavingly upon her teſtimony; and therefore would have them coming to Chriſt himſelf.—Again, it is evident how judicious it was, from her endeavour to draw them to Chriſt, with the very ſame hook that catched herſelf. Chriſt ſpake many good words to her; but the firſt thing that took hold of her heart, and catched her was this, He told me all things that ever I did. His heart-ſearching and diſcovering word was the means of her converſion; and ſhe would have them drawn to Chriſt by the ſame means: Come ſee a man that told me all things that ever I did; Is not this the Chriſt?—It is evident alſo how judicious it was by the gradation of her words, or the gradually riſing ſteps of her commendation: ſhe begins ſomewhat low, Come ſee a man; ſhe goes on to a higher note, He told me all things that ever I did; and ſhe concludes with the higheſt commendation of him, Is not this the Chriſt? Not only God, but God appearing in all his glorious robes of grace, even IMMANUEL, God with us.—In a word, it is evident how judicious it is from the manner of her arguing: ſhe argues from his telling part of her ſecret wickedneſs, That he told her all; q. d. He could as eaſily have told me all things that ever I ſaid, and all things that ever I deſigned, and all things that ever I thought, as he told me what I did: yea, I got ſuch a broad look of all my ſins in that one glaſs of a diſcovery that he gave me, that I cannot but own he told me all things that ever I did.—Again, ſhe argues from the dignity that ſhe ſaw joined with his humanity, that he was the true Meſſias; and hence judiciouſly infers, Is not this the Chriſt? She was never at a college to learn, how to frame an argument; but having been at Chriſt's ſchool for a little pleaſant while, ſhe there learned ſome heavenly logic; can ſuch a man as this be any other but the Chriſt? The more clear diſcovery that any gets of Chriſt, the more ſkilful and expert they will be in commending him to others; as we ſee in our apoſtle Paul, after Chriſt was revealed in him, what clear diſcoveries did he make of Chriſt to others, as appears in the Acts of the apoſtles, and in all his epiſtles.

5. It is a pathetic commendation of Chriſt that iſſues from the diſcoveries of him. Her heart is full of Chriſt, and full of deſire to praiſe, and exalt, and commend him to others; and her heart vents itſelf in ſeveral pathetical expreſſions: hence ſhe ſpake firſt in a hortatory manner, Come and ſee, ſays ſhe; O citizens, ſlip not this opportunity, when ſuch a glorious ſight is to be ſeen.—Next ſhe ſpake in an aſſertory manner; ſhe aſſerts ſome ſtrange things concerning him, he is a man that told me all things that ever I did; he is a ſeer and revealer of the ſecrets of men, and therefore muſt be a Prophet, and more than a prophet, a revealer of the counſel of God.—And finally, ſhe ſpake in a queſtionary and expoſtulary manner, Is not this the Chriſt? He can be none elſe but the Meſſias, the Chriſt of God. She is not content to commend him in one particular, but ſhe muſt go on and inſiſt in his praiſe and commendation, and cannot think ſhe can commend him enough; Is not this the Chriſt? She makes no queſtion of it herſelf. And the deſign of her interrogation is to put it out of doubt with them. Who can this be but the Chriſt? How can it be any other but the Chriſt? They that have met with Chriſt, and got the heart touched by his grace, it is in a hearty cordial way they ſpeak of him, and commend him to others. The ſinner that hath met with a Saviour, O how gladly would he trumpet forth his praiſe if he could.—There is ſomething further here that points out the pathetic manner of the commendation, and that is an appeal to them as it were in the boſom of this queſtion, Is not this the Chriſt? I appeal to you, might ſhe ſay, if it be not ſo, that he is CHRIST, the Anointed of God. I cannot think but you muſt judge of him as I do; and, who will not think highly of him as I do? Indeed, the enlightened ſoul is ready to think all the world ſhould be of his mind, the light and evidence is ſo clear to him. And hence, they that have got a diſcovery of Chriſt, wonder that any would eſteem otherwiſe of Chriſt than they. O be aſtoniſhed that all the world is not wondering at his glory. Oh! what can blind them! What can bewitch them at this rate, that they are not of the ſame mind concerning Chriſt, and that they are not admirers of him as well as I am! Surely there is nothing appears with ſuch evidence and demonſtration as this glory and excellency of a God-man. Who can be ſo ſtupid and ſenſeleſs as to reckon otherwiſe? Is not this the Chriſt? The proof is ſo plain to me, ſays the ſoul, and the light light and power so great by which Christ is discovered to me, that it is truly irresistable, and who, in all the world, can possible resist the evidence of it? Is not this the Christ? — O how pathetic is the commendation!

6. It is a practical commendation that issues from a saving discovery of Christ, and such is that of the woman of Samaria here; and hence, she says not, Go see him; but, Come see him. They that truly invite others to come to Christ, will not be content to send them to him, but they would share themselves of more and more of Christ. Their language is not, Go, see; but, Come, see. It would have argued no great esteem of Christ, nor high commendation of him, should the woman have said, I have seen him already, go ye and see him next; they might have thought she had enough of him: but, Come see him, says she; q. d. Come along with me, and I will go upon your head, like a captain, and lead the van myself. I have seen him to my heart's content, and am desirous to get another sight, a new sight of him; and I would have all the people in Samaria, the whole town to go along with me. I have been an ill woman, a base woman, that have led some of you to sin; and may I now be the happy instrument of bringing you to a Saviour. I have led some of you to the gates of hell; O let me now lead you to the gate of heaven! if I have tempted any of you to wickedness, O let me now be instrumental in turning you to righteousness; yea, to the Lord my righteousness, whom I have got a saving sight of; and, therefore, let me give you a good example, for all the ill example I have given you. Here was a change indeed, and a practical commendation. Surely they commend Christ most effectually, who do it not only by their profession, but by their practice; not merely by their counsel, but by their example; and who can say not only, Go see; but, Come see a man that told me all things that ever I did. It is a come see that makes others to go also; Zech. viii. 21. Let us go speedily to pray before the Lord, and to seek the Lord of hosts, I will go also; there is one: ver. 23. you find more following, We will go with you; for we have heard that God is with you. Thus it was the church's not only commending of Christ, but diligetnly seeking after him whom she commended, that made the daughters of Jerusalem say, Song vi. 1. Whither is my beloved gone, that we may seek him with thee? And we see how effectual this practical commendation of Christ was, that the woman gave to the Samaritans, as your may read verses 30, 39, 40, 41, 42. She was the blessed instrument of drawing many there to the Lord Jesus.

IV. The fourth general head proposed, was, To give the reasons of the doctrine, whence it is that saving discoveries of Christ makes persons to condemn and debase themselves to the lowest, and to commend and exalt Christ to the highest; or, what influence a saving discovery of Christ hath upon this self-debasing and Christ-exalting exercise? I shall consider the reasons of this twofold effect jointly because they necessarily go together, and are influenced by the same means: they are like the two scales of a balance, that which makes the one scale fall and go down, makes the other rise and go up; so that discovery of Christ which brings down self to the dust, does at the same time set up Christ upon the throne. When the haughtiness of man is brought low, then the Lord alone is exalted, Isa. ii. 11.

1. The first reason then, why the saving discoveries of Christ do humble self to the lowest, and exalt Christ to the highest, is from the special light wherein Christ is seen. They that see the glory of Christ with the one eye, they see, at the same time, their own unworthiness with the other. The same light that discovers the holiness of God, discovers the vileness of the man. The same light that discovers the fulness of Christ discovers the emptiness of the creature. That light that discovers his infinite merit, discovers the infinite guilt and demerit of sin. When the righteousness of Christ is seen, the unrighteousness of the sinner is seen at the same time, and in the same light; and hence, no wonder then, while the poor soul is astonished with the view of God's glory in the face of Christ, he is also astonished with the view and apprehension of his own baseness and brutishness; and has the meanest thoughts of himself when he has the highest thoughts of Christ. The more a man converses with Christ, the more he converses with himself; and the light that discovers Christ, discovers the soul to itself: and therefore the discoveries of Christ cannot but tend to debase self, and exalt Christ.

2. When Christ is discovered, then the love of God to the soul is discovered, and this fills it with humble wonder. O! how astonishing a thing is it, that God's love is manifested to one so full of sin and wickedness! This debases the soul, in its own sight, because it knows itself to be so unworthy of his love; this works humility: but yet unworthy as it is, the love of God is manifested to it; this quickens love in the soul, and love excites praise. O! how shall I manifest love to him that hath manifested love to the like of me! Thus the love of Christ constrains both to the debasing of self and exalting of Christ.

3. The third reason is, from the special work of the Spirit: there is a speciality in the work of the Spirit upon the soul to whom Christ is savingly discovered; Lord, says Judas, not Iscariot, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself to us, and not to the world? John xiv. 22. God manifests his love to the world, in outward respects; but to his own, in his privy-chamber. It is the work and office of the Spirit to set home the love of God upon the hearts of his people; and to every one of them alone, as it were: he takes them aside, that they may have some private conversation with Christ; such as this woman had, when Christ was the only preacher, and she was the only hearer. O but the view of this distinguished grace raises in the soul both David's note, What am I, and what is my father's house, that thou hast brought me hitherto? And Mary's note of the same time, My soul doth magnify the Lord.

4. The influence that the discovery of Christ hath upon the self-debasing and Christ-exalting exercise, flows from the spiritual end and design of these saving discoveries and manifestations of Christ; this is God's great end in discovering Christ, 1 Cor. i. 29, 30, 31. Of God, he is made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption. For what end? That no flesh should glory in his sight; but that he that glorieth might glory in the Lord: that is, that self may be condemned and debased, and Christ alone may be commended and exalted. And this is the great end of of the Spirit's work: when he comes to teſtify of Chriſt, what is his deſign? Why, ſays Chriſt, John xvi. 9, 14. He will convince the world of ſin, and he ſhall glorify me; that is, he will humble the ſinner, on the one hand, and exalt the Saviour, on the other; and ſo lead the ſinner to condemn himſelf and to commend Chriſt.

5. It ariſes from the ſpecial power and efficacy that is in ſaving diſcoveries of Chriſt, for working all ſaving effects; why, beholding his glory, we are changed into the ſame image, 2 Cor. iii. 18.; and changed, as in other reſpects, ſo in this particularly, that ſelf is pulled down, and Chriſt ſet up: we are changed from pride, to humility; from ſelf-love, to ſelf-loathing; from ſelf-indulgence, to ſelf-abhorrence; and from ſelf-ſeeking and ſelf-exalting, to a Chriſt-exalting diſpoſition and exerciſe. All the graces of the Spirit iſſue from a ſaving diſcovery of Chriſt, and come in that way to a lively exerciſe; We beholding his glory, as the glory of the only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth: of his fulneſs have we all received, and grace for grace, John i. 14, 16. We cannot ſee his fulneſs, without ſharing of his fulneſs; yea, to ſee his fulneſs is to ſhare of it: this is the ſtrength of that for which we have in John iii. 2. We ſhall be like him, FOR we ſhall ſee him as he is; ſo here, beholding his glory, his fulneſs of grace and truth, we receive out of his fulneſs. Now, the more of Chriſt's fulneſs and Spirit that one hath, the more will he have of Chriſt's ends before him; which is a debaſing of the creature, and a glorifying of God, that he may be all in all.

6. This exerciſe doth ariſe from the divine ſplendor of the diſcovery; for, when Chriſt diſcovers his face, then the glory of God, in the face of Jeſus Chriſt, is diſcovered, 2 Cor. iv. 6. When Chriſt is ſeen, then the glory of God's perfections, and the ſplendor of his attributes, is ſeen. Now, every thing in God daſhes the ſinful man that ſees it, and makes him nothing in his own eyes; and, at the ſame time, makes Chriſt, in whom that divine glory ſhines, to be all in all to the man; ſo that he cannot but ſet him above all, and give him, in all things, the pre-eminence.——Thus you ſee the reaſons whence it is, that ſaving diſcoveries of Chriſt make the ſubjects thereof to condemn and debaſe themſelves to the loweſt, and to commend and exalt Chriſt to the higheſt, as the woman of Samaria here does; Come ſee a man that told me all things that ever I did; Is not this the Chriſt?

V. The fifth thing propoſed, was, To make ſome application of the whole. And this we ſhall eſſay in an uſe of information, examination, and exhortation.

1ſt, We ſhall improve this ſubject in an uſe of information, by deducing the following inferences. Is it ſo then, that ſaving diſcoveries of Chriſt have this effect, to make one, at the ſame time, to condemn and debaſe himſelf, and to commend and exalt Chriſt, ſaying, Come ſee a man that told me all things that ever I did; Is not this the Chriſt? From this text and doctrine we may ſee and learn the following leſſons.

1. Hence ſee why pride and ſelf-conceit, ſelf-righteouſneſs and ſelf-juſtification prevail ſo much in the world, and in the viſible church; and what makes people, notwithſtanding all that ever they did, yet to be vainly puft up, inſtead of condemning and debaſing themſelves: why, becauſe they have never got a ſaving diſcovery of Chriſt; Chriſt hath never touched their heart, and told them all that ever they did: they are ſtrangers to the power of the word. It is very ſtrange how wicked men will juſtify themſelves, as thoſe, John viii. 48. Say we not well, that thou art a Samaritan, and haſt a devil? Here was the greateſt blaſphemy imaginable, to ſay this of Chriſt; yet they juſtify it, Say we not well in this? Chriſtleſs men will juſtify their ill words, and baſe works, and evil actions.—What ſay you, Sabbath-breaker? Why, was it not well done, ſay you? it is but a work of neceſſity, a needful buſineſs.—What ſay you, drunkard? Why, it was but a hearty bottle with my friends; and was it not well done?—What ſay you, whoremonger? Why, it was but a trick of youth; and what is the matter of that?—What ſay you, ſwearer? Why, it was neither banning nor ſwearing that I intended; it was but a ſingle word, and a word in paſſion.—What ſay you, ſcold and railer? Why, ſay you, I think they deſerved all that I ſaid to them; I am ſure I looſed my tongue upon ſuch a man, and gave him his holy-day's name; and was it not well done, and well ſad?—— Indeed, you will hardly get a ſinner at all; if you will take every perſon's excuſe, and every body's judgment of themſelves, they will juſtify all that ever they did; or, at leaſt, make it but a matter of moon-ſhine. A common ſtrumpet, ſuch as this woman was formerly, may think nothing of all her baſe and lewd behaviour. The moſt notorious ſinner goes lightly under the burden of his ſin, without any ſelf-condemnation or ſelf-debaſement, till Chriſt and they meet together; and until he ſhow them, by one glance, all things that ever they did.

2. Hence ſee, the greateſt of ſinners may conceive hope of mercy at the hand of our merciful Lord Jeſus, from ſuch inſtances as this; yet, let not wicked ſinners indulge themſelves in ſin, and preſume that God will not notice their lewdneſs, and ſecret as well as open wickedneſs; for the time is coming, wherein Chriſt will, either in a way of mercy or judgment, tell you all things that ever you did. Pſal. l. 21. Thoſe things thou haſt done, and I kept ſilence: thou thoughtſt that I was altogether ſuch an one as thyſelf; but I will reprove thee, and ſet them in order before thine eyes. Conſider this, ye that forget God, leſt he tear you in pieces, when there is none to deliver. If this remarkable inſtance of grace, to ſuch a baſe woman, be abuſed by you to licentiouſneſs, and your opening a door of preſumption to yourſelf, expecting mercy in a continued courſe of wickedneſs, you are under a terrible deluſion; for, God will wound the head of his enemies, and the hairy ſcalp of him that goes on in his treſpaſſes. But, if you would enter in at the door of hope that is opened to you, in ſuch examples as this, O ſeek, that, in a merciful way, he may diſcover your ſins to you, ſo as to make you know, at the ſame time, that he is the Chriſt, the anointed of God, to ſave you from your ſin.

3. Hence ſee, that the word preached doth then only do ſaving good, when it comes cloſe home to the heart, and when Chriſt is ſeen there; for here, ſee how the word of Chriſt came home with power upon this woman's heart, He told me; he told me all things that ever I did. The word was the ſearcher and diſcerner of the thoughts and intent of the heart: and the ſearching word was the ſtrong hook that catched her; and ſhe ſaw Chriſt therein: Is not this the Chriſt? Then the word is effectual, and prevails when Chriſt himſelf is ſeen: Chriſt is the beſt preacher himſelf; the only powerful preacher, who, by his word, can open the eyes; and by a ſanctified ſight of one ſin, diſcovers all to the man; and in that diſcovery ſhews himſelf to be the Chriſt.

4. Hence ſee, that ſaving illumination is the beſt antidote againſt Arianiſm. Here the enlightened woman profeſſes her faith of Chriſt's Deity, and thereupon of his being the CHRIST: ſhe ſees him to be the true God, who told her all things that ever ſhe did; and thence declares him to be the true Meſſias: Is not this the Chriſt? If Chriſt were not the true God, he could not be the true Meſſias; and conſequently, they who deny his ſupreme Deity, deny that he is the Chriſt. And thus blaſphemous Arians are guilty of denying the Lord that bought them: and they that thus deny him were never enlightened by him. A ſaving diſcovery of Chriſt will afford a poor illiterate perſon an argument from experience, and ſpiritual feeling, more ſtrong and powerful, for proving the ſupreme Deity of Chriſt, than all the learned and logical arguments in the world, which a man may be fraughted with, and yet remain an Atheiſt: and, indeed, Arians are Atheiſts, whatever they profeſs; for, he that denies the Son, denies the Father alſo: becauſe, to deny the neceſſary exiſtence of the Son, is to reject the neceſſary paternity of the Father, who yet is as neceſſarily Father, as he is God; and to deny both the Father and the Son, is to contemn the neceſſary proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt from both: ſo that the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt is denied, when the ſupreme Deity of Chriſt is impugned. Alas! Sirs, this atheiſtical world needs ſuch a turn and meaſure of enlightening grace as this poor woman got.

5. Hence ſee, that perſuaſion, with application, is in the nature of ſaving faith, both objective and ſubjective. Perſuaſion objective, aſſuring the man that this is the Chriſt; and ſubjective alſo, aſſuring the man that as he is the Chriſt, the anointed; ſo he is anointed for my behalf; anointed, as the woman here ſuggeſts, as a Prophet for me, to tell me all things that ever I did: and, at the ſame time, that he told me all my ſins, he told me that he was the Chriſt, anointed to ſave me; and hence ſhe glories in him as the Chriſt. Whenever he manifeſts himſelf, faith brings in holy triumph in the Lord, even under a ſight of the greateſt ſinfulneſs. Indeed, ſuch a ſight as this woman got, namely, of the guilt of all the evils that ever ſhe did, would have cauſed trembling, inſtead of triumphing, if faith's view of Chriſt diſcovered to her, had not carried, in the boſom of it, a fiducial perſuaſion of his being a Chriſt for her; which, whenever ſhe ſaw, then ſhe was kindly humbled: which leads me to another inference.

6. Hence ſee, that true goſpel humiliation and evangelical repentance goes not BEFORE, but is a fruit of faith, and of Chriſt manifeſting himſelf to the ſoul; for then, and not till then, does ſhe cry out, O! he hath told me all things that ever I did. Now ſhe ſees all her ſins in the brighteſt light. By the light of the ſtars we may ſee ſome things; by the light of the moon we ſee more; but by the light of the ſun, we ſee moſt of all. By the light of nature, people may ſee ſome ſins; by the light of the law more, much more; for, by the law is the knowledge of ſin; but, by the light of the Sun of righteouſneſs, moſt of all is diſcovered: but with this difference, that the moon-light of the law ſhews the diſeaſe, and no more, leaving the ſinner to die in that diſeaſe, and periſh; but the ſun-light of the goſpel diſcovers the remedy, The Sun of righteouſneſs ariſing with healing under his wings. And when no leſs than the blood and righteouſneſs of God is ſeen to be the healing medicine, then the diſeaſe appears to be infinitely great; and yet the ſight is infinitely ſweet, becauſe it is a ſight of that wonderful healing, under theſe wings and rays of the Sun of righteouſneſs: this makes kindly and pleaſant humiliation.

7. Hence ſee, that ſaving diſcoveries of Chriſt are very rare in our day; for, very few are thus exerciſed, either in condemning and debaſing themſelves, under a ſenſe of all that ever they did; or in commending and exalting Chriſt, and dealing with others to come and ſee him. Oh! how few humble walkers, and hearty commenders of Chriſt are to be obſerved! Few taking kindly with their ſin, and few breaking forth into the praiſing commendations of Chriſt! When this woman got a diſcovery of Chriſt, ſhe kindly takes with her whoredoms, and all her ſins that ever ſhe did, and zealouſly breaks forth into the praiſes and commendation of Chriſt. But whence is it, that the land we live in, the church of Scotland, is not taking with, and kindly acknowledging all that ever ſhe did, and taking with all her whoredoms and adulteries, and treacherous breaking covenant with her God to whom ſhe ſolemnly gave her hand? Whence is it that there is ſo little zeal in commending and exalting Chriſt in his ſupreme Deity, in a day wherein Arian * blaſphemers open their mouth againſt him? Whence is there ſo little zeal for the reviving of our broken covenants, national and ſolemn league, even in a day wherein the obligation thereof is denied? Why are we neither humbly condemning ourſelves, and taking with our national ſins, nor highly commending Chriſt, and exalting him in his injured honours, truths, and prerogatives, but rather conniving with, and winking at all the diſhonours done to him? Why, what is the matter? The reaſon is, ſaving diſcoveries of Chriſt, which ſhould work the contrary effect, are very rare. When the Lord hath a mind to build up Zion, he appears in his glory, as he did in the days of our Reformation: but now he hath juſtly hid himſelf from the God-provoking, Chriſt-deſpiſing, goſpel-ſlighting generation. But, O Sirs, if he would yet appear and diſcover his glory in the ſanctuary, then we might expect Reformation times: but, as matters ſtand, we look as if a ſtroke and judgment, that hath been ſo long threatened, were ſuddenly to fall upon us with a terrible vengeance. There were little hazard of the preſent rumour of war †, if the Lord, who is a man of war, were not againſt us; and if the Lord carry on his controverſy, it will be little wonder, though

* That Arianiſm was gaining ground in Scotland, at this time, was formerly noticed, p. 322, 454. And the proceſs, before the ſupreme eccleſiaſtical court, relative to this affair, was this year terminated, with no very adequate ſentence againſt the propagator of it.

† About this time the nation was mightily alarmed with a rupture with Spain; who, as was affirmed, had entered into a formidable alliance with different powers, in order to recover Gibraltar and Portmahon, and place the Pretender on the throne of Britain.

we ſhould ſee the land turned into a field of blood and deſolation, before we ſee another communion-ſolemnity here. God hath born long with us, but how much longer he will do ſo, who can tell? Forty years peace in the church is a wonder, &c. But,

8. Hence ſee, that a meeting with Chriſt, makes a marvellous change upon a perſon or people that are ſo privileged. Before this woman met with Chriſt, or rather before he met with her, ſhe was nothing but a common ſtrumpet; but now ſhe is humbled to the duſt for the ſins ſhe had formerly indulged herſelf in, and commends and exalts that Lord whom ſhe had diſhonoured. She is brought from darkneſs to light, and from the power of Satan unto God; from being exerciſed in corrupting and debauching her neighbours, to a kindly concern for their ſoul's everlaſting welfare, to get them brought to Chriſt. Saving illumination and acquaintance with Chriſt creates, in the heart, a ſympathy with the caſe of poor Chriſtleſs ſinners: Come ſee a man that told me all things that ever I did; is not this the Chriſt? This leads me to Uſe 2. Namely, an uſe of trial and examination, whether you have met with Chriſt, and got a ſaving diſcovery of him at this occaſion or formerly. O, how ſhall I know, ſay you, if I have met with Chriſt, and if he hath diſcovered himſelf to me? Why, if you have, then this diſcovery has led you to theſe two things. 1. A humiliation of ſelf to the loweſt. 2. An exalting of Chriſt to the higheſt.

1*ſt*, What ſelf-humbling diſpoſition and abaſement hath been wrought in you? Are you laid low in the duſt, and made vile in your own eyes, by Chriſt diſcovering you to yourſelf? Have you got a diſcovery of your own ſinfulneſs, ugline ſs, and unworthineſs? Hath Chriſt fallen a diſcourſing with you, and told you all things that ever I did? Hath he told you of your ill life, your wicked heart, your depraved nature? Hath he told you of your unbelief? For when the Spirit comes, he reproves the world of ſin; becauſe they believe not in him. Hath he told you of your ſecret ſins, and diſcovered to you what none but himſelf could tell you? And, have you taken it from himſelf, without ſaying, who has gone and told the miniſters this and that of me? Hath he told you of your wicked thoughts and intentions, and made the word the diſcerner of the thoughts and intents of your heart! Hath he told you your ſpiritual wickedneſs, your atheiſm, ignorance, enmity, carnality, pride, ſelf, and hypocriſy, and made you to know the plagues of your own heart? Hath he told you of the fig-leaves you have been covering yourſelf with, and the falſe refuges you have been running to, and chaſed you out of your refuges of lies? Hath he told you your ſecret, as well as open ſins, and ſo told you ſome things, as that thereby he hath diſcovered the reſt to you; and you have been led by the ſtreams to the fountain of ſin within? And, has he given you, by one glance upon the map of your corrupt nature, a view of your total depravation? Hath he told you your proper name by calling you a dog, and by making you take with your name, ſaying, Truth, Lord, I am a dog, a devil, a monſter? Behold I am vile! Why, it is a glorious internal light that diſcovers this internal vileneſs. What makes you, with Job, to abhor yourſelf? Why, it ſays, Now your eyes ſee him, Job xlii. 5, 6. What makes you, with Paul, look upon yourſelf as leſs than the leaſt of all ſaints; yea, as the chief of all ſinners, the worſt of all ſinners, the vileſt of all ſinners? Why, it ſays, He hath revealed his Son in you. It is not natural for proud man to think ſo baſely of himſelf; it is the Spirit of Chriſt that hath told you what you are. But here, to prevent any miſtake, it may be aſked, QUEST. May not one who hath not the Spirit of God, nor a renewed conſcience, be able to diſcern his own vileneſs?

ANSW. There is a double knowledge or underſtanding that men may have of themſelves, viz. ſpeculative and practical. As to the general ſpeculative knowledge, a man may have this; common ſenſe and reaſon may tell him his ſin, and he may know himſelf to be a ſinner, as being guilty of groſs ſins, ſuch as, drunkenneſs, whoredom, ſwearing, and the like. But there is a particular practical knowledge and underſtanding, which is twofold, viz. either from the Spirit of God without us, or from the Spirit of God within us. That practical underſtanding which is from the Spirit of God without us, is what alſo the unregenerate may have. The Spirit of God, not yet received, but without a man, may come and make ſuch diſcoveries of his ſin, and guilt, and wickedneſs as may make him cry out, That he is undone, undone. Such a knowledge had Nebuchadnezzar of the God of Shadrach, Meſech, and Abednego. Such a knowledge alſo, it ſeems, Cain and Judas had. But the Spirit of God within us gives ſpiritual light and ſenſe upon the conſcience, and rectifies the judgment; whereas the Spirit of God, without a man, diſcovers ſin mainly in order to hell and wrath, making him ſay, undone, undone. The Spirit of God within a man makes him ſee the vileneſs of ſin, and lament and mourn for that, ſaying, Unclean, unclean. O wretched man that I am! Behold I am vile! This affects him more than the wrath of God; yea, even when he ſees the wrath of God is turned away, and that the ſhower is over his head, and hath lighted on the head of the Cautioner, even then he abhors himſelf for his own wickedneſs more than ever. This is from the Spirit of God within, and a goſpel-light. The Spirit of God without a man, and the Spirit of God within him differ as much as day-light differs from lightening. A flaſh of lightening from Sinai, or the fiery law, terrifies and aſtoniſhes the man, and makes him tremble and quake under a ſenſe of ſin; but the day-light of a ſaving diſcovery of Chriſt makes one ſee himſelf the chief of ſinners, and yet fills him with holy triumph in the Lord the Saviour. A lightening confounds and ſurprizes; but the day-light gives a clear, diſtinct, and ſedate view of things as they are, with quiet and compoſure. — Now, try if you have got a humbling view and diſcovery of Chriſt, or a word from him that hath filled you with ſelf-abaſement, ſo as you reckon you cannot have vile enough thoughts of yourſelf, becauſe he hath, in effect, told you all things that ever you did.

2*dly*, Try what Chriſt-exalting and commending exerciſe you have been brought under; or what diſpoſition is wrought in you to commend and exalt Chriſt to the higheſt. If Chriſt and you have met together, as he did with this woman of Samaria, then the meeting hath wrought in you you the same effect, the same disposition to commend and exalt Christ; which you may try by these particulars.

1. If you have met with Christ in this manner, then you have seen him to be the CHRIST indeed, the God-man, the Anointed of the Father, the true Messias. Hath he told you, in effect, I that speak unto thee, am he? I that speak unto you by this gospel am he? Hath he born home this upon your heart with convincing light and evidence, so as you have been brought to the apostle's faith, John vi. 69. We believe and are sure, that thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God? The faith of this is of such importance, that Christ hath said, If ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins. Now, hath he so spoken to you, as you were made, in effect, to think and say, I believe and am sure, that he that spoke unto me was he. It was not the minister only that I heard, but the word came with such light, life, and power, that, I think, no minister on earth, nor angel in heaven, could make the word to go through my heart as it did. It was like the sound of the voice of the Son of God.

2. If you have met with Christ in this manner, then he hath made such a gradual approach and discovery of himself to you as to raise in you gradually more and more a high esteem of him as a Prophet, sent of God to teach you, and to tell you all things, as it was with this woman: and though he himself, and all his words are precious to you, yet there are some particular words, among many, that have taken more impression, and stick more fast than others. Though Christ spake many good words to this woman for her instruction, yet the word that made the first and deepest impression, is what she especially kept in heart, He told me all things that ever I did: and what she saw in this more clearly at first, she saw more clearly after Christ gave her a clearer manifestation of himself. If the saving discovery of Christ commenced and began when he gave her the first discovery of her lewdness and whoredom, and conveyed light, at the same time, into her mind to perceive that he was a prophet, yet she was much in the dark, and took not up all that was intended by this discovery, till after he clearly discovered himself; and then the former lesson is clearly taken up in all the parts of it. Therefore now, says she, He told me all things that ever I did. Some may have such obscure and cloudy discoveries of Christ at first, that though they raise a high esteem of Christ, yet the soul may be at a great loss to know, what the full meaning of such a word is that Christ spake to their soul, till after they get a brighter discovery of him; and then they may come to be more perfectly instructed in the same lesson, which, at first, they did not so well apprehend: and in this his dealing with them may be like that, John xiii. 7. What I do, thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter.

3. If you have met with Christ in this manner, then your mind is set above the world, and you have left it behind you, as the woman here left her water-pot and ran to the city. O Sirs, when Christ appears to a man, he thinks no more of the world than a potsherd; he counts all but loss and dung for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ; yea, the most valuable things in the world are undervalued when Christ is discovered. As naturalists tell us, the loadstone will not draw in the presence of the diamond; neither does the world in all its glory and gallantry draw the heart of any to it in the presence of Christ. The reason of this is, the Sun of righteousness darkens all the stars of creature-enjoyments, and makes them disappear and evanish. A drink out of the fountain of living waters makes all worldly comforts to be nothing but broken cisterns that can hold no water. They whose hearts were never weaned from the world, never met with Christ. Again,

4. If you have met with Christ, then your hearts will be set upon the work of commending him to others, and particularly to your neighbours and friends, that they may be come to acquaint with him also. Thus the discovery of Christ vents itself in the woman here, Come see a man that told me all things that ever I did; Is not this the Christ? A manifestation of Christ gives men such a fill of the fulness of God, that they must have a vent: and as, in every saving manifestation, there is something of the nature of Christ communicate, who loves to communicate of his fulness; so they to whom Christ dispenses of his grace and fulness, love to communicate also of what they have: not that the saints are to make a blaze of their religion to every one they meet with, or to cast pearls before swine; but the love of Christ discovered to them fills them with such ardent love to him, as obliges them, in all proper ways, to trumpet forth his glory and honour. They see such a glory in him, that they think all should wonder at him, and own him; Is not this the Christ? They reckon none so obliged to free grace as they, and therefore they think it well becomes them to spread the savour of his name. They know also, by remembring what they themselves were before they met with Christ, they know what a sad state they are into who want acquaintance with Christ; therefore, both out of love and regard to the glory and honour of Christ, and out of love, pity, and compassion to the perishing souls of others, they desire and endeavour to commend Christ to them both by their words and actions; both by their talk and walk, as the woman of Samaria did. What heart then and disposition have you got to commend Christ to your neighbours and friends, to your children and servants? If you have no heart nor disposition to such exercise as this, surely you cannot make it out that you have met with Christ.

5. If you have met with Christ, then it will be your hearty desire not only to commend Christ, and speak of him to others, making him the great subject of your conversation, but also to have them taste what you have tasted, and see what you have seen, without resting merely on your report; Come see a man that told me all things that ever I did; Is not this the Christ? Rest not on my report, might she say; but, O come and see him! My friends, spiritual converse about Christ is much out of fashion in our degenerate age; yea, to enter on spiritual discourse in some companies, would be to expose a man to scorn and ridicule; a sad instance of estrangement from Christ and religion. But are there not some professors, whose speech of Christ, and of the things of God, betrays them and bewrays them; for, either it is but the outside of religion they talk of; for example, How well such a man preached, and how long such a man preached, and how many tables, how many ſtrangers were at ſuch a communion, and all ſuch little worth queſtions, no better than idleneſs; treating of the ſhell and not the kernel of ordinances: or, if they enter upon any ſubſtantial converſation, either they ſoon weary of that, or give evidence of ſuch a ſelfiſh ſpirit, as beſpeaks an inclination to commend themſelves rather than to commend Chriſt. The import of their language is rather, come and hear me, than come and ſee Chriſt. But, O Sirs, a meeting with Chriſt will fill the ſoul with a deſire that others may ſhare of what they ſhare, and ſee what they have ſeen, with a deſire to take the moſt effectual method that may be for drawing them to Chriſt. Hence, as this woman ſpeaks out her very heart, ſo ſhe attempts to draw them to Chriſt with the very ſame hook with which ſhe was drawn aſhore herſelf: He told me all things that ever I did; Is not this the Chriſt? Therefore, come ſee him.

or

6. If you have met with Chriſt, and converſed with him, you will think long for another meeting of him, another ſight of him; for this was the woman's diſpoſition here; Come ſee the man: ſhe ſpake as if ſhe deſired to be the foremoſt in returning again to ſee him. If you think you have got enough of Chriſt, it is a ſign you have got nothing of him ſavingly. If you have got a ſaving ſight of him, then you will deſire more and more, and more, till you ſee him face to face in Immanuel's land. The diſpoſition of theſe that have attained to a ſight of Chriſt, and apprehended him by faith, is examplified by the apoſtle Paul, Phil. iii. 12, 13, 14. It is ſtrange, as if they had attained nothing, apprehended nothing, in compariſon of what they aſpired after and would be at: Not as though I had already attained; but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which I am apprehended of Chriſt. And again, I count not myſelf to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting thoſe things that are behind, and reaching forth to thoſe things that are before, I preſs toward the mark of the high calling of God in Chriſt Jeſus. It is poſſible, that unſound profeſſors may fancy they have attained much, and yet have attained nothing; and reſting on their attainments, they reſt upon nothing but a ſhadow. It is poſſible that ſound believers may judge they have attained nothing, though yet they have attained much; and hence neglecting their attainments, they preſs after more and more of Chriſt. As Paul here, I count not myſelf to have attained; I count not myſelf to have apprehended. What count you of your attainments, man, when the great apoſtle Paul counts nothing of his, though he was one of the moſt clearly enlightened, and highly privileged men in the world? Happy is that ſoul who has attained the knowlege of Chriſt, and yet is as far from thinking that he knows, or has attained as much as may ſuffice him, that he rather counts as if he knew nothing, or had attained nothing, and therefore preſſes after more of Chriſt. O for the other ſight of him! O for the other meeting with him! O for another communion! another blink of his beauty and glance of his glory. Thus the happy woman counts not herſelf to have ſeen or attained enough of Chriſt, but longs for another ſight. It is an excellent mark of a meeting with Chriſt, to be longing for more and more of Chriſt here, and for full viſion of him in the higher houſe, and to be in a caſe practically to diſcover this in an examplary commendation of Chriſt to others; while it is not only the matter of your religious talk, ſignifying only go ſee him, but the import of your examplary walk; Come ſee a man that told me all things that ever I did; Is not this the Chriſt?

Uſe 3. Another uſe ſhould be by way of exhortation. And our exhortation ſhall be tendered, 1. To believers, who have got a diſcovery of Chriſt. 2. To unbelievers, who are yet ſtrangers to him.

1ſt, To you, believers, who have got a ſaving diſcovery of Chriſt working theſe effects upon you, leading you to condemn and debaſe yourſelves to the loweſt, and to commend and exalt Chriſt to the higheſt. O let me exhort you to a walk ſuitable to ſuch a meeting with Chriſt; that is, 1. To a humble walk, like one to whom Chriſt hath told all things that ever you did. 2. To a holy walk, like one that would commend and exalt a holy Jeſus, ſaying, Come ſee a man that hath ſo and ſo ſpoken to me; Is not this the Chriſt?

[1.] I would exhort you to a humble-walk. O believer, hath he given you a ſight of yourſelf, and of your own vileneſs and baſeneſs, Walk humbly with thy God: and, in order to this, ſtill keep the glaſs before your eye, wherein he hath diſcovered you to yourſelf. There are ſeveral glaſſes wherein the ſaints behold themſelves which makes them have low thoughts of themſelves.

1. The looking-glaſs of the law of God, which diſcovers to them the vileneſs of their nature, thoughts, deſires, and affections; When the law comes, ſin revives. The law is a light by which all things are reproved and made manifeſt, Eph. v. 13. Keep this glaſs before your eye, even you that are wholly delivered from the law as a covenant of works, yet make conſtant uſe of it as a light; both a light to your head, to inform and convince you of your ſin and wickedneſs; and a light to your feet, to direct you in the paths of righteouſneſs.

2. There is the glaſs of a renewed underſtanding and a rectified judgment that the ſaints ſee their vileneſs in; when they have an impartial rule, and eye-ſalve with it, then they ſee themſelves as they are. If a man be blind, he cannot ſee himſelf, though he have never ſo clear a glaſs before him; Take heed that the light that is in you be not darkneſs, Luke xi. 35. Wherever ſpiritual light and wiſdom is, there is a clear ſight people have of themſelves.

3. There is the glaſs of conſcience, ſprinkled with the blood of Chriſt; this every true believer carries about with him. Whatever the underſtanding ſees, the conſcience comes and lays it at his door; and the conſcience being renewed and reconciled to God, it is then God's meſſenger to inform, to rouſe, to arraign, and condemn. Conſcience brings in all our unworthineſs and charges us with it; and then, what baſe and low thoughts have we of ourſelves! Oh! I deſerve to be in hell, ſays the ſoul! I deſerve no mercy at the hand of God!

4. There is the glaſs of experience, in which every ſaint looks on himſelf, and beholds he is vile. Why, the ſad experience he hath of a treacherous backſliding heart, notwithſtanding of all the love of God and Chriſt manifeſted in him; the ſad experience of the law of the members, warring againſt the law of the mind, and bring- ing him into captivity to the law of sin and death, and making him cry many times, O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from this body of sin and death? The sad experiences of many inward lustings, fightings, and reigning corruptions, and desperate departings from the Lord. Alas! how vile does the saint see himself in this glass.

5. There is the glass of the holiness of God, the glass of his infinite pure glory; Rev. iv. 8, 10. When they cried, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God almighty, which was, and is, and is to come; then the twenty-four elders fell down before the throne. What made Isaiah cry out of his uncleanness, but a view of this holy and infinitely pure glory of God. It was a view of the glorious holiness of Christ that made John the Baptist say, O! I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose the latchets of his shoes; and yet he hath Christ's testimony, that there was not a greater prophet than he. Oh! how vile is a man in his own eyes when he looks to himself in this glass.

6. There is the glass of the love of God, and of his grace and mercy in Christ: we may appeal to you that have experience of it, if any thing in the world hath a greater power to humble the soul, and lay it in the dust, than this, even the consideration of the infinite love of God; I was a blasphemer, and a persecutor; yet I obtained mercy. O such a monster of sin and wickedness as I am, and yet I have obtained mercy! O such a dog, such a devil, and yet I obtained mercy! O Sirs, when a child of God sees the grace of God in the glass of a manifestation, O how low does he sink in his own esteem! All the storms and blustering winds will not melt a rock of ice; but when the sun-beams arise upon it, how is it then melted and thawed? Thus nothing in the world melts and thaws the hard heart so much, as the hope and sense of divine love. When a child of God sees the grace of God in the glass of a commendation, as when Christ says to the soul a word like that, Song iv. 7. Thou art all fair, my love, there is no spot in thee. What! O what is this that a God is saying to the like of me, the blackest, the basest of all sinners! O! how low does self sink before the love and grace of God!

7. There is the glass of the Spirit of God shining upon the word of God into the understanding and the conscience, and giving light to see into these other glasses. As he is the Spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Christ, and giving the knowledge of the law of God, the holiness of God, the love and grace of God in Christ; for the clearest eye, and the clearest glass both, will show nothing without light; so it is the Spirit of light that sets all these things home upon the soul, and makes it apply all to itself, and so it becomes yet more vile in its own eyes. I shall add,

8. There is the glass of the example of God, of God's humility, his stupendous humility and condescension. God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, humbling themselves for our good. —See how God the Father humbles himself, Psal. cxiii. 5, 6. Who is like the Lord our God that dwells on high, who humbles himself to behold the things that are in heaven, and in the earth? It is a step of great condescension, that he should apply himself in his providence to our wants and necessities; and especially, that he should concern himself so far with sinners, as to send the Son of his love out of his bosom to redeem them. —See how God the Son humbled himself when he stept out of his Father's bosom, out of the ivory palaces, where he was made glad from eternity; yea, though he was in the form of God, and thought it no robbery to be equal with God, yet he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. The glass of his suffering and humiliation, wherein he stept as far down as hell to quench the flames of infinite wrath, is a glass, indeed, wherein we may see sin to be infinitely evil, and ourselves to be ineffably vile. —See also how the Holy Ghost humbles himself; what a vast condescension is it for God, the Holy Ghost, to undertake to teach such indocible creatures as we, to wash such lepers as we, to purge such polluted souls, and to dwell in our hearts and bosoms, so full of unsavoury stems of hell? —— Hath a God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, given us such examples of humility, and shall not this move us to step a little down the hill? O proud sinner, does God humble himself in your sight, and will not you humble yourself before him? Can a man look into the glass of God's humility, and yet be proud?

O believers, keep these glasses in your eye, and walk humbly before him, who hath set the glass before you, wherein you have seen your vileness, and hath told you all things that ever you did. O maintain a deep and humble sense of your own vileness and baseness; and the rather, that such a fountain of sin and wickedness remains yet within you, as endangers you of doing all the same evils again that ever you did, even after he hath told you of all that ever you did. The body of sin and death that remains in you, will incline you to sins of all sorts and sizes: surely, then, you cannot walk too humbly and circumspectly. I know no extreme of self abasement you can run into, but will deserve the name of pride, rather than humility. —It will be pride, and not humility, in you to deny any thing that God hath done for you in the way of grace, because you are so vile in yourself; that smells as if you were not pleased that God should get all the glory, but incline that you should have had some of it. O proud blasphemer, come down from your altitude, and be content frankly to own and acknowledge that grace hath done much even for you. —Again, It will be pride, and not humility, for you to deny and refuse to take Christ by the hand, when you are down in the dust; or to take what help he offers you, even when you are lying in the mire. It was Peter's pride to say, Lord, thou shalt never wash my feet; and yet no doubt he took it for humility. —Again, it is pride, and not humility to refuse the consolations of the Spirit, because you are conscious of your own vileness and abomination: do not lay upon yourself a load of self-censuring more than God himself does; I said in my haste, says David, I am cast off from before thine eyes, Psal. xxxi. 22. David was in haste when he said it, and so may you say, Will God allow any favour or comfort to such as I am. It is pride and arrogancy to measure God by your thoughts, and to limit his mercy. —Again, it is pride, and not humility, for you to deny him the praise and commendation due to him from you, least you be not a fit hand for doing of it. Why, says one, I think I would desire to commend Christ to others, and speak to his praise, but I am afraid I prove a hypocrite, and prove a scandal to religion. Why, man, woman, whatever come of you, let not Christ want his due, and it shall not fare the worse with you; therefore, Walk humbly with thy God; or, as the word may be read, Humble thyself to walk with thy God. It is best humility to be found in the way of duty; and it is pride to withdraw from it, upon any consideration of self-unworthiness.

come

[2.] I would exhort you to a holy walk, and thereby to commend and exalt Christ, as the woman of Samaria here did, saying, both with your lip and life, Come see a man that told me all things that ever I did; is not this the Christ? Where she both takes shame to herself, and gives glory to God in Christ: and as our chief happiness lies in the enjoyment of God, and our holiness lies in glorifying him, which is our chief end; so the way to glorify him, is to commend and exalt Christ with our heart, lips, and lives. The text leads me to direct you particularly to this part of holiness, namely, to commend him to all that you have opportunity to converse with, and to exalt him before the world. Hath he met with you as he did with this woman? O then commend him, and preach forth his excellency. Here is a way how every private Christian may be a preacher of Christ. This belongs not to ministers only, but even you who are followers of Christ, among the female sex, that cannot regularly be preachers of Christ in a ministerial way; yet, O poor woman, it is comfortable that you may be a successful teacher and preacher of Christ in a Christian charitative way, by your spiritual communion and conversation. O woman, commend Christ to your husband: O man, commend Christ to your wife. O parents and masters, commend him to your children and servants. O believer, commend Christ to your neighbours and friends, and all that you have regular access to.

1. Commend him humbly as this woman did; he told me all things that ever I did: she kept her eye upon her own baseness, and vileness, and unworthiness, which he had discovered to her. Saints have a double eye, viz. a carnal eye, and a spiritual eye; or the eye of sense, and the eye of faith. When they look upon themselves with the carnal eye of sense, then they forget all that ever they did, and what Christ told them and convinced them of, and are apt to gaze upon their own parts and gifts; and then self creeps in and spoils their pleasant exercise. But when they look upon themselves with the spiritual eye of faith, then they loath themselves, and commend Christ to purpose, and set him up to the highest, when self is sinking to the lowest in rememberance of all that ever they did, as he told them.

2. Commend him highly also, as this woman did commend him as the great God the searcher of hearts, the glorious JEHOVAH; when Arians and Atheists at this day are pulling him down from his throne, if it were possible. O set you him up, and commend him from your own experience, as the God-man that told you all things that ever you did. Commend him in his offices, saying, Is not this the Christ, the sealed and consecrated of the Father to be the Prophet, Priest, and King of Zion? Is not this JEHOVAH-TSIDKENU, The Lord our righteousness? Is not this JEHOVAH-ROPHI, The Lord our physician? Is not this JEHOVAH-SHAMMA, the IMMANUEL, God with us? Is not this the promised MESSIAS, in whom all the promises of God are Yea and Amen? Is not this the only Saviour, in whom all our salvation lies, being made of God to us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption? O there is more to say to his commendation, than the tongues of angels can trumpet forth to eternity. Again,

3. Commend him zealously as this woman did. Come and see HIM; it is not come and hear what I have to say of him; but, Come see himself. Let these whom you commend him to understand, that what you would be at, is, that they should never rest till they see, and taste, and handle this word of life; and know, to their experience, what you know. And thus also,

4. Commend him feelingly as this woman did, Come see a man that told me all things that ever I did. You should let strangers to Christ, know that what you speak of Christ, you have felt and experienced. If you know the terrors of the Lord, you will persuade men, with an aking heart, and with holy fear and trembling; and if you know the consolations of God, you will speak of them with holy triumph, and as if your heart were leaping within you. Experience is the mother of affection; commend him feelingly and affectionately. And yet,

5. Commend him cautiously, as you also find this woman did. I think it is also remarkable, in this short account that she gives of her converse with Christ, that she hid, in her own bosom, that special part of Christ's discourse to her that made most for her own consolation, particularly, that glorious word, wherein he clearly manifested himself to her, saying, I that speak unto thee, am he. No, she relates nothing of this; but tells them of that part of the conference which made most to her shame, as well as to his honour: He told me all things that ever I did. As if she was content, that Christ should be exalted on the ruins of her reputation; to let her name be debased, that his name might be exalted. Indeed, it tends most to her praise, that she commends Christ to them in that particular that made most to her shame; and she tells them no more of what he said. Here is wisdom and caution; and, indeed, there are some precious things that Christ speaks to his people when they are alone, that is not fit to be blazed abroad to every one, especially to these that are yet strangers to Christ. but, in commending Christ to them, it is safest to treat of these particulars that make most for the debasing of ourselves, and for the exalting of Christ.

6. And lastly, O commend him practically, as you see this woman did, while she says not, Go see; but, COME see a man that told me all things that ever I did. O believer, after a communion, if you have met with Christ, either now, or formerly, commend him, not only verbally, with your mouth; but practically, with your life, saying, in effect, Come see him. The life of commendation, is the commendation of the life; not of the lip, that says, Go see; but of the life, that says, Come see: your Go see will not convince any that you are in earnest; but a Come see may make them follow your example. When you say, Go, and pray; go, and praise; go, and worship; go, and do this and that excellent service; they only hear you: but when you go before them, and say, Come, and praise; come, and worship; come, and let us seek after Christ; then they both hear and see you; and are the more apt to come and see with you.

O believer, give evidence that you have met with Chriſt, by living to him as your end, and on him as your all; he died that you ſhould not live to yourſelf, but to him; and now he lives, that you may live upon him: Becauſe I live, ſays he, ye ſhall live alſo. O Sirs, let it be ſeen that you are three ſtory high; and that there is a new addition made to your ſpiritual ſtature by the light of a new diſcovery of Chriſt. The light of reaſon may make people good moral men; the light of gifts, good ſcholars; but the light of grace and experience, good and holy Chriſtians. O believer, beware of ſuch a practice and converſation, as will give occaſion to the world to ſay, Take up your communicants; they can tipple and drink, ſwear and debauch, as well as their neighbours. Oh! will you give occaſion to Chriſt to ſay, He that ſat at table with me, and ate of my bread, hath lift up his heel againſt me. Theſe are the wounds I have got in the houſe of my friends. O ſee that your converſation be a practical ſaying, Come and ſee the man that hath told me all things that ever I did; Is not this the Chriſt? And let the leading part of your practice ly in this, a going again to ſee Chriſt, and attending and depending upon him, in all the duties of religion, in order to your getting more and more acquaintance with him. For, as it is a ſaving diſcovery of Chriſt that works this ſelf-debaſing, Chriſt-exalting effect; ſo the more of this you get, it will fit you ſtill the more for commending of him humbly and practically.

Let your walk then appear to be a goſpel-walk, a walking in Chriſt, and a going ſtill again and again to ſeek him and ſee him, that you may be the more like unto him; and that beholding as in a glaſs his glory, you may be changed into the ſame image from glory to glory. It is but a dunghill on which the ſun ſhines, and yet reflects no beams; but the ſun ſhining on a ball of ſilver, or upon a bright glaſs, or a ſtill water, it will make another ſun by reflecting the beams of it. Thus the broken beams of the glory of God, ſhining on Moſes in the mount, made him come down full of glory. And, O Sirs, the more of the glory of Chriſt you ſee, the more of the glory of God's holineſs will appear about you, and the more of heaven; of which it is ſaid, they ſhall be like him, for they ſhall ſee him as he is. The more frequently you return to ſee Chriſt, the more fit will you be for reſiſting the ſnares and temptations you meet with; for your heart is a magazine of hell where corruption lies, like a barrel of gun-pouder, ready to take fire with the leaſt ſpark of a temptation, and to blow you up in the flames; but the more you come to ſee and converſe with Chriſt, the more you will get of the living water, which Chriſt gave to this woman; the Spirit as a well of water, ſpringing up to everlaſting life: and if you can get that barrel of pouder ſunk into the bottom of this well, or the flood of the Spirit to drown and overflow it, will you not then be more proof againſt all the ſparks of hell, and fiery darts of the devil? O believer, is not the Spirit promiſed as floods upon the dry ground, to drench the dry pouder? And does not your profeſſion oblige you to this attendance and dependance upon Chriſt for more and more of the Spirit? For what mean you when you ſay, Is not this the Chriſt? Do you not mean, is not this the Anointed of God; anointed with the Spirit, to give the Spirit: therefore let your conſtant recourſe be to him on this errand, taking as many along with you as you can, by the influence of your advice and example, ſaying, Come ſee a man that told me all things that ever I did; Is not this the Chriſt?

2*dly*, I would cloſe with a word to theſe that are yet ſtrangers to Chriſt, that never met with him, nor got ſuch a diſcovery of him as leads to this ſelf-abaſing and Chriſt-exalting exerciſe. And may I be allowed by you, O you that are believers in Chriſt in this houſe, to perſonate you in a few words, and ſpeak to theſe that are ſtrangers to Chriſt in your name. O Chriſtleſs ſinner, Come ſee a man that hath told us all things that ever we did; Is not this the Chriſt? The hearts of all that are acquaint with Chriſt, join with me in ſaying to you, Come ſee him, come ſee him: That which we have heard and ſeen, declare we unto you, that you may have fellowſhip with us, in our fellowſhip with the Father and the Son, by the Spirit. There are ſome here that can ſay, we have heard his voice telling us all things that ever we did; and we have ſeen his glory as the glory of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth; and, is not this the Chriſt? — Come ſee a man that hath opened our eyes, and ſometimes diſpelled all our clouds and darkneſs; Is not this the Chriſt? anointed to be a Prophet to teach and inſtruct the like of you. — Come ſee a man that hath pardoned all our ſins, and waſhed us in his blood; Is not this the Chriſt? anointed to be a Prieſt to juſtify guilty ſinners like you. — Come ſee a man that hath ſubdued all our iniquities, and ſometimes given a daſh to the power of ſin and Satan in us; Is not this the Chriſt? anointed to be a King to ranſom ſlaves of the devil like you. — O come ſee a man, of whom we can ſometimes ſay, he hath healed all our diſeaſes; Is not this the Chriſt? anointed to be a Phyſician for healing ſuch deſperate diſeaſes as yours are. — Come ſee a man that hath convinced us of all our ſins and vileneſs of heart and way, and drawn out our hearts to him as the God-man; Is not this the Chriſt; IMMANUEL, God with us? —— You need not ſay, where ſhall we ſee him? you have neither a journey to go down to hell, nor up to heaven; the word is nigh: and in the glaſs of this word he is to be ſeen. All the believers here can ſay, we never ſaw him any where but in this word of the goſpel, and in theſe public and private ordinances; and there he lies as open to your view as to ours. The word is the immediate object of our faith, wherein we ſee him; and when we hear him ſpeaking to us in his word, and hear with ſpiritual underſtanding, then we ſee him. To hear and know his voice, is all one with ſeeing him; it is in his word that we hear him telling how polluted and filthy we are, and thus all that ever we did; and hear him telling how fair and lovely he is, and thus ſhewing us that he is the Chriſt: ſo that we ſee him in what he tells us in his word; and as we have ſeen him there, ſo you may ſee him there; you have the ſame glaſs, the ſame Bible, the ſame word, the ſame promiſe, the ſame goſpel-mirror, to ſee him into that ever any ſaint on earth ſaw him in ſince he aſcended to heaven: The word is nigh, even in thy heart, and in thy mouth. O then, reſt not on our report of him only; for, what he hath told us concerning ourſelves, and concerning himſelf, will not profit you, if you do not come and ſee that our our report is true. Come and see him your self, by believing and taking it on his own word, that he is the Christ, anointed for your behoof.

But what is this I am doing, speaking to you only in the name of believers? Here, (however base a worm I am) my office warrants me to speak to you in a greater name than theirs or ours; yea, in his name, the latchet of whose shoes we are not worthy to unloose: In his name, then, who is the glorious JEHOVAH, the God-man, that can tell you all things that ever you did, and thereby give you convincing evidence that he is the Christ, I call you to come and see him. He can tell you some things about you, O sinner, that the world does not know, and cannot tell you. And may I presume in his name to tell you something, perhaps, yet a secret, which if he would bless, you might therein hear him, telling you all things that ever you did. Let me allude to what past between Christ and this woman in the context, upon their first meeting; and, perhaps, there is more than an allusion in it.

Christ hath been at this occasion, offering you the living water; and if you be saying with this woman, whether in jest or earnest, Sir, give me this water that I thirst not; Christ is in effect, saying, Go call your husband and come hither; bring whatever husband you are in league with, that so your league and covenant with death, and your marriage with hell may be disannulled. If you be saying with this woman, I have no husband; why, then ye may hear Christ saying, in effect to you, Thou hast well said, I have no husband; for as long as you are not married to Christ you have no head, no husband, that can do you any service. But, behold, you have had five husbands; you have had many husbands; and whom you are now married to is not your husband, your true and lawful husband. O harlot sinner, you have been married unto many a black husband all your days; you have been married to the law, the first husband; married to your own righteousness and self-conceit; you have been married to the world; married to your lusts; yea, and married to the devil; your heart hath been joined to idols: and now, by this, he is telling you all that ever you did. He is telling you what you have been, and what you have done. Have you been a common strumpet, a common whoremonger, a common drunkard, a common swearer, a common Sabbath-breaker, a neglecter of prayer in secret, and in your family? Yea, you have been a hypocrite, an atheist, a blasphemer, a persecuter, a murderer, an injurious person, unjust, unfaithful to God and man, unmerciful, unbelieving, impenitent. He is telling you your secret faults, not only what you did in such a company, but what was that you did in such a private place. When thou wast under the fig-tree I saw thee, says Christ to Nathanael, in another case; so says Christ to you, when thou was under the dark shade, hiding thyself from the eyes of men, my eye was upon thee; under the cloud of night I saw thee; and, can any hide himself in secret places that I cannot see? do not I fill heaven and earth, says the Lord? Yea, I say, all that ever you thought, or did, or designed to do; and I saw into thy heart and wicked nature from whence thy atheistical practices did spring. And now, if by his word he be telling you all things that ever you did, then what do you say to this question, Is not this the Christ? Is he at one glance giving you a view of all your lewdness, all your baseness, all your vileness? Then do you perceive that he is a Prophet, when he tells you how many false husbands you have had? O! Is not this the Christ? Is not this the only true Husband with whom your soul should match? Is he the man that hath told you all things that ever you did? O then, Will you go with this man? Will you marry the man, the God-man, the Christ of God? He is content, even after all your whoredoms to receive you for a bride, even after you have been adulterously matched with the devil and your lusts; will you match with this man, and quit with all your base husbands that have been haleing and dragging you to hell, and say, What have I to do any more with idols? Oh! my five husbands have ruined me; my false unhappy matches can give me no comfort, either in death or through eternity, but rather contribute to my eternal condemnation. But here is a glorious wonderful match in my offer, a man that hath told me all things that ever I did; Is not this the Christ, that is anointed to save me from the guilt of all that ever I did, and to save me from sin and wrath. O then, is it a match? is it a bargain? Why, say you, Who is he that I may match with him? Where is this Christ? Behold, man, woman; he is saying to you in this word, I that speak unto thee, am he; though it be by a poor sinful messenger that I am speaking to you, says Christ, yet, I that speak unto you am he. And now, O hath he discovered himself to you in this word, and drawn out your heart to the match? Then think not strange that you meet with some interruption in his converse with you; but go your way and leave your water-pot behind you; and give up not only with your unlawful husbands, but even with your lawful works and endeavours in point of trust and confidence: for your own black righteousness, and doings of yours, will never draw a drop of living water to you; but let your heart say, In the Lord only have I righteousness and strength; I will go in the strength of the Lord God, and make mention of thy righteousness, even of thine only. O may it be heard tell of you in the city of Dunfermline, as it was heard of this woman in the city of Samaria, that you have met with Christ; that by your words and walk henceforth you are determined to say, Come see a man that told me all things that ever I did; Is not this the Christ?

SERMON LIII.

GOD's great Name, the ground and reaſon of ſaving great Sinners.*

PSAL. cvi. 8. Nevertheleſs, he ſaved them for his name's ſake.

MY friends, the ſacramental cup that ſome of you have in view, is a cup of ſalvation; and thoſe that adventure to take that cup into their hand, had need to be perſons duly informed, and heartily concerned about ſalvation. The very firſt piece of heart-exerciſe in all that are effectually convinced and awakened to a ſenſe of ſin and fear of wrath, is that or the like queſtion, ariſing from the bottom of the heart; Men and brethren, what ſhall I do to be ſaved? Surely they are not fit for a communion-table, who have never yet come this length in religion, ſo as to be more concerned about ſalvation, and the reſolution of this queſtion, than ever they were about any temporal concern in the world; for ſuch as ſtand fair to be worthy communicants, they have come yet a greater length than this, namely, to get that queſtion reſolved to their ſatisfaction, and their minds ſpiritually enlightened in the knowledge of the method of ſalvation through Chriſt, ſo as to ſee upon what terms, and for what reaſon it is that God ſaves them; and particularly, that there is no reaſon why he ſhould ſave them, unleſs he bring the reaſon from himſelf, that it will not be for their ſake, but for his own. God's great end, in all his works, is the glory of his own name; and eſpecially his work of ſaving ſinners through Chriſt: and that which makes it a great work, is, becauſe his great name is ſo much concerned therein, and magnified thereby, that it is not ſo greatly glorified any other way as it is here. God propoſes, in this work, that the loftineſs of man ſhould be brought down, and the Lord alone exalted; and hence all whom he ſaves, he humbles them ſo low for their ſin and wickedneſs, as that to bring them to this acknowledgment, that, if even God ſave them, it will be owing, not unto them, not unto them, but unto his own glorious name. What thought and concern about ſalvation ye have, I know not; but if ye be of theſe that believe, to the ſaving of your ſoul, you will ſee ſo much of your own ſinfulneſs and guiltineſs before God, that you will be brought to deſpair of ſalvation in any other way, and upon any other account, than that which was his method of ſaving Iſrael of old; Nevertheleſs, he ſaved them for his name's ſake.

How this people ſinned we are told in the two preceding verſes; and how God ſaved them, we are told here in the text; Nevertheleſs, he ſaved them for his name's ſake. The more full hiſtory of their ſinning, even in the extremity of danger they were in, and of God's ſaving them at the Red-ſea, ye have Exod. xiv. throughout. And concerning this wonderful ſalvation, there are four things ye may notice in the words.

1. We have a glorious Saviour in the pronoun, He, namely, JEHOVAH, the great God, our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, the Angel of the covenant, that appeared to Moſes in the buſh, and delivered Iſrael by the hand of Moſes. He is the Saviour; even he that ſays, Look unto me and be ſaved, all ye ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none elſe.

2. The grievous ſinners whom he ſaved, in the word, them; he ſaved THEM, namely, the Iſraelites, his profeſſing people, when they were in great peril, having the Red-ſea before them, and the rude enemy behind them, and inacceſſible mountains on each ſide of them: in the greateſt extremity, and yet a ſinful people; ſinning againſt God even in that extremity; yet, he ſaved them.

3. The great argument that moved him to ſave them, or upon what account he thus appeared; it was, for his name's ſake; that is, for his own ſake, as Hezekiah prays to be ſaved from Sennacherib, Iſa. xxxvii. 20. That all the kingdoms of the earth may know, that thou art the Lord, even thou only: or, for thy name's ſake; that is, for thy glory's ſake, Pſal. lxxix. 9. Help us, O God of our ſalvation, for the glory of thy name; and deliver us, and purge away our ſins, for thy name's ſake: That is, alſo for thy mercy's ſake, for thy goodneſs ſake; or, becauſe they were called by his name; this is urged, Jer. xiv. 9.—Thou, O Lord, art in the midſt of us, and we are called by thy name, leave us not.

4. The marvellous nature and circumſtance of this ſalvation, in the word, Nevertheleſs; the glory of divine mercy is herein magnified, that he ſaved them for his name's ſake, with a non obſtante, with a nevertheleſs; that is, notwithſtanding all their ſin, though their ſin cried to God, not to ſave them, but to damn them; not to help them, but to deſtroy them; Nevertheleſs, he ſaved them for his name's ſake, notwithſtanding their provocations.

OBSERV. That when God ſaves ſinners, or a ſinful people, he does it for his NAME'S SAKE, notwithſtanding their provocation, whereby they forfeit his help, and deſerve deſtruction.

I ſhall firſt premiſe ſome general poſitions for clearing the text and doctrine. Secondly, Illuſtrate the truth of the doctrine from ſome parallel texts of ſcripture.

1ſt, I ſhall premiſe ſome general poſitions for clearing the text and doctrine.

Firſt poſition. "That the ſalvation and temporal deliverance that God, for his name's ſake, wrought for Iſrael of old, in bringing them out of Egypt through the Red-ſea to Canaan, was typical of the great ſalvation from ſin and wrath, to eternal life, through Jeſus Chriſt;"

* This ſubject was finiſhed in one ſermon, preached at Carnock, July 18*th*, 1730. before the adminiſtration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper. It hath undergone three editions.

which

which ſpiritual and eternal ſalvation this text itſelf leads me to ſpeak of, not excluding the temporal deliverance, and remarkable appearances of divine providence, for the viſible church in general. As Iſrael's ſin and provocation, and the judgments that came on them for the ſame, was our example and warning-piece, 1 Cor. x. 6.; and great deſtructions happened for enſamples and types, ver. 11.; And written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come: ſo the great deliverances God wrought for them, were types of the great ſalvation that God works for ſinners, through Jeſus Chriſt, to the praiſe of the glory of his grace; or, For his name's ſake.

Second Poſition. "Many unconverted perſons, in the viſible church, may be delivered from temporal judgments, and ſaved of God only in outward reſpects, and that for his name's ſake; ſo doubtleſs, many unconverted perſons were among the Iſraelites; yea, moſt of them gave diſcoveries that they were ſo." They forfeited his help in many reſpects; yet he ſaved them in many reſpects, For his name's ſake. See Ezek. xxxvi. 22, 23. Thus ſaith the Lord, I do not this for your ſakes, O houſe of Iſrael; but for my holy name's ſake:—Not for your ſakes do I this, ſaith the Lord God; be it known unto you. Their ſlavery was ſo great, that it opened the mouth of the heathen, as if the God of Iſrael were no God; therefore God, for his name's ſake, helped them. See alſo Deut. ix. 5. Iſrael was bad enough, but the heathen were no better, but rather worſe; therefore, for his name's ſake, he appeared. Many whom God will not be merciful to in the world, may yet, for his name's ſake, be delivered in time.

Third Poſition. "Gracious ſouls do too much forfeit God's help in times of danger, and deſerve to be forſaken of God, and expoſed to miſery; yet, for his name's ſake, he ſaved them:" this is their acknowledgement, as you ſee in Jacob, Gen. xxxii. 10. I am not worthy of the leaſt of all thy mercies. Even ſo does the church acknowledge, Ezra ix. 8, 13. and Lam. iii. 22. It is of the Lord's mercy that we are not conſumed. And again, Fourth Poſition. "God may puniſh his people dolefully, whom yet, for his name's ſake, he will not deſtroy;" as in theſe inſtances juſt now recited. See Jer. xxx. 10. God may puniſh his people for their ſin ſeverely, whom yet he will ſave eternally, for his name's ſake; yea, and puniſh them more than others, Amos iv. 6.—13. and iii. 2. You only have I known of all the families of the earth; therefore I will puniſh you for all your iniquities. Thoſe whom, for his name's ſake, he ſaved from ſin to eternity, he will make them feel it to be an evil and bitter thing in time.

Fifth Poſition is, "God may ſave a viſible church, in many outward reſpects, for the ſake of his name, which he reſolves to magnify, eſpecially, in behalf of his inviſible remnant among them, his hidden ones;" Iſa. i. 10. Except the Lord of hoſts had left unto us a very ſmall remnant, we ſhould have been as Sodom, and we ſhould have been like unto Gomorrah. Many are ſaved with a temporal ſalvation, for the ſake of thoſe whom God reſolves, for his name's ſake, to ſave with eternal ſalvation. Hence it is ſaid, with reſpect to the day of outward calamity, that, for the elect's ſake, theſe days ſhall be ſhortened. The wicked are more obliged to God's people than they are aware of. Hence,

Sixth Poſition is, "That that ſalvation, wherein God's name is moſt concerned, is ſalvation in Chriſt Jeſus to eternal life;" wherein he brings ſinners from darkneſs to light, and from the power of Satan unto God; from death to life; from a hell of ſin and miſery to a heaven of holineſs and happineſs.—Having propoſed theſe things ſhortly for clearing the text and doctrine in the general; before I proceed to the particular parts thereof, I ſhall,

2*dly*, Prove the doctrine by ſcripture inſtances; Ezek. xx. 8, 9. Read 1 Sam. xii. 22. Iſa. xlviii. 22, 25. Conſider, for this purpoſe, God's promiſes; ſuch as Iſa. xlviii. 8, 9, 11. His peoples prayers; ſuch as Jer. xiv. 7. But an induction of particulars, to this purpoſe, may afterwards occur for the confirmation.

Now having premiſed ſome things, and confirmed the doctrine, the method may be as follows.

I. To enquire what is that name of God, for the ſake of which he ſaves.
II. What it is for God to ſave for his name's ſake.
III. What ſalvation he works for his name's ſake.
IV. What is imported in this nevertheleſs; or, in God's ſaving with a notwithſtanding; and ſo over what impediments, real provocations, and ſeeming impoſſibility he brings about this ſalvation for his name's ſake.
V. Offer ſome reaſons why he thus ſaves for his name's ſake.
VI. Deduce ſome inferences from the whole for the application.

I. I am to enquire what is the NAME of God, for the ſake of which he ſaves. And,

1. By the name of God we may underſtand his being, or God himſelf; Deut. xxviii. 58. That thou mayeſt fear this glorious and dreadful name, THE LORD THY GOD. Our Lord Jeſus commands his apoſtles, to go and teach, [or, DISCIPLINE] all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, Matth. xxviii. 19. Whatever then is intended by the name of God, each of the adorable perſons of the glorious Trinity, are equally concerned therein. It is a name common to them all; and in this ſenſe they have not diſtinct or diverſe names; for it is not ſimply the name Father, and the name Son, and the name Holy Ghoſt that is intended, but the name of God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, one God. By the name of God then, is meant God himſelf; and to ſave, for his name's ſake, is to ſave for his own ſake, as he ſays, Iſa. xliii. 20. I, even I am he that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſions, for mine own ſake. We find the names of things taken for the things themſelves; A few names in Sardis; that is, a few perſons.

2. By the name of God, we may underſtand the authority of God; that is, his abſolute right and power to do what he pleaſes with his own creatures. He hath right to order, and power to execute, whatſoever he will concerning them; My counſel ſhall ſtand, and I will do all my pleaſure, Iſa. xlvi. 10.; ſo that when he ſaves, for his name's ſake, he ſaves for the ſake of his ſovereign will and pleaſure, and for manifeſting his own abſolute authority; his right and might to effectuate what he pleaſes.

3. By the name of God, we may underſtand the Chriſt of God; for in our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is is the whole name and authority of God; Exod. xxiii. 21. Beware of him, and obey his voice, provoke him not; for he will not pardon your transgressions; for my name is in him. But in case any should think, Is it not a part of God's name, that he pardons iniquity, transgression, and sin? Why then is it said of Christ, He will not pardon your iniquity, for my name is in him? I answer, The pardon here is not a pardon that respects condemnation, and freedom from hell; but castigation, as a father is said to pardon a child, when he will not spare the rod, nor forbear to chasten: thus he will not pardon your iniquity, without taking vengeance on your inventions; for my name is in him; i. e. my authority is in him. Christ is the very name of God; and when he pardons, for his name's sake, he pardons for his Christ's sake: thus the Old-Testament saints, as they used to pray to be saved of God, for his name's sake, so they sometime pray for his word's sake, 2 Sam. vii. 21.; that is, for Christ's sake, the Word that was made flesh; for the same prayer is rendered for thy Servant's sake, 1 Chron. xvii. 19. To this purpose, Psal. lxxxiv. 9. David's prayer is, Behold, O God, our shield; look upon the face of thine Anointed: And Daniel's prayer is, for the Lord's sake, Dan. ix. 17. And, O but God hath done much, and will do much for Christ; because his name is in him, and in him he is well-pleased and reconciled.

4. By the name of God we are to understand, the attributes of God. I shall mention some of these.

(1.) His power is his name, and for the sake of that he saves, as in the text; He saved them for his name's sake, that he might make his mighty power known. Compare Exod. xix. 16. and Rom. ix. 17. For this cause God raised up Pharaoh, that he might shew his mighty power in him, that his name might be declared throughout all the earth, even his mighty power in saving of Israel out of his hand. This argument Moses makes use of to divert God's threatened wrath, Num. xiv. 15, 16. This is the name God manifests to Abraham, Gen. xvii. 1. I am God Almighty; walk before me, and be thou perfect. And the three children, Dan. iii. 17. have recourse to this name; Our God whom we serve, is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us. If there be any thing that stands in the way of the accomplishment of his promises, he is able to remove it; so Abraham's faith fixed here, Rom. iv. 21. Being thus persuaded, that he that had promised, was able also to perform. When God saves for his name's sake, it is for the sake of his power, to shew, That he is able to do above all that we are able to ask or think; that he is able to do above our wants, above our deserts, above our prayers, and above our thoughts: we cannot want more than he can give; we cannot pray for so much as he can bestow; we are not able to think what he can do. God's power is a part of his name, that faith may take hold of for salvation, and flee unto, even when there is no explicite view of his will; thus faith the leper, If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. I cannot tell if he will help me, a soul may say, but I know he is able, and I am called to trust in his powerful name, and to take hold of his strength, Isa. xxvi. 4. chap. xxvii. 5. While you can do no better, it is good to trust in his power, and put his will in his own discretion, and refer that to himself; that soul is not far behind.

(2.) His mercy is another part of his name: when he saves, for his name's sake, he saves for his mercy's sake; Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and passeth by the transgression of the remnant of his heritage? He retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in mercy, Micah vii. 18. He is the Lord; the Lord God merciful and gracious, Exod. xxxiii. 6. He so far delights in mercy, that mercy rejoices over judgment, James ii. 13. Hence the psalmist's prayer is, Psal. vi. 4. Return, O Lord, deliver my soul for thy mercy's sake: and Psal. lxxix. 8. O remember not against us former iniquities; let thy tender mercy speedily prevent us, for we are brought very low: and ver. 9. Help, O God of our salvation, for the glory of thy name; deliver us, and purge away our sins, for thy name's sake. David had fainted, unless he had believed to see the goodness of the Lord, Psal. xxvii. 13. Out of a sense of misery, we ought to go to the fountain of mercy, and so look to be saved for his name's sake.

(3.) His wisdom is another part of his name; The Lord is a God of knowledge, by him actions are weighed, 1 Sam. ii. 3.: Yea, his understanding is infinite. The psalmist takes up the wisdom of God as his name, and for the sake thereof seeks to be led and guided; For thy name's sake lead me and guide me, Psal. xxxi. 3. God, in saving sinners, through Christ, has such a regard to his name, as a God of infinite wisdom, that in this method of salvation, the manifold wisdom of God is shown, Eph. iii. 10.

(4.) His truth and faithfulness is another part of his name, for the sake of which he saves and shews mercy; his mercies are new every morning: great is thy faithfulness, Lam. iii. 3. It is declared to be one of the capital letters of his name, Exod. xxxiv. 6. Abundant in goodness and truth: and hence, how often did God remember, toward Israel, his promise to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, notwithstanding their sin? Read Psal. cv. 8, 9, 10. 2 Kings xiii. 23. And, O what will not God do for his truth's sake, for his promise's sake! for, he is not man that he should lye. He that, for his mercy's sake, makes the promise, will, for his truth's sake accomplish it; Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, which thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old, Micah vii. 20. In saving sinners, through Christ, his truth is exceedingly manifested: his truth in fulfilling the threatenings of the law upon the Surety, in the room of the sinner; his truth in fulfilling the promises of the gospel, that are all Yea and Amen in Christ; his truth and faithfulness in fulfilling the promise made to Christ in the eternal compact; which may be part of the meaning of that word, Rom. iii. 25. To declare his righteousness for the remission of sin, through that propitiation: when God forgives sin through his blood, he declares his righteousness and faithfulness in his promise made to Christ, with reference to his seeing his seed, upon his giving his soul an offering for sin, Isa. liii. 10.

(5.) His justice is another part of his name, for the sake of which he saves, and works salvation. The justice of God may be viewed as either retributive or vindictive: Retributive justice is that for the sake of which he saves either more generally, or in a more special way: In a general way, even some wicked sinners in the visible church may be unjustly oppressed by their enemies that are more wicked than they, as Israel was by the Egyptians; therefore God righteously took vengeance on them, and delivered livered Iſrael. In a ſpecial way it may be viewed in the ſaints themſelves, who are ſinners; yet, becauſe objects of promiſed mercy in Chriſt Jeſus, therefore he ſaves and delivers for his righteouſneſs and juſtice' ſake; Quicken me, O Lord, for thy name's ſake: for thy righteouſneſs ſake bring my ſoul out of trouble, Pſal. cxliii. 11. Thus he is ſaid to uphold his people with the right-hand of his righteouſneſs, Iſa. xli. 10.—His vindictive juſtice is alſo that for the ſake whereof he ſaves, upon the ſuppoſition of its having got full ſatisfaction; and ſo we ordinarily underſtand, Rom. iii. 25. Whom God hath ſet forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs, for the remiſſion of the ſins that are paſt, through the forbearance of God. It is ordinary for people to ſeek to be ſaved for his mercy's ſake; but believing views of juſtice ſatisfied, and God reconciled in Chriſt, would make the ſoul as freely and boldly ſeek to be ſaved for juſtice's ſake in and through Chriſt the atonement, in whom that name of God, Juſtice, hath more glorious ſatisfaction than ever it will have in the damnation of ſinners. This is expreſly God's name, Exod. xxxiv. 7. Keeping mercy for thouſands, forgiving iniquity, tranſgreſſion, and ſin, and that will by no means clear the guilty; that is, in diſpenſing mercy, he will be ſo far from diſpenſing with juſtice, that, by no means, will he ſhew mercy in pardoning ſin to the ſinner, without the higheſt reſpect to juſtice in puniſhing ſin in the Surety, in whom his vindictive juſtice, taking vengeance on ſin, is ſo cleared and vindicated, that when he pardons ſin, through Chriſt, he is as juſt in pardoning ſin as he is merciful in doing ſo; for he has ſo ordained it, to the glory of his great name, that he might be juſt, and the juſtifier of them that believe in Jeſus.

(6.) His holineſs is a part of his name, for the ſake of which he ſaves. This is declared to be his name, Exod. xv. 11. Who is like unto thee, glorious in holineſs. Iſa. lvii. 15. The high and lofty One, that inhabiteth eternity, whoſe name is holy. For the ſake of this he pities and ſaves, Ezek. xxxvi. 21. But I had pity, for my holy name's ſake, which the houſe of Iſrael had profaned among the heathen: hence read, ver. 22. I do not this for your ſake, but for mine holy name's ſake. God, in ſaving ſinners, through Chriſt's righteouſneſs, hath his holineſs, in the precept of the law, as much magnified by the active obedience of Chriſt, as his juſtice in the threatening of the law is magnified by his paſſive obedience.

I might here mention the providence of God as a part of his name, his watchful care over his people; For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro, to ſhew himſelf ſtrong in their behalf, 2 Chron. xvi. 9. He rules and over-rules all for their good.—I might mention his titles, whereby he is deſigned; ſuch as, The Lord of hoſts; the mighty God; the King of kings.—And I might likewiſe notice his word, which he is ſaid to magnify above all his name.—But, in a word, as the name is that by which any thing or perſon is known; ſo the name of God is the very thing whereby he makes himſelf known; whether it be in his titles, attributes, ordinances, words, or works. He hath made himſelf known by his work of creation and providence; but a thouſand times more clearly in the work of redemption and ſalvation: herein appear, not only thoſe attributes that ſhine in creation and providence, but alſo ſome perfections of the divine nature, that would not have been diſplayed, in caſe the firſt covenant had ſtood; ſuch as the infinite mercy and patience of God towards guilty ſinners: nor ſuch a pitch of condeſcenſion as he hath here diſcovered; nay, nor any other attribute had ſhined forth in ſuch luſtre and beauty as here it doth: therefore, while Satan thought to have deleted the name of God, that he wrote upon the creature at firſt, behold how infinite wiſdom counteracts him, and makes that the occaſion of making his name more known than before. Theſe attributes of God, therefore, that are diſplayed in the new covenant of grace, and exerted in the ſalvation of ſinners according to that covenant, is that name of God that is principally here to be conſidered.

II. The ſecond thing was, To ſhew, what it is for God to SAVE, for his name's ſake; or, for the ſake of his name. Having cleared what his name is; What is it, I ſay, for God to SAVE, for his name's ſake?

In general, beſide what has been ſaid, God's ſaving, for his name's ſake, imports, I think, his making his name the ALL of our ſalvation, becauſe the ſinful creature is nothing, hath nothing, will do nothing, can do nothing in the affair of his own ſalvation; therefore God himſelf will be all, and do all: Iſa. lix. 16. and Iſa. lxiii. 5. He looked and there was none to help: therefore his own arm brought ſalvation. Thus God deſigned to ſhew himſelf to be all in all.—More particularly,

1. For God to SAVE, for his name's ſake, is to make his name the motive whence he ſaves. What moved him to ſave any guilty ſinner? It is his name; his own mercy moved him; his own grace moved him; his own bowels of pity and compaſſion moved him; his own love moved him; his own name moved him: God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoſoever believeth in him, ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life.

2. For God to SAVE, for his name's ſake, is to make his name the reaſon why he ſaves. Though his name be the motive, yet ſome may think there is ſurely ſome reaſon drawn from the creature: Arminians ſay, that it was the foreſight of faith and good works; that he foreſaw ſome would be better than others, and improve the means better; and for this reaſon he would ſave them: but the word of God ſays otherwiſe, Deut. vii. 7, 8. God loves ſinners, becauſe he loves them. His ſovereign mercy is the cauſe of his ſhewing mercy; I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, Rom. ix. 15.

3. To SAVE, for his name's ſake, is to make his name the matter of their ſalvation, in as much as his name itſelf is their ſalvation. His name is their ſtrong tower, Prov. xviii. 10. His name, the eternal God himſelf, is their refuge, Deut. xxxiii. 27. Inſomuch, that whom he ſaves, they have not only ſalvation from him, but in him; Iſrael ſhall be ſaved IN the Lord with an everlaſting ſalvation, Iſa. xlv. 17. Chriſt, therefore, who calls us to look to him, and be ſaved, he himſelf is the ſalvation of the ſinner. Now mine eyes have ſeen thy ſalvation, ſaid old Simeon, Luke ii. 29. Behold, thy ſalvation cometh, ſays God, Iſa. lxii. 11. Chriſt is not only the helper, but the help itſelf; O Iſrael, thou haſt deſtroyed thyſelf, but in me is thine help, Hoſ. xiii. 9. See Pſal. xviii. 2. The Lord is my rock, and my fortreſs, and my deliverer: my God, my ſtrength, in whom I will truſt; my buckler, and the the horn of my salvation, and my high tower. He is given for a covenant of the people, a light to the Gentiles, Isa. xlix. 6, 7. Again,

4. To SAVE, for his name's sake, is to make his name the means of salvation; and so it must be, if his name itself be the all of our salvation. By what means doth he save? It is even by his name: By whom doth Jacob arise but by the God of Jacob? By whom are sinners saved, but by the name of God? by the Christ of God? And there is none other name given under heaven whereby we must be saved, Acts iv. 12. No man comes to the Father, but by him as the way, by him as the Leader, and as the name of God.

5. To SAVE, for his name's sake, is to make his name the measure of our salvation: he will, therefore, save as far as his name and honour is engaged by promise to Christ, or to his people in him; 1 Kings viii. 56. Read also Josh. xxi. 45. There failed not ought of any good thing which the Lord had spoken unto the house of Israel; all came to pass. Thus God saves his people in particular cases, as far as his name, and faithfulness, and truth is concerned; God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will, with the temptation, also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it, 1 Cor. x. 13.

6. To SAVE, for his name's sake, is to make his name the end of our salvation, even the glory of his name; the great end he proposes in saving, is even the praise of the glory of his grace, Eph. i. 6. The praise of the glory of his wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and truth. This is the great end of God in his work of saving sinners through Christ; This people have I formed for myself, they shall shew forth my praise, Isa. xliii. 21. Christ's grand prayer, when he was accomplishing the work of our salvation and redemption, was, Father, glorify thy name. And here let us stay a little, and admire the great design that God had in hand in saving, for his name's sake. God's chief end herein being the glory and honour of his name, What is that? Why,

(1.) In saving, for his name's sake, he designs the manifestation of his name, the declaration of his name, as it is said, Rom. iii. 25. To declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God; to make known his name in every salvation of Israel, or of his church, his great design still is, that his name may be known, declared, published, and proclaimed.

(2.) In saving, for his name's sake, he designs the vindication of his name. His name is abused and reproached in the world, which is filled with harsh thoughts of God, as if he were either unjust, or unmerciful; therefore, in saving, for his name's sake, he will vindicate his name, That he may be just when he speaks, and clear when he judges, Psal. li. 4. That he may appear to be not only merciful, in saving; but also just, and the justifier of them that believe in Jesus: and as just in saving believing sinners, that flee to his name, as he is just in damning unbelieving impenitent sinners.

(3.) In saving, for his name's sake, he designs the exaltation of his name; I will be exalted among the heathen; I will be exalted in the earth, Psal. xlvi. 10. He designs that the right-hand of the Lord should be exalted in doing valiantly, Psal. cxviii. 16.; and make mention that his name is exalted, Isa. xii. 4. Therefore will he be exalted, that he may have mercy on you, Isa. xxx. 18. Wherefore hath God exalted Christ to his right-hand, but that his name may be exalted in him? Who being in the form of God, thought it no robbery to be equal with God: that at the name [or, IN the name] of Jesus, every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth, Phil. ii. 6, 10. On which account, God hath highly exalted him to the glory of God the Father. And wherefore does he save, and glorify, and exalt any sinner through Christ, but that his name may be glorified and exalted?

(4.) In saving sinners, for his name's sake, he designs the pleasure of his name; that his name should not only be exalted but delighted in, because it delights in shewing mercy, through Christ, Micah vii. 18. We read of the good pleasure of his will, Eph. i. 5.; the good pleasure of his goodness, 2 Thes. i. 11. God being infinitely well-pleased in Christ, he takes pleasure in giving out of his goodness through him; and he saves to the good pleasure of his name, and to the contentment of all his attributes; to the good pleasure of his goodness, the good pleasure of his grace, the good pleasure of his holiness, the good pleasure of his justice, the good pleasure of his truth and faithfulness: all the perfections of God are well-pleased; Mercy and truth are met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other, Psal. lxxxv. 10.

(5.) In saving sinners, for his name's sake, he designs the aggrandizing of his name; I mean, that his name should not only be glorified and exalted, but magnified to the highest, according to the song of the angel upon the coming of the Saviour; Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, and good-will towards men, Luke ii. 14. His name is magnified to the highest in this way of salvation through Christ. Damnation is but the lowest way, wherein God is glorified of sinners, and it is to their eternal ruin. Let sinners consider this, that they may not go on in the road to hell, but may fall in love with that way, wherein God is glorified and magnified to the highest. For, herein God is glorified by the highest person, his eternal Son, in his doing and dying, and rising and reigning, and mediating at his right-hand; glorified in the highest place, with the highest praise, in the highest manner, and to the highest degree.

(6.) In saving sinners, for his name's sake, he designs the eternalizing of his name; It shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off, Isa. lv. 13.: that is, that his name may be celebrated with Halelujahs of praise to all eternity: The glory of the Lord shall endure for ever: the Lord shall rejoice in his works, Psal. civ. 31. Thy name, O Lord, endureth for ever, and thy memorial throughout all generations, Psalm cxxxv. 13. Christ, the Saviour, was set up from everlasting, that the sinner saved of God in him might praise him to everlasting: His name shall endure for ever; and his ransomed shall come to Zion with everlasting songs, saying, Salvation to our God that sits upon the throne, and to the Lamb, for ever and ever, Rev. vii. 11, 12.

QUEST. What is it in the name of God that he hath such regard to, when he saves for his name's sake?

ANSW. He hath regard to his name in all the parts of it that I have already mentioned, and in every attribute, insomuch, that no attribute shall be injured, but every one of them extolled more than another.——He also hath regard to his name in all the properties and qualities of it.

† The reason of this assertion was accounted for above, p. 322, 454. to which we refer.

it.—His name is a glorious name; and, in saving sinners, through Christ, he hath regard to the glory of it; that it be glorified in the manner I have hinted at.—His name is a great name; and, in saving sinners, through Christ, he hath regard to the greatness of it, by bringing about such a great salvation. And, what will he not do for his great name?—His name is a holy name; and therefore, in saving sinners, through Christ, he hath regard to the holiness of it; not only in sanctifying all whom he saves, but in saving, by a righteousness, whereby his holy law is not only fulfilled, but magnified and made honourable; in providing a Saviour of such infinite dignity, that he casts a lustre on the law, by his obedience to it.—His name is a dreadful name; and therefore, in saving sinners, through Christ, he hath such a regard to the dreadfulness of it, that his most dreadful vengeance lighted upon sin, in the person of the Surety, the Saviour, when he became a sacrifice for sin.—His name is a precious name; and therefore, in saving sinners, he hath such a regard to the manifesting the preciousness of it, as to make it appear in the precious blood of Christ, which is the price of salvation.—His name is a blessed name, and he cannot be more blessed and happy than he is in himself; yet, to manifest the blessedness of his name, he saves sinners, so as to show he loves not to be blest and happy alone, but will have men to be blest in him, that all nations may call him blessed.—His name is a wonderful name, a mysterious and unsearchable name; and therefor it is said, Isa. ix. 6. His name shall be called, Wonderful. Angels have been prying into this depth so many thousand of years, and yet are not at the bottom of it, but still are prying into the mystery of the gospel salvation through Christ; and such is the regard God hath to this wonderful name, in saving sinners, that every part of their salvation is a miracle and wonder, manifesting the wisdom of God in a mystery. —In a word, his name is an everlasting and unchangeable name; and it is his regard thereunto that makes him, by the means of his everlasting righteousness, bring about this everlasting salvation.

III. The third thing proposed, in the general method, was, To shew what SALVATION he works, for his name's sake. Salvation is either temporal, spiritual, or eternal; and though God, for his name's sake, works many temporal deliverances for his church and people, as you see in Israel here, vers. 9, 10, 11, 21, 22, 43, 45, 46. and all this for his name's sake: also, he saved the church of Scotland many a time, for his name's sake: he saved us from Paganism, for his name's sake, when he first sent gospel light to our land; he saved us from Popery, for his name's sake, at the glorious Reformation, which was here carried on by solemn National Covenants, that were the glory of our land, whatever contempt is now put upon them; he saved us from Prelacy, and arbitrary power and tyranny, at the merciful Revolution, for his name's sake; and he hath saved us, from time to time, from many attempts of enemies that were seeking to raze us to the foundation, as some are subtilly doing at this day, by damnable errors, which strike at the foundation of all religion; I mean, especially Arian blasphemy †: but, whatever church salvation, or temporal salvation of this sort to a visible church, God works, for his name's sake, yet it is that spiritual and eternal salvation, typified by Israel's salvation, that the name of God is most concerned with and exalted by; therefore, I especially speak of this everlasting salvation in Christ.

And therefore, if the question be, What SALVATION of this sort he works, for his name's sake?

I answer, There is no part of this great salvation but the name of God is engraven upon it, as being what he works, for his name's sake. I shall offer a few instances thereof: from election to glorification, all the parts of salvation that ly betwixt these two words, from everlasting to everlasting, are brought about for his name's sake.

1. Wherefore did he elect any sinners from eternity? It was for his name's sake, to shew his absolute sovereignty in making vessels of mercy, of whom he pleased; And that he might make known the riches of his glory to them, Rom. ix. 23. He hath chosen us in him, before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy, and without blame before him in love. Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ, to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace, Eph. i. 4, 5, 6.

2. Wherefore did he redeem any sinners by the blood of his eternal Son? It was for his name's sake; Eph. i. 7. In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace; wherein he hath abounded towards us in all wisdom and prudence. The redemption of Israel is designed and ordered for the glory of the God of Israel; Sing, O ye heavens,—for the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified himself in Israel, Isa. xliv. 22.

3. Wherefore doth he call any sinners effectually? It is for his name's sake: this is illustrated at large by the apostle; You see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called: but God hath chosen the foolish things of this world, &c. 1 Cor. i. 26,—31. He hath saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which he purposed in Christ before the world began, 2 Tim. i. 9. Hence the saints ascribe their conversion and quickening to the name of God, and to the grace of God; By grace I am what I am, says Paul, 1 Cor. xv. 10. Not unto us, not unto us, but unto thy name be the glory, Psal. cxv. 1.

4. Wherefore doth he justify and pardon any guilty sinner? It is even for his name's sake; Isa. xliii. 25. I, even I am he that blotteth out thy transgression for my name's sake. And Rom. iii. 24, 25, 26. We are justified freely by his grace, through thy redemption that is in Jesus Christ, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness, for the remission of sins that are past, &c. Again,

5. Wherefore doth he adopt any child of wrath into his family? It is for his name's sake; Eph. i. 5. We are predestinate to the adoption of children, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace. Again,

6. Wherefore doth he sanctify any filthy sinner? It is even for his name's sake; 1 Cor. i. 30. Christ is made of God to us sanctification, that no flesh might glory in his sight: but that he that glorieth might glory in the Lord. And hence all the great things promised in the covenant of grace, Ezek. xxxvi. 25, 26, 27. Among the rest, His putting his Spirit within them, and causing them to walk in his his ſtatutes, are ſaid to be done for his holy name's ſake, ver. 22.

7. Wherefore will he carry on the good work, which he hath begun, and never utterly leave his people, nor ſuffer them altogether to depart from him? Why? It is even for his name's ſake, and his promiſe' ſake; Jer. xxxii. 40. I will make an everlaſting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them, to do them good; but I will put my fear in their heart, and they ſhall not depart from me. Heb. xiii. 5. I will never leave thee, nor forſake thee finally.

8. Wherefore doth he glorify at laſt? It is for his name's ſake, who is the giver both of grace and glory, Pſal. lxxxiv. 11. It is your Father's good pleaſure to give you the kingdom. The gift of God is eternal life, though Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.——Thus every part of ſalvation, from firſt to laſt, is wrought, for his name's ſake. The Lord is a rock, and his work is perfect: he begins, for his name's ſake; carries on, for his name's ſake; and completes the work, for his name's ſake, that the head-ſtone of ſalvation may be laid on with ſhoutings of grace, grace unto it.

As all the parts of ſalvation, ſo all the means of ſalvation, are granted for his name's ſake.—Is right hearing a mean of ſalvation? Well, This is what he gives, for his name's ſake, according to that promiſe, John x. 16. Other ſheep I have that are not of this fold, them alſo I muſt bring, and they ſhall hear my voice.—Is prayer a mean? Well, right praying is what he alone grants, for his name's ſake, according to the promiſe, Zech. xii. 10. I will pour out the Spirit of grace and ſupplication. —Is faith a mean of ſalvation? Yea, and it is a part of ſalvation alſo, which God gives, for his name's ſake, according to his word, Eph. ii. 8. By grace you are ſaved, through faith; and that not of yourſelves: it is the gift of God.—Is repentance a leading part of ſalvation? This is alſo what he gives, for his name's ſake, on the back of faith, as a fruit thereof, according to his promiſe, Zech. xii. 10. They ſhall look on him whom they have pierced and mourn; and he hath exalted Chriſt to give it, Acts v. 31.

My friends, if there be any other things that we reckon pertains to ſalvation, which God doth not work, for his name's ſake, you may realize it as no part of ſalvation; for, I will aſſure you, his name will have the glory of every part of ſalvation.

IV. The fourth thing propoſed, was, What is imported in this nevertheleſs, or in God's ſaving with a notwithſtanding; and ſo to ſhow over what impediments, whether real provocations, or ſeeming impoſſibilities of bringing about this ſalvation, for his names ſake; NEVERTHELESS he ſaved them, for his name's ſake. It is impediments on the ſinner's part that the text ſpeaks of; therefore I confine myſelf to theſe. He ſaved Iſrael here, notwithſtanding dreadful ſins. Read verſes 6, 7, 13, 14, 16, 19, 20, 21, 24, 25, 28, 29. 32, 34,—39, 43. Yet nevertheleſs he ſaved them, for his name's ſake. Did he notwithſtanding all this, ſave them, for his name's ſake? Then, what will not he do for his name? And what may not ſinners expect upon this ground? What bar cannot God break, for his name's ſake? What mountain cannot he come over, for his name's ſake? What provocation can he not overlook, for his name's ſake? Let all the ſinners that hear this doctrine, beware of provoking God any more by their ſins. When thus the ſaving mercy of God is proclaimed, in your ears; for, provoked mercy will turn to fearful vengeance; Damnation to eternity will be your doom, if this offered ſalvation be not received: and in order to allure you to the reception and welcoming of it, I am now telling you the freedom of it, and how God can ſave you with an everlaſting ſalvation, notwithſtanding of the moſt grievous provocations that hitherto you have been guilty of, and notwithſtanding of the greateſt impediments that you have laid in the way. More particularly,

1. He can ſave, for his name's ſake, notwithſtanding grievous guilt and heinous tranſgreſſions. Hence his name is declared to be a God pardoning iniquity, tranſgreſſion, and ſin. Come now and let us reaſon together, ſays God, Iſa. i. 18. Though your ſins be as ſcarlet, they ſhall be as white as ſnow; though they be red like crimſon, they ſhall be as wool. Make not this objection againſt yourſelves in coming to a God, in Chriſt for ſalvation; for here you ſee mercy courting you, notwithſtanding this very objection.

2. He can ſave, for his name's ſake, notwithſtanding long continuance in ſin; though you have been a tranſgreſſor from the womb to this day, be it never ſo long that you have been following that fearful trade of ſin, yet mercy is now following you with a how long; how long. Many a how long is he purſuing you with; one is, Num. xiv. 11. How LONG will this people provoke me? And HOW LONG will it be ere they believe me? —Another, how long is, Pſal. iv. ii. How LONG will ye turn my glory into ſhame? HOW LONG will ye love vanity?—Another how long is, Prov. i. 22. HOW LONG, ye ſimple ones, will ye love ſimplicity? —Another is, Prov. vi. 9. How LONG wilt thou ſleep, O ſluggard? When wilt thou ariſe out of thy ſleep?—A ſixth how long is, Jer. iv. 14. How LONG ſhall thy vain thoughts lodge within thee?

3. He can ſave, for his name's ſake, notwithſtanding manifold apoſtaſies and backſlidings; Jer. iv. 14. O Jeruſalem, waſh thine heart from wickedneſs, that thou mayeſt be ſaved: how long ſhall vain thoughts lodge within you? Turn, O backſliding children, ſaith the Lord, for I am married unto you, Jer. iii. 14. And ver. 1. Though thou haſt played the harlot with many lovers, yet return again unto me. Let the wicked forſake his ways, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon, Iſa. lv. 5. I will heal your backſlidings.

4. He can ſave, for his name's ſake, notwithſtanding of your prodigious neglect and contempt of God hitherto. See Iſa. xliii. 22,—25. But thou haſt not called upon me, O Jacob; but thou haſt been weary of me, O Iſrael;—I, even I am he that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſions, for my name's ſake, and will not remember thy ſins. O wonder of wonders! that ſuch may be ſaved, for his name's ſake.

5. He can ſave, for his name's ſake, notwithſtanding grievous, rebellious incorrigibleneſs and frowardneſs. See Iſa. lvii. 17, 18. For the iniquity of his covetouſneſs was I wroth, and ſmote him: I hid me, and was wroth, and he went on frowardly in the way of his heart. I have ſeen his ways, and will heal him: I will lead him alſo, and reſtore comforts unto him, and to his mourners.

6. He can ſave, for his name's ſake, notwithſtanding outward afflictions and poor circumſtances in the world, Zeph. iii. 12. And I will alſo leave in the midſt of thee an afflicted and poor people, and they ſhall truſt in the name of the Lord. Iſa. xxvi. 8.

How

Yea in the way of thy judgments, O Lord, have we waited for thee; the desire of our soul is to thy name, and to the remembrance of thee. Though you be an outcast, that no body cares for you, he may save you, for his name's sake; for, he gathers the outcasts of Israel, Isa. lvi. 8.

7. He can save, for his name's sake, notwithstanding baseness, unworthiness, and pollution, for there is a fountain opened; Zech. xiii. 1. In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin, and for uncleanness.

8. He can save, for his name's sake, notwithstanding gross darkness and fearful ignorance: it is written in the prophets, they shall all be taught of God, Isa. liv. 13. John vi. 45.

9. He can save, for his name's sake, notwithstanding long refusals, and resisting of many calls, and slighting many opportunities; Rom. x. 21. All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people. Importing, that after all these refusals, he is yet standing with open arms to receive all comers, saying, Whoever will, let him come.

10. He can save, for his name's sake, notwithstanding of none such, and unparallelled wickedness; what, if there be no sinner like you, nevertheless, he can save, for his name's sake; because there is no Saviour like him: if thy unbelieving heart suggests desperate thoughts, as if there were no salvation for thee, saying, Who is a sinner like unto me? Let Micah vii. 18. be an answer, Who is a God like unto thee, pardoning iniquity?

In a word, he can save, for his name's sake, notwithstanding the greatest and highest mountains either of sin or misery that seem to be in the way; Zech. iv. 7. Who art thou, O great mountain? before our Zerubbabel, thou shalt become a plain. He can save, for his name's sake, notwithstanding dreadful hardness of heart, and innumerable plagues of heart, atheism, unbelief, deadness, and security; the God that works, for his name's sake, can take away the heart of stone, and give the heart of flesh; and out of stones raise up children to Abraham. He can save, for his name's sake, notwithstanding of nameless maladies, nameless objections, that no minister in the world can mention, far less remove: may be the obstacles, in the way of your salvation, are out of the sight of man, out of the sight of ministers; but they are in God's sight, and the omniscient God, that knows it, is the omnipotent God, that can remove it, and save, for his name's sake. Oh! but may some poor soul think, no doubt, he can save, for his name's sake; but my objection is, I doubt of his will. Why, man? wherefore is God now telling you what he can do; but to remove your ill thoughts of him, and to manifest his good-will towards you; behold, he is more willing to save, than you are willing to be saved: if it be salvation from sin, as well as salvation from hell that you mean, then you are either unwilling to be thus saved, and so your ruin is, that you will not come to him for salvation; or, if you be willing, you are more than welcome to him for all the salvation he can work for you. It is his will to save you, notwithstanding of thousands and millions of objections in the way.

V. The fifth thing proposed, in the general method, was, To offer some reasons why he thus saves, for his name's sake. Why?

1. He saves, for his name's sake; because, if he did not so, he would save none of Adam's race: the best saints on earth cannot deserve mercy; the salvation of the most righteous is an act of grace; therefore, the righteous run to his name; and even the just must live by faith, saying, Though our iniquities testify against us, yet do thou it for thy name's sake, Jer. xiv. 7. And, help us, for the glory of thy name, Psal. lxxix. 9. He could save none, if he did not save them for his name's sake.

2. He saves, for his name's sake, that sinners may hope in his name; that they may return to him, and call upon him for mercy; There is mercy and forgiveness with him, that he may be feared, Psal. cxxx. 4. Why, say you, could not God be more feared, if he had no mercy and forgiveness with him? It is true; man, in that case, could fear as devils do, despairingly; but not with any penitential fear; The goodness of God leads to repentance, Rom. ii. 4. Thus God interprets his merciful providences, as a drawing with the cords of love. None could trust in his name, if he did not save, for his name's sake.

3. He saves, for his name's sake, that sinners may adore his name; that they may admire his mercy. God remembers his own glory; and therefore saves, for his name's sake, that men may glorify his name. O wonder-working God, that can shew mercy when nothing is deserved but misery; this effect it had upon David, Psal. viii. 1, 9. O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth! Psal. xlviii. 10. According to thy name, O God, so is thy praise unto the ends of the earth.

4. He saves, for his name's sake, that sinners, who will not flee to his name as a strong tower, and afterwards glorify his name, by living to his praise, may be left inexcusable in their sins. The glory of God's justice will be conspicuous in those that have slighted his mercy; Behold, you despisers, and wonder, and perish! They that despise such mercy, treasure up to themselves wrath against the day of wrath, Rom. ii. 5.

5. He saves, for his name's sake, because it is the only fit way for us to be saved in: if God should offer to save us for our own sakes, for our righteousness' sake, for our duties sake; Oh! how unfit would that be! We might think God were mocking us, because we have nothing but sin and hell about us; and our best righteousness deserves damnation: but when he offers salvation, for his own name's sake, then it appears to be a fit offer; we cannot think God is mocking us: would he thus affront himself, when his own name is the ground of faith laid before us?

6. He saves, for his name's sake, because it is the only fit way for him to save us in: it is the only way of salvation suitable to his infinite excellency, who cannot but consult the glory of his perfections in all his works. Now, God's glory requires that no salvation should be found but in his name. Why hath he told us of mercy running in the channel of the new covenant? Why hath he told us that justice itself is drawn in to be upon the sinner's side, in as much as he can be justified in forgiving them? Why hath he displayed so much of wisdom in making judgment and mercy to meet, and kiss each other? Wisdom in punishing sin, and yet saving the sinner. Why? it is even that he might be glorified; that the loftiness of man might be brought down, and the haughtiness of man laid low, and that the Lord alone may be exalted,

Isa. ii. 11. This way of saving is suitable to his nature.

VI. The sixth thing proposed, was, To draw some inferences from the whole. And is it so, That when God saves sinners, or a sinful people, he does it for his NAME'S SAKE, notwithstanding their provocations, whereby they forfeit his help, and deserve destruction; then,

1*st*, Hence learn, by way of caution, the following particulars.

1. That this doctrine yields no encouragement to sin, though God save sinners, for his name's sake; the current of his providence, the current of his word, the current of his dealing, all declare his enmity at sin. What is there in the word that can encourage us in sin? All the threatenings of the law say, in effect, as you regard the wrath of God, beware of sin: All the commands of the law say, as you regard the authority of God, beware of sin: All the promises of the gospel say, as you regard the grace, love, and mercy of God, beware of sin: And God's saving, for his name's sake, says, as you regard the great name of God, beware of sin. The great salvation that he exhibits, for his name's sake, is salvation from sin; and therefore, to make this an encouragement to sin is to affront his name, to abuse his name, to profane his name, and to take his name in vain; And he will not hold them guiltless that take his name in vain.

2. Think not that God will deliver any from eternal damnation, who are gone to hell, or save them, for his name's sake; no, by no means: they are lost for ever, that die out of Christ.

2*dly*, Hence see, by way of information, a foundation for the following truths.

1. The reason why the saints confide in God; and why believers trust in his name, and flee to his name in time of danger; they are acquaint with his name: And they that know his name will put their trust in him, Psal. ix. 10. They know his grace, his goodness, his power, his holiness, justice, and truth; and they have the encouragement of a promise so to do, Psal. xci. 14. I will set him on high, because he hath known my name. And why is it that they pray for help, for his name's sake? because they know God will do more for his name, than otherwise he could do, Psal. xxv. 11. Jer. xiv. 7. Thus Joshua, when Israel were smitten at Ai, chap. vii. 9. And what wilt thou do unto thy great name? Again,

2. Hence see, to whom we ought to give the glory of experienced mercy, even to God's name; as Psal. cxv. 1. Not unto us, not unto us, but to thy name be the glory, for thy mercy and thy truth's sake. Thus you will find David frequently at this work, Psal. cxlv. 1, 2. I will extol thee, my God, O King; and I will bless thy name for ever and ever. Every day will I bless thee, and I will praise thy name for ever and ever. This is one ground of God's helping, Isa. xxix. 22, 23. This is in a manner all that JEHOVAH gets by all his glorious salvations wrought for us, Ezek. xxxvi. 23. Let us therefore learn to render the glory of all God's works unto his glorious name.

3. Hence see, a door of hope opened for sinners in this gospel. Does God save, for his name's sake, these who may not put in for salvation? Whatever they be, whatever objections you can make, they are answered by this one argument, God saves, for his name's sake, when there is no other reason for his doing so in the world: he can make a reason to himself, and find the answer in himself why he will save.

4. Hence see, the freeness of the gospel-method of salvation; for God saves with a non obstante, that is, with a notwithstanding. O but the gospel-salvation is free! The law brings in so many provisos; that is, either the law of works, truly so called; it says, If ye do, ye shall live; if you be perfect, ye shall be happy; or the law, falsly so called, the many remainders of it in man's heart that makes the sinner think, why I cannot be saved, unless I do as well as I can; unless I be so and so qualified, I cannot expect to be saved: but the gospel opens a door of free access to sinners with a nevertheless; notwithstanding whatever sins, guilt, disorder, confusion, death, distress, and ruin; notwithstanding whatsoever wickedness be about you, yet here is a way wherein you may expect salvation: NEVERTHELESS he saved them, for his name's sake OBJECT. Must I not be saved upon my believing and repenting? Is not faith at least the condition of my salvation?

ANSW. Faith and repentance are parts of this salvation that God gives, for his name's sake; and how can they be conditions of that salvation, whereof they are leading parts? By grace you are saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God, Eph. ii. 8. Christ is exalted to give repentance, Acts v. 51. None are saved without faith and repentance; because all that are saved of the Lord, are saved thereunto: they are saved from unbelief, and brought to faith; saved from impenitency, and brought to repentance. Faith and repentance are the beginnings of this salvation, and salvation cannot be completed, without having a beginning: but both beginning and end are what God gives, for his name's sake: Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you, will perform it until the day of Christ, Phil. i. 6.; because his name is Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the Ending. FAITH itself is not necessary to salvation, as a moral condition; but only a physical instrument. And hence, as it is not possible a beggar can be the better of a free gift offered to him, if he do not take it, or accept of it; yet his taking of it is no moral condition, but only the natural instrument, or mean of his possession: so, neither can any possibly be the better of this free salvation, that God offers in the gospel, if they will not take it, or have it in the manner it is offered, namely, Salvation from sin and wrath, unto eternal holiness and happiness, and all freely, for God's name's sake. TAKING is no moral condition, otherwise it would contradict the design of the gospel. Faith is nothing else but a welcoming this salvation in this manner: it is the soul's acquiesing and falling in with this method; not a condition of it properly, but a closing with it freely: it is a believing that God will save in this way, for his name's sake: and not for the sake of our faith, or any thing else done by, or wrought in us. It is a being content to be saved this way, that the name of God may for ever get the praise; and renouncing all other grounds of faith and reasons of hope, taking this name of the Lord for his strong tower, resolving to rest here.

5. Hence see, what is the last and ultimate refuge of faith. The first resort of faith is to a word, a may be the Lord will be gracious: but finding no rest here, then perhaps it goes to a direct promise; such as that, a new heart will I give you; and pleads for the promise' sake: but needing needing to be better fixed, it goes to Chriſt, and pleads for Chriſt's ſake; in whom all the promiſes are Yea and Amen. But why ſhould God ſave for Chriſt's ſake? What obligation is God under to accept of that ranſom and atonement in the blood of Chriſt for me? Why? Then laſt of all it flees to God's name, and ſees that God's name will be more magnified in this way of ſalvation, than it can be in any other way of God's dealing with it; and hence it is never ſaid he damns, for his name's ſake; for his name gets not ſo much glory that way. Here then is the laſt ſhift of faith, and its ultimate refuge and ground of hope; and there is ground enough here.

Uſe 3. The next uſe ſhall be for examination. Try whether or not God hath begun to ſave you, for his name's ſake; or, if you have got his name engaged and concerned in your ſalvation-work. For the trial of this intereſting point, conſider the following things.

1. They whom God hath begun to ſave, for his name's ſake, and to whom he will be further merciful, for his name's ſake, they are made ſenſible that God hath hitherto helped them, for his name's ſake; and that they are beholden to God's name for every bit of bread; indebted to his name for their preſervation out of hell; obligated to his mercy and power, that hitherto he hath helped, pitied, and ſaved them from everlaſting ruin: and they are ſo affected with his mercy, that they endeavour to live like perſons ſenſible of this obligation they are under to his name; though, in ſtrict juſtice, they deſerve nothing, and God may ſay, as Judg. x. 13. I will deliver you no more; and ſwear, as Jer. xliv. 26, 27. Behold, I have ſworn by my great name, ſaith the Lord, that my name ſhall be no more named in the mouth of any man, &c. Yet being a gracious God, will not utterly leave them, 1 Sam. xii. 22. but ſave them, and others, for their ſake; ſo good is he to them, Gen. xviii. 32.

2. Hath frowning providence done you good? Are you purged by afflictions? For theſe whom God delivers, for his name's ſake, their deliverance from trouble bears ſome reſemblance to his name who delivers.

QUEST. How ſhall we know, when God's rod hath done its work, and when God hath ſaid, IT IS ENOUGH? 2 Sam. xxiv. 16.

ANSW. (1.) When you are humbled for the ſin that cauſed God take his rod in his hand; ſuch as want of love, deſpiſing the goſpel, abounding of error, diviſion, unbrotherly animoſities. Have theſe things been lamented, loathing the ſimplicity of the goſpel, and the plain adminiſtration of God's ordinances? Profeſſors grown full in their ſtomachs. Is the caſe altered? The abounding of hypocriſy under the ſpecious name of higher attainments, &c.

(2.) When a people can thrive under merciful providences without the rod; for God will not needleſly afflict any, much leſs his own people, 1 Pet. i. 6. Lam. iii. 33. More particularly,

1. Are your ſalvation and God's glory twiſted and conjoined? Will God's name be a loſer, if your bonds be ſtrengthened and continued? Joſhua ſaid, What wilt thou do unto thy name? This moved God to ſhew mercy on a wicked people, Deut. xxxii. 26, 27.; leſt God ſhould loſe his declarative glory in the wonders he had wrought for Iſrael; leſt the heathen ſhould ſay, God cannot ſave his people. Can you ſay, Oh! I think God will want much glory, if I be not ſaved; and I cannot think that his name ſhould want that glory and praiſe that I ſee it will get in ſaving me.

2. They whom he ſaves, for his name's ſake, are brought off from all hope of being ſaved for their own ſake: as God ſays, Not for your ſakes have I done this, but my own name's ſake; ſo they are brought to ſay, not for my ſake will God do ſo and ſo; but, for his name's ſake.

3. They ſeek all they want from God, for his name's ſake. Many a graceleſs beggar ſeeks an alms for God's ſake, that know not what they ſay; but believers are beggars at God's door, and they ſeek for God's ſake: they ſeek pardon, for his name's ſake, with David; For thy name's ſake, pardon mine iniquity, for it is great: they ſeek, ſaying, quicken me, for thy name's ſake; purify, for thy name's ſake; give grace, for thy name's ſake: and every thing they ſeek, is for his name's ſake. Thus they lean upon his lap, and give evidence of their being loved with an everlaſting love.

4. They will deſire to do much, for his name's ſake; and will be content to SUFFER, for his name's ſake. Such is their regard to his name, that every duty they perform will be eaſy to them, when they have his name and honour in their eye; and they count their ſufferings all to be light, when they ſuffer for his name: this made them take joyfully the ſpoiling of their goods, Heb. x. 34.

5. They will ſet his name on high, as being a name above every name. Hence they will deſire, and endeavour to have his name exalted in the world, that all men may know his name: they will be grieved when his name is profaned and blaſphemed; they will be content that their name ſink and be buried, that his may ariſe, ſaying, Let me decreaſe, and him increaſe; whatever come of my name, let thy name be exalted: their ambition will be to have his name written in their foreheads; I will write upon them my new name, Rev. iii. 12.

6. They approve and eſteem the way of ſalvation, for this reaſon, becauſe God ſaves, for his name's ſake: their hearts ſay, O! I prize ſalvation the better, that his name is honoured thereby: they ſet his name above their ſalvation, as the crown of it; and his name below their ſalvation, as the ground of it; and his name and attributes round about their ſalvation, as the defence of it: the place of their defence being the munition of rocks. His name is a rock round about them; As the mountains are about Jeruſalem, ſo the Lord is round about his people, from henceforth, even for ever. As that is his reaſon for ſaving them, even his name, ſo it is the reaſon for expecting ſalvation: as God's argument in ſaving them, is drawn from his name; ſo their argument in truſting in him for ſalvation, is drawn from his name. O! but this is what ſweetens the thoughts of ſalvation, that his name is exalted thereby: they deſire no other way of ſalvation but through his name.

7. They not only run to this ſtrong tower, the name of the Lord, but they run into it, and reſt there: they hang their ſalvation upon this ſtrong nail; they build upon this everlaſting rock; here they have their reſt. As the ſparrow and ſwallow built their neſts on the rafters of the temple and tabernacle, and there laid their young; ſo they dwell on high: Chriſt is the temple, and God's name and attributes are, as it were, the lofty pillars and high rafters of the temple; and faith builds there, resides there, where neither the devil, nor all the powers of hell, shall be able to disturb or annoy them: there they dwell safely from the fear of evil; there they lay their young, and bring forth their fruit unto God, even all the fruits of holiness and righteousness, which are to the praise and glory of God: for, as from him their fruit is found, Hos. xiv. 8. from the temple; so their fruit is to him, being dedicated to the temple, to the praise and glory of his name that dwells there.

is

8. They whom God has begun to save, for his name's sake, as their confidence is placed only in his name, as the leading argument of their trust; so this argument will carry them through thousands of difficulties, oppositions, and impediments that seem to ly in the way of their salvation; this name of God will strengthen you against thousands of temptations, thousands of objections. Notwithstanding your sins, your guilt, your rebellion, your apostasy, the wrath gone out against you for sin, as it did against Jonah, in fearful streams of indignation; yet faith will look again to God's holy temple, to God's holy name, and say, Nevertheless he saves for his name's sake: there are thousands of things to damp and discourage me in looking for salvation, and if I consider them, I must despair; but, with Abraham, I desire to consider nothing but God's name, and word of promise, Rom. iv. 19. Here is one thing that can overcome all things, O! I hope he will save me, for his name's sake; have you win here? stay here, and you are safe. There is not a man fuller of God, in all the world, than he that is brought to nothing before God, and has nothing to rely upon but the great name of God. That name never failed a soul that trusted to it.

In a word, they whom God saves, for his name's sake, are brought, 1. To know his name. 2. To trust in his name. 3. To love his name. 4. To fear and worship his name.

Use 4. The fourth use shall be by way of exhortation. And our exhortation shall be tendered, 1. To sinners in general. 2. To believers in particular.

1st, To all sinners in general. O Sirs, does God save, for his name's sake, and that with a notwithstanding of innumerable sins? Then let sinners hope in his name, and fly to his name for salvation.

QUEST. How is this doctrine the ground of faith to ALL, seeing these whom God designs to save are only the ELECT, and these whom he actually saves are only BELIEVERS? How then is this doctrine to be conceived as an encouragement to all sinners to look to his name for salvation?

ANSW. Salvation is to be considered three ways; either salvation decreed, salvation obtained, or salvation exhibited in the word.—Salvation decreed, concerns the elect indeed; and the election shall obtain: but thus it is not the first object of any man's faith. Who are elect is a secret; and secret things belong to God. You are not concerned with salvation as it lies in the decree.—Salvation obtained, is what concerns believers; and this is not the object of any man's faith either, but rather the object of the sense of them who have it, when they know they have it.—But salvation exhibited, in the word, is what every man that hears the gospel is concerned with; salvation promised, salvation offered in the general dispensation of the gospel, with a particular invitation to every one to look to Christ for salvation. Now, to lay hold of salvation here, as it lies in the word, is the safe way for you to take: if you lay hold on salvation, exhibited to you in the word, then you will come to find it salvation obtained; and when you find it salvation obtained, then you may find it salvation decreed: and this is the right order in which you ascend to God's decree, by taking hold of his word, when to you the word of this salvation is sent. See Rom. x. 6, 7, 8. Say not, even in thine heart, Who shall ascend to heaven, to see if salvation was decreed for me? or, who shall descend into the deep, to the heart, to see if salvation be obtained? you will find no object of faith in yourself: but, the word is nigh, the word of salvation which we preach; it is in thy mouth, and in thy heart, to be acknowledged with the mouth, and embraced with the heart, ver. 9. O then, sinner, his word, which you are called to take hold of, is his name; it is that whereby he makes himself known: fly to his name, and look for salvation, as it is in his word, in his name. And in coming to him for salvation; 1. Let his name be your motive; for thus you will glorify his name. 2. Let his name be your tower, to which you fly for salvation. 3. Let his name be the measure of your hope: how much he will be glorified in saving you, so much let your hope and expectation go forth that he will do so. 4. Let his name be your plea and argument; What wilt thou do for thy great name? Josh. vii. 9. O save, for thy name's sake. Father, glorify thy name. Cast anchor here, and you shall ride out all storms, and be eternally safe.

2dly, We next tender our exhortation to believers, in particular, who have run to this strong tower of salvation, the name of the Lord. O admire his goodness, admire his name: he knows all your sins against him, and against his name; yet, for his name's sake, he shews mercy. O! let sin against so good a God be abhorred: let his goodness lead you to repentance more and more: The earth is full of the goodness of the Lord. O believer, are you called by his name: praise him for his mercy, truth, and faithfulness; According to thy name, O God, so is thy praise unto the ends of the earth; thy right-hand is full of righteousness, Psal. xviii. 10. O Sirs, ascribe all the mercy you met with to his name; and study to be meet objects for God's name, to be more and more glorified, upon his engaging his name for your help. Study to become such persons as the scriptures require; for though sinners have ground of hope, that he MAY do, for his name's sake; yet saints have ground of hope that he WILL do, for his name's sake: the graceless may run to him with hope, that he may begin the good work, for his name's sake; but the gracious may run to him with hope, that he will perfect the good work, for his name's sake. His name is engaged.

In a word, O improve his name in every case; for he hath a name suiting every want, every need. Do you need wonders to be wrought for you? His name is Wonderful: look to him so to do, for his name's sake.—Do you need counsel and direction? His name is the Counsellor: cast yourself on him and his name for this.—Have you mighty enemies to debate with? His name is the mighty God: ſeek he may exert his power, for his name's ſake.—Do you need his fatherly pity? His name is the everlaſting Father: As a Father pitieth his children, ſo the Lord pitieth them that fear him. Plead his pity, for his name's ſake.—Do you need peace, external, internal, or eternal? His name is the Prince of peace: ſeek, for his name's ſake, that he may create peace.—Do you need healing? O Sirs, his name is JEHOVAH-ROPHI, the Lord the healer and phyſician: ſeek, for his name's ſake, that he may heal all your diſeaſes.—Do you need pardon? His name is JEHOVAH-TSIDKENU, the Lord our righteouſneſs: ſeek, for his name's ſake, that he may be merciful to your unrighteouſneſs.—Do you need defence and protection? His name is JEHOVAH-NISSI, the Lord your banner: ſeek, for his name's ſake, that his banner of love and grace may be ſpread over you.—Do you need proviſion in extreme want? His name is JEHOVAH-JIREH, in the mount of the Lord it ſhall be ſeen, the Lord will provide.—Do you need his preſence? His name is JEHOVAH-SHAMMAH, the Lord is there; IMMANUEL, God with us: look to him to be with you, for his name's ſake.—Do you need audience of prayer? His name is the hearer of prayer.—Do you need ſtrength? His name is the Strength of Iſrael.—Do you need comfort? His name is the Conſolation of Iſrael.—Do you need ſhelter? His name is the city of refuge.—Have you nothing, and need all? His name is All in all.——Sit down and adviſe names to your wants and needs, and you will find he hath a name ſuitable thereunto: for your ſupply, he hath wiſdom, to guide you; and power, to keep you; mercy, to pity you; truth, to ſhield you; holineſs, to ſanctify you; righteouſneſs, to juſtify you; grace, to adorn you; and glory, to crown you. Truſt in his name, who ſaves, for his name's ſake.

name

SERMON LIV, LV.

HEAVEN'S GRAND REPOSITORY; or, the Father's Love to the Son, and depoſiting all things into his Hand, a ſtrong Encouragement to Faith.*

JOHN iii. 35. The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.

MY friends, the natural ſtate we are all into, is a ſtate of poverty and want. The firſt Adam ſpent our ſtock, and left us nothing but ſin, and miſery, and death. If we have any right view and knowledge of ourſelves, we will know that we are now curſed in want of all things; that we are nothing but ſin, and have nothing but ſin, and can do nothing but ſin, and deſerve nothing but hell. As creatures, we are originally nothing; as worthleſs creatures, we are leſs than nothing; and as wicked creatures, we are worſe than nothing. If any here are made truly ſenſible of their total want of all that is good, and would know where they may be ſupplied, my text makes a diſcovery of a good hand, wherein there is a greater ſtock of proviſion and furniture than ever Adam had before his fall. Here is a ſecond Adam, the eternal Son of God, ſo well qualified for ſupplying our wants, that there was never a hand heard tell of in heaven or earth, that could have more than he hath; The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.

It is no matter though you have nothing in your hand, if you come to him who hath all things in his. As the apoſtle Paul gloried in his infirmities, that the power of Chriſt might reſt upon him; ſo, it were good if we were glorying in our emptineſs, that the fulneſs of Chriſt might be magnified in us. As he hath a full hand, ſo it is an open hand; for, this immenſe fulneſs is made the ground of faith, as you ſee in the context; becauſe it is laid down as a foundation of what follows: He that believeth on the Son, hath everlaſting life. What this believing is, we may ſee, ver. 33.: it is receiving his teſtimony, and ſetting to the ſeal that God is true. God is true, whether we ſet to our ſeal or not; but, by faith, we ſubſcribe to his truth; and hereby God reckons himſelf honoured and glorified: for, he that receiveth the teſtimony of Chriſt, ſubſcribes to the truth of God; and, by believing in Chriſt, we ſet to our ſeal that God is true to all the promiſes made concerning Chriſt; and ſo give credit to all that he hath ſaid by the prophets; and that he is true to all the promiſes made in Chriſt, venturing our ſouls upon the veracity of God: and the more credit we give him, the more honour we put upon him.

QUEST. But how does it appear, that when we receive the teſtimony of Chriſt, we receive the teſtimony of God, and ſet to our ſeal that God is true?

ANSW. Why, becauſe, as Chriſt is the Word of God, ſo he is the Sent of God, to deliver the word of God; He whom God hath ſent, ſpeaketh the words of God: and he was ſent of God for this very end; A prophet ſhall the Lord your God raiſe up unto you, from amongſt your brethren, like unto me; him ſhall you hear in all things, whatſoever he ſhall ſay unto you. But for clearing this further, we ſhall propoſe, and anſwer another queſtion.

QUEST. How does it appear, that Chriſt, as the Sent of God, ſpeaketh the words of God? and conſequently, how may we be ſure of this, that when we believe the truth of Chriſt, we believe the truth of God?

ANSW. It appears that he ſpeaks nothing but the words of God, becauſe he hath the Spirit of God, and the Spirit above meaſure; for, God giveth not the Spirit by meaſure unto him. The prophets of old had the Spirit in a limited manner, only with respect to some particular revelations, and sometimes spoke of themselves; but Christ had the Spirit always residing in him, without stated measure or limitation; and therefore spoke always the words of God. The more of the Spirit of God that any person hath, the more will he speak the words of God: now, the Spirit was never in any mere creature, but as in a vessel; but the Spirit was, and is in Christ as in a fountain, and as in a bottomless ocean: therefore his words may well be depended upon, and rested in, as the words of God. Here is a foundation for faith in respect of his veracity. But, is there as much foundation for faith in respect of his ability and furniture every way? Yea, there is; for, he loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.

* This ſubject was handled in two ſermons. The firſt was delivered at a ſacramental ſolemnity at Kinglaſſy, June 13th, 1731. The ſecond was an Action-ſermon, preached at Dunfermline, June 27th, 1731. Never before publiſhed.

In which words we may notice these two things following:

1. An assertion; The Father loveth the Son: He was always his delight, Prov. viii. 30. And he is his delight still.

2. A proof and evidence of this assertion; he hath given all things into his hand. He gives him so much trust, that he could not entrust him with more; for, what more can be conceived than all things? Love is best known and evidenced by the greatness of the lover, and the loving gifts he bestows upon the object beloved. Here is the greatest gift, evidencing the greatest love; The Father hath loved the Son, and hath given all things into his hand. This is the honour of Christ, and the happiness of his people, that the Father hath given all things into the hand of Christ the Mediator. If you would have a sum of these all things, it may be gathered from what follows, viz. that it is everlasting life, and all that attends it, and all the means that lead to it; all the parts of it, and all things that belong to it; for it follows, He that believeth on the Son, hath everlasting life.

The text then lays down a strong ground of encouragement to believe on the Son of God unto eternal life: therefore we may lay down the following doctrinal proposition as the sum of it, namely, OBSERV. That the Father's love to the Son, evidenced by his giving all things into his hand, is a strong argument and encouragement for faith to believe in him.

You will see this same argument adduced, and made use of by the Lord Jesus Christ himself, Mat. xi. 27, 28. All things are delivered to me of my Father. And amongst other things, all the Father's counsels and secrets, he being the great secretary of heaven: and, what follows? Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Come to me, as the Father's trustee, who hath intrusted me with all things.

We shall endeavour, through divine assistance, to prosecute this subject in the following method.

I. I would speak a little of the Father's love to the Son.

II. Speak of this evidence of the Father's love: and that, 1. Shew some of these things the Father gives to the Son. 2. Notice the import of the expression, He gave all things into his hand. 3. How this evidences the Father's love to him. 4. Why he hath thus manifested his love to him.

III. How this love of the Father, thus evidenced, in giving all things into his hand, is a ground of Faith.

IV. Make some application of the whole.

I. I am to speak a little of the Father's love to the Son. For clearing of this there are these following positions I would offer.

First Position is, "That there are many scriptu- "ral expressions of the Father's love to the Son." He is called the Beloved, emphatically, Eph. i. 6. He is called his dear Son, or the Son of his love, Col. i. 13. He solemnly declares his love to him from heaven three several times; once, at his baptism; again, at his transfiguration; and afterwards, in his agony, by that audible voice, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleased. He expresses himself with the greatest complacency in him; and that in such terms as might invite all the world to fall in love with him: Behold my servant, whom I uphold; mine elect, in whom my soul delighteth, Isa. lxii. 1.

Second Position. "That the Father's love to the "Son, imports something in it that is very "great and glorious." It imports, that there is an infinite and inconceivable sweetness in the person of Christ, and in his undertaking, that renders him the object of his Father's dearest love and complacency. There is such a loveliness in him, as makes him not only the darling of saints, but the darling of his Father. It imports, that the Father's heart is fixed upon him; that his very soul is, as it were, knit unto him. Would you know where to find God's heart, so as to get a share of his heart's love? Then, get into Christ; for, his heart is fixed upon him, and rejoices in him: and, indeed, they that rejoice in Christ, they partake of his Father's joy and delight.

Third Position. "That there are several capaci- "ties in which the Father loveth the Son." He loves him as his Son, and he loves him as his Servant; he loves him as God, the second person of the glorious Trinity, and as Mediator, God-man.—He loves him, I say, as God the Son; therefore called, the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, John i. 18. This is expressed in terms adapted to our capacity: but it is a mystery too deep for us to fathom; for, how one divine person loves another divine person, none but a divine person can understand. How the Father loves the Son, none but the Father and the Son can comprehend. As he is begotten of the Father, by an eternal and an ineffable generation; so he is loved of the Father by an eternal and ineffable love. The Father cannot but love him as he loves himself; for, as in respect of his nature and essence, he is one God with the Father and eternal Spirit; so, in respect of his personality, he is his Father's exact picture, being the image of the invisible God, and the express image of his person.—Again, He loves him as Mediator, God-man: in which office he is the Father's Servant on our business; Behold my Servant, whom I uphold, Isa. lxii. 1. This is what most concerns us; for what would it avail us to hear only that the Father loveth the Son, if we had no share of that love? But, behold, here is the good news of the gospel, that the Father loveth the Son as he is clothed with the office of a Mediator and Saviour, to save the like of you and me. He loves him as his Servant, whom he hath chosen to his office: he loves him as his anointed, whom whom he hath qualified for this work; I have put my Spirit upon him, and he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles; that is, to bring forth light and salvation to the Gentiles: for he loves and delights in him as one whom he hath given for a covenant of the people, for a light to the Gentiles, to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison.

Fourth Position. "That there are several things "for which the Father loves the Son as our "Mediator." He loves him for his undertaking of this office from all eternity; and hence he is said to be his Father's delight, while his delight was with the sons of men, rejoicing in the habitable parts of the earth, Prov. viii. 30, 31. The Father was so much in love with him, for this undertaking, that he promised to support him therein; Behold, my Servant, whom I uphold. And he solemnly engages, that the pleasure of the Lord should prosper in his hand, Isa. liii. 10. As he loves him for his undertaking, so he loves him for his performance of the work, by his coming, and doing, and dying, that he might finish the work the Father gave him to do. The hardest part of the work seemed to be that of his dying, and giving himself a sacrifice; and see how the Father loves him for this, John x. 17. Therefore doth the Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I may take it up again. Eph. v. 2. He gave himself a sacrifice of a sweet smelling savour unto God. The Father was delighted with his doing and dying, his active and passive obedience; because, by this means, he wrought out an everlasting righteousness for our justification, to the honour of the law and justice of God; The Lord is well-pleased for his righteousness' sake; he will magnify the law and make it honourable, Isa. xlii. 21. The Father loves him for every thing he did as our Redeemer; for, he did always those things that pleased him, John viii. 29.—He loves him for his compassion and tender sympathy he bears with sinners; therefore it was said of him, A bruised reed shall he not break, and a smoking flax shall he not quench, until he hath sent forth judgment unto victory, Isa. xlii. 3.—He loves him for his courageous encountering with his sufferings in our room, ver. 4. He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till he hath set judgment in the earth; and the isles shall wait for his law.—Yea, the Father is delighted with him for what he is doing, namely, his praying, and interceding in heaven: he never rejects any of his prayers, but hears him always, John xi. 42. Again,

Fifth Position. "That there are several proper- "ties of the Father's love to the Son." It is an eternal love; it is an unchangeable love; the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever.—It is a tender and affectionate love; therefore called his beloved Son, his dear Son.—It is a wise love, though he loved him dearly, yet he would not let sin pass unpunished, when but imputed to him; The Lord hath chastised me sore, says Christ, Psal. cxviii. 18. The chastisement of our peace was upon him.—It is a boundless love and unlimited; it is a love that passeth knowledge: and, indeed, God's love to his people, in Christ, hath these properties; and if it be ineffable and boundless, what thought can we have of the vastness of his love to Christ?—In a word, it is a bountiful love, as appears by the effects of it; which leads me to the Sixth Position. "That there are several effects "of the Father's love to the Son, several evi- "dences and discoveries of it;" such as his choosing him, from eternity, to this honourable work; upholding him therein; revealing all his mind and bosom to him; accepting of him; and being well-pleased with all that he did; exalting and glorifying him at his right-hand; commanding all men to pay honour to him.—But the particular effect and evidence of his love here mentioned, is the great trust he commits to him; he hath given all things into his hand. This leads me,

II. To the second thing proposed, namely, To speak of this evidence and effect of the Father's love to the Son, he hath given all things into his hand. Here consider, 1. What are these things the Father gives into Christ's hand. 2. What is the import of the expression, his giving all things into his hand. 3. How this evidences the Father's love to him. 4. Why he hath thus manifested his love to him.

1*st*, What are these things the Father hath given into Christ's hand? All things, says the text; and surely it is but some of all things we can mention.

1. All government is given into his hand; To us a child is born, to us a son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulders;—of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth even for ever: the zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this, Isa. ix. 6, 7. And it is a wonderful government; for, his name is called, Wonderful. A wise government; for, he is the Counseller: A powerful, divine government; for he is the mighty God: An everlasting and a friendly, fatherly government; he is the everlasting Father: A princely and peaceable government; for, he is the Prince of peace: and it is a growing government; for, of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end: It is an universal government; and therefore it is said, All power in heaven and earth is given to him, Mat. xxviii. 18. He is Lord of all, and Head over all things to the church, Eph. i. 22. Angels are his servants, devils are his captives, and all flesh is in his hand; Thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he may give eternal life unto as many as thou hast given him, John xvii. 2. Both the golden sceptre and the iron rod are given into his hand: the government of the world, and the government of the church. He is the great Lord disposer of all events, and the great Lord dispenser of all blessings, and the great Judge of quick and dead; The Father hath committed all judgment unto the Son, John v. 22.

2. As all government is given into his hand, so all grace is given into his hand; eternal life, and all its preliminaries. The second Adam has got all the stock put into his hand, therefore he is said to be the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth: and out of his fulness we are to receive, and grace for grace, John i. 14, 16. All grace is in his hand, so as there is no grace to be had any where else: justifying grace, sanctifying grace, saving grace, all the graces of the Spirit; yea, the Spirit and all his graces, all his gifts; his mission and motions, are in the hand of Christ. The context says, he has the Spirit above measure: and the dispensing of the Spirit in what measure he pleases to us is in his hand, John xvi. 7. and xv. 26. He hath the sending of the Spirit in his hand, insomuch that, when the Father sends the Spirit, he sends him in Christ's name; The Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, John xiv. 26.

him

3. All the blessings of the covenant are given into his hand; therefore we are blessed in him, with all spiritual blessings, in heavenly places. Hence, says the apostle, Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath thus blessed us, Eph. i. 3. Therefore it is said, Men shall be blessed in him, and all nations shall call him blessed; and in him shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. You have a sum of these spiritual blessings that are in Christ, 1 Cor. i. 10. Of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us, wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption. No flesh must glory in his sight; but, that all flesh might glory only in the Lord, and have no where else to go for any blessing, but to that blessed hand, into which the Father hath given all things.

4. All the promises of the covenant are given into his hand; he is, therefore, the centre of all the promises; All the promises of God in him are Yea, and in him Amen, to the glory of God, 1 Cor. i. 20. As the promise is affirmed by his word, and confirmed by his blood; so, the donation of the promises, and application of the promises, is in his hand. All the promises are primarily made to him, and secondarily, to us in him. As the immediate object of faith is the word of promise; so, when faith intermeddles with the promise, it cannot but see Christ in it, and it in Christ: faith takes Christ in the promise, and the promise in Christ.

5. All the fulness of God is given into his hand, as Mediator; It pleased the Father, that in him should all fulness dwell, Col. i. 19. And chap. ii. 9. In him dwells all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. All the fulness of divine perfection is in him; for, he is the wisdom of God, and the power of God; and all the other attributes of God, and all the glory of God, and the glory of all these perfections of God, is in him, to be seen; For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined into our hearts, to give us the light of the knowledge of his glory in the face of Jesus Christ, 2 Cor. iv. 6.

6. All the work that the Father had to do was and is given into his hand.—The work of creation was given into his hand of the Father; for, by him he made the worlds, Heb. i. 2.—The work of providence is given into his hand; he upholds all things by the word of his power, ver. 3. —The work of redemption and all the parts of it, from the beginning to the end; redemption by the price of his blood; redemption by the power of his Spirit; redemption from the law, from sin, Satan, death, and hell; and redemption to eternal life is all in his hand. Isa. lxi. 1. The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings to the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound: to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, &c. The Father hath anointed, and qualified, and furnished him for the work; and clothed him with all offices, such as, Prophet, Priest, King, Surety, Saviour, Mediator, and Redeemer, for accomplishing the work: and thus he is entrusted with all his Father's business. This he knew after he entred the stage of this world in our nature; at twelve years of age, he said to his parents that were seeking him sorrowing; Wherefore was it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business? Luke ii. 49. And all the time he was on earth, he never rested till he finished the work which the Father gave him to do. And the work that is yet upon his hand, relating to the application of redemption, he is restless till it be finished.—In a word, all things that the Father hath are given into his hand, John xvi. 15. All things that the Father hath are mine: insomuch that he is the author and Creator of all things, John i. 1. All things were made by him. And the upholder of all things, as he is the proprietor of all things, by the Father's donation, Mat. xi. 27. All things are delivered unto me of my Father. And he is the centre of all things, Eph. i. 10. That in the dispensation of the fulness of times, he might gather together in one, all things, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth. He is the Head of all things, Eph. i. 22. Col. ii. 10. He is the Heir of all things, Heb. i. 2. But now I come to shew,

2*dly*, What is the import of the expression, He hath given all things into his hand. I think the words import,

1. The freeness of this dispensation. O! in what a free manner, and with what a free heart hath the Father given all things into Christ's hand! All God's gifts are free; but never did he give any thing more freely than he gave all things into Christ's hand. Love is always free in its donations to the object beloved; and the Father's love to the Son, being infinitely great, O! how freely hath the Father given all things to the Son? It is true, that all things that concern the happiness of his people, and all the blessings of the covenant were dearly purchased by the Lord Jesus; and so it cannot be said of what God hath given to Christ, as Mediator, as it must be said of what he gives us, that it is without our merit, and without motive on our part; for, in Christ, there is infinite value in his blood, to merit; and infinite dignity and loveliness in his person, to move the Father to give all things to him; and therefore, when I say it was a free gift, do not understand it as free in opposition to merit or motive, for they were both in Christ to an infinite degree; but it is free in opposition to force or constraint. The Father had no reluctancy in his infinite mind, no grudge in his heart in giving all things into Christ's hand; nay, it was with infinite frankness and freedom; for it was in infinite love and kindness,

2. The words import, the fulness of this dispensation: the Father hath given him all things; he hath kept nothing back from him. He hath given him all his mind, all his heart, all his counsel, all his secrets, all his treasures of wisdom and knowledge, all his glory, all his authority; all things in heaven, and earth, and under the earth; all persons, and cases, and causes; nothing is withheld †.

3. The words imports the fitness of Christ to bear the weight of all things. What hand could be fit to put all things into? Well did the Father know who is the fit hand; and, behold! infinite wisdom sees none so fit as Christ, that so all things might meet in the centre, even in the middle person of the glorious Trinity, and that all things might hang in the midst between heaven and earth, between God and man; therefore, infinite wisdom makes all things concentre in a God-man, that thus poor poor ſinful men might get hold of all things they ſtand in need of in Chriſt; even of God himſelf; for, God is in Chriſt.

† Several of these particulars may be seen copiously opened up above, on a subject somewhat parallel, p. 554, 555.

4. The words import, the firmneſs of his title to all things, inſomuch, that not only hath he a natural right, as God; but a donative right, as Mediator, God-man, to all things; which are ſo put into his hand, that they are under his authority: all things that belong to his church, being in his hand, are at his keeping; all things that can befal his church, being in his hand, are at his diſpoſal; all things ſinners need, being in his hand, are at his giving: and, indeed, all things are given into his hand, that he, having a full hand, ſinners may come and ſhare of his fulneſs. But,

3*dly*, How doth this evidence the Father's love; or, what love appears in this? Why,

1. The Father's giving all things into Chriſt's hand, ſhews his love to him to be a confiding love; a love attended with confidence in him, that he can truſt him with all things that concern his greateſt glory, and his peoples good; that he is the Father's Confident and great Truſtee, whom he can truſt with all his treaſures of grace and glory, with all his treaſures of power and majeſty. He loves him ſo, that he can entruſt him with all things. He is entruſted with all the keys of his Father's houſe; I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am, there you may be alſo, John xiv. 2.; and with the keys of hell and death, Rev. i. 18.

2. The Father's giving all things into Chriſt's hand, ſhews his love to him to be a complacential love. A lover is known by his gifts; we give gifts to them we love; the more we love them, the more we give them. Here then is the greateſt gift, arguing the higheſt love, the deareſt love, the moſt complacential love. He gives them not only to the half, but to the whole of his kingdom; the whole of his dominion and empire: he gives them the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermoſt ends of the earth for his poſſeſſion, Pſalm. ii. 8. Hence,

3. It ſhews that his love to him is a generous love: what greater generoſity can be manifeſted than by giving him all things? Could he give him more? No, it is as much as God could give; and, indeed, God only could give ſuch a gift; and it is only God that could receive ſuch a gift. It is only the proprietor of all things that could give them; and it is only the proprietor of all things that could take them in his hand, and under his management.

4. It ſhews that his love to him is a ſuperlative love, and that he loves him above all things, therefore gives all things into his hand. If there were any thing that the Father loved better than Chriſt, he would have kept that out of his hand; but having given him all things, it ſays, there is nothing he can lay in balance with him. O! how ſhould we love him above all things as the Father doth? We do not love him at all, if we do not love him above all.

5. It ſhews, that his love to him is an ingenuous love; there is no flattery here, nor diſingenuity; but the moſt wonderful affection, proved by the moſt conſpicuous action; and the love of his heart evidenced by the love of his hand, which he hath opened ſo wide to him as to give him all. The Father and the Son not only join hands, as it were, as many will do, where there is little ingenuity of love, and integrity of affection; but the Father opened his hand and put all things into the hand of his Son.

6. It ſhews, that his love to him is a conſtant love, and that he will never repent that he ſet his love upon him; for, The gifts and callings of God are without repentance: and therefore, as he will never recal his love to Chriſt; ſo, he will never take out of Chriſt's hand any thing that he hath given him. Not one ſoul of all the elect, of whom Chriſt ſays, Thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me, John xvii. 6.; not one ſoul of them, no not the pooreſt youth or girl in the world will he ever take out of his hand again. Nay, the Father's hand and his meet together, as it were, and hold them faſt, that they may never periſh, never be loſt, John x. 28,—30. The Father hath given him all power in his hand to ſave and quicken whom he will, John v. 21.: and he will never revoke the power and authority that is given him.—Thus you ſee how the Father's giving him all things, evidences his love; and what love it evidences. In a word, it evidences infinite love, eternal love, unchangeable love.

4*thly*, I am to ſhew, why he thus manifeſts his love to him, by giving all things into his hand. And,

1. The Father manifeſts his love to the Son, by giving him all things, becauſe the Son lays out all things that he gets for his Father's honour and glory. For example, the words which the Father gave him he gives out to his people; I have given unto them the words which thou gaveſt me, John xvii. 8. and ver. 14. I have given unto them thy word.—Again, the Spirit which the Father gives to him, he gives to them; The water that I ſhall give him, ſhall be in him a well of water ſpringing up unto everlaſting life, John iv. 14.—And both his word of grace, and ſpirit of grace, poured into the Mediator's lips, are what he gives out, in a conformity to the promiſe; This is my covenant with them, ſaith the Lord; my Spirit that is upon thee; and my words, which I have put into thy mouth, ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy ſeed; nor out of the mouth of thy ſeeds ſeed, ſaith the Lord, from henceforth and for ever, Iſa. lix. 21.——Thus he that hath received gifts for men, and to whom the Father hath given all things for men, even for the rebellious, he gives out what he hath received to the Father's honour and glory. Hence, ſays Chriſt, John xvii. 4. I have glorified thee on the earth; I have finiſhed the work which thou gaveſt me to do. And what work? See a notable part of the work, ver. 22. The glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them. And what is that glory? See a notable part of that mentioned, ver. 23. even the glory of his grace and love drawing them to oneneſs with the Father and the Son; I in them, and they in me; that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou haſt ſent me, and haſt loved them, as thou haſt loved me. It lies in manifeſting his love, his Father's love to them, in the reſemblance that it bears of his Father's love to him. God, therefore, manifeſted his love to Chriſt in giving all things into his hand, becauſe he lays out all things the Father gives him to the Father's glory: hence he is exalted as LORD, To the glory of God the Father, Phil. ii. 9. As Lord of lords, and Lord of all things, to the glory of God the Father, that he may bring in the revenue of praiſe and glory, and of all things to the Father. And thus, by him a revenue of honour comes in to the crown of heaven, and glory to God in the higheſt.

2. The Father has manifeſted his love to his Son, by giving him all things; becauſe, as he is one with the Father in nature and in will, and is the Father's expreſs image; his eſſential image, as God; and his repreſentative image, as Mediator; ſo he had the greateſt regard imaginable to his Father's will and command in all things; I delight to do thy will, O my God, Pſa. lx. 8, 18. I lay down my life, and this commandment have I received of my Father, John x. 17. May I not allude to that word, Luke xi. 13. If ye, being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children, eſpecially if they be obedient children? O! how infinitely more muſt God the Father manifeſt his love towards his eternal Son, in giving good gifts to him, whoſe meat and drink was to do his Father's will! See Phil. ii. 6,—10.

3. The Father manifeſts his love to his Son, by giving him all things, not only as a reward of his work and victories, that are over his head, but alſo as furniture for the work and victories that are yet upon his hand to accompliſh; for, His reward is with him, and his work is before him, Iſa. lxii. 11. Chriſt came to deſtroy God's greateſt enemies, as well as to do God's greateſt work; For this purpoſe was the Son of God manifeſted, that he might deſtroy the works of the devil. He deſtroyed him that had the power of death, that is, the devil. And the devil hath groaned ever ſince he met with him. He hath groaned with a ſore head, a pained head; for, He bruiſed the head of the ſerpent. Chriſt was the ſtouteſt combatant, or ableſt hand that ever hell or the devil met with; he would make no parly or ceſſation with his enemies, nor give over the battle till he brought the keys of hell, death, and the grave alongſt with him. See how magnificently his victories are deſcribed, Iſa. lxiii. 1,—4. Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozra? This that is glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatneſs of his ſtrength? I that ſpeak in righteouſneſs, mighty to ſave. Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel? and thy garments like him that tradeth in the wine fat? I have troden the winepreſs alone, and of the people there was none with me; for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood ſhall be ſprinkled upon my garments, and I will ſtain all my raiment: for, the day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come. And becauſe all things are put under his feet, in point of victory and ſubjection; all things are put in his hand, in point of reward: and not only as a reward for what is over, but as furniture for his further work and victories, as long as there is any ſoul on earth to be ranſomed from the power of ſin and Satan. See Pſal. lxxxix. 20,—25. I have found David, my ſervant; with my holy oil have I anointed him. With whom my hand ſhall be eſtabliſhed; mine arm alſo ſhall ſtrengthen him. The enemy ſhall not exact upon him, nor the ſon of wickedneſs afflict him. And I will beat down his foes before his face, and plague them that hate him: but my faithfulneſs, and my mercy, ſhall be with him; and in my name ſhall his horn be exalted. I will ſet his hand alſo in the ſea, and his right-hand in the rivers. Why does the Father furniſh him as you ſee, Iſa. xlii. 1, 4. Behold my Servant, whom I uphold; mine Elect, in whom my ſoul delighteth: I have put my Spirit upon him, he ſhall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles: —He ſhall not fail, nor be diſcouraged, till he ſet judgment in the earth: and the iſles ſhall wait for his law. It is, that he may bring forth judgment to the Gentiles: therefore, he is made Head over all things unto the church.

4. The Father manifeſts his love to the Son, by giving him all things, that he might be the Reſtorer of all things to God, and the giver of all things unto man; Then I reſtored that which I took not away, ſays Chriſt, Pſal. lxix. 4. The firſt Adam's ſin had robbed God and man: God's attributes were robbed of their honour, God's law was robbed of its obedience; man was robbed of the favour of God, of the image of God, of the grace of God, of the bleſſing of God. Now, all things are given into Chriſt's hand, that he might reſtore all things to God and man that ſin had robbed them of: and accordingly he, as Mediator, Reſtores what he took not away; he reſtores glory to the perfections of God, and obedience to the law of God; and by this means alſo, he reſtores to man the favour of God in juſtification, and the image of God in ſanctification.

In a word, he is the great magazine and ſtorehouſe, the poſſeſſor of all things, and the reſtorer of all things, and the outgiver of all things, that ſinners ſtand in need of, that thus a good ſolid foundation for faith may be laid unto ſinners. This leads,

III. To the third general head propoſed, namely, How this love of the Father to the Son, thus evidenced, by giving all things into his hand, is a ground of faith to ſinners?

It is laid down here for the encouragement of the faith of all ſinners that hear of it; for it follows, He that believeth on the Son hath everlaſting life. Everlaſting life is in his hand, where all things are; and therefore, let ſinners come to him, and believe in him, for all things that they need. It is the greateſt encouragement to faith in the world, that all the riches of the new covenant are depoſited in his hand; and that in ſeveral reſpects.

1. It is the ſtrongeſt encouragement to faith that all is in ſuch a good hand; for,

(1.) Here is ground of faith and hope to ſinners, that all things are given into ſuch a kind hand. Herein the love and kindneſs of God towards man appeared, Titus iii. 4.; that all things ſinners need are given into the hand of a loving friend of theirs, an elder brother, a near kinſman; one that is bone of our bone, and fleſh of our fleſh; who, out of kindneſs towards us, took on our nature; out of kindneſs, died in our nature, and in our room; in loving-kindneſs, came from heaven, and returned again thither; and now, in loving-kindneſs, ſends the goſpel unto us; and has promiſed to ſend the Spirit with it. Is not here ſtrong ground for faith and hope?

(2.) Here is encouragement for faith and hope, that all things are given into ſuch a high and great hand; who, as he hath infinite kindneſs, ſo he hath infinite greatneſs: and therefore will act both in a ſuitableneſs to the kindneſs of his heart, and to the greatneſs of his mind. As a liberal man deviſes liberal things, and a great man loves to do great things, how much more will the great God do infinitely greater things, and that even towards great ſinners? And therefore, they may be encouraged to come to him, and look for great things from him.

(3.) Here is ground of encouragement to the faith and hope of ſinners, that all things are given into into ſuch a wiſe hand; even his, who is the wiſdom of God, and knows how to give out of his treaſures, and when, and in what meaſure; His underſtanding is infinite. He is a God of judgment, and bleſſed are all they that wait for him, Iſa. xxx. 18.; for, He waits to be gracious. He waits the beſt time, and therefore we would do beſt to wait his time, and we ſhall find it to be the beſt: He that believeth maketh not haſte, knowing that wiſdom dwelleth with God.

(4.) Here is ground of faith and hope to ſinners, that all things are given into ſuch an able hand; who is the power of God, as well as the wiſdom of God: able to keep things that the Father commits to him, and able to keep all things that believers commit to him; able to ſave to the uttermoſt, able to help at the laſt extremity, able to give out all things needful for our various circumſtances, and able to do far above all that we can aſk or think.

(5.) Here is ground of faith, that the Father hath given all things into ſuch a ſure hand; inſomuch, that all the bleſſings and mercy, that he hath in his hand to give, are called, The ſure mercies of David, Iſa. lv. 3. Acts xiii. 34. All the promiſes in him, are ſure promiſes; for, the covenant ſtands faſt in him; Pſal. lxxxix. 28. My faithfulneſs and my mercy ſhall be with him, ſays God, ver. 24. His name is called, Faithful and true, Rev. xix. 11. You may depend upon his word, more than upon the oath of all the angels of heaven, and ſaints on earth; theſe are but changeable creatures, but he is the unchangeable God, and unchangeable truth itſelf.

(6.) Here is ground of faith, that all things are given into ſuch an open hand. He keeps an open door to all that will come, and an open hand to all that will take; and therefore ſays, Rev. xxii. 17. Whoſoever will, let him come, and take of the water of life freely. Ho every one that thirſteth, come ye to the waters; he that hath no money, come; buy wine and milk without money and without price, Iſa. lv. 1. As the Father hath an open hand to him, ſo he hath an open hand to us: Freely he hath received, and freely he gives. His hand, though it be a ſure hand, yet it is not a ſhut or a cloſed hand; no, by no means: it is an open hand, and a giving hand; and well were it for us if we had a receiving hand: he gives freely, and we are called to receive freely. And hence he commands us to preach the goſpel to every creature, be what they will, of rational creatures among Adam's poſterity; although they have ſinned themſelves into the likeneſs of devils; yet, if they be creatures, preach the goſpel to them; offer Chriſt, and all things in him, to them: and he injoins his miniſters to be free and unhampered in their offers and proffers, ſaying, Freely ye have received, freely give. Here is ſuch encouragement to faith, that ſinners may ſee that they are welcome to come, and take what they will, out of his ſtock.

2. Here is ground for faith and hope, that all things being given to Chriſt, there is nothing that ſinners need, but what is here; bread enough and to ſpare. There is an overflowing ocean of all good in Chriſt for ſinners, and that his grace doth infinitely exceed all our ſins, and all our wants. It is unbelief that doth diminiſh and limit the fulneſs of Chriſt: it ſhews the ſoul a multitude of ſins and wants, but it hides and conceals the fulneſs of Chriſt, and locks up his treaſures. It is true, people pretend this, and that, as a hinderance and diſcouragement to their believing: but however the ground of their not cloſing with Chriſt is, it turns chiefly upon this, that they doubt of his fulneſs. Nay, ſay you, my doubt is of his WILLINGNESS; but I have no doubt of his FULNESS. I fear you miſtake it, O ſinner; and that your chief doubt is about his fulneſs; and that your doubt of his willingneſs flows from the doubt of his fulneſs. What! is it poſſible that one can believe the immenſe fulneſs of Chriſt, as having all things in his hand, and yet, at the ſame time, believe that he is a niggard, and has nothing to ſpare? No, no: if you believe his fulneſs, you cannot but believe his willingneſs; and if ye doubt of his willingneſs, it flows from a doubt of his fulneſs; for theſe two go together: In my Father's houſe, there is bread enough and to ſpare, Luke xv. 17. If you think there is nothing to ſpare for you, it is becauſe you think there is not bread enough, and fulneſs enough in Chriſt; for, if ye believe there is bread enough in him, then you will believe that there is to ſpare alſo. Examine, therefore, your faith of his fulneſs again; if you do not ſee there is enough in Chriſt, no wonder you do not ſee what a free heart he hath, when you do not ſee what a free hand he hath. But, O ſinner! as the fulneſs of the Godhead is in him; ſo, if there were ten thouſand millions of worlds, and as many heavens full of men and angels, Chriſt would not be pinched to ſupply all their wants, and fill them all. Chriſt is the well of life; but, who knows how deep it is to the bottom? And the due conſideration of this might provoke all the world to come, and draw water out of this well of ſalvation with joy, were it not that their eyes are ſhut, through unbelief; they ſee not the well, nor the overflowing fulneſs thereof.

3. Here is ground for faith and hope, in that as all things are given to Chriſt, ſo this inexhauſtible fulneſs in him is not for himſelf, but to be diſpenſed, and communicated to poor ſinners: For, here is the Father's giving all things to the Son, as Mediator betwixt God and man. You will ſay, There is fulneſs enough in Chriſt; but what is that to me? Why, it wholly concerns thee; it is treaſured up in Chriſt for ſinners; yea, for the worſt of ſinners, that they may believe in him, and receive all things in him and with him: He hath received gifts for men, Pſal. lxviii. 18. Ah! ſay you, but I am a rebellious devil. Well, it is even for the rebellious. Hence alſo, Eph. i. 22. He is head over all things to the church; he hath all things in his hand. Well, but it is as head of the body the church: as treaſures and endowments of wit, and ſenſe, and the like in the natural head, are for the body, and for the ſervice of it; ſo, the treaſures in Chriſt are for the ſervice of ſinners in the viſible church; ſinners, that are made ſaints already; and ſinners, who are to be made ſo, by his grace; and his grace that is in him is publiſhed and preached to every creature under heaven, Col. i. 23. that every one may apply it to himſelf, and hear believingly, when he is ſaying, in effect, "I have all things in my hand, and I have "them for thee: I have life and ſalvation, and "I have it for thee; I have peace and pardon, "and I have it for thee; I have righteouſneſs, "ſanctification, and redemption, and I have "them for thee; I have grace and glory, and I "have

" have them for thee." Therefore, go to him, ſinner, and expect all from him; and ſay not, Alas! it is not for me; for, be who thou wilt, To thee is the word of this ſalvation ſent: and, therefore, receive not this grace of God in vain; for, it is unbelief that ſays, There is nothing for me: but faith ſays, It is all for me: O! he is a fit Saviour for me; he hath ſupplies of all wants for me; healing for me, help for me, all for me.

4. Here is ground for faith and hope to ſinners, in regard, that the Father's love to Chriſt, in giving all things into his hand, as the Saviour of ſinners, is juſt a diſcovery of God's ſovereign grace and love to ſinners, in and through Chriſt: and therefore, God is repreſented as ſitting upon a throne of grace, and the Lamb ſitting alſo upon the throne, where, in his Father's name, he diſpenſes the bleſſings that are given to him, and that as a glorious King, upon a gracious throne. He acts like a King, pardons like a King, ſaves like a King and Sovereign; and while he diſtributes all in a way of free grace, he pardons, becauſe he will; ſaves, becauſe he will; has mercy, becauſe he will have mercy. Why, what is the nature of ſovereign grace? It is the nature of it to act from itſelf, to itſelf, without conſideration of any thing in us; without reſpect either to the worthineſs or unworthineſs of the creature; neither reſtrained, by our evil; nor conſtrained, by our good: but all running out in a way of free love; Hoſ. xiv. 4. I will heal their backſlidings; I will love them freely. " No matter then, may faith ſay, however vile and wretched I be, while I have to do with ſuch love; the Father loving the Son, and giving him all things, and that in love to the like of me." As free grace is the riſe and ſpring, ſo the exalting of free grace is the end of this great buſineſs of ſalvation in Chriſt. It is not what ſuch and ſuch ſinners do, or do not deſerve, that he conſiders; but what his grace can do for them, and what will make moſt for the glory of that grace, and what will ſet the crown, the brighteſt crown on the head of free grace. This is evident, Eph. i. 6, 12, 14. To the praiſe of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the Beloved;—That we ſhould be to the praiſe of his glory, who firſt truſted in Chriſt:—Which is the earneſt of our inheritance, until the redemption of the purchaſed poſſeſſion come, to the praiſe of his glory. His deſign is, that grace might reign, Rom. v. 21. and that ſinners might ſing the praiſes of free grace, free love. " O! who am I? ſays " the ſoul that hath obtained mercy: What! " ſuch a rebel, and yet pardoned! ſuch an ene- " my, and yet reconciled! ſuch a black devil, " and yet waſhed and made white in the blood " of the Lamb! ſuch a fiend of hell, and yet " made a favourite of heaven! O grace! grace!" This is God's deſign to magnify his grace and love in Chriſt upon ſinners, that they may love him much, who has pardoned much; and ſerve him lovingly, who has ſaved them freely.

5. Here is ground for faith, and encouragement for the hope of ſinners, that the Father having loved the Son, and given all things into his hand, it muſt be acceptable to the Father that ſinners come to Chriſt for all things they need, and employ him in all things they have ado, and truſt in him for all things they want: This is his commandment, that we believe in him, 1 John iii. 23. This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleaſed, hear ye him. Do you think God will be angry with you, if you come to Chriſt? No; you cannot pleaſe God better, you cannot honour him more: for, this is his very deſign in giving all things to him, that you may come and get all things from him.

6. Here is ground for faith and hope, that the Father loves the Son, ſo as to give all things into his hand, in regard that, as it is acceptable to the Father, ſo it is honourable to the Son, that ſinners come to him for all things. As the Father gave all things to Chriſt, that he might put honour upon him; ſo the ſinner, giving employment to Chriſt, in all things he hath ado, puts honour upon him: and as it is to the Father's honour, that he gave all things to Chriſt; ſo it is to the Son's honour, that he gave out of this fulneſs to ſinners in a way of cauſing them to believe in him. And here is wonderful encouragement to faith and believing, that it is the glory and perfection of Chriſt, as Mediator, to receive ſinners, and give out himſelf, and all things to them, that they need. Chriſt has a twofold glory, viz. the glory of his perſon, as the Son of God; and the glory of his office, as Mediator, and Head of the ſecond covenant: the former is infinitely complete and full, and can admit of no diminution, or augmentation, being unchangeably the ſame for ever; but the glory and perfection of his office, as Mediator, is ſtill more and more complete, the more ſinners he receives, and the more grace he gives out; and here there is an increaſe of his government, an increaſe of his glory, and perfection, and completeneſs; hence the church is called his fulneſs, Eph. i. 23. If the church be his fulneſs, then the more that is filled, by his receiving ſinners, and giving out grace to them, the more full and complete is he himſelf. His mediatory honour and perfection grows; and hence alſo the ſaints are called the glory of Chriſt, 2 Cor. viii. 23. As Chriſt alone is their glory, ſo they are his glory. How his glory? Not only becauſe they glorify him actively, but alſo becauſe he lays out his grace upon them, and they have nothing but by free gift from him; and therefore he is ſaid to be glorified in them. O! what encouragement to faith and believing is here! ſeeing thus you not only ſhall be glorified by Chriſt, and have everlaſting life by him; but alſo, you ſhall glorify Chriſt, and he ſhall have everlaſting honour by you. O Sirs, it is a part of his exaltation to give out of his fulneſs; for, He is exalted to give repentance and remiſſion of ſin. O! how may unbelief ſink and die, and faith riſe and ſing, before this conſideration. " It is Chriſt's honour to receive " me; it is his glory to beſtow himſelf and " his grace upon me. The Father in love hath " given all things to him, that he may get " honour and glory in giving out all things " needful for me."

IV. The fourth thing propoſed, in the general method, was the application of the ſubject.

Is it ſo, that the Father loves the Son, ſo as to give all things into his hand? Hence many precious truths may be ſeen in the ſeveral branches of the text and doctrine, namely, 1. That the Father loves the Son. 2. That he hath given all things into his hand. 3. That this is a ſtrong argument and encouragement for faith.

1ſt, Is it ſo, that the Father LOVETH the Son? Hence we may ſee,

1. The

1. The infinite love of God, in giving the Son of his love to be a Saviour and a ſacrifice for the like of us. O! how excellent is his loving-kindneſs! And, how precious is his grace, that he ſhould love ſuch vile creatures, and make his love to flow in ſuch a channel as this of his love to his Son! Here is a love that paſſeth knowledge and comprehenſion, and they comprehend it beſt, who comprehend that it is incomprehenſible; they know it beſt who know that it paſſeth knowledge, Eph. iii. 18, 19. O! does the Father love the Son, as our Surety and Saviour? How aſtoniſhing ſhould the love of God, in Chriſt, be to us? Are we not obliged to love that God that loves our Redeemer; and loves him, becauſe he is our Redeemer.

2. See here a ſtrong argument to make uſe of in our application to God for what we need. We are to go to God, in Chriſt, and to plead upon the love he bears to Chriſt; there cannot be a ſtronger argument with God than this, the Father's love to the Son. This is the argument on which Chriſt pleads, and prays for his people, John xvii. 24. Father, I will, that they alſo whom thou haſt given me, be with me, where I am, that they may behold my glory which thou haſt given me; for thou lovedſt me before the foundation of the world. You hear commonly, that we ſhould pray in the name of Chriſt; and if we pray the Father, in his name, we ſhall be heard, whatſoever we aſk. What is it to pray the Father in Chriſt's name? It is even to raiſe our faith, and embolden our confidence with God, merely on the account of that high love the Father bears to the Son; and that, though we have nothing that is lovely in God's ſight; nay, but rather every thing that is lothſom, though we have nothing in us to make God love us, but a thouſand things to make him lothe us; yet we build our hope of acceptance and ſucceſs, upon the Beloved of the Father, and upon the Father's love to him. He is a bleſſed believer that can plead with God upon this argument, for he ſhall prevail: And whatſoever ye ſhall aſk, in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye ſhall aſk any thing in my name, I will do it, John xiv. 13, 14. And in that day ye ſhall aſk me nothing; verily, verily, I ſay unto you, whatſoever ye ſhall aſk the Father in my name, he will give it you, John xvi. 23. Where you ſee both the Father and the Son engaged to do it.

3. See how dear and precious Chriſt ſhould be to us; ſince the Father loves him, what ſhould move us to love him if this do not? How precious ſhould he be to us who is precious unto God? It would argue that the mind of God and the Spirit of God was in us, if the Father's beloved were our beloved.

4. See here the right rule of our love to Chriſt, namely, to love him as the Father loves him. Wherein ſhould our love to Chriſt reſemble the Father's love? Why, the Father's love to the Son was evidenced in chooſing him to be our Saviour and Surety: ſo ſhould our love to Chriſt be manifeſted in making choice of him to be our Saviour and Surety; inſomuch, that as God hath laid all our help upon him, ſo we ſhould lay all our help where God hath laid it.—Again, the Father's love to the Son was evidenced in giving all things into his hand: thus ſhould our love to Chriſt be evidenced in putting all things in his hand as the Father doth; and particularly, you may put your hearts in his hand; that he may keep them; put your ſouls in his hand, that he may ſave them; put your plagues in his hand, that he may heal them; put your corruptions in his hand, that he may weaken and ſubdue them; put your wants in his hand, that he may ſupply them; put your work in his hand, that he may work all your works in you, and for you; put your burdens in his hand, that he may bear them: put all things in his hand, and thus evidence your love to him, by putting honour upon him, as a Prophet, to teach you; as a Prieſt, to pardon; and as a King, to conquer you by his grace, and crown you with his glory. This leads to the ſecond branch.

2dly, Is it ſo, that the Father hath evidenced his love to his Son by GIVING all things into his hand? Hence we may ſee,

1. How the infinite wiſdom of God hath outwitted the policy of the devil in his ſubtile attack upon, and in robbing the firſt Adam of all his ſtock, and thereby thinking to deſtroy all mankind: but, behold, the ſecond Adam appears with a ſtock incomparably greater than that which the firſt Adam loſt! O! what a happy change of Adam's! what a happy change of covenants and covenant heads! The ſecond Adam is well-furniſhed, having all things in his hand; and there the ſtock is well ſecured in a hand that the devil dare not meddle with; in a hand that hath already bruiſed his head, and hath ſpoiled principalities and powers; and hath all things put in ſubjection under his feet, Heb. ii. 8.

2. See what a great want it is to want Chriſt; for, then they want all things: they have nothing that are without Chriſt; they have no wiſdom, they have no ſtrength, no righteouſneſs. They are deſtitute of God; for God, and all his perfections, are in him. They are deſtitute of the Spirit; for, the Spirit, and all his graces, are in Chriſt; they are deſtitute of all things; for, all things are in him; and he is all in all. Without Chriſt, ordinances are nothing but an empty ſhell; the ſacramental ſupper, without Chriſt, is but an empty table; ſermons, without Chriſt, are but an empty ſound; heaven, without Chriſt, is but an empty void: heaven would be but darkneſs if the Lamb were not the light of the place. The ſinner, then, that remains without Chriſt, is nothing but a hell full of wickedneſs; empty of all good, and curſed in the want of all things.

3. See what a great thing it is to have Chriſt, becauſe they who have Chriſt, have all things, Rom. viii. 32. When God gives Chriſt, he cannot but, with him, freely give him all things; for, he hath given all things into his hand. O how happy are believers! All things are yours, becauſe Chriſt is yours; 1 Cor. iii. 21,—23. All things are yours, whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things preſent, or things to come; all is yours, and ye are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's. The believer's ſtock can never be ſpent; and he can never ſee himſelf in miſery as long as he is looking to his Head. He can never loſe any thing but it is well repaid in Chriſt; and ſo long as Chriſt is to the fore, he has all things in him.

4. If the Father has given all things into Chriſt's hand, then hence we may be ſure of ſeveral particulars.

(1.) We may be ſure that we cannot go to a better hand for all that we need; for, he hath all things in his hand, both by a natural right, as God; and a donative right, as Mediator: therefore we may ſay, To whom ſhall we go? thou haſt

the words of eternal life, John vi. 68. To whom ſhould we go for light, and life, and ſtrength, and pardon, and peace, and perſeverance? To whom ſhould we go for the Spirit of faith, for the Spirit of repentance, for the Spirit of grace, and ſupplication? — Again, We may be ſure that it is eaſy with Chriſt to ſupply all our needs, and to give us all-ſufficiency in all things, 2 Cor. ix. 8. He hath not far to go to bring our ſupply; no: he hath no more ado but open his hand; for, the Father hath given all things into his hand.

(2.) We may be ſure that all things ſhall work together for good, to them that love God, Rom. viii. 28. All things are for their ſakes, becauſe all things are in the hand of their Lord, and Head, and Huſband; and he can eaſily turn them about in his hand for accompliſhing his pleaſure and their profit. The worſt things, as well as the beſt, are in his hand; the moſt heavy croſſes, as well as comforts, are in his hand, and at his diſpoſal.

(3.) We may be ſure that the covenant is well-ordered in all things, and the covenant Head hath all things in his hand, who will do all things well; and will have this teſtimony from all his children, at the end of the day, that he hath done all things well. How can it be otherwiſe, when all things are put in his infinitely wiſe and gracious hand? It is unbelief to ſay, O! there is an ill-ordered providence; there is an ill-ordered trial. Stay a little, till faith look up and ſee all things in Chriſt's hand; and ſee all things managed by the hand of infinite wiſdom, infinite holineſs, infinite righteouſneſs, faithfulneſs, and truth, and then it will ſay, "O! well-ordered temptation, that hath thus "humbled me. O! well-ordered tribulation, "that hath made me take reſt in God only. "O! well-ordered chaſtiſements, that have "driven me to my heavenly Father. O! well-"ordered loſſes and croſſes, that have weaned "me from the world, and made Chriſt preci-"ous to me. O! well-ordered deſertion, that "tended to imbitter that which ſeparated be-"tween God and me, and made his preſence "more precious to me than ever. O! well-"ordered victory, that ſin and Satan got over "me, that tended to fill my heart with holy "revenge againſt ſin, and made me ſet the "powers of heaven againſt the powers of hell. "O! well-ordered diſappointment, at ſuch "and ſuch a time, that made me know that "God was a Sovereign, to be waited on, and "not to be limited to my time. O well-order-"ed providence, that dried up the ſtreams of "creature-comforts, and worldly enjoyments, "that I might betake myſelf to the fountain "of all conſolation. O! well-ordered extre-"mity, that ſo tended to make the Lord's ap-"pearing, at ſuch a time, to be wonderful and "welcome; for, I was brought low, and he help-"ed me." All things are well-ordered, becauſe all things are in his hand. Again,

(4.) We may be ſure that the dead ſhall riſe again, according to the word of God, and that by the power of the Mediator; for, all things even the duſt of the earth, is in his hand, and particularly the duſt of the ſaints; he hath undertaken to raiſe them up at the laſt day: John vi. 39, 40, 44, 54. And this is the Father's will which hath ſent me, that of all which he hath given me I ſhould loſe nothing, but ſhould raiſe it up again at the laſt day. And this is the will of him that ſent me, that every one that ſeeth the Son, and believeth in him, may have everlaſting life, and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day. No man can come unto me, except the Father which hath ſent me draw him, and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day.

(5.) We may be ſure that dead ſinners may be raiſed to ſpiritual life, and dead hearts quickened to a new and lively hope; for all things, and all hearts are in his hand, who is the reſurrection and the life; John xi. 25. The hour is coming, ſays Chriſt, and now is, [and, O! may it be now at this occaſion!] when the dead ſhall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear ſhall live. O! may the Spirit of life that is in Chriſt's hand, enter among theſe dead and dry bones, that they may live.

(6.) We may be ſure that miniſters can do nothing to communicate ſaving light to darkened minds, without power from Chriſt; for they are called ſtars in his right-hand; and they can give no light if he ſhut his hand: and while they, in particular, are ſaid to be in his hand, it ſays, that their gifts, and parts, and miniſtry, and ſucceſs; their labour, ſo long here or elſewhere, is all at the ſpecial diſpoſal of the Lord Jeſus.

(7.) We may be ſure that nothing can fall out without his ordering, and over-ruling providence; for, all things, and all the reins of government are in his hand. This may be ſilencing amidſt all the troubles that the church of God, and all the trials that the children of God, are tryſted with; I was dumb, I opened not my mouth, becauſe thou didſt it, Pſal. xxxix. 9. Is there evil in the city, and the Lord hath not done it. I have done it, ſays the Lord: all the evil of afflictions are of his ordering: Who laid ſuch a man on a ſick-bed? Who made ſuch a man a widower, and his children motherleſs? Who made ſuch a woman a widow, and her children fatherleſs? Who was it that made ſuch a man weak and ſickly, or ſmote ſuch an one with the gout, or gravel, or flux? I have done it, ſays the Lord.—As to the evil of ſin, you muſt anſwer for it; but as to the evil of affliction, I will anſwer for it; that it is I that have done it: wherefore, be ſtill and know that I am God.

(8.) We may be ſure hence, that Chriſt is God, otherwiſe he were not capable of this honour to have all things given into his hand. What ſhall we think of thoſe that would diſhonour Chriſt, by withholding all things from him, and denying his ſupreme Deity, making him incapable of receiving all things, or managing all things? How contrary to God the Father are Arian blaſphemers? The Father gives all things to him, and they would take all things from him, that the Father gave him; yea, and the things that the Father never gave him: his divine nature and eſſence is a thing the Father never gave him; for, he is eſſentially one and the ſame God with the Father; but, by diveſting him of this, they would take away all from him, and leave him nothing but a name.

(9.) We may be ſure, that the time is coming wherein Chriſt will gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, Mat. xiii. 41. For, all things are under his hand, and under his feet; and he is Head over all things to the church. Many things are amiſs in the church of God; it is robbed and ſpoiled, in many reſpects; but he that hath all things in his hand rules, and over-rules: let our eyes be towards him for better days; and though our eyes ſhould be ſhut before we ſee them, may we live and die in the faith of this, this, that the Lord will appear in his glory to build up Zion; and that at laſt the church militant ſhall be triumphant.

(10.) We may be ſure, that Chriſt is a pearl of great price, and that he is the money that anſwers all things; becauſe all things are given into his hand: and we ſhould count all things but loſs and dung, for the excellency of the knowledge of Chriſt. There is that in Chriſt that will anſwer all our needs, all our wants, all our neceſſities, all our deſires, all our hopes.

(11.) We may be ſure, that all things ſhall be fulfilled, whatſoever he hath promiſed; for, all things are in his hand. We need not doubt of his performing his promiſe; for, what he hath promiſed to give, he hath in his hand to give, and will do it in his own time.

(12.) We may be ſure, that all things, whatſoever we aſk, believing, we ſhall receive: And whatſoever ye ſhall aſk in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son: If ye ſhall aſk any thing in my name, I will do it, John xiv. 13, 14. And in that day ye ſhall aſk me nothing: verily, verily, I ſay unto you, whatſoever ye ſhall aſk the Father in my name, he will give it you, John xvi. 23.

(13.) We may be ſure, that preparation for a communion-table is to be had only from the Lord Jeſus; for, as all things come of him, 1 Chron. xxix. 14.; ſo the preparation of the heart is from the Lord. We are to look to him for a communion-frame; and what is that? I think the beſt communion-frame is a believing frame: and what for a frame is that? Really, I ſuppoſe, it is the frame that is the leaſt known; it is a frame wherein the ſoul comes to be denied to all frames that it uſes to rely upon, and think much of, and come to ſay, in effect, to this purpoſe, Though the Lord ſhould deny me a lively frame, a mourning frame, a melting frame; yea, though he ſhould allow me nothing in my own hand, yet this ſhall ſuffice me, if I can go believing and rejoicing in this, that all my ſtock is in the hand of Chriſt. I have nothing to confide in but Chriſt, as the Lord my righteouſneſs and ſtrength: it is a frame wherein the perſon is ſenſible that he has nothing, but yet goes away leaning upon him whom the Father loves, and to whom he hath given all things. This leads,

3*dly*, To the third claſs of inferences, from the other part of the doctrine, namely, That the Father's love to Chriſt, in giving all things into his hand, is a ſtrong argument and encouragement for faith: this I have demonſtrated already. And if it be ſo, hence we may ſee,

1. That there is nothing to hinder our matching and marrying with the Son of God by faith; for, all things are ready, therefore we may come to the marriage, before you come to the marriage-ſupper, Mat. xxii. 4. All things are ready; for, all things are in the Bridegroom's hand: The Father loves him, and hath given all things into his hand.—The wedding-garment is ready for you to put on; pardon of ſin, and peace with God, and all is ready, in his hand to give you. But, ſay you, I am not ready. Why, what want you to make you ready? Do you want faith, repentance, love, or any grace, to make you ready? Do you want ſuch and ſuch a humbled, and believing, and penitent heart to make you ready? And will you never come till you have theſe things? Why, then, you will never come at all; for theſe things are no where to be had but in Chriſt's hand, where all things are. And therefore, in God's name, I call you, who are ſenſible of your want of all theſe good things, to come and join hands with Chriſt, and put your hand, as it were, in his hand, wherein all things are, and you ſhall not want; for, all things are ready in his hand to give you. Therefore,

2. It is no matter though ſinners have nothing to bring alongſt with them to Chriſt; though they are poor, and deſtitute of all things, they are welcome; yea, the more poor, the more welcome to him that hath all things in his hand to give. What though you are nothing, and have nothing, and are a thouſand times worſe than nothing, and crying out, in your heart, Oh! I have no faith, no love, no grace, no good about me, and all things wanting: is that your caſe? I will tell you, man, woman, you are the welcomeſt perſon in all the world to come to Chriſt, who has all things given into his hand: To this man will I look, even to him that is poor, and of a contrite ſpirit, and trembleth at my word, Iſa. lxvi. 2. As for you that are rich, and increaſed with goods, and ſtand in need of nothing; and are ready to ſay you have ſo many good things, you have a good heart to God, and you have good frames, and good deſires, and are good Chriſtians, and good neighbours; and do ſo many good duties, and think you have ſo many good things; really I fear our Lord get little honour from you; for, you have ſome money, and you will not come to take all things freely out of Chriſt's hand, without money, and without price. Indeed, if people go to a public change, they can get nothing without money; but if you go to a king's palace, it is an affront to the prince if you ſhould offer money for any thing. Oh! what an affront is it to the King of kings, who has all things in his hand to give, for you to offer him money? I am not offering that, ſay you; yes, you do it, when you ſay, in effect, "I have ſo many "good things about me; therefore, I hope, he "will give me more; I am none of the worſt "of folks, I hope; and therefore, I truſt he "will ſave me." You are not yet for ſalvation by free grace, according to the new covenant; no: you are ſtanding upon the rotten covenant of works. If God have mercy on you, he will bring you to nothing, that he may bring you to Chriſt for all things.

3. Hence ſee the nature of faith, and a mark and evidence of its being true ſaving faith, or believing unto everlaſting life. It is a faith that believes the Father loves the Son, and hath given all things into his hand; and reſts content with ſuch a Chriſt as this: Let a man examine himſelf, and ſo let him eat. Examine your faith on this; Have you a faith that believes the Father's love to the Son, and giving all things into his hand, ſo as you are well content that all your ſtock of righteouſneſs and ſtrength is in Chriſt's hand? This is a mark that will diſtinguiſh the believer from the cloſeſt hypocrite. It is the ſoundeſt faith that can rejoice in this, that all things are in Chriſt's hand. Hypocrites may have ſomething from Chriſt, but they have nothing in him; they cannot make this their boaſt, that they have all things in Chriſt: but let hypocrites boaſt of their common gifts, common graces, common attainments, or whatever they may have from Chriſt; yet theſe only have moſt from him who are content, and glad at their hearts, that their their all is in him; and that their ſtock is in his hand. Hence believers are ſaid to be ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might: ſtrong in the grace that is in Chriſt Jeſus. Hypocrites may be, like the ivy, growing up the tree very cloſe, and receiving ſap therefrom; and yet it grows upon its own root. They may grow up in a profeſſion, and receive the ſap of common influences from Chriſt, and yet they grow upon the root of the old covenant, were never rooted in Chriſt: they have only ſomethings from him, but nothing in him. But the believer is rooted in Chriſt, and hath his all from him, into whoſe hand the Father hath given all things. Hence the Spirit of Chriſt may be upon a hypocrite, in reſpect of common operations; but the Spirit of Chriſt is in the believer, in reſpect of ſpecial inhabitation. The hypocrite is like a pool of water, maintained only from without, by the clouds; but the believer is like a well of water, ſpringing up to everlaſting life; for, he hath not only many things from Chriſt, but he hath all things in him, and lives upon him for all things.

4. And laſtly, We may hence ſee the duty of all ſinners, as well as ſaints, as long as they have ſin and want about them, namely, to come to Chriſt for all things; becauſe the Father loves him, and hath given all things into his hand. O what a full-handed Saviour is here! and ſuch a full and ſolid foundation for faith that you can have no objection againſt coming to Chriſt, but what the text will anſwer. Chriſt hath all offices for ſaving ſinners: the Father that gave him all things, hath anointed him to all ſaving offices. If you be ignorant; he is a Prophet, to reveal the will of God to you: if you be guilty; he is a Prieſt, to reconcile God and you, and make peace by the blood of the croſs: if you be a bond ſlave to ſin and Satan; he is a King, to ranſom you from the power of theſe enemies. He to whom the Father hath given all things, to him he hath given all offices ſuiting your various caſes; and, therefore, be your caſe what it will, there is no ground to ſtay at a diſtance from him.—As he hath given him all offices, ſo he hath given him all relations ſuitable to our need; therefore in ſcripture he is ſet forth in manifold relations wherein he ſtands to ſinners in the viſible church, namely, as a Head, a Huſband, a Bridegroom, a Phyſician, an Advocate; therefore, whatever relation he claims to himſelf, claim you to be the party related to him, ſaying, "If he be a Head, I will be a member; "if he be a Huſband, I will be a wife; if he "be a Bridegroom, I will be the bride; if he "be a Phyſician, I will be the patient; if he "be an Advocate, I will be the client."—Yea, he is given to be all things that we need, and all things are given into his hand. Nothing, therefore, in the world ſhould hinder your coming to Chriſt, and believing in him. Are you objecting againſt believing in him? No doubt you are; and yet I will tell you, I know of no objection you have, but what this doctrine will be an argument and a reaſon for faith, inſtead of being a reaſon againſt it.

You object, that you are a moſt prodigious, guilty ſinner: Why, that is a reaſon for your coming to him, becauſe the pardon of all ſin is in his hand; he had power on earth to forgive ſin: and hath he not power in heaven?—Are you a filthy ſinner? Why, that is a reaſon for looking to him; becauſe the waſhing away of all filthineſs is in his hand; and therefore he ſays, If I waſh thee not, thou haſt no part in me. The blood of Jeſus Chriſt cleanſeth from all ſin.—Are you overrun with maladies, plagues, and diſeaſes; ſuch as, deadneſs, darkneſs, hardneſs of heart, and enmity? Well, that is a reaſon why you ſhould come to him; for, the healing of all diſeaſes is in his hand; his name is, The Lord, the healer.—Are you a bond ſlave to the devil, and a captive to ſin? Why, that is a reaſon for your coming to him; for, the looſing of all bonds is in his hands: and, if the Son make you free, you ſhall be free indeed.—Are you under the power of luſts and corruptions? That is a reaſon for your coming to him; for, the ſubduing of all corruptions is in his hand: All power in heaven and earth is given to him.—Are you burdened, and under heavy loads? That is a reaſon why you ſhould come to him; for, the bearing of all burdens is in his hand: Come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you reſt. Caſt your burden upon the Lord, and he will ſuſtain thee.—Are you under heavy croſſes? That is a good reaſon for your coming to him; for, the ſanctifying of all croſſes is in his hand: By this ſhall the iniquity of Jacob be purged; and this is all the fruit to take away ſin. In their affliction they will ſeek me early.—Are you preſſed with innumerable objections, that you think no miniſter in the world can anſwer? Why, that is a reaſon for your coming to Chriſt; for, the anſwering of all objections is in his hand: I have put my Spirit upon him, ſays the Father, and he ſhall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles.—Are you oppreſſed with fears? Behold the diſpelling of all fears is in his hand; and he can force them away with a word, ſaying, Fear not, only believe.—Are you bewildered in the miſt of darkneſs and ignorance, not knowing what way to take? That is a reaſon for believing in him, who is given to be a light to lighten the Gentiles. He that walketh in darkneſs, and hath no light, let him truſt in the name of the Lord, and ſtay himſelf upon his God. I will lead the blind in a way that they know not, and in paths that they have not known. I will make darkneſs light before them, and crooked things ſtreight.—Are you under the power of unbelief, unable to believe? Well, that is a reaſon why you need to believe, that he hath power to make you believe: it is given to him, as Mediator, to be the author and finiſher of faith. Look to him for his drawing power.—Are you under the power of obſtinacy, unwilling to believe? Why, that is ſad; and yet it is the reaſon why you ſhould believe in him, and to believe that he is given to make you willing; Thy people ſhall be willing in a day of thy power.—Have you nothing at all in hand? Why, ſo much the better; if you can believe that all things are in Chriſt's hand, then ſhould your caſe be as that of the apoſtle, Having nothing, and yet poſſeſſing all things.

"But, ſays the carnal heart, what doctrine "is this, nothing but believe! believe that all things "are in Chriſt's hand! what advantage is this to "practical religion? This muſt be ſome ſtrange "doctrine." Well, I doubt not but it is ſtrange to fleſh, and to the legal heart that would have all things in its own hand; and cannot be perſuaded to believe that this way of believing is the way to heaven. "What! muſt there be no "doing at all, nor working?" Why, man, I muſt tell you, with the apoſtle, that by the deeds of the law no fleſh living can be juſtified: but if you be for right goſpel doing, acceptable to God, then know it, it, in God's name I inform you, that the beſt believer is the beſt doer; for, if once you could believe that the Father hath given all things into Chriſt's hand, and believe it with application, that all your ſtock of righteouſneſs and ſtrength is in Chriſt, then you ſhould be able to do all things, through Chriſt ſtrengthening you, Phil. iv. 13. It is ſtrange, and yet it is as true as it is ſtrange, they that are for the way of doing, they can do nothing; whereas they that are for the way of believing, they can do all things: for, all things are poſſible to him that believeth; becauſe, when he is weak, then he is ſtrong, 2 Cor. xii. 10.: weak in himſelf, but ſtrong in the Lord; having no ſufficiency to think a good thought of himſelf, but his ſufficiency is of God, whoſe ſtrength is made perfect in weakneſs. Moſt gladly, therefore, doth he glory in his infirmities, that the power of Chriſt may reſt upon him. Happy therefore is that ſoul, which, in the ſenſe of the want of all things, can believe and be joyfully content in this, that the Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand. He that thus believeth on the Son, hath everlaſting life: and he that believeth not, ſhall not ſee life, but the wrath of God abideth on him.

May he, who hath all things in his hand, open his hand and give the Spirit of faith, that ſo faith may come, by hearing of the glorious object of faith. *

ACTION-SERMON.

JOHN iii. 35.

The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.

IT is in the holy and over-ruling providence of him, in whoſe hand all things and all hearts are, that I have been inclined to purſue this ſubject, on this ſolemn occaſion. I have not found my mind determined to enter on any other theme: and, I ſuppoſe, no ſubject can be more ſuitable to the work of the day; for, we cannot commemorate the boundleſs love of Chriſt to us, in dying for our ſins; nor can we remember it more effectually, than by remembering the Father's bountiful love to him, for his ſo doing; and that evidenced by his giving all things into his hand.

Nothing, in the world, will ſweeten the rememberance of Chriſt's love to us, ſo much as the believing rememberance of the Father's love to him: even as nothing can provoke us more to put honour upon Chriſt, than to ſee how much honour the Father puts upon him; and for this end, that all men might honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. Why, what honour has the Father put upon him? It is even the greateſt honour; and that wherein our greateſt happineſs lies: He hath given all things into his hand.

As this is laid down here for a foundation of faith, if you compare it with ver. 36. and with Mat. xi. 27, 28.; ſo here we have a full feaſt, and plentiful proviſion for our faith to feed upon this day, and all in the beſt hand: The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.

The doctrinal obſervation we deduced from theſe words was as follows, namely,

OBSERV. That the Father's love to the Son, evidenced by his giving all things into his hand, is a ſtrong argument and encouragement for faith to believe in him.

The method laid down, for proſecuting this ſubject, was the following, viz.

I. I would ſpeak a little of the Father's love to the Son.

II. Speak of this evidence of the Father's love: and that, 1. Shew ſome of theſe things the Father gives to the Son. 2. Notice the import of the expreſſion, He gave all things into his hand. 3. How this evidences the Father's love to him. 4. Why he hath thus manifeſted his love to him.

III. How this love of the Father, thus evidenced, in giving all things into his hand, is a ground of Faith.

IV. Make ſome application of the whole.

We have already diſcuſſed the doctrinal part of this ſubject, and likewiſe made ſome improvement thereof: what I now intend further, upon this ſubject, is by way of EXHORTATION. And the exhortation I would offer this day, from this doctrine, is, That all that hear me would come to this full and ſufficient Saviour, believing that the Father hath furniſhed him with all things neceſſary for your everlaſting ſalvation; for, he that thus believeth on the Son hath everlaſting life in him. That which is the great matter and ground of faith, is alſo the great motive and argument for it, namely, that the Father hath, in love to him, and to ſinners in him and through him, given all things into his hand.

That I may, therefore, purſue and enforce this exhortation to believe in Chriſt, upon this ground, I ſhall, as the Lord may enable, obſerve the following method of diſcourſe.

Firſt, That our faith may be fixed in this truth, I ſhall offer ſome DEMONSTRATIONS of it; and evidence that all things are given into the hand of Chriſt, the Father's beloved.

Secondly, That faith may be cleared on this head, I ſhall notice a little the BEAUTY of this diſpoſure of infinite wiſdom, in giving all things into Chriſt's hand.

Thirdly, That our faith may be enlarged and widened in the view thereof, I ſhall ſpeak a little of the EXTENT of the matter, the treaſure, that Chriſt hath in him, while it is ſaid that all things are given into his hand.

Fourthly, That faith may be enlightened and aſſiſted further herein, I ſhall conſider the MANNER how all things are in the hand of Chriſt.

Fifthly, That faith may be quickened and excited, I ſhall offer ſome MOTIVES and CONSIDERATIONS, ariſing from, and accompanying this truth, that all things are given into Chriſt's hand.

Sixthly, That our faith may be regulated and ſquared, according to the goſpel rule, I ſhall cloſe with a few DIRECTIONS, as the Lord may enable.

And, O Sirs, ſince faith comes by hearing of the object of faith, by hearing what Chriſt, the object of faith, is, and what he hath, let your eye be towards him, and your ear be open to hear what is ſaid of him; that, in hearing, you may believe, without ſeeking to draw faith out of your own heart and bowels, whence you will never find it. If there be any ſubject in the world, the hearing whereof tends, thro' grace, to work ſaving faith, it is this, that faith, and all grace, all good, all fulneſs, all things, are in Chriſt's hand.

* Here ends the firſt ſermon on this text, preached at Kinglaſſy. What follows was delivered immediately before the celebration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper at Dunfermline, June 27. 1731.

Firſt, The firſt thing I have propoſed, that faith may be fixed, and ſettled, and aſſured of this truth, is to offer ſome DEMONSTRATIONS thereof. And, O that it may be in the demonſtration of the Spirit and with power.

I ſhall only premiſe, that when we ſay, All things are in the hand of Chriſt, we mean not only generally, all things in the kingdom of providence; becauſe, his kingdom rules over all; and, He is the head of all things unto the church, Eph. i. 22.: but alſo particularly, all things in the kingdom of grace; of which he ſays, My kingdom is not of this world, John xviii. 46. But bleſſed be God, he hath not ſaid, his ſpiritual kingdom is not in this world; but it is not of this world: he hath his ſpiritual inviſible kingdom in the hearts of his people in this world; who, though they are in it, yet they are not of it, but choſen out of the world; yet, ſometimes this kingdom of his is viſible, in the remarkable tokens of his ſpiritual preſence in his ordinances. And, O for many ſuch tokens this day! But now, that all things are in Chriſt's hand, will be evident from the following demonſtrations.

1. Demonſtration of it is this, "If they that inherit Chriſt, inherit all things; then all things "are in his hand: but ſo it is, they that inherit him inherit all things, 1 Cor. iii. 21,—23. "For all things are yours, whether Paul, or Apollos, "or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things "preſent, or things to come; all are yours, and ye are "Chriſt's and Chriſt is God's." This golden chain, together with all things preſent, and all things to come, is linked to the believer, becauſe he is united unto Chriſt. The believer hath an intereſt in Chriſt; by an intereſt in Chriſt, he hath an intereſt in God; and by an intereſt in God, he hath an intereſt in all things. As Solomon ſays, Money anſwers all things; becauſe all things that are vendible may be procured by it: ſo Chriſt anſwers all things to the believer. He is meat and drink to them; My fleſh is meat indeed; and my blood is drink indeed.—He is gold and ſilver to them; The merchandize of wiſdom is better than ſilver; and the gain thereof than pure gold. Come, buy of me gold tried in the fire.—He is raiment to them when naked; and they put on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.—He is health to them when diſeaſed; I am the Lord that healeth thee.—He is all things to them; He that overcometh ſhall inherit all things, Rev. xxi. 7. Why? It is added, I will be his God.

2. Demonſtration of this truth, is, "If all things "without Chriſt be but empty nothing, then all "things only are in Chriſt's hand: but ſo it is, "all things are nothing without Chriſt; Vani"ty of vanity, ſays the preacher, all is vanity, Eccl. "i. 2." All the riches, pleaſures, profits, and preferments of the world is but emptineſs; your wiſdom, your parts, your children, your lands, your revenues, without Chriſt, can amount to nothing; they are but like cyphers without a figure. It is ſaid of believers, 2 Cor. vi. 10. Having nothing, they poſſeſs all things; becauſe, though they had nothing in the world, yet, having Chriſt, they have all things: and, on the other hand, it may be truly ſaid of the wicked and unbelieving, that, having all things, they poſſeſs nothing; becauſe, though they had all things in the world at their will, yet, being without Chriſt, they have nothing: all they have is but emptineſs; yea, all they have is a curſe, becauſe they have not Chriſt. And thus all things, without him, are not only nothing, but worſe than nothing.

3. Demonſtration of this truth is, "If all things "in the world be but a ſhadow of what is in "Chriſt; then all things are in his hand ſub"ſtantially: but ſo it is, all good things in the "world are but ſhadows of what is in Chriſt." Outward riches are but a ſhadow of the unſearchable riches of Chriſt: outward life is but a ſhadow of him who is the way, the truth, and the life: outward liberty is but a ſhadow of that freedom that is to be had in Chriſt; If the Son make you free, then are you free indeed, John viii. 36.; importing, that no freedom is freedom indeed and in truth but this: outward reſt is but a ſhadow of the reſt that is to be had in him; Come to me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you reſt. The ſun in the firmament is but a ſhadow of the Sun of righteouſneſs, and of his glory: roſes and lilies are but ſhadows of his beauty, who is the roſe of Sharon, and lily of the valley: rivers and fountains are but ſhadows of his fulneſs, who is the fountain of living waters; not a fountain cloſed, but a fountain opened to us: plants and trees are but a ſhadow of the verdure of him who is the plant of renown, the tree of life. All things that have any excellency in them are but ſhadows of him in whom all excellencies do concentre. All the ſtars of creature excellencies are but ſhadows of him who is the bright and morning ſtar.

4. Demonſtration is, "If the knowledge of all "things be worth nothing, in reſpect of the "knowledge of Chriſt; then all things are on"ly in his hand: but ſo it is, that all things "are but loſs and dung in reſpect of the excellen"cy of the knowledge of Chriſt, Phil. iii. 8." The great apoſtle deſired to know nothing but Chriſt, and him crucified; yea, this is life eternal to know him, and God in him, John xvii. 3. The knowledge of Chriſt is the moſt certain, the moſt profitable, and the moſt comfortable knowlege.—It is the moſt certain knowledge: we know other things only by their ſhape and ſpecies; but we know Chriſt by the Spirit: we know other things by the teſtimony of men; but we know Chriſt by the teſtimony of the Spirit: now, as the teſtimony of the Spirit is more certain than the teſtimony of man; ſo the knowledge of Chriſt is the moſt certain knowledge.—It is the moſt profitable; it is a knowledge that gives us the poſſeſſion of the things we know: by the knowledge of Chriſt, we are poſſeſſed of Chriſt; by our knowledge of his fulneſs, we are poſſeſſed of his fulneſs; By his knowledge ſhall my righteous ſervant juſtify many. If it be life eternal to know him, ſurely it is moſt profitable.—It is the moſt comfortable: all our want of comfort and ſatisfaction flows from our want of the knowledge of Chriſt; and all our true comfort ariſes from the knowledge and view of him. John wept, becauſe he thought none was able to open the ſeals of the book of God's decrees, concerning man's redemption; but, upon the diſcovery of Chriſt, the Lion of the tribe of Judah, the weeping was ſtilled; he wept no more, Rev. v. 4, 5.

5. Demon-

5. Demonſtration, or ſcriptural argument, is, "If Chriſt can ſupply all wants; then all things "muſt be in his hand: but ſo it is, he can ſup- "ply all wants which we labour under, Phil. "iv. 19. My God ſhall ſupply all your needs, accord- "ing to his riches in glory, by Chriſt Jeſus." Whatever you labour under, there is that in Chriſt which can ſupply and ſupport.—Do you labour under deſertion? then he ſays, I will never leave nor forſake thee, Heb. xiii. 5.—Do you labour under corruption and bondage to ſin? It is he that ſays, Sin ſhall not have dominion over you, Rom. vii. 14.—Do you labour under temptation? It is he who, as the God of peace, will tread down Satan under your feet, Rom. xvi. 20.; and ſays, My grace ſhall be ſufficient for you.—Do you labour under weakneſs? It is he who ſays, My ſtrength ſhall be perfected in thy weakneſs, 2 Cor. xii. 9.—Do you labour under affliction, inward or outward? Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of them all.—Do you labour under fears of public calamities upon the land? It is ſaid of him, This man ſhall be the peace, when the Aſſyrian ſhall come into our land.—Do you labour under the fears of death? It is he who ſays, O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy deſtruction. Repentance ſhall be hid from mine eyes.

6. Demonſtration is, "If Chriſt can ſatisfy all "the deſires, ſuit all the conditions, and an- "ſwer all the objections of ſinners; then he "muſt have all things: but ſo it is, he can "ſatisfy all deſires of ſinners; for he is the "Deſire of all nations, and every thing deſirable "is in him; He is altogether lovely, [or ALL DE- "SIRES, as the word imports,] Song v. 16. "made up of deſirable things."—Is worth deſireable? He is the treaſure hid in the field.—Is wiſdom deſirable? In him are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge. Wiſdom hath builded her houſe, Prov. ix. 1.: it is in the plural number, wiſdoms. Chriſt is a compound of wiſdom.—He can ſuit all conditions of poor ſinners: there is no condition you can be in, but he hath a promiſe ſuited to it: ſo that there is in Chriſt what ſuits all caſes; for, the promiſes are nothing elſe but the veins where the blood and fulneſs of Chriſt doth run.—Are you wandering? Chriſt ſays, I am the way.—Are you in darkneſs? Chriſt ſays, I am the light of the world.—Are you in deadneſs? Chriſt ſays, I am the reſurrection and the life.—Are you guilty? Chriſt ſays, he is the Lord our righteouſneſs.—Are you polluted? Chriſt ſays, he is the fountain opened for ſin and for uncleanneſs.—Are you dejected? Chriſt ſays, He will ſend the Comforter.—Do you need protection? Chriſt affirms, that he is the rock of ages, in whom is everlaſting ſtrength.—Do you need direction? Chriſt is the wonderful Counſellor, and he ſays, I will lead the blind by a way they know not.—As Chriſt can ſatisfy all deſires and ſuit all conditions, ſo he can anſwer all objections.—If any of you ſay, "Alas! I am "a poor loſt ſinner." Then Chriſt ſays, I came to ſeek and ſave that which is loſt, Luke xix. 10.—"Oh! ſays another, I am unrighteous, and I am "a great ſinner". Well, Chriſt ſays, I came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance, Mat. ix. 13.—"Oh! ſays a third, but I cannot repent." Well, it is anſwered, Him hath God exalted to give repentance to Iſrael, and remiſſion of ſins, Acts v. 31.—"Alas! cries another, but I cannot turn from "ſin." It is anſwered, Chriſt is ſent to bleſs you, in turning every one of you from your iniquities, Acts iii. 26. It is his work to turn away tranſgreſſion from Jacob; to turn you from darkneſs to light, and from the power of Satan unto God.—"Ah! but I "have no might or ability to come unto Chriſt." It is anſwered, He gives power to the faint, and to them that have no might he createth ſtrength, Iſa. xl. 29, 30, 31. He is the author of faith, Heb. xii. 2.—"Oh! but I have ſinned to the uttermoſt." Why, then, he tells you, he is able to ſave to the uttermoſt, Heb. vii. 25.—"Alas! I am a backſlider, "and bent to backſliding." To this it is anſwered, I will heal their backſlidings; I will love them freely, Hoſ. xiv. 4.—"Oh! but though I "ſhould come to him, I cannot follow him; "his ſheep follow him." Well, what ſays he to this? Even that he will carry the lambs in his arms, and gently lead thoſe that are with young, Iſa. xl. 11.——Whatever the objection is, he can anſwer it; whatever the caſe is, he can remede it; whatever the deſire is, he can ſatisfy it: why then, all things muſt be in his hand; and no wonder, for all the treaſures of divine plenitude and fulneſs are in his hand.—This may ſuffice to demonſtrate the truth hereof.

Secondly, The next thing propoſed, was, in order to clear our faith in this matter, to notice the BEAUTY of this diſpoſure of infinite wiſdom, in giving all things into Chriſt's hand. And,

1. In this contrivance infinite wiſdom hath conſulted the Father's right and property, and manifeſted that he is the giver of all things, and the poſſeſſor of all things; inſomuch that, when he gives all things, he cannot loſe thereby the poſſeſſion of any thing he gives; for, the Father's giving all things into Chriſt's hand doth not imply, that he alienates his own right. It is true, when we give a thing to another, we loſe a right to it: but it is not ſo with God; for, when he gives all things to Chriſt, and when he gives Chriſt, and all things in him to us, he ſtill keeps his right to all that he gives: All things are yours, and ye are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's, 1 Cor. iii. 22, 23. Thus, what the Father gives into Chriſt's hand, remains ſtill in the Father's hand; And I give unto them eternal life, and none ſhall pluck them out of my hand. My Father which gave them me is greater than all, and none is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand. I and my Father are one, John x. 28,—30.

2. In this contrivance infinite wiſdom hath conſulted the Son's right and title. This donative right that he hath, as Mediator, as it is well adapted to him, who, as God, hath the ſame eſſential right and title to all things with the Father and the Holy Ghoſt. For, as to his eternal Godhead, he is the everlaſting Father, Iſa. ix. 6. whoſe goings forth have been of old, from everlaſting, Mic. v. 2. By whom are all things, and we by him, 1 Cor. viii. 6.—And, as Mediator, his donative right is attended with an acquiſitive right, by his purchaſe, by which he hath merited and obtained a name above every name, and a being head over all things to the church, Phil. ii. 9. Eph. v. 23.—A bellical right, by conqueſt, making the people to fall down under him, Pſal. xlv. 4.; making them willing in a day of his power, Pſal. cx. 3.; and overcoming thoſe that make war with him, Rev. xvii. 14. He is able to ſubdue all things to himſelf, Heb. ii. 8.—An hereditary right, being the heir of all things, Heb. i. 2.; and being the firſt-born, higher than the kings of the earth, Pſalm lxxxix. 27.; the firſt-born from the dead, that in all things he might have the pre-eminence, Col. i. 18.

3. In

3. In this contrivance, infinite wisdom hath consulted the security of the stock and treasure, with which Christ is intrusted; and taken the best method for securing all things in his hand. We will find it is done with a special solemnity: It is done by solemn election, he being chosen to this trust; Behold my Servant, whom I uphold; mine Elect, in whom my soul delighteth, Isa. xlii. 1.—It is done by solemn transaction between the Father and him, when the counsel of peace was between them both; I have made a covenant with my chosen, Psal. lxxxix. 3.—It was done by a solemn call, a formal and legal call; I the Lord have called thee, and given thee for a covenant of the people, a light to the Gentiles, Isa. xlii. 6.; and so to be all things to his people.—It was done by a solemn commission, under the broad seal of heaven, whereby he is authorized to be all things that sinners need: Him hath God the Father sealed, John vi. 2.—All things are given to him with the solemnity of a promise; such as, Psal. lxxii. 8,—11. His dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth. To the same purpose, Psal. lxxxix. 24, 25. But my faithfulness and my mercy shall be with him: and in my name shall his horn be exalted. I will set his hand also in the sea, and his right-hand in the rivers.—Yea, all things are given into his hand with the solemnity of an oath; Psal. lxxxx. 34, 35. My covenant will I not break, nor alter the word that hath gone out of my mouth: once have a sworn by my holiness, I will not lye unto David. Psalm cx. 4,—7. The Lord hath sworn, and will not repent, thou art a Priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedeck, &c.: not only so, but a King, for ever, upon a throne, ruling over all things; The Lord, at thy right-hand, shall strike through kings in his wrath: he shall judge among the heathen; he shall fill the places with the dead bodies; he shall wound the head over many countries.——This vast treasure, then, is well secured.

4. In this contrivance, infinite wisdom hath consulted the fitness of the great Trustee, to whom all things are granted. O what wisdom is in this, that he who is, so to speak, the centre of the glorious Trinity, I mean the middle person, should be the centre of all things! Thus he hath, as it were, consulted the convenience of all things. How fit is it that all things should move towards their centre, and meet there! He is the centrical place, not only the middle person of the glorious Trinity, but also the Mediator between God and man, that all things being between God and man, they might have all things common between them, for his own glory and their good. Read concerning this, Eph. i. 10. That he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are in earth, even in him. All things good and bad may be said to be given into his hand: all evil things; such as, the devil, the world, and sin, and death, that they may be ruled and over-ruled: and all good things, that they may be managed and secured. All our enemies are put in his hand, that they may be destroyed; and all our blessings put in his hand, that they may be preserved. None but Christ was capable of such a trust; no mere creature, amongst men or angels, was capable to bear this glory: It is he that builds the temple of the Lord, and bears the glory, Zech. vi. 13. None but he was capable to be the disposer of all wants and dispenser of all blessings: therefore he is made the general receiver of all things.

5. In this contrivance, infinite wisdom hath consulted the pleasure of all parties, even the pleasure of all the persons of the glorious Trinity; It pleased the Father, that in him should all fullness dwell, Col. i. 19.: where you may notice, that the word FATHER is not in the original; and, therefore, this work of reposing all things, all fulness in Christ, may be looked upon, not only as the work of the Father, but the work of the whole glorious Trinity. It pleased Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, that in Christ should all fulness dwell; that into his hand should all things be given: the Father proposed, the Son accepted, and the Holy Ghost consented, that in Christ, as Mediator, should all fulness dwell; and this was done with rapturous pleasure. It pleased the Father to propose it; for, he says, I have laid help upon One that is mighty: It pleased the Son to accept; for, he says, Lo I come! It pleased the Holy Ghost to consent; for, he rested on Christ, and furnished him for his work: The Spirit of the Lord God was upon me, for he hath anointed me, Isa. lxi. 1. This ravishing pleasure, of the glorious Trinity, is not only plainly imported in the words of our text, where it is the Father's love to the Son, as our Saviour and Surety, is made the spring of his giving all things into his hand; but you have it plainly expressed, Isa. xlii. 1. Behold my Servant, whom I uphold; mine Elect, in whom my soul delighteth. And Prov. viii. 30. Then, says Christ, namely, from all eternity, I was by him, as one brought up with him; I was daily his delight. Now, in what respect was he the Father's delight? Even in respect of his rejoicing in the habitable part of the earth, and his delights being with the sons of men. The Father delighted in me, because I delighted in the Sons of men, in the very prospect of saving and redeeming them by my blood. He delighted to see him delighting in this mediatorial service, for which all things were given into his hand, with infinite pleasure.—And, as God consults his own pleasure herein, so the pleasure of all poor sinners, for whose sake and benefit all things were given into him: and hence, whenever the glory of this method of salvation, through Christ, is open to the heart of any poor sinner, they are not only pleased and satisfied, but ravished and filled with sweet wonder, and strong consolation, Heb. vi. 18.; and rejoice with joy unspeakable, 1 Pet. i. 8. The soul is, by a glorious and ravishing power, carried out to rest in this device, as every way worthy of God, and every way suitable and satisfying to their case.

6. In this contrivance, infinite wisdom hath consulted the credit and honour of all concerned. He hath herein consulted the credit and honour of his own majesty and greatness, in giving all things into the hand of Christ, the second Adam, and not transacted any more with man, in his own person, now when turned rebel to his crown and dignity; but transacted immediately with Christ, a person of equal dignity with himself, giving all things to him, and through him to us. Thus we are taught to keep at a due distance from this infinitely glorious Sovereign, and to come and receive blessings, not immediately out of his hand, but by the hand of Christ, the Mediator: I am the way, no man cometh to the Father but by me.—He hath consulted the credit of his name, and of all his glorious excellencies; the credit of his broken law, how it might not only be fulfilled, but but magnified to the utmoſt; the credit of his offended juſtice, how it might not only be ſatisfied, but glorified to the higheſt. Why, infinite wiſdom knew that there was nothing that the violated law, or the injured attributes of God, could demand for the reparation of their honour, but what the ſinner's Surety, having all things given to him, could anſwer with eaſe, and to infinite ſatisfaction. The Creditor well knew that the Surety was not only creditable, but reſponſable, abundantly able to pay all the debt; mighty to ſave: mighty to ſatisfy, mighty to give all the infinite ſatisfaction demanded; inſomuch, that mercy vents to ſinners, without any prejudice to juſtice; and the attributes of God, ſeemingly inconſiſtent one with another, are reconciled in Chriſt: Mercy and truth meet together, righteouſneſs and peace kiſs each other. And God pardons and ſatisfies ſo as not only to be merciful, but even juſt, in juſtifying the ungodly.—He hath conſulted the credit of his Son, Chriſt Jeſus, who thus is honoured with a name above every name that can be named; all things being given into his hand, not only to furniſh him with his mediatorial ſervice, but alſo to reward him for it, Phil. viii. 9. He is honoured with a goodly train, a throng court of ſupplicants, all things being given unto him, that the gathering of the people might be to him for ſupply, and that the revenues of praiſe might be given to him through all eternity.—Yea, he hath conſulted the credit as well as the profit of all the redeemed, by giving all things into the hand of Chriſt. God never honoured the church nor advanced them to greater dignity, than by giving them an univerſal plenitude, as head of the body the church: and every believer may ſay, "My Head, my Huſband, my Lord, hath all "things in his hand." This is the honour of all the ſaints, they have all things in Chriſt: and he is made of God unto them wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption; yea, and all things; that he that glorieth may glory in him.——So much for a hint at the beauty of this diſpoſure.

Thirdly, The next thing propoſed was, in order to enlarge and widen our faith in this matter, to ſpeak of the EXTENT of this ſtore and treaſure that Chriſt hath; the Father having given all things into his hand. Why then, beſides what we ſaid in the doctrinal part, conſider,

1. If all things are in his hand, then all the attributes of God are in him. There is nothing that the Father hath, excepting his perſonality, but the Son hath, as Mediator; All things that the Father hath are mine, John xvi. 15. All things that God hath they belong to the Mediator alſo, the God-man. Here then is an ocean where you and I may dive for ever, and never get to the bottom.—Having all things, he hath all the wiſdom of God, Col. ii. 3. In him are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge. Poor fooliſh ſinner, who hath no wiſdom, knowledge, nor underſtanding, here is a treaſure for you; Chriſt, the wiſdom of God, made of God unto you wiſdom, 1 Cor. i. 30.—Having all things, he hath all the power of God; We preach Chriſt crucified, to the Jews a ſtumbling-block, and to the Greeks fooliſhneſs; but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Chriſt, the wiſdom of God and the power of God, 1 Cor. i. 24. Poor feeble ſoul, who can do nothing, here is a good bargain for you to lay hold upon; it is he that can work in you, both to will and do; and make his people willing in a day of his power. You are not called to come to Chriſt, but by the power of Chriſt, which is the power of God. You are to receive him that can give you power to receive him; and, as one abſolutely weak, to take hold of his ſtrength, and look to his power, to whom is given all power in heaven and in earth.—Having all things, he hath all the holineſs of God; he is ſaid to be made of God unto us ſanctification: and ſurely here is an immenſe fountain of ſanctity, the infinite holineſs of God. O poor, vile, polluted ſinner, who hath loſt the image of God, by the fall of the firſt Adam, and the deficiency of his holineſs, here is a better head and huſband for you, in whom is all the fulneſs of the divine holineſs, that you may be complete in him.—Having all things, he hath all the juſtice of God, and all the righteouſneſs of God in him, and juſtice ſatisfied in him, by his mediatorial righteouſneſs; for, the Lord is well-pleaſed for his righteouſneſs' ſake; yea, he that is the righteouſneſs of God, is made unto us righteouſneſs, 1 Cor. i. 30.; and, O wonderful word! He was made SIN for us,—that we might be made the RIGHTEOUSNESS of God in him, 2 Cor. v. 21. O guilty, guilty ſinner! here is a joyful ſound in your ears, He that hath ears to hear let him hear. You may, in Chriſt, be more righteous in God's ſight, than ever you was guilty in his ſight; yea, you may be the very righteouſneſs of God in him. You may not only be juſtified, but find God to be juſt in juſtifying you, becauſe the juſtice of God is in him; and it is ſatisfied in him, magnified in him, glorified in him.—Having all things, he hath all the mercy of God in this hand; all the infinite love, pity, and compaſſion of God is in his hand, and in his heart. What is Chriſt, but the love of God wrapt up in a garment of fleſh and blood? 1 John iv. 9, 10. In this was manifeſted the love of God towards us, becauſe that God ſent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live thro' him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that God loved us, and ſent his Son to be the propitiation for our ſins. And Jude, ver. 21. Keep yourſelves in the love of God; how? Looking for the mercy of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, unto eternal life. O poor miſerable ſinner! would you wiſh to find mercy in the moment of death, and mercy at the great day? Know that there is no mercy to be expected out of God's hand, unleſs you look to his mercy as in the hand of Chriſt; for, he will never ſhew mercy to the prejudice of his juſtice; and it is only in Chriſt that mercy and juſtice meet together and embrace each other.—Having all things, he hath all the faithfulneſs and truth of God; My mercy and my faithfulneſs ſhall be with him, Pſal. lxxxix. 24. I have obſerved between thirty and forty places of ſcripture, where mercy and truth, mercy and faithfulneſs, are joined together; and here you ſee they are joined together in Chriſt. In him the mercy and love of God vents to the honour of divine truth, pledged even in all the threatenings of the law, as well as divine truth, pledged in all the promiſes of the goſpel; becauſe in him all the threatenings and curſes of the law have ſpent their force; Chriſt hath redeemed us from the curſe of the law, being made a curſe for us, Gal. iii. 13. And, in him are all the promiſes, Yea and Amen to the glory of God, 2 Cor. i. 20. He is the way and the truth; truth itſelf, the God of truth, and the truth of God. O perfidious, faithleſs, unfaithful, and treacherous ſinner! who haſt many times lied to the God of truth, wouldſt thou have thy falſhood all done done away, and ſwallowed up in the truth and veracity of God, and your ſalvation ſecured notwithſtanding of your falſhood, fickleneſs, and inſtability? Here is a pillar on which you may ſtand firm and fixed, amidſt all changes, whether in your outward lot or inward frame; for, All fleſh is graſs; but the word of the Lord endureth for ever. The truth of God ſtandeth unalterably the ſame.—Again, having all things, he hath all the authority of God in his hand; My name is in him, Exod. xxiii. 21. O! poor loſt ſinner, when Chriſt, in this goſpel, comes to ſeek and ſave that which is loſt, ſay not, By what authority doth he theſe things? He is the Sent and Sealed of God, and he hath all the authority that God can give him. And if you aſk by what authority we, poor ſinful mortal worms, like yourſelves, do offer him, and all his ſtore to you? Indeed, we would have no authority, if he had not ſaid, Go preach the goſpel to every creature; and lo, I am with you always, unto the end of the world.—In a word, having all things, he hath all the fulneſs of God in his hand; It pleaſed the Father, that in him ſhould all fulneſs dwell, Col. i. 19. In him dwells all the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily. Not only all the attributes of God, but all the fulneſs of all the divine attributes. Not only the wiſdom of God, but all the fulneſs of the divine wiſdom; not only the power of God, but all the fulneſs of divine power; not only the holineſs of God, but all the fulneſs of divine holineſs; not only the juſtice and righteouſneſs of God, but all the fulneſs of divine righteouſneſs; not only the mercy of God, but all the fulneſs of divine mercy; not only the truth and faithfulneſs of God, but all the fulneſs of divine faithfulneſs; not only the authority of God, but all the fulneſs of divine authority; not only is God in him, but all the fulneſs of the Godhead. O! poor empty ſinner! here is unſearchable riches, a bottomleſs well of everlaſting ſalvation for you.

2. If all things are in his hand, then all the reins of providence are in his hand; this muſt follow upon what hath been ſaid, having all the perfections of God, ſurely his kingdom ruleth over all. What a vaſt field is here? I ſhall only touch at ſome of the borders thereof. For all things in heaven, earth, and hell are under his government as Mediator, Phil. ii. 10. Eph. i. 22. All the reins of common providence, in the world, and ſpecial providence, in the church, and among the children of God, are wholly in his hand.—Why then, having all things, he hath all kingdoms and churches in his hand; By me kings reign, and princes decree juſtice, Prov. viii. 15. When he will, he cuts off the ſpirit of princes, and is terrible to the kings of the earth. Pſal. lxxv. 6, 7. Promotion cometh neither from the eaſt, nor from the weſt, nor from the ſouth, but God is judge; he putteth down one and raiſeth up another. It is by him that the churches are planted and watered; and again diſplanted and turned into a barren wilderneſs when he pleaſes, Iſa. xli. 18. Pſal. lvii. 34. Whatever diſorders and confuſions be in the church of God, it is beſt for us to keep about the hand of Chriſt, who hath the over-ruling of all things to his Father's glory, and his peoples good.—Having all things, he hath all the ſtars of heaven in his hand, not only the ſun, moon, and ſtars of theſe viſible heavens; for, he could make the ſtars in their courſes fight againſt Siſera; but alſo, all the ſtars in the church's firmament, Rev. i. 16. and he orders them to ſhine ſo long in this place, and ſo long in the other as he pleaſes.—Having all things, he hath all the winds of heaven in his hand. When the church and children of God pray, Song iv. 16. Awake, O north-wind; come thou ſouth, &c. Whence do they expect theſe winds of the Spirit's influences? Even from him who hath ſaid of the bleſſed Comforter, I will ſend him unto you, John xvi. 7. It is he that propheſies unto the winds, Ezek. xxxvii. 9. Thus ſaith the Lord, Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon theſe ſlain, that they may live. If there be little of this quickening wind blowing about your hearts, yet he can order the winds to ariſe when he pleaſes; for, all the influences of the Spirit are in his hand, as well as the natural winds, Pſal. cxxxv. 7.—Having all things, he hath all the waters of the ſea, and all the duſt of the earth in his hand; Who hath meaſured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out heaven with a ſpan? and comprehended the duſt of the earth in a meaſure? Iſa. xl. 12. Perhaps you have friends buried in the ſea, or buried in the earth; whether the earth or ſea be their graves, are they friends in Chriſt? Rejoice in the faith of their happy reſurrection; He will raiſe them up at the laſt day. It is eaſy with him to command the earth and the ſea to give up their dead; for he hath every drop of water, and every pile of duſt within the view of his omniſcient eye, and within the hollow of his omnipotent hand.—Having all things, he hath all the mountains and hills in his hand, as in the forecited, Iſa. xl. 12. He is ſaid to weigh the mountains in ſcales, and the hills in a balance. The mountains and hills are in his hand, both in a literal and metaphorical ſenſe; they are in his hand and under his feet, ſo that it is eaſy with him to caſt them out of the way with his hand, or tread upon them, and come ſkipping on the mountains, and leaping on the hills, Song ii. 8. Who art thou, O great mountain, before our Zerubabel? thou ſhalt become a plain, Zech. iv. 7. How doth faith remove mountains, but by the hand of Chriſt? Poſſibly you may find mountains of ſin and guilt, mountains of trouble and diſtreſs, mountains of fears and objections, mountains of difficulties and diſcouragements in your way; but let them not fright you from coming to Chriſt; for, he hath them all in his hand; and he can overturn the mountains as eaſily as he can turn his hand.—Having all things, he hath all weathers in his hand, whether fair or foul, calm or ſtormy weather as he pleaſes to order; whether proſperity or adverſity, plenty or penury: In the day of proſperity be joyful in him, in the day of adverſity conſider that it is he alſo that hath appointed it; for God hath ſet the one againſt the other, Eccleſ. vii. 14.—Having all things, he hath all times and ſeaſons in his hand; he hath given to the ſtork and ſwallow to know their appointed times, and to obſerve the times of their coming, Jer. viii. 7. O Sirs, how infinitely well then does he know the fit time of his own coming, and the proper ſeaſon of viſiting his people! He waits to be gracious; and he is a God of judgment, bleſſed are all they that wait for him, Iſa. xxx. 18. The time of our ſojourning here, and the number of our months is in his hand. The time of his approaches to the ſoul, and the time of his ſtaying, is in his ſovereign hand.—Again, having all things in his hand, he hath all the chains of devils and of evil ſpirits in his hand; they are held in his chains, and under his his check and controul; they cannot touch a herd of swine without his permission; and his hand is famed for casting out devils; and, perhaps, there are many such here to be cast out; but he hath no more ado but, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee to come out. Thou unclean spirit, I charge thee to come out: thou drunken spirit, I charge thee to come out: thou profane spirit, I charge thee to come out: thou atheistical unbelieving spirit, I charge thee to come out. All the chains wherewith poor prisoners of hope are held, are in his hand; and, glory to God that hath anointed him to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound, Isa. xli. 1.—Again, having all things, he hath all the keys of hell and death in his hand; I am he that liveth and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and death, Rev. i. 18. When death and hell thought to have detained him prisoner, behold our mighty Samson came off with all the gates, and all the keys in his hand. Why, he had promised, saying, O death, I will be thy plague; O grave, I will be thy destruction, Hos. xiii. 14. And having done as he said, therefore his people, even staring death in the face, may, and sometimes do, sing that triumphant song, O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law, but thanks be to God who giveth us the victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ, 1 Cor. xv. 55.—Again, having all things, he hath all work upon his hand: having finished the work the Father gave him to do, even the work of redemption, by price; he hath yet upon his hand all the work that the redeemed have to do, even the work of redemption by power. In point of means, you are called to be much about his hand; but in point of power, you must put all in his hand; for, without him you can do nothing, John xv. 5. It is he who worketh in us, to will and do of his good pleasure, Phil. iv. 13. It is he that works all our works in us and for us, Isa. xvi. 12.: therefore we should pray, with the psalmist, Psal. cix. 21. Do thou for me, O God the Lord, for thy name's sake; and Psal. lvii. 2. I will cry unto God, most high, unto God that performeth all things for me. But this leads me to another particular.

3. If all things are in Christ's hand, then all offices, all saving offices are in his hand. You know, the Father hath anointed him to the office of Prophet, Priest, and King. O Sirs, what employment will you put in his hand? It is he, as a Prophet, that says, They shall be all taught of God: look to him for the promised teaching. It is he, as a Priest, that says, upon the ground of the sacrifice he hath offered, I, even I am he that pardoneth thine iniquity, for my name's sake: look to him for remission in his blood. It is he, as a King, that says, I will subdue your iniquities;—Sin shall not have dominion over you. O! ignorant sinner, will you find in your heart to refuse such a Prophet as Christ is? Who teaches like him? O! guilty sinner, will you refuse such a High-priest as this? such a sacrifice as this? O! enslaved sinner, will you refuse the help of such a King and Conqueror as this? If there be none of these offices to be dispensed with, then take hold of him in them all.

4. If all things are in his hand, then he is clothed with all relations that can contribute to the happiness of sinners. What friend or relation do you want, O sinner?—Want you a father to pity you? Behold, here you may have an everlasting Father, that is his name, Isa. ix. 6.; and, in him the fatherless findeth mercy.—Want you a mother to be tender of you? Behold, here motherless children may have their loss made up; when father and mother leaveth you, he is one to take you up, Psal. xxvii. 10. He is one that can be a thousand times better to you, than father or mother; and manifests more love than the tenderest mother that ever was; Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget; yet will I not forget you, Isa. xlix. 15.—Want you a husband? O! what would you think to be married with the heir of all things? Why, if the ear of faith be open, you may hear him saying, Thy Maker is thy husband, Isa. liv. 5.; and again, Hos. ii. 19. I will betroth thee unto me for ever. If you say, "O! how will it be consistent with the "justice of God for him to marry such a black "bride? Why, he says, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness; I will betroth thee unto me in wisdom; I will betroth thee unto me in judgment, in mercy, in loving-kindness; yea, and in faithfulness; and thou shalt know the Lord: thou shalt know God in Christ. How can he betroth thee to himself, and yet be infinitely just, and wise, and merciful, and faithful in doing so? Because mercy and truth have met together in Christ, the glorious Bridegroom; they struck up a match together, and embraced each other, that there might be nothing to hinder the match between Christ and you.—Want you a proper match then, O sinner, or a meet help, poor bankrupt, run in such deep arrears to the law and justice of God? Is not he that hath unsearchable riches a fit match for you? Poor dying creature, that will be food for worms in a little, here is a living Head for you, that can make you live for ever. O! mortal worm, here is an immortal Husband for you. Poor changeable creature, here is an unchangeable match for you; Christ the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever.—Want you a lover? are you an outcast, that reckons yourself despised by all the world, in so much, that none cares for you, or loves you? Behold, an infinitely loving and lovely Jesus, offering and boding his love upon you, saying, I will heal your backslidings; I will love you freely, Hos. xiv. 4. And he is seeking your heart, your conjugal love, saying, My son, give me thy heart.—Want you a leader through the dark and difficult steps of your way? A guide, a director, and counsellor in whatsoever affair you have upon your hand, wherein it is needful to be directed? O! here is a wonderful Counseller, who says, Isa. xlii. 16. I will lead the blind in a way they know not, and in paths that they have not known.—Want you a shepherd to feed you, or a captain to fight your battles for you?—Want you a physician, when in sickness, to heal you?—Want you a refiner and purifier, when you are in the furnace, to purge away your dross? Behold he who hath all things in his hand, has all the relations that you can desire.

5. If all things be in his hand, then all graces are in his hand. This is a great part of the glory of the only begotten of the Father, that he is full of grace and truth, John i. 14. and, Out of his fullness have all we received, and grace for grace, ver. 16. Grace is poured into his lips, Psal. xlv. 2.; and I hope he is pouring grace from his lips by his word among some of you this day. The Spirit of the Lord God is upon him, for he hath anointed him. He is anointed with the oil of gladneſs, anointed with the Spirit of all grace.—Want you grace to believe? Behold it is in his hand, as he is the Author of faith. Want you grace to repent? Behold it is in his hand, as a Prince and Saviour exalted to give repentance. Do you want grace to pray? It is he that has the Spirit of prayer in his hand to give, Zech. xii. 10. Do you want grace to communicate? Grace to mortify ſin? Grace to bear the croſs? Grace to reſiſt temptation? Grace to do and ſuffer? It is he that has all grace in his hand to give; and who ſays, My grace ſhall be ſufficient for you: hence his people are called to be ſtrong in the grace that is in Chriſt Jeſus.

of

6. If all things are in his hand, then all bleſſings are in his hand to give. He is the Lord Diſpenſer of temporal bleſſings; for, The earth is in his hand, and the fulneſs thereof: the Lord Diſpenſer of ſpiritual bleſſings; for, behold heaven is in his hand, and the fulneſs thereof: the Lord Diſpenſer of eternal bleſſings; for, eternal life is in his hand. It was promiſed of him, that men ſhould be bleſſed in him; and accordingly he is ſent to bleſs us, Acts iii. 26. God having raiſed up his Son Jeſus, ſent him to bleſs you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities. I might here enumerate many particular bleſſings. The bleſſings of illumination is in his hand; for, he is a Light to enlighten the Gentiles. The bleſſing of converſion is in his hand; for, he ſays, When I am lifted up, I will draw all men unto me. The bleſſing of juſtification is in his hand; for, We are juſtified freely by his grace. The bleſſing of reconciliation with God, is in his hand; for, it is he that maketh peace by the blood of his croſs. The bleſſing of ſanctification is in his hand; for, He is made of God unto us ſanctification. The bleſſing of acceptance is in his hand; for, By him we have boldneſs and acceſs, with confidence, through the faith of him. The bleſſing of conſolation is in his hand; for, he is the conſolation of Iſrael. The bleſſing of a happy death is in his hand; for, Bleſſed are the dead which die in the Lord. The bleſſing of a happy reſurrection is in his hand; for, He is the reſurrection and the life. The bleſſing of a happy ſentence at the great day is in his hand; for, All judgment is committed to him; and it is he that will ſay to the wicked, Depart, ye curſed, into everlaſting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels; and to the righteous, Come, ye bleſſed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you, from the foundation of the world. The bleſſing of eternal glorification is in his hand; for, as he is the glory of the higher houſe, ſo he ſays, Father, I will, that thoſe whom thou haſt given me be with me, where I am, that they may behold my glory: and ſo ſhall they be ever with the Lord.—Can you tell me any ſpiritual bleſſing that is not in his hand? No: Eph. i. 3. Who hath bleſſed us with ALL ſpiritual bleſſings, in heavenly places, only in Chriſt.

And now, after all, what think ye of him? Have you no heart to join hand with a well-furniſhed Saviour, that hath all things in his hand? If you have got no heart to ſuch a good bargain, this is very ſad; but, becauſe it is a day of glad tidings, I will tell you among other things, that all hearts are in his hand, and it is his prerogative to open the locked heart. It is eaſy with him to create a clean heart, to melt the hard heart, to fix the wandering heart, to cleanſe the filthy heart, to elevate the drooping heart, to conquer the ſtubborn heart, to quicken the dead heart, to draw the backward heart, as I noticed on another ſubject; and if any thing draw your heart to him, it will be the revelation of his grace and fulneſs, as having all things in his hand.——Thus much may ſuffice for a comprehenſive view of the extent of this treaſure.

Fourthly, I come to the fourth thing I propoſed, which was, in order to the further aſſiſting of faith, to conſider the MANNER how all things are in Chriſt's hand. I have already told you, all things are in Chriſt's hand naturally, as he is God; and donatively, as he is Mediator: but, beſides, there are theſe following ways wherein all things given him of the Father are in his hand.

1. All things are in his hand ſubſtantially; not ſymbolically, as Chriſt is ſaid to be in the elements of bread and wine in the ſacrament; or, as God was ſaid to be in the temple, by the ſymbol of his preſence. It is not the ſhadow of all things, but the ſubſtance, which is in his hand; therefore it is ſaid, Col. ii. 9. In him dwelleth all the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily; that is, ſubſtantially, and ſo in a glorious, eminent, ſuperlative, and tranſcendant way. Chriſt is the ſubſtantial All of his people; the ſubſtance of all the types, and ſacrifices, and ceremonies under the law. They were but the ſhadow of good things to come, Heb. x. 1. All the good things themſelves are in Chriſt ſubſtantially.

2. All things are in him communicatively; his Mediatorial fulneſs is communicable and omnipotent. All ſhops are cloſed, but Chriſt's houſe ſtands open; and on the door this inſcription, WHOSOEVER WILL, MAY COME AND SHARE OF THIS TREASURE. Chriſt's fulneſs is communicable; and, therefore, Out of this fulneſs we may all receive, and grace for grace, John i. 16. We needed not preach of this ſtore that is in Chriſt's hand, if it was locked up in him. Why is it, that in him, as Mediator, Dwells all the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily? Why, but that we may be complete in him, Col. ii. 9, 10. Chriſt is a cabinet of rich jewels; faith is a key to open the cabinet: we receive out of his fulneſs by faith. Prayer is a key, If any man lack wiſdom, let him aſk it of God. If theſe keys be not in your hand, ſurely they are in his, who hath all things in his hand. O ſolicite him to caſt you the key, and give you the ſpirit of faith and prayer.

3. All things are in his hand ſufficiently; there is bread enough and to ſpare, Luke xv. 17. Fulneſs enough for the deſtitute; light enough for the dark; life enough for the dead: there is grace enough in him, pardon enough in him, help enough in him; bread enough and to ſpare. If you think there is none to ſpare for you, it is becauſe you do not believe there is enough in him; but will you diſgrace our infinitely noble and glorious Lord, by ſuppoſing that there is not enough in him? O! He can ſatisfy the longing ſoul, and fill the hungry ſoul with good things. Nothing in this world gives ſatisfaction to the ſoul: he was a fool that ſaid, when he had a full barn, Soul, take thy reſt, thou haſt goods laid up for many years. We may as well dream of a coffer full of grace and glory, as of a ſoul full of corn and wine; it is only Chriſt that has in him ſuitable and ſatisfying fulneſs for the ſoul, and enough to give complete, ſolid, permanent, and everlaſting ſatisfaction.

4. All things are in his hand efficiently and effectively, effectively, in so much, that he can make others to share of a conformity to him, in that store that is in his hand. For example, hath he all comeliness? Well, what says he? I have made thee perfect through my comeliness which I put upon thee, Ezek. xvi. 14. Hath he all righteousness? Well, the believer is made righteous through his righteousness. Hath he all glory? The believer is made glorious through his glory, and all glorious within; Beholding his glory we are changed into the same image, from glory to glory, by the Spirit of the Lord, 2 Cor. iii. 18. — There is a power and efficacy in every saving discovery of the glorious treasure that is in Christ, a smilling favour in his face; and, O happy they, that are smitten with a conformity to him: who, beholding the glory of his grace, are made gracious; beholding the glory of his holiness, are made holy; beholding the glory of his mercy, are made merciful.

5. All things are in his hand unchangeably; for, he is the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever, Heb. xiii. 18. He is alway the same; and his stock and treasure is invariably the same. Whatever you get out of his hand, yet still the stock and store is in his hand. Let faith draw never so many bills upon him, for this and that supply, at this time and the other time, and get never so much rent, annual rent, or daily rent, out of the stock; yet still the stock and interest both are in his hand: and the believer hath his all to the fore; even when all that was in your hand is spent, yet all things remain as they were in Christ's hand: yea, and this well of salvation springs up for ever, and that to everlasting life. O great encouragement! the fulness of Christ, as it is in our hand may ebb and flow; but as it is in Christ's hand, it is unchangeably the same. The believer may be sometimes full, and sometimes empty; sometimes up, and sometimes down; but Christ is always the same; I am the Lord, I change not. All believers, since the beginning of the world, have been always putting down their buckets of faith, and drawing water out of this well of salvation; yet still it is full and running over; and no wonder, for his fulness is infinite; it is the fulness of God.

6. All things are in his hand eternally, Col. i. 19. It pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell; it is a dwelling fulness. In him it is, and in him it dwells for ever. In him are durable riches and righteousness; and, at his right-hand are pleasures for evermore. Hence also the blessings he communicates are everlasting blessings; everlasting peace, everlasting pardon, everlasting consolation, everlasting life; He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life. Here is a depth to dive into for ever; Christ hath an eternity of all perfection in him. An eternity of all excellency, an eternity of all blessings: here is a portion that will make you up to eternity. Here is eternal wisdom, eternal power, eternal holiness, eternal happiness. He is the true God, and eternal life. Every thing is everlasting in him; his righteousness is everlasting righteousness, his strength is everlasting strength; his wisdom is everlasting wisdom. Poor dying mortal, here is an everlasting treasure. O! come here, come here, poor mortal, that art to die in a few days, and no matter though you give up the ghost shortly, when, instead of this short lasting life, here is everlasting life for you, as well as security from everlasting death. All things are in his hand eternally.—But here I shall go on Fifthly, To the next thing I proposed, which was, in order to the quickening and exciting of our faith, to offer some MOTIVES and CONSIDERATIONS, arising from, and accompanying this truth, that all things are given into Christ's hand. O let us be exhorted to come to, and close with, and believe in, this glorious one. And, for motive, consider.

1. Is it possible that we can have or desire a better pattern to follow or imitate, in trusting in Christ, than his eternal Father, who hath entrusted him with all things? Behold my Servant, whom I uphold! Isa. xlii. 1.; or, as the word is observed to signify, My Servant whom I TRUST; and accordingly hath entrusted him with all things. And, Oh! may not this shame us out of our distrust? Thus the Father entrusted him with all the great concerns of his everlasting glory! And may not we well trust him with all the concerns of our everlasting welfare? O Sirs, is it not safest laying our help where God has laid it? Where the waters go, the fish will go; God and all his fulness is gone with Christ. Is it not best going where God goes, and resting where he rests, and loving whom he loves, and trusting whom he trusts.

2. Consider, is it possible that we can have or desire a better hand for all things to be put into, than the hand of Christ, whom the Father thus loves? All things you need to make you for ever happy, are in the hand of a God-man. That your stock may be sure to you, it is in the hand of a God; and that it may be near to you, it is in the hand of a Man. How can it be surer to you than in his hand, who is God as well as man? How can it be nearer to you than in his hand, who is man as well as God? O then, is not the stock in a friend's hand? A great friend, a near friend? God could not chuse a better hand both for his own interest and yours. It is more honourable for God, more profitable for you, that all things are put in the hand of Christ, the second Adam, the new covenant head, than if all things had remained in the state they were in before. The covenant of works was broken: but if you look believingly towards Christ, not only will God get more glory this way than if he should damn you for your sins, and satisfy his justice upon you to eternity; but also more glory than if he should have rewarded you with life, for your righteousness, according to the tenor of the covenant of works, supposing it had never been broken. Why, all the glory of God was designed to concentre in Christ, as in a bright constellation; and will you cross this design, that tends so much more to God's honour, and your profit, than if matters had stood in their old primitive posture? See how Job was taken up with the way of grace, beyond that of works, Job ix. 15, 20, 21. Whom, though I were righteous, yet would I not answer; but I would make supplication to my judge. If I justify myself, mine own mouth shall condemn me; if I say, I am perfect, it shall also prove me perverse. Though I were perfect, yet would I not know my soul, I would despise my life.

3. Consider, as another motive, that as it is not possible to miss everlasting life, if you look believingly to him that hath all things in his hand; so it is not possible to escape ever- lasting wrath if you believe not in him; read the verse immediately following the text; He that believeth on the Son, hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son, shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him. He that believeth, shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned. He that believeth, cannot miss salvation; for, it is in the hand of Christ, to give to all comers: he that believeth not cannot escape damnation; for, How shall we escape, if we reject so great a salvation? so great a Saviour, who hath all things in his hand? It is established in heaven, and it stands now upon the honour of God to save all believers in Christ, and to damn all unbelievers. Only, as God gets more honour, and greater satisfaction in your salvation, through Christ, in a way of believing in him, than he can get in your damnation, if you remain in your unbelief; therefore, though you had no regard to your salvation or damnation, there is something here, of infinitely greater worth than your eternal life or eternal damnation, that should move you to this glorious Jesus for all things; and that is, for the sake of the eternal honour and glory of God and Christ; for, the Father hath put honour upon the Son, by giving all things into his hand. As you cannot put more honour upon Christ, so you cannot put more honour upon his Father that crowned him with this honour, than by putting all things you have ado in his hand, and coming to him for all things you stand in need of. Christ is glorified in such; for, they are his glory; yea, his crown of glory, Isa. lxii. 3. When you come to him and make use of this treasure that the Father hath put in his hand, you join with his Father in putting a crown of glory on his head.

4. Consider, for motive to look to this Jesus, that it is not possible, O sinner, that all things are given into Christ's hand, and yet you have no concern in it, since all is given to him that he may give it out to you. Why has he received the Spirit above measure? He tells you himself, Isa. lxi. 1. The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, for he hath anointed me; Why? even to preach good tidings to the meek, and to proclaim liberty to the captives. His Father also tells you, Isa. xlii. 1. I have put my Spirit upon him, and he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles; that is, give light and understanding, life and salvation to the Gentiles. Why hath our Lord Jesus received gifts, even the gift of all things? See Psal. lxviii. 18. compared with Eph. iv. 8. He hath received gifts for men. "But, say you, I am a poor rebel." Well, it is even for the rebellious. So, not only are all things in Christ's hand communicatively, as I said before, but all things are given him for this very end, that they may be communicated for the benefit of sinners. When Christ says, Mat. xxviii. 18. All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth, he immediately adds, Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations: As if he had said, Why have I received all power in heaven and in earth, but for this end that I may be able to save and relieve poor sinners? and, therefore, Go ye, and teach all nations, and tell them where their help lies. Say not, then, you have no concern, O sinner; it is because the Father hath given all things into his hand, that therefore he says to us, in your behalf, Go, preach the gospel to every creature; every sinner, though they have sinned themselves into monsters; sinned themselves into devils; yet, if they be creatures, preach the gospel to them; tell them I have life, and salvation, and all things in my hand for them; Whosoever will let him come. Put not away this grace of God from you through unbelief, saying, It cannot be for me: yea, it is for you; To you is the word of this salvation sent. Let faith say, It is for me, for me, that all things were given into Christ's hand. No, says unbelief, and the devil together, it is for the elect and not for me. O sinner, let not the devil cheat you about the object of faith; though, indeed, the election only shall obtain; yet the thing you are called first to believe, is not what is for you in the purpose of God, but what is for you in the promise of God, and in the offer of this gospel; and if you take what is for you here, you are safe in spite of all the devils in hell. Therefore let your heart say, "O! here "is life and salvation, and all things in Christ's "hand held out in this gospel for me; and e-"ven so I take it as offered to me." If it were not for you, we could not preach the gospel to every one here; but, in his great name, I preach it to every creature that hears me, that the Father hath given all things into Christ's hand for you; and, therefore, take him to you, and all things with him.

5. Consider, that Christ, having got all things put in his hand, for the behoof of sinners, it is not possible that he will keep all close in his hand, and give out nothing. No, no; it stands upon his honour as Mediator; it stands upon his credit as he is the church's treasurer, and the Father's trustee, to give out of that treasure of grace and fulness, that is given to him, for our behalf; he would not be faithful unto his trust if he should give out none of that treasure to poor sinners; but, who can charge him with unfaithfulness? What mouth, but that of cursed unbelief, will charge him thus? When unbelief says, Oh! he will give out nothing to me: What is the meaning of it? It is in effect a saying, He is not so faithful to his trust, as that I can expect he will give out any thing to the like of me. Alas! beware of blasphemy: let faith rather step in and say, I hope he will give out of his fulness to me, because his name is faithful and true. And if you can believe his truth and faithfulness pledged in the promise, as the Father's Trustee for sinners, and that with particular application to yourself, then his faithfulness is engaged unto you, believer, in particular. But here is a door of faith and hope even for sinners that are yet unbelievers, that there is a glorious and sweet necessity lying upon Christ, to give out of his grace and fulness to sinners of mankind; and why not to you? He must give out of his grace to make his people willing in a day of his power, and bring them to himself; Other sheep I have which are not of this fold, [namely, Gentiles as well as Jews,] them I must bring; and they shall hear my voice, John x. 16. Them I must bring. We are told, John iv. 4. He must needs go through Samaria: why, for what end? It was even to give out of his grace to a poor harlot, a vile sinful woman there: Even so, I hope he must needs go through Dunfermline, this day, to give out of that store the Father hath given him, for the sake of poor vile sinners here. Was there a blessed necessity for his suffering at Jerusalem? Yea, there was, Luke xxiv. 26. Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory? Even so, there is a blessed necessity for his applying the virtue virtue of his death and ſufferings, by pouring out of his Spirit, and communicating of his grace for that end.

6. Conſider, that though Chriſt be exalted to this honour and majeſty, of having all things given into his hand, yet it is not poſſible that therefore he ſhould be proud, and lordly, and diſdainful, ſo as not to regard the caſe of poor ſinners; for, the quite contrary is the truth, namely, becauſe he is thus honoured, therefore he humbles himſelf. Some may think, "Oh! when Chriſt is exalted to ſuch "ſupreme dignity, as that all things are in his "hand, ſurely he will reckon it below him to "regard ſuch a ſinner as I am; and ſtoop ſo "low as to waſh ſuch a leper as I am." Alas! Sirs, think not ſo; for he declares the contrary; read his mind on this with wonder and admiration, John xiii. 3,—8. Jeſus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he was come from God, and went to God, he riſeth from ſupper, and laid aſide his garments, and took a towel and girded himſelf: After that he poured water into a baſon, and began to waſh the diſciples feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded. Then cometh he to Simon Peter; And Peter ſaith unto him, Lord, doſt thou waſh my feet? Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, What I do thou knoweſt not now, but thou ſhalt know hereafter. Peter ſaith unto him, Thou ſhalt never waſh my feet. Jeſus anſwered him, If I waſh thee not, thou haſt no part in me. What was the reaſon, then, that Chriſt ſtooped down to waſh his diſciples feet? Even becauſe he knew the Father had given all things into his hand. Was he therefore proud? No; he was therefore humble. Poor ſinful men, that have nothing, are moſt proud; but the God-man, who hath all things, is moſt humble, and ſtoops to our infirmities, becauſe he is clothed with infinite excellency. His excellency, as Mediator, is the cauſe of his humility; and his humility prompts his excellency to be good to ſinners. O wonderful, humble Saviour! There is a twofold humiliation of Chriſt; Firſt, He humbled himſelf to come down into our nature, and ſhed his blood for us. Secondly, Being exalted, he humbles himſelf to come down into our hearts, our filthy hearts, and waſh them in his blood. In the former, he humbled himſelf, that God might exalt him; in the latter, God exalted him, that he might humble himſelf. He is exalted for this very end to pardon and purge guilty and polluted ſinners, Acts v. 31. It is no diſparagement to his exalted ſtate, for him to ſtoop down and waſh your feet, and waſh your heart; Him hath God exalted, a Prince and Saviour, to give repentance to Iſrael, and remiſſion of ſins: This is the way he waſhes, by giving pardon and repentance. For as high and honourable as he is, he thinks it his honour to give out grace. Wo is me, that he is not employed, ſince he thinks it his honour to waſh you! It is not below him; he does not think he will be diſhonoured or affronted, no: he knows that the lower he ſtoops, the higher will he be honoured in the hearts of his people. I appeal to all believing hearts; the lower that he condeſcends to you, to waſh your filthy hearts, O! did not your hearts exalt him the more, and wonder at his glory? Do you think the leſs of him? I ſuppoſe not. I am ſure you think the more, and the higher of him. O! ſinner, then, do not think he is too high to look down towards you; the higher he is, the lower doth he ſtoop; and therefore the higher you conceive he is, the more hope you may conceive of his pity and favour towards you; and the more you ſee is given into his hand, the more do you expect to get out of his hand: faith has the more footing.—— So much for the motives.

Sixthly, The next thing propoſed, in order to the regulating and ſquaring of our faith, according to the goſpel-rule, was to offer ſome DIRECTIONS. And,

1. Be convinced, that, as all things are in his hand, ſo faith itſelf is in his hand to give; for he is the author of it, Heb. xii. 2. And know, that nothing, but the power of God, can effectually work faith. The goſpel muſt come, not in word only, but in power, and in the Holy Ghoſt, 1 Theſ. i. 5. Seek not for faith, then, out of your own bowels; for, Faith cometh by hearing. Why, the goſpel, that you hear, is the power of God to ſalvation; and this power works ſecretly and ſilently upon the heart, in hearing, when the perſon may be little knowing that it is the power of God that is dealing with his heart; and yet that power is, perhaps, working ſo effectually, that, in hearing of Chriſt, there is a heart-beating towards him; a heart-bleeding towards him; a heart-burſting towards him; a heart-burning towards him. This power is ſometimes an enlightening power, raviſhing the heart with the glorious excellency of Chriſt, diſcovered in the word; and, with this, a ſoftening power, ſo as the heart is melted like water, before the Lord, that was a hard rock before; and, perhaps, with this a drawing power, ſo as the heart is panting after the Lord; and yet, perhaps, the perſon doth not know that the power of God is preſent; but, however, the goſpel is the power of God; and faith comes by hearing of it, when it comes not in word only, but in power. Faith comes not by working; it comes not by doing; it comes not by forcing yourſelf up to the act of faith; but it comes by hearing the object; it comes by hearing of Chriſt, and of what he hath in his hand. The object of faith comes not from our act of faith; but the acting of faith comes from the object of faith; and ſo it comes by hearing of the glorious object. Why ſtand you poring then upon your want of power to act faith, as if you were to pull it out of your own breaſt? You will be much nearer your purpoſe, if you will pore upon the object of it, Chriſt, who hath all things in his hand. If you be taken up with the object, there is no fear about the act of faith; for the ſoul, in believing, conſiders not what can I do? But, what can Chriſt do? It conſiders not, what have I in my hand? But, what hath Chriſt in his hand? And hence, when faith acts rightly upon Chriſt, it conſiders not itſelf, and its own actings; it is taken up with nothing but Chriſt: and it is the beſt act of faith that loſes itſelf, and is ſwallowed up in its object, ſaying, Chriſt is all in all; and I ſee all things in his hand.

2. Direction, in order to your cloſing with Chriſt, who hath all things in his hand; O! be convinced that you have nothing in your own hand; no righteouſneſs in your own hand, no ſtrength in your own hand; this would pave the way for ſaying, Surely in the Lord only, have I righteouſneſs and ſtrength. I fear there are ſome here, who are rich and increaſed with goods, and are

are relying on ſome of theſe good things that they have in hand; even believers are in danger here: ſome are ſaying, in their hearts, Perhaps I have ſome good duty and preparation-work I have been about, and I reſt on that; and hope for favour on that account: I had a good frame yeſterday, or yeſternight, or this morning; and I got grace to pray, and I am hoping, on that account, to obtain favour at God's hand this day. O man, take care of your hand; while you are relying on any thing in your own hand, you are too rich, and it will be a wonder if you meet not with a diſappointment; for he that feeds the hungry with good things, ſends the rich empty away. There is more hope, if notwithſtanding all your beſt duties, and beſt frames, you are entitled to nothing, and ſee you have no wiſdom, no grace, no good thing in your own hand; no good frame to confide in. What! have you nothing at all? No, not a crumb to put in your mouth? Are you reduced to poverty and beggary? Why, then, Bleſſed are the poor in ſpirit; come, and welcome, to a full Jeſus, who has all things in his hand. The poor and needy come beſt ſpeed here. Have you nothing to truſt unto but the grace that is in his hand? the fulneſs that is in his hand? and have you no hope or confidence built any where elſe? I can promiſe, in his name, it ſhall not be long ere you be ſupplied; for, The needy ſhall not always be forgotten, nor the expectation of the poor periſh for ever.

3. Direction I offer is, O man, woman, lay all things that you want diſtinctly and directly over againſt all things he hath, and you want out of his hand. For example, when you think on your own guiltineſs, then look to his righteouſneſs, and lay this over againſt that. When you apprehend your weakneſs, then apprehend the ſtrength that is in his hand, and lay the one over againſt the other. When you conſider your emptineſs, then conſider his fulneſs, and ſtudy Chriſt, and your condition together; if you ſtudy your condition without ſtudying Chriſt, then you will be full of deſpair and diſcouragements; if you ſtudy Chriſt, without ſtudying your condition, then you will be full of pride and preſumption. If you think on ſin, without Chriſt, you deſpair; if you think on Chriſt, without thinking on ſin, you preſume. If you be ignorant, think on Chriſt as a Prophet; if guilty, here think on Chriſt as a Prieſt; if enſlaved, apprehend him as a King. Obſerve the attributes and titles of Chriſt that are moſt ſuited to your condition; and lay them and your condition together. It is remarkable, that all the epiſtles, to the ſeven churches of Aſia, begin with titles of Chriſt; and every title is ſuited to the condition of that church. For example, his title to the church of Smyrna is, The firſt and the laſt, that was dead and is alive, Rev. ii. 8. Why ſo? Becauſe they were to ſuffer hard things; and were called to be faithful unto the death, and ſo on: he ſhews that he hath a title ſuited to every caſe. Thus, ſet the names and titles of Chriſt, that ſuit your condition, directly over againſt it; and aſſure yourſelf that Chriſt will make good his titles, that he is clothed with. If the title be, The Lord is my ſhepherd; then I may certainly infer, I ſhall not want, Pſal. xxiii. 1. Thus do you, when you find there is diſtreſs among the ſaints, then remember his title, King of ſaints. When you find diſorder and commotion among the nations, then remember his title, The King of nations. When you find darkneſs overſpreading your ſoul, then remember his title, I am the light of the world. When you find death and deadneſs taking place, then remember his title, I am the reſurrection and the life. When you are uneaſy with the confuſions and black aſpect of affairs in the church, then remember his title, The Head of the body the church; and Head over all things to it: The government is upon his ſhoulders. Know, that as Chriſt and the promiſe is yours in the goſpel-offer and publication to be believed in, reſted upon; ſo Chriſt is ſo far yours in poſſeſſion, as you, through grace, improve him, and reſt upon. The promiſe is ſo far yours in poſſeſſion as you improve it, and reſt upon it.

4. Direction I offer is, ſince the Father hath given all things into his hand, then, O let him be improven and employed by you for all things. Do not think you can put too much work in his hand, or that you can give him too many things ado for you. If you believe the Father hath given all things into his hand, you may be ſure you are welcome to employ him in all things: and the more buſineſs you have to put in his hand, the more welcome. You may come to him not only with all your ſpiritual affairs, and truſt him for all things that concern wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption; but alſo with all your temporal affairs; for the promiſe, in Chriſt, is a promiſe of the life that now is, and of that which is to come, 1 Tim. iv. 8. Many profeſs to rely on Chriſt for eternal ſalvation, and yet they dare not truſt unto him for their temporal proviſion; and ſo diſcover the rottenneſs of their faith, in that they cannot depend on him for all things. It is ſaid, 1 John iv. 20. He that loveth not his brother, whom he hath ſeen, how can he love God, whom he hath not ſeen? So may we ſay, he that cannot truſt in Chriſt for things temporal, in this world; how can he truſt in him for things eternal, in the other world? Why then, In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he will direct thy ſteps. You may go to his table with an eye to him for his conduct and bleſſing, even in temporal affairs: and if you can truſt him in theſe, it will be a good evidence that you can truſt him, indeed, in the affairs of your eternal ſalvation alſo. Is there any remarkable change of circumſtances in your life and lot in this world, wherein you would have his conduct and countenance? Are you a miniſter? and would you be a bleſſing to the pariſh where God is ordering your lot? Are you a private Chriſtian? and would you be a bleſſing to the place or family wherein God may appoint your lot? Why, behold he hath the bleſſing of Abraham to beſtow upon you; I will bleſs thee, and thou ſhalt be a bleſſing, Gen. xii. 2. If you own that the reins of providence are in his hand, as well as all things elſe, then come to him, and employ him in all things that pertain to life and godlineſs both.

5. Direction is, ſince the Father hath given all things into Chriſt's hand, then, in coming to him, not only come that he may GIVE all things to you, that you need, but that he may BE all things to you that you want. Not only that he may give you life; but that he himſelf may be your life: not only that he may give you ſalvation; but that he himſelf may be your ſalvation: not only that he may bring you to reſt and happineſs; but that he himſelf may be your reſt and happineſs, both by the way here, and at the end of the way hereafter. Look to Chriſt, not only to give you all, but to be your all; for he is not only the way to life, but the life itself: I am the way, the truth, and the life. "As I de- "fire, says one, never to be happy, if Christ "be not able to bring me to happiness; so I "desire no greater, no better happiness, than "what Christ is, and can be to me." O Sirs, he is all, and there is all in him; all to justify, all to sanctify, all to glorify, all to fill and satisfy, all to delight and solace the largest faculties of the immortal soul: In his presence there is fulness of joy. The highest happiness here is, Christ in us the hope of glory; and the highest happiness hereafter is, Christ, even to be for ever with the Lord. The thief on the cross had this preached to him, This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise; to be in Paradise, is not happiness; to be with angels there, is not happiness; but to be with Christ there, this is heaven and happiness. The more distinct that faith is in choosing Christ to be the supreme rest, the more complete is that faith. The language of faith comes to maturity; "O! since God and all his "fulness is in Christ: it is Christ alone that is "my life, all my salvation, all my hope, all "my righteousness, all my strength, all my "comfort, all my confidence, all my hap- "piness, and all my heaven: Whom have I in "heaven but thee? and there is none in all the earth "whom I desire besides thee."

not

6. Direction, for regulating faith is, since all things are given into his hand, and are unchangeably and eternally in his hand, then let coming to him, through grace be your continual exercise, your daily trade; the fountain is ever full and overflowing; and the oftener you come with your empty vessels, so much the better. Think not faith lies in one single act; if you would be very sure of Christ, you should believe in him, and embrace him every day; yea, and as oft as, through grace, you can, every day. Having once come to Christ, your life should be a life of coming closely and constantly to him, 1 Pet. ii. 4. It is not only to be acted at the table of the Lord, when you sit there; it may be acted, perhaps, as profitably and pleasanly before you go to the table, or afterwards, in hearing, or singing, in public or in secret; and, as the second edition corrects the errors of the first, so after acts of believing many times correct the defects of the first act. We are told, John v. 13. The man that was healed wist not who it was that healed him; and the man cured of his blindness, John ix. 36. knew not who he was, till the Lord met with him again: and, indeed, the longer a man hath Christ's company, the longer and sweeter are his manifestations of himself: ever day's renewing of our application to Christ by faith, and closing with him, would make every day to be a day of espousals; and every day of espousals would be a day of the gladness of his heart, and of yours too. I think there is ground for this in that promise, I will betroth thee unto me for ever, Hos. ii. 19. What is that? I suppose we may take this view of it, not only shall the marriage-relation be indissolveable; but also the marriage-solemnity shall be perpetual; I will be for ever betrothing thee unto me; the manifestations of my love shall never fade, never languish, but be always fresh and full, like that of the day of espousals; and every new manifestation thereof like a new espousals.——So much for directions in this matter.

Now, my friends, to come to a close, may I ask, What entertainment have you given to the Son of God, who hath all things given into his hand? Or, what room hath he made for himself into your hearts? If you should hear of a sovereign water, that could cure all diseases, what flocking of people would there be to that water? Here is that sovereign water, Christ alone, that can cure all diseases; yea, and supply all wants; and he is the great ordinance of God, the great institution and appointment of the Father for the relief of sinners, in all cases: Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you, John vi. 27. There is the hand from which you may have it. But how shall I get it from him? Why, it follows, Him hath God the Father sealed: Him hath God the Father appointed. He is the great ordinance and appointment of the Father for the very things you want: God hath set him forth to be a propitiation; set him forth to be a righteousness for guilty sinners; set him forth to be a robe for naked sinners; set him forth to be a laver for filthy sinners; set him forth to be a ladder between heaven and earth, that sinners may get up to the everlasting enjoyment of God. He hath set him forth to be all things; to be wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, redemption, and all things for us; and this in infinite love to him and us: The Father loves him, and has given all things into his hand. Why, say you, but I cannot see his hand with all things in it. Why, man, by this gospel, which you hear, he is reaching down his hand, with all things in it, that you may take hold of it in this word of grace. Will you tell me, what way would you have the invisible God to put out his hand towards you? Infinite wisdom has thought this the best way; and if you be not so grossly ignorant as to think of seeing the infinite invisible God, with bodily eyes, what better way can you conceive for him to stretch out his arm, and reach out his hand to you? Would you have him speaking to you by some glorious angel of heaven? Why, this way hath been tried, and their appearance was terrifying. Would you have him putting out his hand in a flame of fire? Why, this was once done to Moses in the bush; but the poor man fell a quaking. Or, again, would you have God putting out his hand, or uttering his voice to you by thunder and lightening, and thick clouds, and darkness? Why, this was the way he took at mount Sinai, and all the camp of Israel fell a trembling and crying, O! let not God speak, but Moses; if he will speak to us, let him do it by a man like ourselves: and, O Sirs, if you knew God, this is just the very way you would have him speaking to you; and behold it is just by a poor mortal worm like yourselves, that you may not be frightened at his words. It is true, it may be, the devil and the world have been busy to fill your hearts with prejudices against the poor feeble instruments, who preach this gospel to you; but whatever you think of us, and, for Christ's sake, I beg you reckon no more of us than of poor earthen vessels, bearing a treasure to you; only, never let the view of the baseness and insignificancy of the vessel make you to despise and reject the treasure we are bearing to you; a treasure worth ten thousand, thousand, thousand worlds; and wo is me, if you be only staring upon the poor poor preacher, and have not your eyes open, your underſtandings enlightened to ſee the treaſure of unſearchable riches brought to your hand by this goſpel, and brought to the very door of your heart! Rom. x. 8.

My friends, I look upon you, as I do upon myſelf, to be a company of dying worms; and am dealing with you in the name of the living God, the living Jeſus, that you may live for ever in him. We are all going to the grave; where our neareſt friends and forefathers have gone before us. I ſuppoſe there are few here but have either a father or a mother, a huſband, a wife, a brother, a ſiſter, a child, a near and dear friend, lying in the cold bed of the grave; and, in a few years, or days, theſe bodies of yours will ly rotting in the duſt with them. Now, O man, woman; when your body is to be laid in the duſt, would you have your ſoul laid in the boſom of Chriſt? Behold he is now opening his boſom, and opening his heart, that you may enter in: and if your heart were opening to let him in this day, it might yield ſuch a joyful reflection in the hour of death, "O! I think glorious Chriſt drew "out my heart to him at ſuch a communion "in Dunfermline; and therefore, O death, "where is thy ſting? I hope to live for ever in "ſpite of thee."

My dear friends, it is not only a door of utterance to ſpeak to you that we have been ſeeking to have at this occaſion, but a door of entrance; and Chriſt's entering into your heart by the power of his eternal Spirit. And, O is he come? Is he come; yea, or not? Are you welcoming the Father's Beloved, that hath all things in his hand; ſaying, Bleſſed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord? When he is welcoming you to come to him, are you welcoming him to come to you? Can you ſay, He hath perſuaded me, and I am perſuaded? Have you found him riding in this chariot of the word of grace; riding into your heart, and making it fly open to him, ſaying, "None but Chriſt, none but "Chriſt; O! a thouſand worlds are not to be "laid in balance with him." Is there never a heart here ſet a burning and glowing in your boſom towards a precious Chriſt? I am confident there is ſome; but, wo is me, that all the hearts in this houſe, are not ſet in a fire of love towards a lovely Jeſus! O what a joyful ſound may this be in the ears of poor ſinners! Chriſt, and all things in his hand, as a pledge of his Father's love to him and you! and this bleſſed bargain offered freely to you! Ho! every one that thirſteth, come to theſe waters; he that hath no money come; Come without money, and without price! O Sirs, the beſt penny-worth, the nobleſt bargain that ever mortal ears heard tell of! All things for nothing! all things for nothing! and this to be had by you, ſinner, who are leſs than nothing, and worſe than nothing! Though you have an empty purſe; yet you need not be a baſhful merchant here; for the more poor and empty that you are, the welcomer to him that hath all things in his hand. Chriſt requires nothing as a price of his fulneſs, but want, and worthleſſneſs, and miſery: It is for the ſupply of ſuch that he hath this fulneſs. Say not then that you have no right to it; for God offers it to you, and you need it; and there is right enough. If you ſay, Was he able, in his humbled ſtate, when he came in the fleſh? And is he not able in his exalted ſtate, when he comes in the Spirit, to deſtroy the works of the devil? I am not only poor, but perverſe; and am afraid of hell, becauſe I have ſinned to the uttermoſt. Why, he that hath all things, hath all power, and is able to ſave to the uttermoſt: your uttermoſt is great, but God's uttermoſt is infinitely greater. Say not, Satan hath confirmed his right to you by your long trade of ſinning; for, Chriſt owns no preſcription of that kind; and it is his errand here this day to come and deſtroy the works of the devil: for this cauſe was the Son of God manifeſted.

Is any here thinking, "Yea, but I am an a-"poſtate; guilty of many relapſes; may not "I deſpair?" No, no, man; he that hath all things in his hand, has a plaiſter for all ſores; and one for a falling ſickneſs among the reſt: I will heal your backſlidings, and love you freely. Though you have played the harlot with many lovers, yet return; though you have run to the devil, to your luſts and idols, yet come to me. "But "is it poſſible that there is a door of hope for "me when, notwithſtanding, all that you have "ſaid, I find all things wrong with me?" Why, man, will you tell me, what ſtate were all things into, when the Father put them in Chriſt's hand? I ſuppoſe all things were wrong by the fall of Adam; the devil was rejoicing, ſin was raging, death was reigning, juſtice was flaming, hell was gaping, and all things were wrong; and then the Father put them all in Chriſt's hand, that he might ſet them right. Why, then, did the Father love the Son, and give all things into his hand, even in that ſtate? Then, for the love of Chriſt Jeſus, put all things that are wrong with you, into his hand, that he may right them, for well can he do it. And as the Father did put honour upon him by doing ſo, and glorified his Son; ſo this is the way for you to honour and glorify Chriſt: and as in this way you ſhall have everlaſting life by him, ſo he ſhall have everlaſting honour by you, 2 Theſſ. i. 13.

If after all, you ſay, "You cannot receive him, "you cannot believe, you cannot come to him." "Well, it is true, you can do nothing; but there is ſomething I would aſk, if you can do, and that is, "Can you refuſe him? Can you reject him? "Can you ſtand out againſt him? Can your "hearts ſay, for all that you have heard of him, "that you care not for him, that you are better "pleaſed with the world, and your luſts?" If you cannot for your heart do theſe things, then I hope you ſhall be able to believe in him; for faith does not ly in your doing any thing, but in your employing Chriſt to do all, and ſaying, "He, that hath all things in his hand, "muſt do all things for me." Faith is never truly acted under a ſenſe of ability to believe, but under a ſenſe of utter inability; and therefore, if you can ſay, "Though I find my own "weakneſs and inability to believe, yet, I think, "by this revelation of Chriſt, made to me, "God hath made me willing, that Chriſt, who "hath all things in his hand, ſhould be all "things to me, and do all things for me; will-"ing, with a thouſand good wills, that he "ſhould put all things that are evil out of "me, and put all things that are good with-"in me; and willing that he ſhould be all "things that relate to wiſdom, and illuminate "all things that relate to righteouſneſs and "juſtification; all things that relate to holi-"neſs and ſanctification; and all things that "relate " relate to happineſs and complete redempti-

" on." Is is ſo with you? Then you have got a heart to join hand with him that hath all things in his hand; and you may gladly go to a communion table, and get the bargain ſealed between him and you; and you may boaſt and glory in your all-ſufficient Head and Huſband, whom God hath furniſhed in this manner. The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.

SERMON LVI.

The Law of GOD's Houſe. *

EZEKIEL xliii. 12.

This is the law of the houſe; upon the top of the mountain, the whole limit thereof round about ſhall be moſt holy: behold, this is the law of the houſe.

IT is moſt ſuitable and neceſſary, that theſe who have been making a ſolemn profeſſion of their being of the houſhold of faith; who have been eating and drinking in God's houſe, as fellow-citizens with the ſaints, and of the houſhold of God, ſhould know the order and law of the houſe: and, therefore, I lay before you a ſhort ſum of it, very emphatically here expreſſed; This is the law of the houſe; upon the top of the mountain, the whole limit thereof round about ſhall be moſt holy: behold, this is the law of the houſe.

In the beginning of this chapter we have an account of the glory of God filling the temple, particularly ver. 5.; and then a promiſe of God's continuing his preſence in his church, ver. 7, 8. to the purging them from their idolatry, corruption, and defilement, which here they are put in mind of, for their conviction and humiliation. From ver. 10. and downward, we have Iſrael exhorted to faith and repentance; Shew the houſe to the houſe of Iſrael, that they may be aſhamed of their iniquity. The temple was a token of God's kindneſs, and ſymbol of his preſence, as well as a type of Chriſt the true temple, and of the New-teſtament church. And when he injoins to ſhew the houſe to the houſe of Iſrael, that they may be aſhamed, we may remark, that the way wherein a gracious God ſhames people for their ſin, is to ſhow them his kindneſs and gracious preſence: thus he puts them out of countenance, and ſets them a-bluſhing, chap. xvi. 63. That thou mayſt remember and be confounded, and never open thy mouth any more becauſe of thy ſhame, when I am pacified towards thee, for all that thou haſt done, ſaith the Lord God.—Again, ver. 11. If they be aſhamed of all that they have done, then ſhow them the form of the houſe, and the faſhion thereof, and the goings out thereof, and the comings in thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and all the laws thereof: and write it in their ſight, that they may keep the whole form thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and do them. When his kindneſs makes them aſhamed of their ſin, then he ſhows them more and more of his kindneſs, and grants them more and more of his gracious preſence. In the cloſe of ver. 11. Write it in their ſight, that they keep the whole form thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and do them. Here remark, that the privileges of God's houſe and people do not ſuperſede their duty, but bind them more ſweetly and ſtrictly thereunto; and therefore, obedience is here enjoined, and thereupon here is the rule laid down, This is the law of the houſe; upon the top of the mountain, the whole limit thereof round about ſhall be moſt holy: behold, this is the law of the houſe.

In which words we may notice the four following particulars.

1. What is the matter of the law of God's houſe, namely, holineſs; that all the inhabitants be holy: for, holineſs becometh God's houſe for ever.

2. The degree of that holineſs which becometh his houſe, viz. that it be MOST holy: the perfection of holineſs is required.

3. Notice the extent thereof, from the top of the mountain, the whole limit thereof round about. Formerly, only the ſanctuary was moſt holy; but now in the goſpel-times, to which this prophecy hath a reference, the whole mount of the houſe ſhall be ſo, and the whole limit thereof; all the courts, all the chambers, and every part of the houſe, ſhall be as the moſt holy place.

4. The double aſſurance given us concerning this ordinance of God's houſe, This is the law of the houſe; and again, Behold, this is the law of the houſe.

By the moſt holy in the text, we are to underſtand, either the privilege of the houſe of God in the goſpel-times, namely, that all believers in Chriſt have acceſs unto the holy of holies, and boldneſs to enter into the holieſt, Heb. x. 19: they being all ſpiritual prieſts, a royal prieſthood, they have acceſs, not in the virtue of the blood of bulls and goats, but in the virtue of the blood of Jeſus; and with this advantage alſo above the high-prieſt under the law, that, whereever we are, we have acceſs through Chriſt to the Father: or, by the moſt holy, we are to underſtand the duty of the church of God, or children of his houſe, that they be moſt holy; and indeed the former privilege lays the ſtrongeſt foundation for, and brings them under the ſtricteſt obligation to, the duty. According to the view we have here of the moſt holy, accordingly we are to underſtand what is to be meant by the law of the houſe.

If by moſt holy, we underſtand the privilege of acceſs to the moſt holy place; then, by the law of the houſe, we are to underſtand the law of grace,

* This ſermon was preached on the Sabbath evening, immediately after the celebration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, at Dunfermline, July 16th, 1732. It hath undergone two impreſſions.

grace, the law of faith, the gospel, or God's act of grace towards us, expressed in the promise.

Again, if by the most holy, we understand the quality of the church, and the duty of all the children of the house, that they be most holy; then, by the law of the house, we are to understand the precept of the moral law as a rule of holiness, duty, and obedience toward God. Both these, I suppose, may be included; and the former as the means of the latter. Gospel-privileges making way for gospel-holiness, according to the order of the covenant of grace, in opposition to that of works, where Do, and Live, made duty go before the privilege; whereas here, Live, and Do, makes the privilege the foundation of duty, and the strong basis on which all gospel-holiness stands.

By the top of the mountain, and the whole limit thereof round about, we are to understand the universality of this holiness, and the extent both of that privilege of admission to the holy place, and of that obligation upon the privileged to be a holy people.

OBSERV. That universal holiness is so much the established law of God's house, that the whole family, being privileged with access to the most holy place, are thereupon under the strongest obligation to be the most holy people.

The proof of this doctrine I refer to the prosecution of it in the following method, as the Lord may assist.

I. I would speak a little of the house of God.
II. Hint at the nature of that holiness that is peculiar to the house of God.
III. Show that this is the law of the house; and why it is said to be so, again and again.
IV. Touch at the extent of this holiness required by the law of God's house, upon the top of the mountain, the whole limit thereof round about.
V. Consider a little the privilege of access to the most holy place.
VI. Show that this privilege obliges the whole to be the most holy people. And then,
VII. Make application of the whole in several uses.

I. I am first to speak a little of the house of God. The church is the house of God; If a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God? 1 Tim. iii. 5. And it is so called on several accounts;

1. God is the builder of it; He that built all things is God, Heb. iii. 4. The church is as glorious a piece of work as the building of heaven and earth; yea, more glorious. It is the work of glorious Omnipotence, to make life out of death; he makes these that were dead in sins to be living stones, 1 Pet. ii. 5. What shall one answer the messengers of the nations? That the Lord hath founded Zion, and the poor of his people shall trust in it, [or, BETAKE THEMSELVES TO IT,] Isa. xiv. 32.

2. Because God is the repairer of it; it is he that repairs the waste places, and the desolations of many generations, Isa. xii. 4. And this is also a glorious work; When the Lord shall build up Zion, he will appear in his glory, Psal. cii. 16. It is too glorious for a creature; he that is God as well as man hath the honour of it ascribed to him; He, even he shall build the temple of the Lord, and he shall bear the glory, Zech. vi. 13. He may raise up instruments, but he himself is the principal agent. Saints may weep for Zion, but the Lord must rebuild and repair it.

3. Because God is the dweller therein: he dwells there where he sets up his ordinances, though he confines not himself to places; In all places where I record my name, I will come to thee, and bless thee, Exod. xx. 24. God is known by his ordinances, as we are known by our names; The Lord hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation. This is my rest for ever; here will I dwell, for I have desired it, Psal. cxxxii. 13, 14.

4. Because God is the governor thereof: He alone gives laws of everlasting consequence, to destruction or salvation; There is one Lawgiver, who is able to save and to destroy, James iv. 12. The Lord is our Lawgiver. Popes and patrons may usurp a government of the church; but the Lord alone is the God of conscience; and the government is on his shoulders.

QUEST. Who are the MEMBERS of this house of God?

ANSW. The church is either visible or invisible. To the visible church on earth, belong all that have a visible and credible profession: and it is meet for us to judge that they are saints, as the apostle speaks to the Philippians, chap. i. 7. But we may be deceived; we know not the heart: therefore it concerns every professor to examine himself. — The invisible church is known to God only; Nevertheless, the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knows them that are his, 2 Tim. ii. 19. Well, but how shall I know myself to be one of them? Why, it follows, Let every one that nameth the name of Christ, depart from iniquity. To be of the household of God, is not to be a member of the Presbyterial government, nor a communicating member of such a congregation; but to be a member of Christ.

QUEST. What sort of a HOUSE is the church unto God?

ANSW. As it is, 1. His dwelling-house; of which already: so,

2. It is his pleasure-house; The Lord taketh pleasure in his people. O wonderful!

3. It is his treasure-house; for, The Lord's portion is his people, and Jacob the lot of his inheritance: though he cannot be enriched therewith, yet he reckons them his riches, his jewels, which he will make up at the last day.

4. The church is also his magazine-house; built for an armoury, whereon hang a thousand bucklers, all shields of mighty men. God's church is his castle; and, Salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks. Again,

5. It is his vessel-house, wherein all the vessels of mercy are hung; and Christ is the nail fastened in a sure place, on which they hang, Isa. xxii. 23, 24. Weak and strong are there.

6. It is also his banqueting-house, Song ii. 4. where he and they feed together; he feeds among the lilies, till the day break: and he sups with them, and they with him, Rev. iii. 20.

II. The next thing proposed, was, To hint at the nature of that holiness that is peculiar to the house of God. HOLINESS, in the ordinary sense wherein it is attributed to the church and children of God, may be viewed,

1. In its definition. And, I think, it may be thus defined, "A full renovation of our na-"tures, into the image of God, through Jesus "Christ, by the holy Spirit." It is called a new birth, a new creation, a new creature: If any man

be

be in Chriſt Jeſus, he is a new creature, 2 Cor. v. 21. We are his workmanſhip, created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works. It is the image of God, who is holineſs itſelf. It is a grace; yea, the conjunction and conſtellation of all the graces. It is a duty, and the ſum and ſubſtance of all duty.

2. We may view it in its ſpring; it is neither natural nor acquired. It is not to be taken up by the ſtrength of reaſon, nor the power of free-will, nor by the force of conviction and reſolution from within or without: nay, He that hath wrought us to the ſelf-ſame thing is God. It is not to be aſcribed to the virtue of ordinances, nor the worth of the inſtruments, but to the powerful efficiency of the holy Spirit of God; the ſanctifying Spirit. Art, nature, education, can do nothing here; it is not by might, nor by power, but by the Spirit of God, 1 Cor. vi. 11.

3. We may view it in the ſubject of it, and that is the believer in Chriſt, his whole man; The God of peace ſanctify you wholly; ſoul, body, and ſpirit, 1 Theſſ. v. 2. If ye aſk, Where is the ſeat of holineſs, in the head, or the heart, or the conſcience; in the inward or outward man? We reply, The ſeat of holineſs is not in any one of them, but in all of them: it is a leaven that leavens the whole lump. The holy man hath a ſanctified enlightened underſtanding, to diſcern ſpiritual things, which before he underſtood not; a ſanctified will, inclining to ſpiritual things, which before he hated; a ſanctified memory, to mind heavenly things, which before was only earthly; a ſanctified conſcience, awakened to check for ſin, and excite to duty; a ſanctified lip, to ſpeak of God, and to ſpeak to him, and for him; a ſanctified life, to glorify God.

4. We may view it in the parts of it, which are two; a ceaſing to do evil, and a learning to do good. The former is the privative, and the latter the poſitive part of it.—There is the privative part of holineſs, which is called mortification; that is, a heart purged from the love of every ſin, and a life purged from the practice of every ſin: ſin is left in the heart, but is not loved nor liked; nay, it is hated and diſliked: it may remain, but it cannot reign where holineſs is.—There is the poſitive part of holineſs, which is called vivification, or a living unto God, by a life of dependence on him, and a life of obedience to him. The man not only ceaſes to do evil, but he learns to do well. It is, in ſhort, a walking with God, a walking in Chriſt, and a walking in the Spirit.——After this hint of the nature of holineſs, I proceed,

III. To the third thing, which was, To ſhew that this is the law of the houſe; and why it is here ingeminate and doubled, with a behold, this is the law of the houſe. For clearing this head, you would conſider three things; 1. What law it is that is called the law of the houſe. 2. How holineſs is the law of the houſe. 3. The reaſon why this is redoubled.

1ſt, What law it is that is called the law of the houſe. For the clearing of this, ye would conſider three laws that the houſe of God hath always had ſome concern in.

1. There is a law from which the houſe is delivered; that is, the law of works, or the covenant of works: this is the law they are delivered from, Ye are not under the law, but under grace, Rom. vi. 14. They are not under it, to be either juſtified or condemned; they are neither under the command of it, to be juſtified by their obedience; nor under the threatening of it, to be condemned for their diſobedience. Their title to eternal life ſtands upon Chriſt's doing and obedience; therefore they have nothing to do with the Do and Live of that covenant: their ſecurity from eternal death ſtands upon Chriſt's dying and ſuffering; therefore they have nothing to do with the penalty of that covenant, If thou do not, thou ſhalt die. Chriſt has delivered them from the curſe of the law, being made a curſe for them. The law of works required holineſs, indeed, in perfection; but in ſuch a form, and under ſuch a penalty, that, if there were no other law but this, we ſinners and breakers of this law, would be irrecoverably loſt. By this law, holineſs is loſt, becauſe the law is violated; and therefore, by the deeds thereof, no fleſh can be juſtified in God's ſight: for ſinners to be juſtified by works, or by the law, is a contradiction; the law can never juſtify a breaker of it, unleſs he hath a perfect righteouſneſs from another quarter and ſource than himſelf: Therefore,

2. As there is a law from which the houſe is delivered, viz. the law of works; ſo there is a law by which the houſe is recovered and relieved, namely, the law of faith, or the covenant of grace. Of both theſe laws, which are clearly diſtinguiſhed by the apoſtle, you read, Rom. iii. 27. Where is boaſting then? it is excluded; By what law? of works? nay, but by the law of faith. This law of faith is nothing elſe but the covenant of grace, and the doctrine of the goſpel. In a word, it is the promiſe, Gal. iii. 21. And it is called a law, both in oppoſition to the covenant of works, to ſhow, that believers are not under the law of works, but the law of grace; and alſo to ſhew, that the free promiſes of the goſpel are a law that God makes to himſelf in the behalf of ſinners, or an act of the parliament of heaven. Acts of grace paſt there require no condition on the ſinner's part, but only of the Surety, whoſe blood and righteouſneſs is the condition of all the promiſes of God; which, therefore, are ſaid to be Yea and Amen in Chriſt, to the glory of God. And it is called a law of faith, becauſe the goſpel, properly, is not a law to be obeyed; but a law to be believed. It is not a law of commands, to be fulfilled by us; but a law of promiſes, to be fulfilled upon us, in a way of free grace: and therefore, here nothing is to be wrought or expected by works, but all things to be expected by grace, or believed upon the faithfulneſs of a promiſing God; To him that worketh not, but believeth on him that juſtifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteouſneſs, Rom. iv. 5.—This law of faith is ſo much the law of God's houſe, that this is the very law that erects the houſe: it ſtands upon the law of faith; I mean, upon the free promiſe of God, which is the object and ground of faith. —All the privileges and immunities of the houſe are owing to the law of faith.—By the law of faith, or goſpel-promiſe, ſinners are warranted to come into the moſt holy place, and ſo they come to be made the moſt holy people.—In this law, holineſs is promiſed; by it, holineſs is wrought.—In this law of faith, faith itſelf is promiſed, or grace and ſtrength to believe; Thy people ſhall be willing in the day of thy power, Pſal. cx. 3. When I am lifted up, I will draw all men after me, John xii. 32. This abſolute promiſe is indefinitely diſpenſed to ſinners, that they may look unto and rely upon this conquering quering power and drawing grace of God.—— By this law of faith, I say, the house is delivered. Again,

3. There is a law by which the house is governed; namely, the law of love: I mean, the moral law, as it is a rule of life and holiness, not a rule of acceptance, (this were to make it a covenant of works) but a rule of obedience, in the hand of Christ. This is the law, which, by Moses, is reduced to ten words, ten commandments: and I call it a law of love, because our Lord Jesus reduced it into two words; namely, love to God, and love to our neighbour: And the apostle reduced it to one word, viz. Love; the end of the commandment is love, 1 Tim. i. 5. And again, Love is the fulfilling of the law, by which the house is governed. It may be called a law of love, because, as love is the cord, by which God draws his household to obedience; so love is the motive that engages them to obey it: they obey, not from slavish fear, like these that are under the yoke of the law, as a covenant; but love, which casts out fear. Christ's yoke is easy, because it is a loving yoke; not driving by violence, but drawing them kindly by the cord of love in every duty; not requiring rigorously, under pain of death and damnation, but constraining sweetly with delight to do the will of God. It is not a grievous law, requiring obedience, but giving no strength, and seeking brick without straw; but a gracious law, lined with love and grace, promising strength to obey, working in them both to will and to do. Hence his commandments are not grievous; duties are not gravamenous; ordinances are not a heavy burden; but rather like a chariot paved with love for the daughters of Jerusalem.——This is the law by which the house is governed pleasantly and peaceably; for he that hath the government upon his shoulders, is the Prince of peace.

The consideration of these three laws may clear your view about the law of the house: the law, from which the house is delivered, is the law of works, or covenant of works; the law, by which the house is delivered and recovered, is the law of faith, or covenant of grace; and the law, by which the house is governed, is the law of love, or moral law, as a rule in the hand of a loving Jesus. Now, by the violation of the first of these, holiness was lost; by the publication of the second, holiness is restored; and by the promulgation of the third, holiness is required and established as a rule, for directing the household in the way of holiness. This leads me, 2dly, To the second question here, viz. How HOLINESS is the law of the house? For clearing this, it is necessary to remember, that the threefold law that I have mentioned, is fitly presented to us in the word of God. For, by the first, we are convinced of our unholiness; By the law is the knowledge of sin. By the second, we are enlightened to see where holiness is to be had, namely, in the holy covenant, the holy Jesus, whom God hath given to be the covenant of the people, as the gospel declares. By the third, we are directed in the way of holiness. The first is not the law of the house; for, they are delivered from it; only God makes use of it as a mean subservient to bring sinners to Christ, or to bring them to his house, where the only law is the two last; the law of faith, and the law of love. Now, the spiritual house of Christ is a holy building, where holy faith, and holy obedience, comprehend all the holiness of the house: and, because it is to be built up in the most holy faith, therefore the law of faith, or covenant of grace, is the law of the house, discovering the object and the ground of faith: and, because it is to be built up in a most holy obedience, therefore the law of love, or moral law, as a rule, is the law of the house, directing and binding them to this obedience: in the former, holiness is promised; in the latter, holiness is injoined.

1. As to the law of faith, or the gospel, holiness is to be considered as the privilege of the house; and by this law of faith it is viewed as a purchased privilege, as a promised privilege, as a privilege freely conferred, and a privilege freely continued.

2. As to the law of love, or moral law, holiness is to be considered as the duty of the house: for, holiness is the matter of the law; holiness is the end of it; holiness is the sum of it: it forbids nothing but unholiness, it requires nothing but holiness; As he that has called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation; because it is written, Be ye holy, for I am holy, 1 Pet. i. 15. The law of love must be a holy law; for, as all unholiness is comprised in enmity to God and man, so all holiness is comprised in love to God and man.

3dly, The third question here was, Why is it INGEMINATE and doubled? This is the law of the house; Behold, this is the law of the house: Why is it twice proclaimed in the text?

1. It imports, That this law of the house respecting holiness, is an indispensible law: therefore it is notified; and again notified with a behold, that none may pretend ignorance. The moral law, materially considered, is eternally binding.

2. It imports, That ye are deaf and dull of hearing; or, hearing, we do not hear; but, like the deaf adder, stop our ear at the voice of the charmer: and at the best are ready to forget that this is the law of the house. Therefore we are assured of it again and again.

3. It imports, That there is danger in neglecting this advertisement; and, in being remiss and slack in the study of holiness, it endangers the house; for, though the household of faith are all well intitled to heaven, and well secured from hell, yet the law of the house hath a sanction suitable to the children of the family; If his children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments; if they break my statutes, and keep not my commandments: then will I visit their transgressions with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes, Psal. lxxxix. 30,—32. The rod of God is terrible, even to his children.

4. It may import, That this is the beginning and the end of true religion: therefore, that this is the law of the house, is both at the beginning and the end of the text. Here is the preface, This is the law of the house; here is the conclusion of the whole matter, Behold, this is the law of the house. This boundary is set round about the house of God; and, HOLINESS TO THE LORD, must be the motto of the house, from the top to the bottom thereof. This leads,

IV. To the fourth thing proposed, namely, The extent of this law of holiness, Upon the top of the mountain, the whole limit thereof round about shall be most holy. I think, in general, this speaks out the universality of that holiness God calls for IN his house.—It should be universal subjectively, the whole heart, and all the faculties of the soul, should

ſhould be engaged in the ſtudy of holineſs; we are to love the Lord our God, with all our heart, ſoul, ſtrength, and mind.—It ſhould be univerſal objectively, with reſpect to all the commands of God; Then ſhall I not be aſhamed, when I have reſpect to all thy commandments, without exception, without limitation.—It ſhould be univerſal intenſively, with the utmoſt intenſeneſs of ſoul, Following the Lord with full purpoſe of mind: I ſaid, I will take heed to my ways: I have ſworn, and I will perform it, That I will keep thy righteous judgments.—And it muſt be univerſal extenſively, with reſpect to all times and ſeaſons, companies and occaſions, places and circumſtances.——The law of the houſe binds to holineſs univerſal in all theſe reſpects.

But more particularly, the extent of this holineſs in the houſe of God, as here expreſſed, Upon the top of the mountain, the whole limit thereof round about, ſeems to me to import an univerſality, reſpecting every thing that relates TO the houſe of God, the church of God: the expreſſion ſuits the Old-teſtament diſpenſation, while the material temple ſtood upon the top of the mountain; but the goſpel-meaning thereof, as it reſpects the New-teſtament church, ſeems to be, that every thing about God's houſe, from the top to the bottom, ſhall be moſt holy, as becomes the ſpiritual temple of God. It ſays,

1. That all the officers ſhall be moſt holy; miniſters, elders, deacons; all that bear any veſſels in God's houſe; Be ye clean, ye that bear the veſſels of the Lord, Iſa. lii. 11. And hence, when God comes to purge and purify his church, he is ſaid particularly to purify the ſons of Levi, Mal. iii. 3. Surely we, whoſe office is to go up to the top of the mount, ought to have holy feet to tread ſuch a holy place; that it may be ſaid of us, How beautiful, on the mountains, are the feet of them that preach the goſpel of peace! Alas! many officers in God's houſe among us, that have moſt of the beauty of holineſs about them, God is faſt taking them away. He ſeems to be taking away the gold and ſilver, and leaving the droſs: and, when he is taking down ſuch as were props and pillars in the houſe, what ſhall we think, but that the houſe is like to fall about our ears, and heavy judgments at the door, when the righteous are taken away from the evil to come! But,

2. It ſays, that all the members of the houſe ſhall be moſt holy, all the children of the family; Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy ſalvation cometh; and they ſhall call them the moſt holy people, the redeemed of the Lord, Iſa. lxii. 11. Every inhabitant of the houſe, every believer, every member of Chriſt, every profeſſor of Chriſt, every one that nameth the name of Chriſt, muſt depart from iniquity. It ſays, that, not only miniſters ſhould be holy, but people ſhould be holy; not only the top of the mount, but the whole limit thereof round about. All that enter within the walls of Zion muſt be holy, otherwiſe they are not indwellers, like children; but only incomers, like dogs; that ſhall be baniſhed out with diſgrace, and never admitted to the higher houſe.

3. It ſays, That all the courts and judicatories of the houſe ſhould be moſt holy; Synods moſt holy, and General Aſſemblies of the houſe, moſt holy; Upon the top of the mount, the whole limit thereof round about. When theſe courts and judicatories of the houſe, or Aſſemblies of the church, whether inferior or ſuperior ones, are moſt holy, and purged with the ſpirit of judgment, and ſpirit of burning, then they are intitled to Heaven's protection; The Lord will create upon every dwelling-place in mount Zion, and upon her aſſemblies, a cloud and ſmoke by day, and the ſhining of a flaming fire by night, Iſa. iv. 4, 5. But when in days of degeneracy, corruption, and defection, like ours †, they become moſt unholy, then they are expoſed to ruin and deſolation.

4. It ſays, That all the acts and ſtatutes of the houſe are to be moſt holy. And indeed the acts of Aſſemblies and Judicatories of the church are to be regarded only according to their holineſs, and agreeableneſs to the holy word of God; To the law and to the teſtimony; if they ſpeak not according to this word, it is becauſe there is no light in them, Iſa. viii. 20. Acts iſſued even from the top of the mountain, if they be not according to the law of the houſe, are to be rejected, oppoſed, and proteſted againſt, as the commandments of men, and not the commandments of God; In controverſy they ſhall ſtand in judgment, and they ſhall judge it according to my judgments; and they ſhall keep my laws and my ſtatutes in all mine aſſemblies, Ezek. xliv. 23, 24. And, indeed, it is but a diſmal time, when the children of Zion are obliged to * plead with their mother, and even proteſt againſt her acts and ſtatutes.

5. It ſays, That all the forms and ordinances of the houſe be moſt holy; I mean, the form of doctrine, the form of worſhip, the form of diſcipline, the form of government, that they be according to the ſcripture-pattern; as it was ſaid to Moſes concerning the form of the tabernacle, Look that thou make it after the pattern that was ſhewed thee in the mount, Exod. xxv. 40. compared with Acts vii. 44. Heb. viii. 5. The doctrine, ſound and lively; worſhip, pure and ſpiritual; diſcipline, pure and impartial; and

† At the time when this Sermon was preached, matters, both in the church and ſtate, were in a moſt deplorable condition: error in principle, and immorality in practice, every where abounding; a reliſh for true religion, and genuine piety, much upon the decline; a deviating from attained-to Reformation-purity, and a falling from firſt love, greatly upon the increaſe.

* This was a very remarkable year in the church, and gave æra to a very memorable event, viz. the SECESSION. Our Author here has his eye upon the conduct of the Aſſembly this year, [viz. 1732.] He uſually noticed any remarkable tranſactions that occurred at the time when he compoſed and delivered his diſcourſes: And therefore, as a key to this, and ſome other ſimilar paſſages, both in this and ſome ſubſequent diſcourſes, it may not be improper briefly to open up the matter. The church was, at this time, in imminent danger; for, not only a pernicious ſcheme of Arian, Arminian, and Socinian doctrine was prevailing, but ſeveral arbitrary Acts and Deciſions had been framed and paſſed in the Supreme Judicatory, and the Lord's heritage much oppreſſed and grieved, by the ſettlement of reclaiming and diſſenting congregations. To clear up the paſſage now before us, we may obſerve, that the Aſſembly's conduct this year was very ſingular and extremely arbitrary, in a double reſpect.—Several Miniſters, [forty-two in number] among whom our Author was one, gave in a ſubſcribed Repreſentation to the Aſſembly, for the redreſs of many of the ſteps of defection which the church had gone into. This Repreſentation, though juſt in itſelf, was refuſed ſo much as a hearing by the Aſſembly; whereupon ſuch of the Miniſters as were preſent, offered a proteſt for their exoneration, which was alſo refuſed to be marked. There was a petition of the ſame nature, ſigned by many hundred Elders and Chriſtian people given in to the ſame Aſſembly, and ſhared the ſame fate.—The Aſſembly did not ſiſt here, but paſſed an Act concerning the planting of vacant churches, which lodged the deciſive power of electing Miniſters, in a conjunct meeting of elders and heritors, (and ſo depriving the Chriſtian people of their juſt right) no other qualification being required of ſaid heritors but their being Proteſtants, however much diſaffected to the government both in church and ſtate. This was matter of deep regret to many, and truly afflicting to ſeveral Miniſters, who accordingly proteſted againſt the Aſſembly; ſome of whom were afterwards ſeverely ſentenced for their faithfully teſtifying againſt theſe corruptions and incroachments.

government,

government, beautiful and orderly, is the outward glory of the church: and God hath said, Upon all the glory there shall be a defence, Isa. iv. 5. But in so far as the fences are taken away, in as far is the glory departed from Israel, and the ark of God taken by the Philistines, within or without the house. The holiness of doctrine, worship, discipline, and government of the house, comprehending the top of the mount, and the whole limit thereof, ought to be defended, and contended for, that it be not spoiled, corrupted, and defaced by these who make themselves famous for lifting up hammers and axes upon the carved work; and the rather, that the church of Scotland, particularly, has been so often in our Reformation-days solemnly sworn, by National Covenant, to the defence thereof, against all antichristian, unscriptural, and unholy forms and orders whatsoever.

6. It says, That all the chambers and rooms of the house should be most holy; I mean, all the ordinances of the house, whether public, or private, or secret; which are like so many chambers and rooms of the house to be kept clean and most holy; for, He will be sanctified of all them that come nigh him, Lev. x. 3. The outer rooms and public chambers of solemn ordinances, word and sacraments; the more private chambers of spiritual conference and family-worship; and the secret chambers of retired devotion, the chamber of meditation, the chamber of prayer, shall all be most holy, and occupied in the most holy manner. Not only all the public rooms, but all the secret closets of the house, shall be most holy; not only the top of the mount, but the whole limit thereof round about; whatever part of the house we enter, is to be most holy, in the exercise of faith, love, and all the holy graces of the Spirit, and in spiritual endeavours, through grace, to get all that are about the house made holy, and all things that are within the house, and without the house, and round about the house, the top of the mount, the whole limit thereof round about; this is the law of the house. The Lord knows how little it is observed now!

V. The next thing proposed, was, To touch a little at the privilege of access to the most holy place. This being a special part of the gospel that lies in the text, hid under this Old-testament phrase; I would open it up in these two or three remarks.

1. "That access to the most holy place, is nothing "else but access to the most holy God; and, there-"fore, it is the most glorious privilege that a "sinner can be advanced unto." The sanctuary, or holy of holies in the Old Testament temple, was a symbol and type of the gracious presence of God; and to come to that, was to come to God: and the holy of holies is, in the New Testament, called a throne of grace, Heb. iv. 16. And what is it to come to the throne of grace, or mercy-seat, but just to come to a merciful God, a gracious God in Christ? Therefore it is there said, Let us come boldly to the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need. Where will we find mercy or grace, but with a merciful and gracious God? This is then the most holy place to which there is access.

Remark 2. "That access to the most holy "place is by the blood of Jesus." The priests, under the law, went into the holy place with blood of bulls and goats; but Christ, our High-priest, having entered, by his own blood, into the holy place, Heb. ix. 12. We have boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, Heb. x. 19. that is, in the faith of his blood; a justice-satisfying blood, and sin-expiating blood: even we guilty sinners have freedom to come to a just and holy God, and boldness to expect grace and glory, as the purchase of that blood; even that blood which is God-glorifying, sinner-sanctifying, heaven-purchasing.

Remark 3. "That access to the most holy "place is the privilege of the whole church." The whole family, all within the house, have access either proclaimed or obtained: All within the visible church, though but in the outer court, have access proclaimed; Whosoever will, let him come. And all within the church invisible, viz. Believers, being in the inner-court, have access obtained, and daily admission to the holy place. Only the high-priest under the law had access to the holy place, and that once a year only; but now all believers being a royal priesthood, and made kings and priests unto their God, have access, not once a year, Heb. ix. 7. nor once a month, but, perhaps, once a-week, once a-day; yea, several times a-day; perhaps, twenty times in one communion-day; even as oft as they get grace to act faith upon a God in Christ. This privilege of the whole church is here represented by the top of the mount, and the whole limit thereof round about, having the privilege of the holy place.

Remark 4. "The privilege of access to the "most holy place, is not only now extended to "all persons within the house, but also every "where, in all places where the church or chil-"dren of God are." Not only the top of the mount, but the whole limit round about, is the most holy place. Under the law, only the sanctuary was the most holy, but under the gospel the whole mountain shall be so, and the whole limit thereof round about; in as much as, where-ever the believer is, in public or in secret, there he hath access to the most holy place, the most holy God; according to what our Lord said to the woman of Samaria, John iv. 21. Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father; but the true worshippers every where shall worship him in spirit and in truth. The holy place was formerly hid in a corner of the temple; for, the holy God hid himself in a corner, as it were, under the dark dispensation: but now the holy place, the holy God, is every where to be seen, and enjoyed in Christ. The vail of the temple is rent in twain, by the death of Christ; and the holy of holies is exposed, that whosoever will may come and see, come and partake, come and enjoy God through Jesus Christ, through whom the door of access is opened to us Gentiles, as well as it was to the Jews; Through him we both have access, by one Spirit, unto the Father, Eph. ii. 8. The most holy place is not now confined to the top of the mountain, where the temple stood, but extended to the whole mountain, and the whole limit thereof round about. This is the law of the house, the privilege of the house according to the law of faith, or covenant of grace, wherein the grace of God, that bringeth salvation, hath appeared unto all men. O has it so appeared unto you this day, as that you find that you have got access to the most holy place! Then surely you are obliged to be the most holy people. Hence,

VI. The

VI. The fixth head propoſed, was, To ſhow, that this privilege of acceſs to the moſt holy place, obliges the whole houſhold of God, that are thus privileged, to be the moſt holy people. This grace of God that hath appeared to all men, does not, cannot, lead to licentiouſneſs, but teaches to deny all ungodlineſs and worldly luſts; and to live ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly in this preſent world, Tit. ii. 11, 12. This privilege of acceſs to the moſt holy place brings us, not only under greater obligations to holineſs than Pagans, that are far from the moſt holy place; not only under greater obligations to holineſs than profeſſors, who only are admitted to the outer-court, and not to the moſt holy place; and not only under greater obligations to holineſs than Jews, who were only admitted, by their high-prieſt, to the holy place in the material temple; but alſo it lays us under greater obligations to holineſs than Adam in a ſtate of innocency, ſuppoſe we were as innocent as he was before the fall, and that the covenant of works were on the field, promiſing life to our perfect obedience; for, when you are admitted to the moſt holy place, then you ſee everlaſting righteouſneſs, and perfect obedience wrought to your hand, and eternal life purchaſed to your hand; and therefore are obliged, by the law of love and gratitude, to ſerve the God that hath ſaved you, and not to work hard for your life. And which of theſe are the ſtrongeſt ties to love and obedience, namely, to find God ſaying, Do, and do perfectly, and you ſhall have eternal life for your pains? Or, to find God giving you life, ſalvation, righteouſneſs, and all in Chriſt; and, from the faith thereof, kindling love in your ſoul, and conſtraining you to ſerve him in gratitude? If this be the ſtrongeſt obligation to holineſs, then believers in Chriſt are under ſtronger obligations to holineſs than ever Adam was in a ſtate of innocency.

Acceſs to the moſt holy place obliges us to be the moſt holy people, both effectively and argumentatively.

1. Effectively and powerfully; for, when one hath acceſs to the moſt holy place, then he ſees the glory of God; and, Beholding this glory, he is changed into the ſame image, from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord, 2 Cor. iii. 18. Thus, what the law teaches preceptively, the goſpel teaches effectively. It is ſaid of theſe that are mounted to the upper ſtory of the houſe of God, to heaven, they are like him, becauſe they ſee him as he is. Being come to the moſt holy place, they ſee the moſt holy God, and are made like him in holineſs. This privilege is commenced in the lower houſe: the more that believers ſee the moſt holy God in the moſt holy place, or the glory of God in the face of Chriſt, the more they are like unto him. When they come boldly to the throne of grace, or to the holy of holies, then they obtain mercy, and find grace to help them, and grace to ſtrengthen them in all the duties of holineſs. All their holineſs comes from that moſt holy place, to which they have acceſs. And thus it obliges them to holineſs, ſweetly, powerfully, neceſſarily, and effectively.

2. Argumentatively, it obliges them to be the moſt holy people; for, acceſs to the moſt holy place furniſhes them with an argument drawn from equity; What! ſhall we, that are dead to ſin, live any longer therin? Rom. vi. 2. Have we, by acceſs to God, got a dead ſtroak given to the tyrant ſin? and, ſhall we return to ſlavery? God forbid. Acceſs to the moſt holy place furniſhes with an argument drawn from gratitude; Shall I thus requite the Lord, O fooliſh and unwiſe? Is not he my Father that hath bought me? Deut. xxxii. 6. Has he allowed me acceſs to him, and ſhall I ſpurn at ſuch bowels, and ſpit on the face of ſuch love?—At the moſt holy place the man ſees that there is mercy with God that he may be feared and obeyed, and ſo is encouraged to duty; and there he ſees that it is God that worketh in him both to will and to do: there he ſees that the law he is under, is not a law of works, but a law of love, where all the commands are love-commands; If ye love me, keep my commandments: and the threatenings, love-threatenings, not of vindictive wrath, but of fatherly diſpleaſure. The law-threatening of hell, and vindictive wrath, works wrath and enmity, which is the height of diſobedience; while the man fears that God will damn him, he flees from God as an enemy: but goſpel-threatenings, if we may ſo call them, work upon love, and inflame it, while the believer fears, in a filial manner, ſaying, "O! ſhall I incur my Father's "diſpleaſure, and provoke him to hide his face, "and deny me that gracious preſence of his, "which is even a heaven upon earth to me?"—At the moſt holy place, the believer ſees God clothed with a garment of ſalvation, compaſſed with love and grace, and riding, as it were, in the chariot of a free gracious promiſe; not a promiſe of life upon our doing, but a promiſe of grace to do, and of glory to crown our doing; and of grace and glory both, as the reward of Chriſt's doing all.—In a word, when we have acceſs to the moſt holy place, we ſee the place encircled with blood, the mercy-ſeat ſprinkled with blood, and that by this blood the infinite juſtice of God is fully ſatisfied, and that we have to do with him as a reconciled God and friend; and therefore our obligation is not under the authority of an angry Judge, but the authority of a loving Father, teſtifying his everlaſting love to us, by drawing with loving-kindneſs: and ſhall we not kindly run, when thus kindly drawn?—Why then, this privilege of acceſs to the moſt holy place, lays us under the ſtricteſt and ſtrongeſt obligation to be the moſt holy people. And, behold, this is the law of the houſe: the bond of love is the ſtrongeſt bond.

VII. I come now to the application of the ſubject. And we ſhall apply it, in the firſt place, by deducing a few inferences for information. Is it ſo, that univerſal holineſs is ſo much the eſtabliſhed law of God's houſe, that the whole family, being privileged with acceſs to the moſt holy place, are under the ſtrongeſt obligation to be the moſt holy people? Then,

1. Hence ſee, that God's houſe is not a lawleſs houſe, and believers in Chriſt are not without law to God, but under the law to Chriſt; as the apoſtle expreſſes it. The doctrine of grace is no doctrine of licentiouſneſs; though many reproach goſpel-doctrine with a flouriſh of words, in their harangues on morality, under pretence of putting honour upon the law, while yet they neither underſtand law nor goſpel, but miſerably confound and blend them together. Do we make void the law through faith? Are we lawleſs Antinomians *, becauſe we declare the freedom of the houſe from the law of works?

* It was formerly noticed, p. 78, 149, 178, 196. that a legal turn of mind, and ſtrain of preaching was much upon the increaſe in Scotland: and the patrons and promoters hereof, boldly accuſed and virulently lampooned the champions for, and defenders of, the doctrine of grace, as enemies to the law, and friends to licentiouſneſs.

Alas! many, in their ignorant zeal for this law, discover their little acquaintance with the law of the house.

2. Hence see, that if universal holiness be the law of the house, because of the universal access there is to the holy place; then, how few appear to be of the household of God in our day, which is a day of universal unholiness, universal wickedness, universal profanity and impiety. Oh! how few in our day go in to the most holy place, since few appear to be a most holy people! Where there is no access to the most holy place, there is no holiness: where little access, little holiness.

3. Hence see, the difference betwixt the covenant of works and the covenant of grace, in respect of the place that holiness hath in the one and the other. The former, being Do, and live; therein duty opens the door to privilege, and man behoved first to be holy, before he could be admitted to the holy place: but the latter, being Live, and do; therein privilege opens the door to duty, and men must first have access to the holy place, before they can be a holy people; for they must first come to Christ, or to God in Christ, which is the holy of holies, and from hence bring all their holiness. That is one of the reasons why gospel-ministers preach so much upon gospel-privileges, and upon faith in Christ entering into the holy place, because this faith works by love, and is the root of all true holiness; for, when faith looks into the most holy place, there it sees the law hidden in the ark, Jesus Christ, and safely kept there; and the believer finds, that, by lying in the warm bosom of Christ, it is turned into a law of love.

4. Hence see, That it is not safe to be without the church of God: for, as it is the house where God dwells, and it is best dwelling where God dwells; so there is access to the most holy place to be found there, upon the top of the mount, and the whole limit thereof round about. As long as God dwells in a church, and gives evidence of his presence in these ordinances, let us bless him for the day of small things, and wait upon him, who yet hides himself, in many respects, from the house of Jacob. Let us pity those who are without the church: for, without are dogs, and they can have no view of the holy place; and, where no vision is, the people perish. And pity these who are only within the outer walls of the church, in the outer court, and never got grace to enter into the most holy place; and also these who have been within, and have gone out, and separate from the church; I mean, even separatists from the church of Scotland, some upon a kind of Independent footing, and others affecting novelties, betaking themselves to English popish ceremonies, and new modes of worship. At the same time many true friends to Presbytery are on the very borders of separating from this established church, upon a disgust at the defections of the day; and it is to be lamented that many stumbling-blocks have been laid in peoples way: and it is sure, when a particular church, like Romish Babylon, comes to be wholly corrupt, then that rule for separation will hold, Come out from among them, my people. This was what justified our glorious Reformation from Popery. In this case, it is not a sinful separating from the church of God, but a dutiful separating from the chapel of the devil. And I own, that, as matters stand at present in the church of Scotland, we seem to be on the very brink of a schism: but, whatever tenderness I desire to show to weak consciences, in many circumstances, I have never, as yet, seen ground to preach separation *, whatever ground I see to testify against the corruptions and defections of the day, I hope God hath not yet left the house; he is yet to be found in these galleries of his house, the ordinances of his worship. Mean time, I have a concern particularly for these that are mourning over the defections and defilements of the house, and keeping the cleanest rooms they can find therein, and whose lot is to have officers obtruded upon them, and have not the gospel, but the law, or mere moral harangues, preached to them; and I desire to pray they may be directed to their duty in an evil day. This leads me to

A word of lamentation, which is the next use I would make of the doctrine. Even on a communion-day, when we are holding communion in the house of God, we may lament the disorders and irregularities therein, contrary to the law of the house. Surely the house of God in our day is a ruinous house, and needs to be repaired and reformed. If this be the law of the house, that every member, every part, every room of the house be most holy; then surely the law of the house is broken and violate in our day; for we may see the reverse of this law, even unholiness, upon the top of the mountain, and the whole limit thereof round about. Behold, this is the sad state of the house: and, since you cannot be duly concerned without knowing the circumstances of it, I shall hint a little at the visible defects of the visible part of the house among us.

1. Oh! where is personal holiness (to begin at home) among the visible members of the house! The law of faith, or the covenant of grace, proclaiming access to the most holy place, is the law of the house; and yet, alas! how little faith is in the house! how little believing or entering into the holiest by the blood of Jesus! The law of love, or moral law, as a rule of obedience, is the law of the house; but, Oh! how little love to God or man issuing from that faith! Does not iniquity abound, and the love of many wax cold? There is little to be seen of faith's working by love, but much to be seen of hatred working by unbelief.—It is the law of that house, that we love one another; but, behold, how many are devouring one another, through malice, envy,

* Our Author, at this time, was not so clear for withdrawing from the present Judicatories, as he afterwards came to be. And, indeed, all the habile methods had scarcely as yet been used within doors, by Representations, Petitions, Remonstrances, Expostulations, and Protestations: but when all these were used to no valuable purpose, and a deaf ear lent to them; nay, sentences inflicted for so doing, he saw just ground to withdraw from the present corrupt Judicatories, while carrying on a course of defection; but never did separate from the church of Scotland in her Constitution. We have his full sentiments on this head, in his Secession from the Judicatories, about five years after this: in which, after stating the nature and grounds of his Secession, we have these words; "So that, (says our "Author, adopting the sentiments of an eminent Light in this church) here is no separation from the church of Scotland, either in her "doctrine, worship, discipline, or government; but rather a cleaving more closely thereto, by departing or going forth from her back-"slidings and defections, as we are commanded by the Lord, and from some Judicatories, because of these; and only a negative, passive, "and conditional withdrawing; not importing any resolution never to join with them in any circumstance, but a present refusing to "follow the declining part of the church, while carrying on these defections, and a choosing rather to stand still and cleave to that part, "though smaller, that is endeavouring to retain and maintain a covenanted Reformation."

pride,

pride, and contention!—It is the law of the houſe, more particularly, that we have no other god but the moſt holy God; that we perform no other worſhip, but moſt holy worſhip; that we reverence his name, as the moſt holy name; that we ſanctify his Sabbath, for a moſt holy reſt all the day.—It is the law of the houſe, that we be moſt holy in every relative capacity and ſtation; that we be, according to our place, holy magiſtrates, holy miniſters, holy parents, holy children, holy maſters, holy ſervants.—It is the law of the houſe, that there be no murder in thought, word, or deed: no whoredom, in thought, word, or deed: no falſe witneſſes, no covetous heart in the houſe; nothing but the moſt holy place, and the moſt holy people: but, ah! where is the ſpirit of holineſs? Where is the exerciſes of holy graces, holy faith, holy love, holy penitency? Where is holy preaching, holy hearing, holy ſinging, holy praying, holy communicating, holy walking? I ſuppoſe, when matters are thoroughly canvaſſed, and ſeriouſly conſidered, there is little to be found among us, but unholy thoughts, unholy words, unholy actions; and little holy lamenting over our unholineſs. Again,

2. If we look to the public, may we not find matter of lamentation? While it is the law of the houſe of the God of heaven, that nothing be done therein but according to the will of the God of heaven; yet many things are done contrary to his will.—It is the law of the houſe, that the houſe be kept in repair, and do not ly waſte; but, behold, the walls are broken down, and the carved work demoliſhed.—It is the law of the houſe, that none be reckoned members of the family but theſe that are a holy nation, a royal prieſthood, a ſpiritual people, 1 Pet. ii. 9.; at leaſt, with reference to the viſible church, that they have a viſible and credible profeſſion: it is not theſe that have worldly lordſhips, lairdſhips, and heritages, that have, upon this account, any title to the members of Chriſt's ſpiritual houſe and kindom; for, His kingdom is not of this world; his houſe is diſtinct therefrom: ſuch may be members of God's houſe, but not as they are lords, lairds, heritors, gentles, nobles; ſome ſuch may be called of God into his houſe, but, not many noble, not many great men are called, 1 Cor. i. 26. Not many ſtocked with worldly riches or worldly wiſdom: yet ſuch, under the name of heritors, if they be but proteſtant in profeſſion, though they were pagans in practice, ſeem, in our day, to be declared members of God's ſpiritual houſe. But, notwithſtanding, it is the law of the houſe of God, Acts. i. 15, 26. vi. 3. iv. 23. as the original word here demonſtrates, that only the true members of the family, wherein every member is a maſter, a king, and a prieſt to his God, ſhould chuſe out from among them, by common ſuffrage, the ſervants and officers of the houſe. And, indeed, it is the law of every houſe, that no ſervant be obtruded upon them by foreigners, againſt the mind of the houſe, or againſt the will of the family; much more is it the law of God's houſe, that neither prince, patron, nor heritor, as denominate only from their temporal eſtate, ſhould have power over God's ſpiritual houſe, in chuſing and electing of their ſpiritual ſervants and officers, to the excluding of the voice and vote of the proper members of the family; yet this law of the houſe is manifeſtly violated by ſome late acts in our day*.—Again, it is the law of the houſe, that the doctrine of the goſpel be maintained with zeal, and damnable doctrine be rejected with indignation; yet, how much goſpel-doctrine hath been condemned and darkened in our day †; and damnable doctrine, ſuch as that of Arianiſm, ſlenderly cenſured ‡; and many corruptions in doctrine either looked over and tolerate, or not ſufficiently teſtified againſt, and that in a time when the houſe within is polluted with a boundleſs toleration of errors without doors?—It is the law of the houſe, that the oath of God be inviolably maintained, and nothing contrary to it be admitted or allowed; yet, how have our ſolemn oaths to the great God and maſter of the houſe, viz. our Covenants, both national and ſolemn league, been ſolemnly violate, broken, burnt, and buried, and a multitude of ſinful and unneceſſary oaths received and allowed in the room thereof?—It is the law of the houſe, that the worſhip of God be moſt holy, and agreeable to the word and will of God; and that no threſhold be ſet up beſides his threſhold, and poſts by his poſts, Ezek. liv. 8. And yet behold abjured ſuperſtitious worſhip, and Engliſh popiſh ceremonies ſet up in ſeveral places of the nations; and the guilt hereof is chargeable upon the houſe, in as far as it is not duly regreted, and ſo far as poſſible remedied.—It is the law of the houſe, that the diſcipline therein do not degenerate into cruelty towards the children of the family; and yet, what ground to complain, in our day of eccleſiaſtical tyranny exerciſed towards the people of God, in ſettling many congregations? And thus Chriſt, in his members, is wounded in the houſe of his friends, and his poor deſpiſed people obliged to ſay of the watchmen, They ſmote me, they wounded me, they took away my vail from me.— It is the law of the houſe, that the government therein be beautiful, orderly, and holy; and that the ſeveral under-governors of the houſe have an orderly walk and converſation, both in their private families and in their public managements; and that they be clean that bear the veſſels of the Lord: yet, how many officers and elders in the church live very looſly, and neglect the worſhip of God in their families? And ſome of them ſit in our national aſſemblies, that yet join with the church of England in their ſuperſtitious worſhip, when in that nation, to the reproach of the preſbeterial profeſſion.—It is the law of the houſe, that faſts and thankſgivings be appoined therein, when providence calls for it; and yet, how is this turned into deſuetude, and the church loſing ground, and ſeeming to give up with, inſtead of aſſerting and exerting her intrinſic power; and ſeemingly ſurrendering it to the hand of the civil magiſtrate, whoſe power ought not to be privative, but cumulative, in

* Our Author here, without doubt, has his eye upon the act of parliament made in the tenth year of Q. Anne's reign, Reſtoring Patronages and the act of aſſembly, 1732. concerning the Planting of Vacant Churches. Though it be conſonant both to ſcripture and reaſon, and the practice of the church of Scotland, ſince the Reformation, that the Lord's people, or multitude of diſciples, have a right to chuſe their ſpiritual guides, yet theſe acts denudes the Chriſtian people of this liberty to elect their ſpiritual overſeers; the firſt, by lodging [illegible] power ſolely in the hands of the patron; and the next, by veſting heritors and elders with the alone right of election.

† It is probable, our Author means the acts of aſſembly, annis 1720, 1722. condemning the doctrine of the Marrow of Modern Divinity. See above, p. 70, 149.

‡ This hath a reference to the proceſs againſt profeſſor Symſon, formerly briefly cleared up, p. 322, 454.

this

this matter? Secular power, and ſpiritual, in a Chriſtian land, ought to be ſweetly ſubſervient one to another, but ought not to be blended or confounded together, nor deſtructive one of another.—It is the law of the houſe, that the Lord and King of the houſe be exalted, and that his royal headſhip and ſovereignty be aſſerted, in oppoſition to all that aſſume to themſelves a ſovereignty, in all cauſes, civil or eccleſiaſtical†; yet this duty hath been fearfully neglected, and the Lord of the houſe many ways affronted in his own family.—It is the law of the houſe, that ſince God orders his own children to plead with their mother, when any confuſion takes place in the family, in order to the redreſſing of what is grievous; that the mother regard the pleading, and redreſs accordingly: and yet, when the children have done ſo in our day, ſhe hath given a deaf ear, and *deeper wounds, inſtead of favourable anſwers. O if this may ſet them a-pleading with their Father in heaven, who hath ſaid, When he builds up Zion, he will appear in his glory, and he will regard the prayer of the deſtitute, and not deſpiſe their prayer: this ſhall be written for the generations to come, and the people which ſhall be created ſhall praiſe the Lord.—In a word, it is the law of the houſe, that there be no ſchiſm nor diviſion there, becauſe a houſe divided againſt itſelf cannot ſtand; and yet, how many diviſions take place? and, how many grounds are daily laying down for ſchiſm, and matter of offence given by multiplied receſſions from reformation-principles and practices? Offences muſt come, but wo to them by whom they come.——It were endleſs to ſpeak of all the particulars wherein the law of the houſe is violate; only theſe are ſome of the moſt obvious to me, which I ſpeak of as matter of lamentation, that ye may know on what account you need to be concerned for the houſe of God, and to pray for the welfare of Jeruſalem, and the reparation of her walls.

This is the ſtate of the houſe viſible in our day, Upon the top of the mountain the whole limit thereof, is become moſt unholy: behold, this is the ſtate of the houſe. And yet for all this there remains ſome good thing in the church of Scotland, notwithſtanding all the evils that take place: As,

1. There is a goodly number yet of worthy, faithful, and able miniſters of the goſpel, whereof ſome, perhaps, are but betrayed by the power of temptation, and the ſtrength of carnal reaſoning, to fall in with theſe meaſures in the Lord's houſe, which, after calm and ſedate conſideration, they will be loth to juſtify, and will be ſorry for: therefore,

2. There are not a few yet, who are, and will be witneſſes for God, againſt all the corruptions of the Lord's houſe, and ready to give their teſtimony againſt the defections of the day wherein we live.

3. There are pure ordinances adminiſtered in the houſe: the word and ſacraments adminiſtered according to the goſpel-inſtitution; and the doctrine of the goſpel preached in purity.

4. There are ſome ſigns and evidences now and then of the Lord's preſence in theſe ordinances, and of his power in the ſanctuary, reviving and ſtrengthening the hearts of his hidden ones, and bringing them to the chambers of the King, even to the holy of holies, under the covert of the blood of Jeſus.

This leads me to an uſe of examination, for trying whether or not ye be ſuch members of the houſe of God, as have been privileged with acceſs to the inviſible part of the houſe, the moſt holy place; and what effect this has wrought upon you, to make you holy, as the Lord your God is holy.

1*ſt*, Have you been admitted to the moſt holy place? Have you got boldneſs to enter into the holieſt by the blood of Jeſus, at this occaſion, or formerly? If ſo, then I will tell you,

1. You have loſt all boldneſs and confidence in the fleſh, Phil. iii. 3.; all confidence in yourſelf, all confidence in your own righteouſneſs and worthineſs: nothing keeps you in countenance before God, but your view of the worthineſs and righteouſneſs of Jeſus. Again,

2. What way got you into the holy place, or into the preſence of the moſt holy God. Surely it is not without blood. Can you ſay, that you was carried into the holieſt, as it were, in a chariot paved with love, and the covering thereof was purple? Can you ſay, I ſaw ſomething like a rainbow about the throne of grace, and not only a purple covering over my head, but alſo a purple pavement under my feet; a pleaſant pavement, laid partly with the white marble of the love of God, and partly with the red marble of the blood of Chriſt; and, upon this pavement, laid before me in the goſpel, my heart went forward to the moſt holy place; and I ſaw that the moſt holy God was a reconciled God in Chriſt, a well-pleaſed God in Chriſt.

3. Have you ſeen that the holy of holies is nothing elſe but a throne of grace, having grace above it, and grace beneath it, and grace round about it; and that, therefore, the moſt holy place is a place meet for you to come to, meet for you to reſt in; for you, unworthy you, that cannot be ſaved any other way but by grace, free grace, venting through that blood of Jeſus?

4. Have you ſeen, in that holy place, that the promiſes of God are all Yea and Amen in Chriſt; that they are the New Teſtament in his blood; and that, therefore, every promiſe is ſure, being dipt in blood, ſealed with blood, with juſtice-ſatisfying blood; and that, therefore, juſtice requires, as well as mercy, that they be accompliſhed?

2*dly*, What ſanctifying effect hath this acceſs to the moſt holy place had upon you? Do you find yourſelf more ſweetly bound to univerſal holineſs? Why, ſay you, I find myſelf under an obligation to be a moſt holy perſon; becauſe, I think, I have been admitted, in ſome reſpect, to the moſt holy place: but I tremble to think of what you are now to ſay, becauſe I find the lamentable want of holineſs, and cannot think † Alluding to the wicked Act of Supremacy, made Anno 1661, after Charles II's Reſtoration, declaring him head over all perſons, and in all cauſes, civil and eccleſiaſtic. Inconſiſtent both with the Scriptures and our Standards. See Conf. Faith, ch. 30. §. 1, 2. ch. 25. §. 6. ch. 23. §. 3. with the ſcriptures quoted.

* Our Author here, no doubt, alludes both to the conduct of the aſſembly, Annis 1720, 1732.—By the firſt, [viz. 1720.] the aſſembly, by their fifth act, concerning the Marrow, condemn a bundle of propoſitions, containing doctrines of the greateſt importance. Which conduct, induced ſeveral miniſters, among whom our Author was one, to give in a Repreſentation to the Aſſembly 1721, ſetting forth, That it appeared to them, that the foreſaid condemnatory act and ſentence wounded many goſpel truths; yet the aſſembly 1722, though partly convinced of the fact, were ſo far from repealing the Act 1720. that they, by their ſeventh act, rather farther explained corroborated, and confirmed the ſaid fifth act, and ſo gave a deeper wound to truth. See above, p. 70, 149.—The aſſembly 1732, not only lent a deaf ear to the Repreſentations and Petitions that were preſented to them, for the Redreſs of Grievances, but utterly rejected them; and gave deeper wounds, by their act lodging the ſole power of election of miniſters into the hands of a conjunct meeting of heretors and elders. See above p. 631.

you

you will give me a mark that will argue my being holy; and therefore fear my acceſs to the holy place, that ſometimes I thought I had, to be but deluſion. I muſt tell you,

1. If you have been in the moſt holy place, and got ſome holy impreſſions there, then ye will ſee yourſelf to be moſt vile; when Job was let in to the moſt holy place, then he cries out, Behold, I am vile, chap. xl. 4. It is a ſight of the holy God that makes us to ſee ourſelves to be unholy creatures. You that value yourſelves as good and holy, you have never ſeen a holy God in the face: but thou that hateſt thyſelf, and lotheſt thyſelf as an unholy creature, ſaying, Truth, Lord, I am a dog; ſo fooliſh I am, and ignorant; I am as a beaſt before thee; thou art a holy perſon.

2. Try your holineſs by a queſtion or two: What is your deſire? Is it, O to be holy! O to be like unto Chriſt!—What is your hope? Do you love to think of getting to heaven, becauſe there you will be like him, by ſeeing him as he is?—What is your delight and love? Can you ſay you love the law, becauſe it is a holy law, and becauſe it is a law of love?—What is your lamentation? Is it, Oh! unholy ſinner that I am? O wretched man that I am! who ſhall deliver me from the body of death?—What is your how long? Is it, O how long ſhall I ſojourn in Meſech, and dwell in the tents of Kedar!—What is your regard to the law of the houſe? Are you grieved to ſee that it is violate by yourſelf and others?—What is your regard to the members of the houſe? Do you love the ſaints, becauſe they are holy? Some chuſe a drinking club and cabal before the company of the godly that lay them under a reſtraint; but is your delight with the ſaints, the excellent ones of the earth?—Again, what is your regard to the Lord of the houſe? Can you ſay, from the bottom of your ſoul, that, however unholy you are, yet you love him becauſe he is holy, and can rejoice in him as a holy God that hates ſin? This is a ſweet mark that you have been in the holy place, and got the print of God's holineſs ſtamped on your ſoul. A hypocrite may love God becauſe he is good and merciful; but I do not think he can love him, becauſe he is a holy God that hates ſin. Is that the language of thy ſoul, O give thanks at the remembrance of his holineſs?—In a word, what is thy reſolution through grace? Is it, that you will endeavour, in his ſtrength, to glorify God by a holy walk, and yet are you feared to reſt on your reſolutions, and therefore turn your reſolutions to prayers, ſaying, Lord, let thy hand be upon the man of thy right-hand, the Son of man whom thou haſt made ſtrong for thyſelf, and henceforth we will not go back? After trial, ſee your duty.

My laſt uſe, therefore, ſhall be by way of exhortation. 1. To theſe who are without the houſe. 2. To thoſe who have been admitted into the holy place.

1*ſt*, To you that are without the houſe, that are no members of God's family, but are unbelievers. I exhort you to come into the houſe of God; For without are dogs, unholy dogs, Rev. xxii. 15. Why, may ſome think, are you calling us to come into the houſe, where there are ſo many diſorders, as you have been mentioning? It is beſt to ſtay without doors: why, man, woman, when I call you to come into the houſe of God, it is, not only to the outer houſe, but to come in to the moſt holy place, and to enter into the holieſt by faith; that is, Come to God in Chriſt. The outer houſe is only the viſible church, and the viſible glory is indeed much defaced in our day; but there is an inviſible part of the houſe, the moſt holy place, that we call you to come to: not to an outward viſible profeſſion only; not to outward ordinances only; for, by your being within the walls of the houſe, you are ſeemingly come there already: but you may be viſible church-members, and come to ordinances and ſacraments, and yet ſtrangers to God, if you have never come in to the moſt holy place by coming in to God in Chriſt. And, Oh! why ſtand you without doors, contrary to the law of the houſe, inviting all to come in! Rev. xxii. 17. Let me tell you, while you ſtay without doors, you are without hope, and without God in the world; neither fellow-citizens with the ſaints, nor of the houſhold of God, in a ſpiritual ſenſe: and the viſible outward advantages we enjoy, while you are only in the outer court, will aggravate your condemnation if ye come not in. I muſt tell you, while you are not within the houſe, in a ſpiritual ſenſe, you are not under the law, The law of the houſe; I mean, the law of faith and love, but under the law of works, and ſo under the curſe; for, Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them. The wrath of God abides on you, while you abide in unbelief, without coming in to the Surety, and cloſing with his law-biding righteouſneſs. While you come not in to the moſt holy place, you remain in a moſt unholy ſtate and way; for, it is this holy place that makes a holy people: Chriſt is the true temple, the holy place, the houſe where God dwells; and how can you ſee God, if you come not to his houſe? How can you ſpeak with God, if you come not to his houſe? How can you draw up acquaintance with him, or attain conformity to him? If you do not behold the glory of God in the face of Chriſt, you can never be changed into his image, from glory to glory. Without coming to Chriſt, you ſhall never have holineſs; and without holineſs, you ſhall never ſee God in heaven.

Conſider, O ſinner, The law of the houſe, with reference to you that are without.—It is the law of the houſe, that the door be open for all comers; Whoſoever will, let him come.—It is the law of the houſe, that all comers ſhall be welcome; He that cometh, I will in nowiſe caſt out.—It is the law of the houſe, that all that come in ſhall be children of the family; We are the children of God by faith in Chriſt: without are dogs, but within are children.—It is the law of the houſe, that no objection be ſuſtained as lawful againſt your coming into Chriſt, or to the moſt holy place; for the law of grace is calculate, of infinite wiſdom, for anſwering every objection: it is not lawful to object any thing againſt coming into the holy place. Fear of God's infinite juſtice is no lawful objection; for, here is a ſacrifice, ſatiſfying juſtice. Your great ſin and guilt is no lawful objection; for, here is guilt-expiating blood. Your total want of all good in yourſelf, is no lawful objection; for, here is all fulneſs to ſupply you. Your unworthineſs is no lawful objection; for, the worthineſs of the Lamb is the only thing that is regarded in the moſt holy place. Your poverty is no lawful objection; for, here are the unſearchable riches of Chriſt, both to pay your debt, and bear your charges. Your rags and nakedneſs is no lawful objection; for, here is the rob of righteouſneſs to cover you, that the ſhame of your nakedneſs may not appear. Your fear of God's having ſome ſecret purpoſe againſt you, is no lawful objection, but a horrid thought; for, The law of the houſe makes nothing but God's revealed will your rule. Your weakneſs and inability is no lawful objection; for, Strength and beauty are in his ſanctuary; ſtrength is within his holy place, to which you are called to come; and drawing power is put in the promiſe, ſuch as that, When I am lifted up, I will draw all men after me, that you may take his help, and look to his promiſed power and grace. Your unholineſs is no lawful objection; for, you are invited to come to the moſt holy place, that you may be incorporated amongſt the moſt holy people. In a word, diſtance is no lawful objection; for, the moſt holy place is at hand; ſince you cannot go up to the holy of holies, the holy of holies is come down to you: it is on the top of the mountain, and the whole limit thereof round about. Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men. And the queſtion is, Do you welcome a Jeſus, that is come to you in the goſpel, to make you holy as well as happy for ever? Can your heart ſay, Bleſſed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord? It is one good way of coming to him, to welcome his coming to you. Is there an echo in your heart? When he ſays, Sinner, come thou to me; does your heart ſay, Lord, come thou to me, for I cannot come to thee without I be drawn? When he cries, Come; and you cry, Come; ye are not far from meeting together. Well, ſinner, the door is open, O tarry not till the door be ſhut. Now is the accepted time, now is the day of ſalvation. Say not, To-morrow, thou fool, leſt this night thy ſoul be required of thee, and then to all eternity you ſhall never have another offer. O may the arm of power accompany the offer of grace in the evening of a communion-day!

2*dly*, I would cloſe with a word to you that have been, either now or formerly, drawn in to the moſt holy place: ſurely it is your duty to be a moſt holy people; for, univerſal holineſs is the law of the houſe; on the top of the mountain, the whole limit thereof round about. I ſhould exhort and direct you in a word.

O Sirs, are you come into the ſanctuary of God? O then, put off your ſhoes; for the place whereon you ſtand is holy ground! Put off your filthy ſhoes, for the room of the houſe you have entered into is a clean room, a holy place; the Lord of the houſe is moſt holy. Holineſs is the name of God; he is the Holy One of Iſrael. Holineſs is the will of God; This is the will of God, even your ſanctification. Holineſs is the work of God; and you are his workmanſhip, created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works. Holineſs is the nature of God; and you are made partakers of the divine nature. Holineſs is the glory of God; and he is glorious in holineſs.

Conſider, the houſe of God is a holy houſe, and the church is not God's houſe, but in ſo far as it is holy. His word is a holy word; his ordinances are holy ordinances; his table is a holy table; and holineſs becometh his houſe for ever.

Conſider the beauty of holineſs: the beauty of faces is but ſkin-deep, a rotting beauty; the beauty of clothes and ornaments is but a patch upon a ſore, a ſkreen to cover your nakedneſs; but the beauty of holineſs is what makes a man all glorious within and without. All pleaſure without holineſs is but grief; for the pleaſure of ſin is what man muſt either repent of here, or be damned for hereafter. All profit without holineſs is but loſs; For, what ſhall it profit a man, to gain the whole world, and loſe his own ſoul? But godlineſs is great gain. All honour without holineſs will end in ſhame and diſgrace.

Conſider the oppoſite of holineſs, namely, SIN; that ſin is a reproach to any people, much more to ſuch a profeſſing and privileged people as you are. The profane world, that ſee your works, and not your faith, if you be vile, vain, wanton, and profane in your walk, they will ſay, There is your religion; and thus you will bring a reproach upon your holy religion. And who, that ever was admitted to the moſt holy place, would not bluſh and be aſhamed to bring it under ſuch undeſerved reproach.

Conſider what regard is owing to the glory of God, the honour of Chriſt, the work of the holy Spirit, and the credit of our holy religion.

Conſider what is the end of God in all his great works toward you: this is the end of election; He hath choſen you, that you ſhould be holy: this is the end of redemption; That he might redeem you from all iniquity, and purify to himſelf a peculiar people, zealous of good works: It is the end of ſanctification by the Spirit, that you ſhould be holy.

What is the end and deſign of ordinances, but to be means of holineſs? What is the end of merciful providences, but that you may fear the Lord and his goodneſs? What is the end of croſſing and afflicting providences, but to purge away your droſs, and make you partakers of his holineſs? What is the end of all the graces of the Spirit, if you have the faith of Chriſt, or the hope of glory in him? Why then, faith purifies the heart; and he that hath this hope, purifies himſelf, even as he is pure.

Conſider what obligations you are under beyond all perſons in the world to be the moſt people, in the midſt of this unholy age.

All the direction I offer is, See that you be much in the exerciſe of faith, entering again and again into the moſt holy place; for this will, as I ſaid, have both an operative and argumentative, both a phyſical and a moral influence upon your holineſs. When you come to the moſt holy place, and ſee the moſt holy God, you will find yourſelf under the ſtrongeſt obligation to be holy, and ſuch bonds laid upon your heart, as will bind you ſweetly and ſtrictly to holineſs, even the bond of love conſtraining you. In the moſt holy place you will ſee ſomething wonderful, even your ſalvation and juſtification, lying between two everlaſting breaſts, Rom. iii. 24.; between the everlaſting grace of God, and the everlaſting righteouſneſs of Chriſt; Being juſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Chriſt Jeſus. And what do you think of ſeeing yourſelf lying, as it were, between theſe two everlaſting breaſts of God; and, at the ſame time, his everlaſting arms holding and embracing you in his boſom? This is the notable ſight of faith to be ſeen in the moſt holy place; and when you come to ſee this great ſight, the warm boſom of God's everlaſting love will give you a warm heart, and will leave a ſtrong impreſſion of the law of love and holineſs upon you. This is the law of the houſe. If you get to the top of the mountain with Moſes, Moſes, O how ſhould your face ſhine, even when ye come down to the bottom of the mount, and go into the company of others round about the mount! Not only a communion-table, but your common tables ſhould be holineſs to the Lord. In every company, in every place, let this be your motto, HOLINESS TO THE LORD. This is the law of the houſe; upon the top of the mountain, the whole limit thereof round about ſhall be moſt holy: behold, this is the law of the houſe.

SERMON LVII.

The LITTLE CITY beſieged, and delivered: or, the Deliverance of the Church by CHRIST, and the Ingratitude of Men to the glorious REDEEMER, repreſented *.

ECCLES. ix. 14, 15.

There was a little city, and few men within it; and there came a great king againſt it, and beſieged it, and built great bulwarks againſt it: now, there was found in it a poor wiſe man; and he, by his wiſdom, delivered the city: yet no man remembered the ſame poor man.

IT is queſtioned, amongſt interpreters, whether this be a hiſtory, or a parable: I am not here to diſpute the matter, but take it to be parabolical; and reckon the Spirit of God hath left the application thereof for us to make, which I would eſſay to do, both in an agreeableneſs, I hope, to the analogy of faith, and in a ſuitableneſs to the preſent occaſion.

The verſes contain news from heaven; and particularly, 1. Here is a city deſcribed; There was a little city, and few men within it. 2. The city beſieged; There came a great king againſt it, and beſieged it; and built great bulwarks againſt it. 3. The city delivered, and the ſiege raiſed; Now, there was found in it a poor wiſe man; and he, by his wiſdom, delivered the city. 4. The ingratitude of the citizens, Yet no man remembered the ſame poor man.

1ſt, Here is a city deſcribed, both from the quality of it, a little city; and from the paucity of its inhabitants, few men within it. Now, what are we to underſtand by the city? Why,

1. If by the city we underſtand the world in general, it might ſeem ſtrange that the world ſhould be called a little city; but he that walks with God, as Enoch, and as the prophet Iſaiah expreſſeth it, dwells on high, ſees this world to be nothing but ſome ſhadow; yea, before God, All the nations of the earth are as nothing: and as it is little, ſo there are few men within it; becauſe theſe we call men cannot, according to ſcripture, be diſtinguiſhed from beaſts, and vipers; a generation of vipers; and of theſe there are many: but a very few men are to be found in the world; none but theſe that are transformed, and turned from beaſts to men; The beaſts of the field ſhall honour me, the dragon and the owl. This people have I formed for myſelf, they ſhall ſhew forth my praiſe, Iſa. xlvi. 20, 21.

2. By the city we are to underſtand the church of God in particular. The name of the city is JEHOVAH-SHAMMAH, the Lord is there: the wall of the city is SALVATION, which God hath appointed for walls and bulwarks: the food of the citizens is the word of God, and the bread that came down from heaven. But in what reſpect the church is compared to a city, ſo frequently in ſcripture, we may afterwards conſider. It is but a little city, and a few men in it, in compariſon of her enemies, and all the reſt of the world, that are without the church.

2dly, Here is the city beſieged. Where we may notice,

1. The greatneſs of the beſieger; There came a GREAT KING againſt it, and beſieged it. Whether we take this great king for God, in one reſpect; or for the devil, in an other reſpect; and for ſin and death that attend him, theſe, in various reſpects, lay ſiege to the city.

2. Notice the greatneſs of the ſiege; He built great bulwarks againſt it. God, in his awful juſtice; the devil, in his deſperate malice; ſin, in its deſtructive ſubtilty; and death, in its dreadful terrors. A great king raiſing great bulwarks againſt a little city, and few men in it, they muſt be in a very diſmal ſituation. But,

3dly, Here is the little city delivered, and the ſiege raiſed; There was found in the city a poor wiſe man; and he, by his wiſdom, DELIVERED the city. Where notice alſo two things, namely, How the deliverer is deſcribed; and how the city was delivered by him.

(1.) How the deliverer is deſcribed; There was found in the city a POOR WISE MAN. I think it is not only highly agreeable to the analogy of faith, but very probable to be the intent of the words, to give a deſcription of Chriſt, the Deliverer and Saviour of his church; whom we may here view as deſcribed,

1. By his humanity, a MAN; for, He was a man of ſorrows: The Word was made fleſh.

2. By his divinity, a WISE man: for, he was, and is, the eſſential Wiſdom of God.

3. By his humiliation; a POOR man: for, Though he was rich, yet for our ſakes he became poor.

4. By his deſtination to this work; he was FOUND in the city: Who found him? God, who ſays, I have found a ranſom; I have found David my ſervant. Where was he found? Even in the city, among men: I have laid help upon One that is mighty, ſays God; even One choſen out of the people, Pſal. lxxxix. 19.

* This ſermon was preached at the Queen's-ferry, on Monday, Oct. 8*th*, 1732. after the celebration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper there. Never before publiſhed.

(2.) How

(2.) How and in what manner he delivered the city, even by his WISDOM; He by his wiſdom delivered the city: By his Deity; for, if he had not been the infinitely wiſe God, he could never have relieved the city; even he who, by his wiſdom, ſtretched out the heavens, when he made the world; by his wiſdom, fulfilled the law, and appeaſed the wrath of God; by his wiſdom, outwited the old ſerpent, and deſtroyed the works of the devil; by his wiſdom, finiſhed tranſgreſſion, and made end of ſin, and vanquiſhed death: and ſo by his wiſdom delivered the city from juſtice, Satan, ſin, hell, and death; in his wiſdom he delivers the church, the city of God, by the price of his blood, and by the power of his Spirit.—Thus the city is delivered, and the ſiege raiſed.

4*thly*, And laſtly, Notice in the words the ingratitude of the citizens; or the citizens upbraided for their unkindneſs; Yet NO MAN remembered the ſame poor man. Where you have,

1. The nature of their fault, and the aggravation of their ingratitude; they were ſo far from requiting him kindly, ſaying, What ſhall we render to the Lord, for his benefits towards us? that they did not remember him: they never ſo much as minded him. Their diſeaſe was that of ſinful oblivion; they forgot him, and his kindneſs: They ſoon forgot his works.

2. The univerſality of this ingratitude, NO man remembered the ſame poor man; none remembered, no not one: they are altogether become ungrateful.—Thus you have the hiſtory opened, and a ſhort hint at the myſtery contained in it.

From the words, thus opened, we may lay down this doctrinal propoſition.

OBSERV. That though the work of redemption, or the deliverance wrought by Chriſt for ſinners, be a very great and memorable work, like the raiſing of a great ſiege againſt a little city; yet there is a proneneſs in man to forget the Redeemer or Deliverer, and all his work of kindneſs toward them.

We need go no further for the confirmation of this doctrine, than the inſtitution of the Lord's ſupper, which you have been celebrating, Do this in rememberance of me; as if it had been ſaid, Ought you not to remember me, your Redeemer; me, your Deliverer, that hath raiſed the great ſiege that was laid againſt you; yet you are prone to forget me, and all the kindneſs that I have done to you; therefore, I have inſtituted this ordinance to keep you in mind, Do this in rememberance of me. But I ſhall refer the farther confirmation, to the proſecution of the doctrine, in the following method, according to the former diviſion.

I. I would ſpeak ſomewhat concerning the little city, and the few men in it.
II. Concerning the great ſiege laid againſt it.
III. Of the deliverance thereof, and the reaſons of the ſiege.
IV. Of the ingratitude of the citizens, and their proneneſs to forget the Deliverer.
V. Make application of the whole.

I. I am to ſpeak of the little city; There was a little city, and few men within it. There are four things remarkable concerning the church, which this part of the text preſents to us.

Remark 1. "That the church of God is compared to a city, and often compared thereto "in ſcripture, Pſal. xlvi. 4. *There is a river, the "ſtreams whereof make glad the city of God." The church, in alluſion to a city, is, a place of ſecurity and defence; We have a ſtrong city, ſalvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks: and it hath watchmen upon the walls.—It is a place of ſociety; where the ſaints have fellowſhip one with another, exhort and comfort one another.—It is a place of unity; where they are to maintain the unity of the Spirit, in the bond of peace.—It is a place of trade and traffick; where we may trade with heaven, and buy gold tried in the fire; white raiment, and eye-ſalve expoſed freely there to ſale.—It is a place of freedom and liberty; where all the true citizens are freed from the law, as a covenant; from the curſe of the law, the wrath of God, and all ſubjection thereto; alſo from the guilt of ſin, and the rule of it.—It is a place of order and regularity; where men are regularly entered burgeſſes, and are to come in by the gate of the city, even by Chriſt, who is the door.—It is a place of reſt, commodious to live in; and there is no reſting-place for the ſoul but here.—It is a place of pleaſure and joy; Beautiful for ſituation, the joy of the whole earth. There is the joyful ſound, through the ſilver trumpet of the goſpel; and the ſong of Zion.—It is a place of pomp and ſplendor, the ſeat of the King; where is the King's court, the King's throne, the throne of grace, and daily acceſs to ſee the King in his beauty.—It is a place of privileges, a privileged place; where there are privileges belonging to the church viſible; they have the fountain open to them; they have a ſealed right in baptiſm to the covenant; having the promiſe, they have right to the ſeal of the covenant of promiſe; and thus a ſealed warrant to come to Chriſt, a general adoption, and thereon many fatherly acts of pity ſhewed to them: God inſtructs them, by his word; corrects them, by his rod; reproves them, by his ſervants; and, when they go aſide, directs them, by his word, ſaying, This is the way. They have ordinances, ſacraments, miniſters, and a right to chooſe the miniſters and officers of the city: this is the privilege of every city, much more of the city of God; and if the city want this it is ſo far a city robbed and ſpoiled. There are privileges belonging to the church inviſible; ſuch as, pardon of ſin, peace with God, ſanctification, eternal life, acceſs to the King's table, the Lamb, the light of the place, and the temple; the Lord himſelf is the temple they come to; they have a title unto the new Jeruſalem, the King's paſs for heaven; I appoint unto you a kingdom.

Remark 2. "That the church is a little city, it "is a little flock, Luke xii. 31. It is but a ſmall "ſpot, compared with the vaſt wilderneſs of "this world; it is an incloſed garden, Song iv. "12." The church is compared to a little city, in compariſon of this world; and but a little city in the eyes of the world; little and contemned. And, indeed, the true citizens are but little in their own eyes; Leſs than the leaſt of all ſaints; leſs than the leaſt of all God's mercies; yea, nothing, in their own account; and leſs than nothing; worſe than nothing. The church is a little

* See the Author's ſermon on this text, Vol. II. where he, at length, ſtates the compariſon, and runs the parallel, between the church and a city.

little city; a little ſtone cut out of the mountain; yet many great cities and kingdoms have fallen before it. This little city has outlived the great city Nineveh; the magnificent Tyrus; and trampled upon the graves of many famous and remarkable cities, becauſe, though it be a little city; yet it is the city of the great God; and, Glorious things are ſpoken of this city of God, Pſal. lxxxvii. 3.

Remark 3. "That it is a city of men; a little "city and MEN in it." The infinite wiſdom of God hath ſeen fit to make this famous little city conſiſt, not of fallen angels, but of fallen men; Wiſdom cryeth at the gates, at the entry of the city, ſaying, To you, O men, do I call, and my voice is to the ſons of men, Prov. viii. 3, 4. And happy we the men whom wiſdom determineth and prevaileth to enter themſelves burgeſſes of this little city, by coming not only into the ſuburbs thereof, by a profeſſion of Chriſt; but enter in through the gates into the city, while the King of the city ſtands at the door of our hearts, and knocks, and aſſures us that he is the door of the city; I am the door, by me if any man enter in, he ſhall be ſaved, and ſhall go in and out, and find paſture, John x. 9. It is a city of men, a city for mankind, a city of refuge for mankind ſinners; therefore, let none ſtand without, ſaying, It is not the like of me that God is calling to come in. If you be of the poſterity of Adam, and of the children of men, Chriſt is offered unto you, and you are called to accept of the grant of freedom and liberty; the grant of all the privileges and immunities of God's city, and of being free men there: O Sirs, If the Son make you free, then are ye free indeed. But yet we have it to remark,

4. "That this little city hath but few men in "it, even the viſible church." I mean, theſe that have a viſible and credible profeſſion of faith are few in compariſon of the reſt of the world; and the inviſible church, who have the power of religion, and the truth of faith, are but very few in compariſon of the bulk of profeſſors. This little city, then, has but a few men within it, as the text ſays; many are without the city, and many are about the city, but few are within the city, and they only, are ſafe; for, Without are dogs, and ſorcerers, and whoremongers, idolaters, murderers, and whoſoever loveth or maketh a lye, Rev. xxii. 15.: Without are drunkards, ſwearers, ſabbath-breakers, profane perſons; yea, beſide the openly profane, without are formaliſts, hypocrites, unbelievers: but within are ſaints, believers, lovers of God; Many are called, but few are choſen. Yea, we may ſay, there are many bycomers, but few indwellers; many incomers, like dogs, that go out again; They go out from us, becauſe they are not of us, 1 John ii. 19.: but few indwellers, like children of Zion, and fellow-citizens with the ſaints, Eph. ii. 19. The reſt of the world, whether they be bycomers or not; they are not to be reckoned men, but rather dogs and beaſts; for thus, all that are out of Chriſt, and ſo out of the city, are called, Iſa. xliii. 20. Thus, in the vaſt populous city of Jeruſalem, a man could not be found; Run ye to and fro through the ſtreets of Jeruſalem, and ſee now, and know, and ſeek in the broad places thereof, if you can find a man. Why, not a man? No: they were only to be reckoned men who execute judgment, and ſought the truth; but ſuch could not be found: they were all degenerate into beaſts; all transformed through brutiſh affections into unreaſonable creatures: yet, of Zion it ſhall be ſaid, This man and that man was born there; but they are but here and there one; a little city, and few men within it.

II. The ſecond thing in the method, was, To ſpeak of the great ſiege laid againſt the little city.

I ſhall here conſider both who the great king is, that came againſt the city; and what are the great bulwarks built againſt it. And here, according to the view I gave in the explication,

1. By the great king we may underſtand the Great God, in his awful juſtice; who, upon the ſin of man, became an inraged enemy to the whole city of mankind; and to whoſe wrath the little city, which he choſe out of the world, is by nature as much expoſed as the reſt; for, being all children of diſobedience they are by nature children of wrath even as others, Eph. ii. 2, 3.; and therefore, his firſt appearance to them, even when he has a mind to make them a city for himſelf to dwell in; his firſt appearance, I ſay, to them, is in terrible majeſty; laying ſiege to their ſouls, and building great bulwarks againſt them.

What bulwarks? Even the great bulwarks of law-curſes and law-threatenings: for, in a work of conviction, and compunction, and legal humiliation, which uſually precedes any goſpel-work, and ſaving change, he applies the curſe and threatenings of the law to their conſcience, ſaying, Curſed is every one that continues not in all things, written in the book of the law to do them, Gal. iii. 10. In ſo much, that the ſoul finds itſelf to be an accurſed creature, a condemned creature; and is put in fear of everlaſting damnation. The reſt of the world, who ſhall eternally feel this heavy wrath of God in another world, yet ly ſleeping without fear of it in this world; but the little city, that ſhall for ever be delivered from it, are now in this world awakened and alarmed with the fear of it mercifully, that they may prize the Saviour and Deliverer of the city. The great God he ſtorms the city with his terrible artillery, like great waring cannons, ſurrounding a little city; he thunders from Sinai, and builds great bulwarks againſt it: the great bulwark of a broken law; the great bulwark of a threatened curſe; the great bulwark of offended holineſs; and the great bulwark of inraged juſtice: and, in a word, all the infinite perfections of God injured and diſhonoured by their ſin, appear planted about the city in battle array. When the great God himſelf appears an enemy, breaking them with breach upon breach, and running upon them like a giant ſometimes, and ſaying, as Deut. xxxii. 40. Who can deliver out of my hand? for, I lift up my hand to heaven, and ſay, I live for ever. If I whet my glittering ſword, and my hand take hold of judgment, I will render vengeance to mine enemies;—I will make mine arrows drunk with blood. Yea, not only in the firſt awakening-work doth God thus appear formidable to them, for their humiliation and conviction; but even afterwards; he ſometimes appears formidable to them for their trial and correction. Thus Job found the great bulwarks of God's terrible majeſty built up againſt him, when he ſaid, chap. vi. 4. The arrows of the Almighty are within me, the poiſon whereof drinketh up my ſpirits; the terrors of God do ſet themſelves in array againſt me. Thus Heman, While I ſuffer thy terrors, I am diſtracted:

ſtracted: thy fierce wrath goes over me; thy terrors have cut me off, Pſal. lxxviii. 15. But,

2. By the great king we may underſtand the devil in his deſperate malice againſt the little city: he is called a prince, the prince of the power of the air, [or, of darkneſs,] that rules in the hearts of the children of diſobedience, Eph. ii. 2. This mighty and malicious prince, in the beginning of the world, came againſt the little city of mankind, when there was but few men in it; yea, when there was but one man, and one woman, in the city, in a literal ſenſe; and he beſieged it, and built great bulwarks of flattering falſhoods, and lying temptations againſt it; and conquered the city, and deſtroyed it; as you read. Gen. iii. concerning the ſin and fall of our firſt parents, through the powerful ſubtilty of the ſerpent: and he continues ſtill to beſiege and deſtroy ſinners by his malice and ſubtilty, force, and fraud; and eſpecially he raiſes great bulwarks againſt the little city.

What bulwarks? Why, even his manifold temptations, devices, and fiery darts; We are not ignorant of his devices, 2 Cor. ii. 11. We are called to take, above all things, the ſhield of faith, that we may be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked; for, We wreſtle not againſt fleſh and blood, but againſt principalities and powers, Eph. vi. 12, 16. The devil attacks the city both by high bulwarks, and deep mines; we read of the depths of Satan, Rev. ii. 24.; and being the prince of this world; for ſo he is called, John xii. 31. and elſewhere. He has thouſands of wicked inſtruments by which he batters and beſieges the little city. He has a deceitful party for him within, as well as without the little city; within the church, as well as without it: within the church viſible he has his treacherous Judaſes, to betray the city into his hand, and to betray the intereſt of the city, and the liberties and privileges thereof. We read of the devil's armour, Luke xi. 22. where he is called the ſtrong man armed, keeping his palace; but when a ſtronger than he comes upon him, and overcomes him, he takes from him all his armour. And what that armour is, we may partly know, from 2 Cor. iv. 4. The god of this world blinds the minds of them that believe not, helliſh darkneſs excluding and oppoſing goſpel-light: the darkneſs of ignorance, the darkneſs of error, and the darkneſs of deluſion. This is a great part of the devil's armour, together with high imaginations, carnal reaſonings, pride, prejudices, and exalting thoughts, mentioned, 2 Cor. x. 5. Theſe are part of his armour and his great bulwarks.

3. By the great king we may underſtand ſin; ſin is the great king that reigns in, and over, us naturally; therefore ſays the apoſtle, Rom. vi. 12. Let not ſin reign in your mortal bodies. Sin and Satan are always confederates together; and their power is very great, in ſo much, that all men are ſubject to the rule and government thereof; and as all the children of men are ſlaves unto ſin, as their king; ſo all the children of God, in this world, are many times captives to it; I ſee another law in my members, warring againſt the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of ſin that is in my members, Rom. vii. 3. The power and authority of ſin is called a law, even the law of ſin and death, which nothing can free us from, but the law of the Spirit of life in Chriſt Jeſus, Rom. viii. 2.

Now, What bulwarks doth this great king build againſt the little city? Indeed, ſin has the ſtrongeſt bulwarks in the world.—It hath ſelf for a bulwark; and hence, for a man to deſtroy ſin, is to deſtroy himſelf in effect, and the beſt and moſt uſeful parts of himſelf, his right-hand, his right-eye, his members. Col. iii. 5. Mortify therefore your members that are upon the earth. When a man deſtroys his luſts, he denies himſelf. And ſelf is ſo mighty, that it competes with King Jeſus, and fights for the throne, even after Chriſt has taken poſſeſſion of the heart. Self-eaſe, ſelf-pleaſure, ſelf-will, ſelf-wiſdom, ſelf-love, ſelf-eſteem, ſelf-righteouſneſs, are the bulwarks of ſin.—It hath alſo the law for a bulwark; The ſtrength of ſin is the law, 1 Cor. xv. 56. The law of ſin is ſtrengthened by the law of works; the ſtrength of ſin being a grand part of the curſe of the law of works, in ſo much, that no power can deſtroy that bulwark, but the power that can give full ſatisfaction to the law; hence the ſtrong bulwark of ſin is never broken down, till a man has, by faith, cloſed with the law-ſatisfying righteouſneſs of Chriſt. Again,

4. By the great king we may underſtand death, the king of terrors, Job xviii. 14. Death is a mighty king that all the ſinful race of Adam are lawful captives unto; and ſuch is the conſtant battle that death gives, even to the true-born children of Zion, the little city, that when all other enemies are defeat and deſtroyed, death is the laſt upon the field; The laſt enemy to be deſtroyed, is death, 1 Cor. xv. 26. Now,

What bulwarks does this king build againſt the little city? There are two great bulwarks it builds; the one before, and the other behind it. Before death, there ſtands the bulwark of terror and fear, becauſe of ſin, which is the ſting of death; and hence many within the little city are kept long in bondage, through fear of death, Heb. ii. 15. The terrors of death ſometimes compaſs them about, and the fears of hell on the back of death.—Again, behind death, there is an other bulwark, and that is ſeeming victory. When death gets ſoul and body ſeparate, and the body made death's priſoner in the grave, where the worms deſtroy it, and rottenneſs ſeems to ride in triumph over it: and this is the reaſon why it is ſaid to be the laſt enemy that ſhall be deſtroyed; becauſe it has a ſeeming victory over the viſible part of the believer, till the laſt trumpet ſound, and the dead be raiſed incorruptible, immortal, &c.

III. The next thing was, To ſpeak of the deliverance of the city, and the raiſing of the ſiege. And here we are led, by the text, to conſider, 1. How the Deliverer is deſcribed. 2. How the deliverance is effected.

1ſt, Conſider how the Deliverer is deſcribed; There was found in the city, a poor wiſe man. And here he is ſet before us, ſo as we may conſider him,

1. In his humanity, as a MAN. Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the glorious Saviour and Deliverer, was a man; he was propheſied of before, that he ſhould be the ſeed of the woman; the ſeed of Abraham; and in the fulneſs of time he was made of a woman; born of a virgin; the Word was made fleſh: and he became man, a true man; he went through all the ſtages of man, conception, childhood, youth, riper age: he was a diſtreſſed man, a man of ſorrows, and acquainted with grief. He was a mortal as we are; and actually died as we muſt; he died a painful, ſhameful, and ignominious death, which we were commemorating at this occaſion.

2. We

2. We may consider the Deliverer in his divinity; as a WISE Man. Wisdom dwells not with fallen men; they had all their heads cracked by the fall of Adam, and were become fools, having folly bound up in their nature: therefore the man, who is the Deliverer, must be a man that never fell in Adam; a wise man; that is, God as well as man: one that, with the nature of man, hath the wisdom of God; yea, and is the Wisdom of God, 1 Cor. i. 24. It is he that says, I Wisdom dwell with prudence, Prov. viii. 12. And it is of him the Father says, My Servant shall deal prudently, Isa. lii. 13. And it is by his infinite wisdom that he delivered the city; of which more afterwards. He is essentially wise, being Wisdom itself; the God whose understanding is infinite. He is communicatively wise; having all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge hid in him, and the Spirit of wisdom to give.

3. We may view the Deliverer in his humiliation, as a POOR Man; poor in outward respects: Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet, for our sakes, he became poor; that we through his poverty might be rich, 2 Cor. viii. 9. He had all the riches, and all the fulness of the Godhead in him, yet he became poor. Many are poor against their will, but he became poor voluntarily: he became a poor servant; though he thought it no robbery to be equal with God, yet he took upon him the form of a servant; taking on our nature, not in its best condition, but the lowest state of our nature. He became poor in his birth, poor in his life, and poor in his death. He was born, not of a queen, but of a mean virgin; born, not in a palace, but in a stable, laid in a manger; The foxes had holes, and the birds of the air had nests; but the Son of man had not where to lay his head. He had nothing to pay tribute withal till he ordered a fish to bring it. He was ministered unto, in his life and in his death, by reason of his real extreme poverty. He was poor as a man, and yet wise as God. The poverty of men, and the wisdom of God met and centred in him.

4. We may consider the Deliverer in his destination to this work; he was FOUND in the city. He was found of God, who says, I have found a Ransom; I have found David my servant, Job xxiii. 24. Psal. lxxxix. 20. He was found in the city among men; and was chosen out of the people, Psal. lxxxix. 19. He was found in fashion as a man, Phil. ii. 8. He was found willing and chearfully ready to undertake this work of redemption and deliverance, Psal. xl. 6. Heb. x. 6. Lo I come, I delight to do thy will. He was found able and well qualified for the work, Psalm lxxxix. 19. I have laid help upon One that is mighty. And as he had a personal fitness, being God as well as man, and God-Man in one person; so he that found him did also fit him by the supereminent unction of the Holy Ghost, Psalm lxxxix. 20. I have found David my servant, with my holy oil have I anointed him. Thus, Him hath God the Father sealed for this work, John vi. 27. And this is what Christ acknowledges of himself, Isa. lxi. 1. The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, because he hath anointed me, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God; to deliver the city.

2*dly*, How the deliverance is effected. Here two things are to be a little opened, 1. The matter of his work; He delivered the city. 2. The manner of the deliverance; By his wisdom.

[1.] In general, the matter of his redemption work, He delivered the LITTLE CITY; he raised the siege. Here we are to view how he manages the work, in opposition to the great kings, that built great bulwarks against the little city.

1. If we view the siege as formed by the Great King; that is, the Great God, when the great bulwarks built against the city are, the broken law of God, cursing the sinner; and the injured attributes of God, justice, holiness, and truth, all standing in battle array against the sinner, behold, the poor wise man, he comes and fulfils that law that we had broken, and bears the curse that we had incurred. When the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his son made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, Gal. vi. 4. Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us, Gal. iii. 13. And, in this way, he satisfies the justice of God, vindicates the holiness of God, and clears the truth of God; Christ hath loved us, and hath given himself a sacrifice of a sweet smelling savour to God, Eph. v. 2. He is become the Lord our righteousness; and the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believe: and in him mercy and truth have met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other, that God might save, and shew mercy on the little city, in a consistency with the honour of his injured attributes, which are now glorified more by his obedience and satisfaction than ever they were dishonoured by our sin and rebellion. Thus he brake down the great bulwarks that the great King of heaven and earth had built against the little city, and that by the King's order and allowance, and according to his command and will; This commandment have I received of my Father.

2. If we view the siege as formed by the devil, the great king of hell, and prince of the power of darkness, that rules in the hearts of the children of disobedience, we will find him raising this siege partly by the price of his blood, that he shed for us; and partly by the power of his Spirit, which is given to us.—By the price of his blood, he delivers from the devil's kingdom; for, By death he destroyed him that had the power of death, that is, the devil, Heb. xi. 14. And, For this purpose the Son of God was manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil, 1 John iii. 8. And he was thus manifested, according to the original promise, Gen. iii. 15. The seed of the woman shall bruise the head of the serpent. Christ took a wooden cross, as it were, a tree in his arms, and therewith beat down the great bulwarks that Satan built against the little city. As by means of a tree the devil built his battering engine; so, by means of a tree, Christ demolished his building. For, upon the cross, Jesus Christ spoiled principalities and powers, and made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them in it, Col. xi. 15. —Again, by the power of his Spirit he destroyed the devil's bulwarks, when he gives spiritual armour to the citizens, the shield of faith, and the sword of the Spirit, and the rest of that spiritual artillery, mentioned, Eph. vi. 11,—17. Whereby they quench the fiery darts of the devil, demolish his bulwarks, resist the devil, and overcome by the power and strength of the Captain of their salvation. Though they constantly fight while here; yet they gradually defeat the devil and his instruments, that oppose

oppoſe themſelves to Chriſt and his people, to his cauſe and intereſt. Truth prevails always at laſt; and the friends of truth overcome by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their teſtimony, Rev. xii. 11.

3. If we view the ſiege as formed by the great king Sin, which naturally reigns in our mortal bodies. How doth the poor wiſe man deſtroy the great bulwarks thereof? Why, this he doth, both meritoriouſly, giving himſelf a ſacrifice for ſin, John i. 29. Behold, the Lamb of God, that taketh away the ſin of the world. Heb. ix. 26. But now once in the end of the world, has he appeared to put away ſin, by the ſacrifice of himſelf. And then he doth it efficaciouſly, and that, partly by the actual imputation of his righteouſneſs, for removing the guilt of ſin in juſtification; and partly by the effectual operation of his Spirit, for removing the rule of ſin in ſanctification.—In juſtification, he deſtroys the legal power of ſin; for, The ſtrength of ſin is the law: but when the righteouſneſs of God is imputed and received, and Chriſt is become the end of the law for righteouſneſs to the perſon, then the law, being ſatisfied, has no more power to keep the perſon under the curſe, whereof the power of ſin is the leading part.—And, again, in ſanctification, he deſtroys the actual reigning power of ſin. Both theſe are imported, I think, in that word, Rom. viii. 2. The law of the ſpirit of life, in Chriſt Jeſus, hath made me free from the law of ſin and death: and both are particularly ſpoken of in the following verſes, 3, and 4. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak though the fleſh, God ſending his own Son in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, and for ſin condemned ſin in the fleſh; that the righteouſneſs of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the fleſh but after the Spirit. Here is the legal power of ſin deſtroyed: and ver. 13. If ye through the Spirit mortify the deeds of the body you ſhall live; there is the deſtroying of the actual reigning power of ſin. Thus, by his pardoning and purifying grace, he demoliſhes the bulwarks of ſin, and all by the means of the goſpel, as it is the power of God to ſalvation; The weapons of this warfare being not carnal, but mighty, through God, to the pulling down of ſtrong holds, caſting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalts itſelf againſt the knowledge of God; and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Chriſt, 2 Cor. x. 4, 5. Again,

4. If we view the ſiege as formed by the great king Death. Behold, our king Jeſus, the poor wiſe man, delivers the city, by overturning the great bulwarks that death built: and this he doth by removing both the ſting of death and the victory of the grave; The ſting of death is ſin, which he removes as I have been juſt now ſaying, both meritoriouſly and efficaciouſly, till it be perfectly removed in glory, where we ſhall be like him, by ſeeing him as he is. The victory of the grave, which is corruption; the corruption of the body, he is to remove at the great day, when this corruptible ſhall put on incorruption, and this mortal ſhall put on immortality. And that ſaying ſhall be brought to paſs, Death is ſwallowed up in victory. Hence in the faith of all this, the believer may ſing that triumphant ſong, O death, where is thy ſting? O grave, where is thy victory? The ſting of death is ſin, the ſtrength of ſin is the law; but thanks be to God, that has given us the victory, through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Cor. xv. 54,—57.——Thus you have a view of the deliverance in the matter of it. But then,

[2.] In particular, we are led here to conſider the manner of it. It was in infinite WISDOM; He by his infinite wiſdom delivered the city. As it is ſaid of his works of creation, In wiſdom hath he made them all; ſo of his work of redemtion, In wiſdom hath he delivered the city. He made the earth by the word of his power, eſtabliſhed the world by his wiſdom, and ſtretched out the heavens by his diſcretion, Jer. x. 12. And it is even he who, by his wiſdom, delivered the city. Particularly,

1. By his wiſdom he removed all the impediments that ſtood in the way of our ſalvation, while he gave himſelf a ranſom for many, ſatisfied the law and juſtice of God, defeated the devil, deſtroyed ſin, and conquered death. And thus, except one great king, whom he brings to peace and reconciliation with the city, he deſtroyed all the other great kings, and their great bulwarks, in ſo much that we may ſay, He ſmote great kings, for his mercy endureth for ever; and ſlew famous kings for his mercy endureth for ever! O the infinite wiſe Captain of ſalvation, who could, by his wiſdom, deliver a little city, ſo powerfully beſieged!

2. By his wiſdom he united the moſt diſtant and contrary extremes, while God and man are joined in one perſon. The infinite and eternal God, with a bit of clay; which is a myſtery ten thouſand times greater than if an angel had become a worm. He became a poor man, that he might deliver the poor city: Great is the myſtery of godlineſs, God made manifeſt in the fleſh.

3. By his wiſdom he united the moſt contrary intereſts, God's intereſt, and man's: the intereſt of his glory, and our ſalvation; they are quite different, after the fall. In ſome reſpects, (when man came to have no other intereſt but that of the devil) God's intereſt and glory ſeemed to require man's deſtruction; and yet it was man's intereſt to be delivered: God's intereſt, in infinite wiſdom, is made to agree with the intereſt of the little city, while Chriſt is ſet forth to be a propitiation, that the glory of God's juſtice and righteouſneſs might be reached, as much in ſaving the city, as it can be by deſtroying them who are without the city, and more.

4. By his wiſdom he united the moſt contrary affections, namely, God's hatred and love; his hatred of ſin, and his love to the ſinner. Nothing more hateful to God than ſin, and yet nothing more dear to God than the ſinner that is in Chriſt, in whom God is well-pleaſed. Infinite wiſdom contrived the reconciliation of the oppoſite-like affection in God, that the city might be delivered by the wiſdom of God in a myſtery; the manifold wiſdom of God.

5. By his wiſdom he brings about the greateſt things by the moſt unlikely means. In delivering the city, who would have thought that the ſeed of a poor woman, that was deceived, ſhould bruiſe the head of the ſerpent, the deceiver; that a poor woman ſhould bring forth a poor man child; and poor man ſhould conquer all the armed legions of hell; and that by his ſtripes we ſhould be healed; and by his blood we ſhould be waſhed; and this blood ſhould ſap the foundations of all the great bulwarks that were raiſed againſt the little city?

6. By his wiſdom he brings the greateſt good out of the greateſt evil. Could there be any thing worſe than ſin? Yet out of this, wiſdom brings greater glory to God, and greater happineſs to man. God had built the fabric of the old covenant venant with brick, as it were; the devil, and our first parents, pulled it down. But, says God, I will build with cedar; and all the devils in hell shall not bring it down: Mercy shall be built up for ever, Psal. lxxxix. 2. O here is wisdom! And we may say, To the King eternal, immortal, the only wise God, be glory and honour for ever and ever. Amen, 1 Tim. i. 17.

IV. The fourth general head proposed, was, To speak of the ingratitude of the citizens, their pronness to forget their deliverer; yet no man remembered the same poor man. This is the sin that God has challenged in his church many times; Deut. xxxii. 18. Of the rock that begat thee, thou hast been unmindful, and hast forgotten God that formed thee. Psal. cvi. 21. They forgot God their Saviour, who had done great things in Egypt. They soon forgot his work.

I might here speak a little to these four things. 1. Of the nature of their unmindfulness or forgetfulness. 2. The object thereof; they forgot the POOR wise man, and his work. 3. The universality of this oblivion, NO man remembered the same poor man. 4. The reason of this forgetfulness.

1. We are first to view the nature of this oblivion. For understanding thereof you would know, that forgetfulness of Christ is either total or partial. A total forgetfulness takes place in the wicked, of whom it is said, God is not in all their thoughts. A partial forgetfulness is coincident to believers themselves, who may, in a great measure, forget what God hath done to their souls. Actual forgetfulness is what the godly may be guilty of, as David after his gross sin of adultery, when he was contriving the murder of Uriah. But there is an habitual forgetfulness peculiar to the wicked, who desire not the knowledge of God; and never remember God till they be driven to it with a vengeance, as it is said of these, When he slew them, then they sought him; they remembered that God was their rock, and the high God their Redeemer. They never remember till God bring a mortal stroke.—But now, this forgetfulness imports the want of a spiritual view and discovery of God; and the want of that lively impression of him which the right view of him doth require. We cannot rightly remember God, if we see not his perfections shining in his work, as David did, when he says of God's works, In wisdom hast thou made them all. When we see the wisdom and power, and other attributes of God, shining in his works, particularly in his delivering the little city, the church, then and not till then, do we rightly remember them; and when we see his great end in all is the glory of these perfections; and entertain due impressions hereof so as to remember not only in a speculative, but in a practical and appropriating manner; and when we remember his delivering us, in particular from the power and policy of the great things that were against us, and render to him the praise due to his name.

2. The object of this forgetfulness: No man remembered the same POOR WISE MAN. We are apt, and naturally prone to forget our Creator, to forget our Redeemer, and Saviour, and Protector, and Benefactor, our best friend.—We forget the Deliverer himself, the poor wise man found in the city. We forget his humanity, that he is a man; his divinity, that he is the wisdom of God; his humiliation, and poverty, that for our sakes he became poor: and his destination to this redemption work; all is forgotten. We forget all the deliverances he hath wrought, the redemption he hath accomplished.—We forget his works of creation, though yet the heavens declare his glory.—We forget his works of providence, both prosperous and adverse; both ordinary and extraordinary, as Israel did, of whom it is said, Jesuran waxed fat and kicked: he forgot God that made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his salvation. They forgot the plagues of Egypt; the drowning of the Egyptians; the solemn appearance of God on Sinai, when the hill trembled under the weight of God; and the flames ascended to the middle heaven.—We forgot his works of redemption. He redeems from the fury of justice, the curse of the law, the bondage of sin, the slavery of Satan, the sting of death; from the wrath of God; that terrible wrath, that intollerable wrath, that interminable wrath, that powerful and eternal wrath, that ever-coming wrath; he delivers from the wrath to come: and yet we are apt to forget the Deliverer, and the deliverance! We forget this redemption, and the necessity of it; the sufficiency of it; the excellency of it; the efficacy of it; the fulness of it; the acceptableness of it; all is forgotten.—We forget also his work of regeneration, the work of conviction, and humiliation; the work of conversion and sanctification. Though this work of grace effectuates a real change, a sensible change, an universal change; yet all may be forgotten, in so much, that we may pose the believer himself, have you a regeneration frame, the same temper of spirit you had in the day of believing? Where is the kindness of thy youth, the love of thine espousals?—Yea, communications and manifestations, and communion experiencesmay all be fearfully forgotten.

3. The universality of this oblivion; NO MAN remembered the same poor man. That this unbelieving forgetfulness of Christ, the Redeemer, is universal, appears evident from two arguments.

(1.) From the instances of all ages of the world.—The first man that ever was, began his apostacy from God by his sin; he forgot the favour of God in giving him such an excellent being, and such excellent benefits; forgot the covenant that God entered into with him, forbidding him to eat of the tree that was in the midst of the garden upon peril of eternal ruin to himself and his posterity; yet the hissing of the serpent drove all out his mind.—How quickly did Noah forget the great deliverance from the deluge, when all the rest of the world was overwhelmed in the midst of the waters; he was no sooner saved from water, than he was drowned in wine.—How quickly did Lot forget the deliverance from the flames of Sodom, and fell into the fire of lust.—Solomon forgot the God that appeared to him thrice, and turned to idolatry.—David quickly forgot the Lord's delivering him from Saul, and fell into the sin of adultery and murder.—Israel forgot God and all his works of wonder.—The ten lepers, all but one, forgot to return and give praise to God that healed them.—The disciples of Christ, quickly forgot the miracles of the loaves; they got sweet communion with Christ, yet Judas and his party soon drove all out of their minds. No man remembered the poor wise man.

(2.) It appears from the many remembrancers and memorials that the Lord Jesus has set up of himself, and his works, as preservative against this forgetting him.—God's works of creation are his remembrancers, while the heavens declare his glory.—God's works of providence are his remembrancers. He hath not left himself without a witness, even among the heathen, giving them rain and fruitful seasons: every drop of rain is a memorial of God.—God's ordinances are his remembrancers; why has he given us Sabbaths and sacraments, but to be memorials of the works of Christ, and the death of Christ? Do this in remembrance of me.—In a word, the Holy Ghost is given to be a remembrancer, John xiv. 26. I will give the Comforter, and he shall bring all things to your remembrance. I have been long preaching among you, might Christ say, and given you many a sermon; but all is gone, you forget all; therefore, I will send the Holy Ghost to be your remembrancer.——These things evidence the universality of this sin: No man remembered the poor wise man. Now consider here,

4. The reason of this forgetfulness. And there is these four reasons we shall assign for it.

(1.) It flows from the universal depravation of our nature: the memory, with all the rest of the faculties of the soul, got a dash by the fall of Adam; our heads were dashed to pieces when we fell from such a height of happiness to such a depth of misery.

(2.) It flows from the little esteem and value that people have for the poor wise man, and his great works of redeeming and delivering us. It is strange to think, how much the works of men will be admired, and the works of God slighted. If a physician shall perform a cure upon a man that is desperately diseased, and dangerously ill, the man will be more taken up with the physician's work than with God's work; he will pay his physician, but never thank his God. Many will read the works of men with admiration, and read history with rapture, but will read the history of the life and death of Christ without ever being moved.

(3.) It flows from this that the memory is stuffed with other things, even with the trash of hell; there is no room for Christ and his works of wonder: it was a base treatment of Christ when he was sent out to the stable, laid in a manger, no room for him in the inn. But it is a thousand times worse, when your heart is so full of the world, lusts, and idols, that there is no room for Christ.

(4.) It flows from the little impression that Christ and his redeeming work takes upon us. Naturalists give this as a reason of remembrance, when a thing makes a mighty impression on the brain. But, alas! the works of God flee over our heads, like a shadow, and so are forgotten. The best thing for the memory is the Spirit of God coming with life and power to the soul: I will never forget thy words, says David; why? for by them thou hast quickened me. It left an impression, and therefore abode. When the word of God, the works of God, have no impression, no wonder they are soon forgotten: there is a fowl of the air, the prince of the power of the air, the devil, he picks away every thing you hear, if your hearts be not closets for Christ. If he were your treasure, your hearts would be the cabinets; Where the treasure is, there the heart is also.

V. The fifth and last thing proposed, was, The application of the subject. And this we shall essay in an use of information, lamentation, trial, and exhortation.

We are, first, to deduce some inferences for information. Is it so, as has been said, hence see,

1. The despicable case of the church of God in this world; it is but like a little city, and a few men in it. It is a despised city. The world calls it an outcast, saying, This is Zion whom no man seeks after, Jer. xxx. 17. As Christ was despised and rejected of men; so are his friends and followers: they are a little flock, and a despised flock. Whatever be the state of the church visible; sometimes when it appears fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners; and when her visible glory, the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government is not defaced; yet the church invisible, in this world, is, for ordinary, a poor, small, despised company; of whom it is said, Zeph. ii. 12. I will leave in the midst of thee, an afflicted and poor people, and they shall trust in the name of the Lord.

2. Hence see the dangerous circumstance of the church of God in this world. It is a city besieged by a great king, building great bulwarks against it. The church is like a bush burning in the midst of the flames: it is in a dangerous militant state. The church of God is the man-child, which the red dragon stands ready to devour, as soon as it is born, Rev. xii. 4. What a helpless case is the church of God into, in outward appearance! A great city cannot stand out well against a great king, and great bulwarks; far less a little city, and few men within it.

3. Hence see the marvellous grace of God in finding out a Saviour, and a great one, to save the little city; and, behold, The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was great and rich, yet, for our sakes he became poor; and in the capacity of a poor man, though yet infinitely wise, being God as well as man, he delivered the city, and raised the siege. O see and admire his wisdom, by which he delivered the city!

4. Hence see the matchless ingratitude of the visible church, where such a great deliverance is wrought; that no man should remember the poor wise man; that they should be guilty of such universal oblivion. Unbelief discovers itself by unmindfulness; the life of faith is a life of spiritual rememberance: but unbelief appears by forgetfulness: by faith we remember Christ, but by unbelief we forget him, and all his acts of kindness and love, though a standing ministry be appointed to help our memory; and, Oh! what a horrid ingratitude is it to forget him that minded us? Forgetfulness is the spring of that deluge of atheism and wickedness that over-runs the world, and the present generation; people forget God and Christ. If men did but remember there is a God in heaven, that notices what they do, they could not practise as they do: men have their minds so sunk in a present world, that they mind no other world; they forget him that came to redeem from this present evil world, and to provide a better: while we mind only earthly things we neglect the great salvation, and the great Saviour and Deliverer.

5. Hence see what is here inferred, ver. 16. that wisdom is better than strength: Christ is frequently here, and in the Proverbs represented under the name of Wisdom; and surely the wisdom of Christ is better than the strength of man; man; better than the ſtrength of carnal policy; better than the ſtrength of human reaſon; better than the ſtrength of armies: yet the poor man's wiſdom is deſpiſed, and his words are not heard; Chriſt is deſpiſed, and his goſpel neglected and rejected.

Uſe 2. Let us then apply this doctrine for lamentation over the beſieged city; particularly the church of Scotland. Let us take a view of the church, and then of the profeſſors therein.

Firſt, Of the church of Scotland, more generally as a city beſieged, and a city delivered; and yet a city moſt ungrateful and unmindful of the Deliverer.

1*ſt*, As a city many times, and many ways beſieged, eſpecially by the devil and his inſtruments; whom God, in righteouſneſs, ſuffered to vex and diſturb the city, and build great bulwarks againſt it.

I might here begin with the firſt foundation-ſtone laid in the church of Scotland, more than 1600 years ago, even a few years after Chriſt's aſcenſion, when God, by means of perſecution, ſent Chriſtians and goſpel-profeſſors firſt among us; and we were in a literal ſenſe, a little city and few men in it. How many great bulwarks of pagan darkneſs, and heathen idolatries, were built in oppoſition to the little city, and the little flock, that were the followers of Chriſt, when there was here a temple for Apollo, and there a temple for Diana; one for Jupiter, and another for Juno; one for Mercury, and another for Venus; one for the Sun, and another for the Moon; one for this god and goddeſs, and another for that; and all ſo many temples for the devil, for offering ſo many bloody inhumane ſacrifices upon? We may think, how could the little city ſtand when ſurrounded with ſuch great bulwarks againſt it.

I might go forward to the fifth century, when the little city was firſt formally beſieged, and the great bulwark of popiſh darkneſs, and antichriſtian ſuperſtition built againſt it. When Palladius was ſent from the Pope of Rome to Scotland, the little city did hold out againſt Rome, for a long time, but the ſiege continued againſt the city for no leſs than ten centuries; for, from the time of Palladius, to the Reformation, was about a thouſand years; for, till the fifteenth century, the little city was covered with that dark cloud, over-run, oppreſſed, and almoſt wholly deſtroyed; only amidſt theſe diſmal days, God had his witneſſes, from time to time, that teſtified againſt Rome, and hell, even when they were carrying all before them.

Again, I might deſcend to later times, when the little city was again attacked, and had the great bulwark of prelatical tyranny, and arbitrary power built againſt it; when the inhabitants of the city were hunted, purſued; yea, perſecute to death, impriſoned, fined, confined, baniſhed, martyred and murdered, becauſe of their adhering to the rights and royalties of the glorious Lord and King of the city. Once and again the city was thus moleſted before the late Revolution; and many witneſſes are yet living, that can atteſt the grievous trials of the late reigns.

Further, I might here obſerve how the city has been beſieged and attacked ſeveral ways in our own time, and within our rememberance, as well as at this preſent time; partly without doors, by late foreign invaſions, and a late unnatural rebellion *, wherein a popiſh faction have attempted to ruin the city in all her moſt valuable and ſacred concerns; and theſe attempts favoured, underhand, by parliamentary acts, tollerating errors, and reſtoring patronages; and partly within doors, while unnatural citizens ſeek in a manner to ſap the foundation thereof.

QUEST. Who are theſe within the little city that DISTURB the peace, and deſtroy the foundations of the city?

ANSW. Surely, if there be any party within the city, that are thieves and robbers, not coming in by the doors and gates of the city, but climbing up ſome other way; if there be who ſeek themſelves, and not the welfare of the city; or, that lift up hammers and axes againſt the carved work, the doctrine, worſhip, diſcipline, and government of the city; if there be any that ſtand not to condemn goſpel-truth, and tolerate damnable errors; if there be any that ſtand not to offend the generation of the righteous, and to wound the citizens, and ſmite them, and take away the vail from them; if there be any that violently thruſt in paſtors upon congregations, or officers upon the city over the belly of the citizens, and that diſcourage a holy and pious ſet of officers, and encourage a looſe, legal, erroneous, and ſcandalous ſet; theſe are ſurely the diſturbers of the peace of the city; theſe are building up great bulwarks againſt it.

2*dly*, Take a view of the church of Scotland not only as a city beſieged, but as a city hitherto delivered by the wiſdom of the poor wiſe man, the glorious Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

By his wiſdom he delivered the city, firſt from paganiſm: not only did he make the goſpel take footing in Scotland, in theſe early times of Chriſtianity, ſo quickly after the reſurrection of Chriſt, that ſome reckon he was not fifteen years in heaven, till he ſent the goſpel to Scotland; and about fifteen thereafter ſent another drove of Chriſtians, flying before the ſecond primitive perſecution to our land, becauſe they heard the goſpel was received there: But alſo, in the two hundred and third year of Chriſt, ſet up a Chriſtian king, Donald the firſt, who eſtabliſhed Chriſtianity by law; and broke down the bulwarks of paganiſm, that were ſupported by the Bards, and Druids, and Pagan prieſts. This deliverance he effected by little and little, till heathen idolatry was aboliſhed.

Again, By his wiſdom he remarkably delivered the city, at the glorious Reformation from Popery, and black antichriſtian ſuperſtition. He turned back our long thouſand years captivity, as ſtreams in the ſouth, and made light to ſhine out of darkneſs, by raiſing up burning and ſhining lights, holy, wiſe, and zealous inſtruments, for beginning, carrying on, and advancing that glorious work, and that in a way of Solemn, National Covenanting, from time to time; in which courſe, the Lord gave ſignal evidences of his gracious preſence and countenance.

Again, By his wiſdom he mercifully delivered the city at the late remarkable Revolution, wherein he gave us more than a little reviving in our bondage, that we were under unto Prelacy and tyranny; and put an opportunity in our hands

* Our Author here has his eye probably upon the intended invaſion by France, in favours of the Pretender, Anno 1708, and upon the actual invaſion and Rebellion in the year 1715.

hands of advancing reformation work, more than we had heart and courage to do, at that period. But yet, though the glory of the ſecond temple, was not equal to the glory of the firſt; I mean, the Revolution far inferior to the Reformation; yet, it was ſuch a glorious work of God, in delivering the city from theſe that ſought the utter ruin thereof, that multitudes in this generation, have ſeen the glory of God in his ſanctuary, and been brought to enjoy the privileges and immunities of the city of God; in ſo much, that ſome have thought, that as many have ſhared of the bleſſed fruits of this happy Revolution, within theſe forty years paſt, though in a more diffuſed way through the whole nation, as ſhared formerly of the bleſſed fruits of the former Reformation, in a more confined way at remarkable times and places, when the ſpirit was poured out upon great multitudes at once. Whatever be in this, yet we have reaſon to put a remark upon the wiſdom, power, and grace of our glorious Deliverer.

Finally, By his wiſdom he has from time to time, and even hitherto, delivered the city, not only from invaſions and inſurrections that threatened the ruin of church and ſtate, and reducing of us unto popiſh bondage, and antichriſtian darkneſs: but ſo far has he delivered the city alſo, even from diſturbers and deſtroyers within the city, that goſpel light is yet ſhining among us, and we have yet acceſs to pure goſpel ordinances: we are yet allowed, in peace, to keep our ſolemn feaſts; we have Sabbath upon Sabbath, ſermon upon ſermon; Precept upon precept, and line upon line; and whatever diſorders have been, and do take place in the city, hitherto ſome teſtimony has been kept up; and, I hope, he has reſerved to himſelf a wreſtling remnant in Scotland, both miniſters and people, that have occaſion to ſay, by reflection, on all the deliverances he has hither granted, as it is, Pſal. cxxiv. 1,—4. Had not the Lord been on our ſide, when men roſe up againſt us, they had ſwallowed us up quick: the waters had overwhelmed us, and the proud waters had gone over our ſouls.——Thus we may view it as a delivered city.

3*dly*, We may look upon this church as a city moſt ungrateful and unmindful of her Deliverer: and this is the great cauſe of all the diſorders, diviſions, and confuſions, all the troubles and diſtreſſes, that befal the city; No man remembered the ſame poor man. We are univerſally unbelieving and unmindful; forget to render the praiſes due to the Deliverer: we have no due conſideration of what God has done for us; no deep impreſſion of his wonderful mercy; no practical remembrance of his favour; his goodneſs has not led us to repentance. No wonder that many deſolations are to be ſeen in the city; for, many times Chriſt has ſaid to us, as to Jeruſalem, How often would I have gathered thy children under my wings, as a hen doth her chickens, and ye would not; therefore, behold, your houſe is left deſolate. No man remembered the poor wiſe man, who is the great Deliverer of the city.

Where is the man that remembers duly the great deliverance that God gave to Scotland at the firſt plantation of the goſpel, when he payed ſuch an early viſit to us, when we were nothing but a pack of blind pagans, when we were worſhipping nothing but ſtocks, and ſtones, and devils? Where is the man that remembers the great deliverance he wrought for us at the glorious Reformation, when he threw down the bulwarks of popery ſo many ages after he demoliſhed the bulwarks of paganiſm? Where is the man that remembers the merciful deliverance wrought for us at the Revolution, (for, I confine myſelf to the moſt known and remarkable periods) the fruits of which deliverance we yet enjoy (under the influence of a peaceful prince, whole royal family's ſucceſſion to the throne was interwoven with that remarkable period;) which goodneſs and mercy of our great and glorious Deliverer, we ought to remember as long as we enjoy theſe goſpel ordinances in peace and freedom, and without fear of outward hoſtile diſturbance, ſuch as the followers of Chriſt met with in former reigns, before the ſaid merciful Revolution? Again, where is the man that remembers the many, many other particular deliverances, former and later, that this land has been favoured with? And, how many a time he has beat down the great bulwarks of hell, againſt the little city?

Oh! ungrateful Scotland! How have we forgotten our ſolemn covenanted allegiance to our glorious Deliverer. We, again and again, ſwore with uplifted hands to be for him and his truth, and to defend the doctrine, worſhip, diſcipline, and government of his houſe, according to the ſcripture pattern, in oppoſition to all errors and antichriſtian corruptions whatſoever. What evidences have we given of our ungratitude and forgetfulneſs, that, inſtead of remembering theſe national engagements, we have, in many inſtances, contradicted our covenanted allegiance, and deſerted our covenanted principles, broken, burnt, and buried our covenants! Do we thus requite the Lord, O fooliſh and unwiſe? What ingratitude appears towards our Deliverer in the encroachments made upon the rules of God's word, which we ſwore to walk by? and to the conſtitution of this church, which our reformers declared to be founded thereupon, in the robbing God's people of the right to chuſe their own paſtors; a right to which our church, by her books of diſcipline, aſſert to belong to them, by the warrant of God's word? But our defection and receſſion from the good old way in that matter, has come to a height, by ſeveral ſteps: to me this receſſion ſeems to have been commenced in the aſſembly 1649, confirmed and advanced in the parliament 1690, and now ſome way conſummate and compleated in the preſent year 1732, ſo as it never was before by any deed of the church*.

Again, what ingratitude do we manifeſt towards our Deliverer in our forgetting and neglecting

* That the origin of Patronage flowed from the papal chair, is granted by every one; that it hath been a heavy burden on the church, and productive of the moſt direful conſequences, is abundantly notour; that it never did comport with preſbytery, but was always incompatible thereto, is evident, from its being frequently aboliſhed when preſbytery had the aſcendant; that it hath always, ſince the Reformation, been looked upon as an intollerable yoke and inſupportable grievance in the church of Scotland, is manifeſt, from the many appearances ſhe hath made againſt it, and attempts uſed to get rid of it. This is not at all ſurpriſing, ſeeing it is contrary to the ſacred Volume, and inconſiſtent with our Standards. That Patronage is neither agreeable to the rule of God's word, nor apoſtolic practice, is apparent from Acts i. 15. vi. 2. viii. 14. xiii. 3. xiv. 23. xvi. 9. 1 John iv. 1. 2 John ver. 10. That it is inconſiſtent with our Standards, is plain from the Second Book of Diſcipline, Chap. xii. Par. 10, 11.——How criminally guilty then muſt both the Preſenters and Accepters of preſentations be?—The PRESENTERS of preſentations muſt be highly culpable, ſince they are diametrically oppoſite to the ſacred canon, contrary to reaſon itſelf, the practice of the primitive and pureſt ages of the church; a plain incroachment upon glecting to appoint national thankſgiving days, for the many mercies and deliverances that God, from time to time gave, and national faſt-days and humiliation-days for our national guilt; particularly, in this univerſal ſin of not remembering our Deliverer and deliverance, but caſting all his goodneſs behind our backs? What ingratitude are we chargeable with in not improving goſpel light yet continued with us?

How guilty are we in not remembering God, and the righteouſneſs of God, amidſt all the evils that befel the little city? for, Is there evil in the city, and I have not done it, ſaith the Lord? Though we cannot juſtify any treacherous Judas, who betrays Chriſt and his truth; nay, nor vindicate any timorous Peters, who, under ſome temptation, may deny Chriſt and his cauſe at a time; nor ought to juſtify any wicked inſtruments of the diſpeace, deſtruction, and diſturbance of the city; yet we ought to juſtify God in all that does befal us, and acknowlege his righteouſneſs; for, Have we not procured theſe things unto ourſelves, in that we have forſaken the Lord our God, the Deliverer of the city? Jer. ii. 17. Our own wickedneſs doth correct us, and our backſlidings reprove us. We have not rightly improven the liberties and privileges of the city, that ſometimes we have enjoyed; therefore, God juſtly ſuffers us to be a city robbed and ſpoiled, rent and diſturbed. Let us not, therefore, rail upon miniſters, aſſemblies, judicatories, or inſtruments. We ought not to bring a railing accuſation againſt the devil himſelf, but rather ſay, The Lord rebuke thee: the Lord rebuke the devil and his inſtruments; the Lord rebuke an erroneous ſpirit; the Lord rebuke a backſliding ſpirit; the Lord rebuke the inſtruments of the church's calamity. The Lord is righteous, for we have ſinned. Say not ſuch and ſuch perſons have brought ruin upon the church; for, it is you and I, by our ſins, that have provoked God to do it, and will provoke him to more terrible wrath, if we be not humbled for our ſins; and particularly for our not remembering duly our Lord Jeſus, the Deliverer of the city. But now, Secondly, To forbear any farther about the public, and cloſe with what more particularly concerns every one of us, how may we lament our forgetfulneſs of Chriſt? Though his name be as ointment poured forth, we do not remember his love, his precepts, his promiſe, providence, and ordinances. How is this evident? Alas! when do we ſit down and admire him, and his works of redeeming love? If you ſee a curious piece of art, how are you aſtoniſhed? and yet how little filled with wonder at what God has done! We may poſe the conſciences of ſome, whether they ever ſat down, a quarter of an hour, all their life-time, full of wonder at the great deliverance Chriſt hath wrought for ſinners?— Again, when do you trumpet forth the deliverance that Chriſt hath wrought, and declare to others what Chriſt hath wrought for you, or for his church? This is the exerciſe of the ſaints, with a charming accent, to cry out, Thou art glorious in holineſs, fearful in praiſes, excellent in working, doing wonders.— Again, when do you meditate upon him, and upon what he has done for you, and the church, the little city? This is the exerciſe of the ſaints that remember him; My meditation of him ſhall be ſweet. Alas! we all want conſideration; The ox knoweth his owner, and the aſs his maſter's crib, but my people do not know, Iſrael doth not conſider. Conſider how ſinful and provoking this evil of forgetfulneſs is, and the hurtfulneſs of it: it is a manifeſt contempt not to remember or regard the operation of his hand. If a ſkilful artiſt ſhould ſpend half his time in making a curious piece of work, and bring it to you, and you ſhould undervalue it, how highly might the man be offended? How much more may God be offended when you forget his works! God has ſpent ſix days in the work of creation, near ſix thouſand years in the work of providence, and as much time, yea, an eternity itſelf, in the work of redemption; and ſhall we forget and undervalue all? What a manifeſt contempt is this of God, and his Chriſt! It is alſo horrid unthankfulneſs, that he ſhould work for us, and work in us, and we never think upon it. It is a defeating the deſign of his work. His deſign is, that we may ſee his attributes ſhining in his works of grace and mercy, in which ſo many wonders ſhine: wonderful wiſdom, wonderful power, wonderful holineſs, wonderful juſtice, wonderful mercy, wonderful truth. His deſign is, that his doings may be incentives to duty in us, and that we may publiſh his doings to poſterity; but, by forgetfulneſs, we endeavour to defeat all his deſigns. This forgetfulneſs is the mother of apoſtacy. If we forget our duty, we forſake our duty; if we forget God, we forſake God, and depart from him. This forgetfulneſs provokes God: when the city forgets what he hath done for it, this provokes God to do no more for the city. It provokes God, inſtead of works of deliverance and mercy, to work ſome work of judgment, and to perform a ſtrange work. If we forget God, we provoke him, by the law of retaliation, to forget us: yea, total forgetfulneſs of God brings on univerſal ruin; The wicked ſhall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God.

Uſe 3. We might apply this doctrine for trial. Hence you may try your ſtate. If you be in a ſafe ſtate, then,

1. You will be like a little city; you will be very little in your own eyes; a poor helpleſs creature in your own eſteem.

2. You have ſeen yourſelf beſieged; you have upon the natural rights of mankind, and the laws of free ſocieties; a cruel oppreſſion upon ſocieties of men, who duely value their immortal ſouls; and opens a door for a corrupt and lax miniſtry to enter into the church.— The ACCEPTERS cannot but be highly guilty becauſe, if the Patron is guilty of a ſinful uſurpation over the church of God, and ſpoiling and robbing her of her juſt rights and privileges to chooſe her own officers and overſeers, then the Accepter becomes partner with him, approving him in his ſin, homologating his uſurped power, encourages and hardens him in his guilt. Beſides, the Accepter acts contrary to the known principles of preſbyterians, and their own engagements; ſadly prejudges the ſucceſs of the goſpel, and their own miniſtry; increaſe the prejudices of the people againſt themſelves; and opens a door to many diſmal evils, as Simoniacal pactions, unchriſtian contentions in judicatories, oppreſſive concuſſions in pariſhes, vexatious proſecutions, and ſcandalous intruſions; which is ſtill the more unaccountable, in regard they have it in their power by an act 1719, to render Patronage abortive, by rejecting the preſentation.—— From the above hint, the conduct of the aſſembly 1732, in appending, by their act, ſuch a ſanction to Patronage, muſt appear vaſtly ſtrange; a ſanction unparalleled by any preceeding aſſembly. That theſe who ſhould be the guardians of the church's rights and liberties, and who ought to contribute the utmoſt of their endeavours to maintain them, and embrace every opportunity, to be quit of any incroachments made upon them, ſhould themſelves wreath a yoke about the necks of diſciples, which neither they nor their forefathers were able to bear, how amazing! how inconſiſtent!— As the arbitrary proceedings in the aſſembly in this matter, was one of the principal grounds that gave riſe to the Seceſſion, it was judged proper to give this ſhort hint, that that affair might appear in its proper light. See above, p. 631.

ſeen yourſelf to be under the wrath of God, under the power of the devil, under the dominion of ſin and death: you have ſeen great bulwarks built up againſt you, which it was impoſſible for you to bring down; and that you were undone for ever unleſs you met with a Deliverer.

3. If your ſtate be ſafe you have a view of Chriſt, the Deliverer and Saviour; you have got a view of him as a man, a God-man, a poor man, a poor but wiſe man, a man found out of God for this work. Have you ſeen him to be the wiſdom of God, and the power of God? And have you ſeen the wiſdom of God ſhining in his delivering the city, by ſatisfying the juſtice of God, deſtroying the works of the devil, giving himſelf a ſacrifice for ſin, and, by death, delivering from the ſting of death, and ſo the wiſdom of God in deſtroying the bulwarks that were built againſt you?

4. Have you been brought to the believing remembrance of him, to a daily remembrance of him; and are you afflicted that you remember him ſo little? But your errand to a communion-table was to remember him, and what he hath done for you; and it is your deſire and endeavour to remember him ſtill, and to remember his love more than wine; and to remember to live on him, and to live to him?

Uſe 4. I would cloſe with a word of exhortation.

1. That you would come to Chriſt the Deliverer of the city. O ſinner! while you are without Chriſt you are in a dangerous caſe; you are like a little city, having great kings againſt you, erecting great bulwarks againſt you.—God's bulwarks are ſet againſt you; his juſtice, his wrath, his curſe, his vengeance; how can you eſcape? Are you able to fight againſt God?—The devil's bulwarks are againſt you; and you cannot ſtand againſt his temptations; he will tempt you to ſin till he turn you to hell, if he get his will of you.—Sin's bulwarks are againſt you; the guilt of ſin, the power of ſin you ly under: ſin will preſs you to hell if you be not delivered.—Death's bulwarks are againſt you; how ſoon you ſhall die is uncertain; perhaps it may be this night, or to-morrow, or the next day; you know not preciſely: but come death when it will, if it meet you out of Chriſt, it will have a terrible ſting, a terrible train of woes and miſeries to all eternity; the firſt death will be followed with the ſecond death, which is the lake which burns with fire and brimſtone, Rev. xxi. 8. And therefore, O ſinner! flee from the wrath to come; flee for refuge to Chriſt the Deliverer.

Will you come to the God-man for deliverance? Will you inliſt yourſelf with the poor wiſe man? Will you go with this man? You have no wiſdom to deliver yourſelves, no more than you have power; but he, by his wiſdom, delivers the city. Though you have been playing the fool all your days, and though you be never ſuch a witleſs fool, this man minds you; here is wiſdom to deliver you: He is made of God to you wiſdom. By his wiſdom he ſatisfied God's juſtice; by his wiſdom he defeat the devil; by his wiſdom he deſtroyed ſin; by his wiſdom he conquered death. O take on with the Deliverer, and you have the deliverance; for, he that is the Saviour is the ſalvation of ſinners. Though you can do nothing, it needs be no ſtop to you, for wiſdom can do all for you. O be content that you be nothing, and that he by his wiſdom be all to you, and do all for you. It is a leading part of faith to know that you cannot ſave or deliver yourſelves, and to welcome the Saviour and ſalvation brought to your hand; and believingly to remember what he has done for you, and what he is ready to do to you. Say not, there ſtands ſo many things in the way; darkneſs, deadneſs, hardneſs, unbelief, enmity, and innumerable evils that you need to be delivered from; for it is his office to deliver the city, to deliver the ſoul from all theſe bulwarks of hell; ſince he by his infinite wiſdom offers to deliver, put all the work in his wiſe and powerful hands.

2. I would exhort you to remember the Deliverer; let it not be his complaint, No man remembered the poor wiſe man. O remember him that remembered you in your low eſtate; that remembered you from eternity; that remembered you when he was upon the croſs; that remembers you now in heaven, when he intercedes for you at the Father's right-hand; for, he ever lives to make interceſſion; and is he ever remembering you, and will you never remember him? Remember what he has done for you; believe all that ever he did was for you; his works of creation, providence, and redemption is on your account. You have an intereſt in all his works; therefore, do not forget his works. Conſider, that he remembers you when you forget him. Yea, when you forget yourſelf; Zion ſaid, The Lord hath forgotten me: but the Lord ſaid, Can a woman forget her ſucking child, that ſhe ſhould not have compaſſion on the ſon of her womb? Yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee.

We ſhall now ſhut up the whole diſcourſe by giving you two directions.

1. O ſeek the holy Ghoſt to be your Remembrancer; ſome on hearing the word have committed it to the Lord by fervent prayer, that he would keep it for them; and that ſame very word has been brought home to their hearts, with unſpeakable pleaſure in the day of their darkneſs. The Spirit of God is the beſt Remembrancer; ſeek he may teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance.

2. Seek for a new look of Chriſt: Chriſt looked upon Peter, and then Peter remembered Chriſt and his word. A look of Chriſt will make you remember your ſin with grief and ſorrow. O ſtudy a perpetual remembrance of him, ſo as never to forget him and his kindneſs; and a practical remembrance of him, ſo as though you cannot remember him, ſo as to mind all that he ſays, yet you may remember to do what he ſays, and to glorify your Deliverer with your hearts, lips, and lives. Remember what great things he has done for the little city, and what great things he has yet to do. Wait on him till he finiſh his work.

SERMON

SERMON LVIII.

The LAMB in the midſt of the Throne *.

REV. vii. 17.

For the Lamb that is in the midſt of the throne, ſhall feed them.——

WE are met this day to celebrate the memorials of the love of Chriſt, in his death and crucifixion, upon mount Calvary. And that our faith may look to him in the beſt light, and to the beſt advantage, we are to remember, not only where he once was, but where he now is: and we will find, we need not be aſhamed of a crucified Chriſt that was once upon the croſs, for now he is upon the throne. The Lamb that was ſlain, as a ſacrifice to ſatisfy divine juſtice for us, the once dying Lamb in the midſt of the croſs, is now the ever-living Lamb in the midſt of the throne. And from this throne of God, where he reigns, we expect our food and proviſion upon the feaſt-day; according to the words of the text, The Lamb, which is in the midſt of the throne, ſhall feed them.

From the 13th verſe of this chapter we have a deſcription of the honour and happineſs of theſe that ſhall faithfully ſerve, and patiently ſuffer for the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Some interpreters think, that the happineſs of the ſaints militant, even in this world, is here deſcribed; ſome, that it is only the happineſs of the ſaint triumphant in heaven; others, make this place of ſcripture relate to both, and with theſe eſpecially I join; becauſe, whatever honour and happineſs of ſuffering ſaints is here ſet forth, they enjoy the ſame partly in this life, and fully in the life to come, as may appear by the particulars here mentioned.

The happy perſons are ſpoken of, ver. 14th, Theſe are they that have come out of great tribulation. Whatever relation ſome think this may have to the church of Chriſt on earth, after they have eſcaped the antichriſtian bloody perſecution; or, as others, to the martyrs in heaven that have ſuffered unto death for the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; yet it may be ſaid of all the militant ſaints, who, through much trouble, enter into the kingdom of heaven, and therein are conformed to their ſuffering Head, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and bear about in their body the dying of the Lord Jeſus. Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivers them out of them all. It may be ſaid of all the ſaints, Theſe are they that have come from trouble to reſt, from bondage to liberty, from death to life, and have waſhed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. The perfection of this purity they have in heaven; but even here on earth they are waſhed in the blood of Chriſt, and clothed with the white robe of his imputed and imparted righteouſneſs.

Verſe 15th, Therefore are they before the throne of God, and ſerve him day and night in his temple: and he that ſitteth on the throne ſhall dwell among them. This ſeems to be a further deſcription of the happineſs of the ſaints both militant and triumphant; as they are happy,

1. In their ſtate, being waſhed, juſtified, and ſanctified, in the name of the Lord Jeſus, and by the Spirit of their God.

2. They are happy in their ſtation, being always before the throne of God. The glorified ſaints in heaven are always in that preſence where there is fulneſs of joy: and the ſanctified ones upon earth have this bleſſing alſo beſtowed upon them, they are ſaid to ſit with him in heavenly places; and it is their daily work to come boldly to the throne of grace. Again,

3. They are happy in their ſervice; for, they ſerve him day and night in his temple. Though theſe that are in heaven ſerve him without weakneſs or wearineſs, which we cannot here do; yet it is the property of all the true circumciſion to worſhip God in the Spirit, and in truth, and to pray without ceaſing; meditating on his law day and night, and going to the altar of God; to God in Chriſt, the true ſpiritual temple.

4. They are happy in their company; for, He that ſits upon the throne ſhall dwell among them. This points out friendſhip, fellowſhip, and familiarity between God and the redeemed; which alſo Chriſt allows to the militant ſaints in part, when, upon opening the door of their heart, he comes in and ſups with them, and they with him, Rev. iii. 20. And they are in caſe to ſay, Truly our fellowſhip is with the Father, and with his Son Jeſus Chriſt, 1 John i. 3. Yea, God ſays, I will dwell in them, and walk in them, and will be their God, and they ſhall be my people.

5. They are happy in their freedom; they ſhall be freed from all want, and all uneaſineſs. From all want; for, They ſhall hunger no more, neither ſhall they thirſt any more: for this freedom will be perfected in heaven, as it is commenced on earth; as the prophet ſays, ſpeaking of Chriſt's ſpiritual kingdom, Iſa. xlix. 10. They ſhall not hunger, nor thirſt, &c. Hence ſays Chriſt, John vi. 35. He that comes to me ſhall never hunger, and he that believeth in me ſhall never thirſt; pointing out the ſpiritual pleaſure and ſatisfaction they ſhall have, and never be altogether deprived of.—From all uneaſineſs alſo ſhall they be freed; Neither ſhall the ſun light on them, nor any heat; or, as it is in the forcited Iſa. xlix. 10. Neither ſhall the heat nor ſun ſmite them. The redeemed above are perfectly freed from all uneaſineſs: and even the redeemed on earth, according to the meaſure of faith, ſuch will be their meaſure of eaſe, even amidſt all things that tend to make them uneaſy. Chriſt ſays

* This ſermon was preached immediately before the celebration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, at Dunfermline, June 10*th*, 1733. It hath undergone three impreſſions.

to

to them, Fear not, only believe; Fear not, I am with you; Fear not him that can at moſt but kill the body; The very hairs of your head are all numbered; you may be perfectly eaſy. Nothing is more uneaſy than the ſun in the meridian regions; ſo are afflictions and perſecutions to the ſaints, and the temptations they are attacked with from earth and hell: But God is faithful, ſays the apoſtle, who will not ſuffer you to be tempted above what ye are able, but will with the temptation alſo make a way to eſcape, that you may be able to bear it, 1 Cor. x. 12.

6. They are happy in their proviſion; becauſe the Lamb that is in the midſt of the throne, ſhall feed them: hence he is ſaid to feed his flock like a ſhepherd. The feeding here ſpoken of, imports alſo rule and government, ſuch as a ſhepherd hath over his flock. It is in the believing view of the provident loving Shepherd, the pſalmiſt ſays, The Lord is my Shepherd, I ſhall not want, Pſal. xxiii. 1.

7. They are happy in their direction and conduct; in their director, guide, and conductor: He ſhall lead them unto living fountains of waters. Now, of theſe living waters the Lord Jeſus ſpeaks, as they reſpect even his people in this world, John iv. 14. and vii. 38. The water that I give, ſhall be in him a well of water ſpringing up to everlaſting life; and, Out of his belly ſhall flow rivers of living waters. By theſe they have matter of comfort amidſt all their croſſes. Hence,

8. They are here ſaid to be happy in their joys; for, God ſhall wipe away all tears from their eyes; that is, all their griefs and ſorrows ſhall be ſwallowed up in the fulneſs of joy and conſolation that ſhall be abundantly allowed them. The commencement of this joy is even here, amidſt all the troubles and trials of the militant ſaints; For behold, ſays God, I create Jeruſalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy, and the voice of weeping ſhall be no more heard, Iſa. lxv. 18. And hence they are ſometimes filled with joy and peace in believing; yea, with joy unſpeakable and full of glory.

It is the firſt part of this laſt verſe that I have eſpecially my eye upon; particularly, that deſcription of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which the commentators, I have conſulted, paſs over more ſlightly than I expected, namely, The Lamb which is in the midſt of the throne. Where we have our Lord Jeſus deſcribed, 1. From his meekneſs and humility; therefore he is called the Lamb. 2. From his majeſty and authority; he is the Lamb in the midſt of the throne. What benefit accrues to his church, from his meek and majeſtic government, follows in the reſt of the verſe, which, if I have time, I may a little inſiſt upon. But what I eſpecially propoſe to ſpeak to, as the Lord may aſſiſt, is, from the ſweet account given us here of our Lord Jeſus. And this we ſhall eſſay in the following doctrinal propoſition.

OBSERV. That our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is the Lamb in the midſt of the throne.

And, as the pſalmiſt ſays, Pſal. cxxi. 1. I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence comes my help; ſo let us lift up our eyes to the throne, from whence comes our food to-day: and we may the more readily and joyfully do ſo, that the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne, to be the feeder. That I may open and apply this doctrine for our benefit, I propoſe the following method,

I. Speak a little of the Lamb.

II. Of the throne.

III. How the Lamb comes to be upon the throne.

IV. What is imported in the Lamb's being in the MIDST of the throne.

V. Conſider the benefit of feeding, that iſſues from the Lamb's being in the midſt of the throne.

VI. Deduce ſome inferences for application.

I. We are to offer a word concerning the LAMB. This is a name frequently given to our Lord Jeſus in ſcripture: and he is ſo called, both becauſe of his immaculate whiteneſs and innocency, and becauſe of his incomparable meekneſs and patience: he is a Lamb without blemiſh, and without ſpot, 1 Pet. i. 19.; and his meekneſs was matchleſs, of which more afterward: he is the Lamb of God, the worthy Lamb, the Lamb that was ſlain.

I ſhall only here mention four periods wherein he is repreſented as a Lamb.

1. In his deſignation from the beginning, yea, from all eternity, to be a ſacrifice to ſatisfy divine juſtice: hence, Rev. xiii. 8. he is called the Lamb ſlain from the foundation of the world: ſlain decretively, in the purpoſe of God, before the foundation of the world was laid; and ſlain typically, in all the ſacrifices under the law.

2. In his manifeſtation, when he appeared in our nature, he is pointed out as the Lamb that was come to be a ſacrifice for ſin, John i. 29. Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the ſins of the world: and again, ver. 36. Behold the Lamb of God. To this purpoſe ſays the ſame beloved diſciple, 1 John iii. 5. You know that he was manifeſted to take away our ſins.

3. In his humiliation unto death, he is repreſented as the meek and patient Lamb, Acts viii. 32. He was led as a ſheep to the ſlaughter; and like a Lamb dumb before his ſhearer, ſo opened he not his mouth; which are the words of the prophet Iſa. liii. 7. Thus ſaith the Lord, by the prophet, chap. l. 5, 6. He was not rebellious, neither turned away back: I gave my back to the ſmitter, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: I hid not my face from ſhame and ſpitting.

4. In his exaltation, or in his exalted ſtate, he is in ſcripture repreſented as a Lamb; particularly, Rev. v. 6. And I beheld, and lo, in the midſt of the throne, and in the midſt of the elders, ſtood a Lamb as it had been ſlain, having ſeven horns, and ſeven eyes, which are the ſeven ſpirits of God ſent forth into all the earth. This is the ſcripture that our preſent text hath a reference unto: and therefore, concerning it you may obſerve the deſcription given of this Lamb.

(1.) As the Lamb that is in the midſt of the throne; of which more afterwards. Only, you ſee, in his exalted ſtate at the Father's right-hand, he is ſtill the Lamb: change of place hath not made him change his name, or nature: he took our human nature along with him; and he is ſtill the meek and lowly Lamb, though he be upon the throne.

(2.) He is deſcribed by being the Lamb ſlain; a Lamb as it had been ſlain. He appears with the marks of his ſufferings upon him, to ſhew that he interceeds in heaven in the virtue of his ſatisfaction; becauſe he entered the holy place by his own blood, Heb. ix. 12. And the virtue of the ſacrifice he offered is always freſh, as if he were newly ſlain.

(3.) He

(3.) He is described as a Lamb having seven horns; pointing out the perfection of his power to execute all the will of God, and to conquer all his enemies. This Lamb is the POWER of God.

(4.) He is described as a Lamb having seven eyes; pointing out the perfection of his wisdom, to understand all the will of God, and to do it in the most effectual manner. As he is the POWER of God, so he is the WISDOM of God; for he hath the Spirit of God above measure: therefore it is said, The seven eyes are the seven Spirits of God; not seven in number or in nature, but in respect of the diversity of the gifts and operations of that one and eternal Spirit of God. This Lamb of God, then, is he that hath the Spirit of the Lord God upon him, for he hath anointed him; and he is anointed, that he may anoint. And, O may the Lamb, with the seven eyes, look upon this assembly, and give eyes to us to see his glory this day, that our hearts may join issue with the heavenly company, Rev. v. 12. Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing.

II. The next thing we proposed, was a word concerning the THRONE. Here we would consider, what for a throne it is, and why called a throne.

1st, What kind of a throne is it which the Lamb is said to be in the midst of? We may answer, It is the throne of God, Rev. xxii. 1, 3. There it is called the throne of God and the Lamb. The throne of God is the throne of the Lamb, and the throne of the Lamb is the throne of God. It is the throne of grace, the throne of glory, the throne of his holiness, and the throne of his justice.

1. It is called the throne of divine grace, Heb. iv. 16. Let us come boldly to the throne of grace. Why so? because we have a High-priest there; the Lamb is in the midst of the throne. And, indeed, the throne of grace is nothing else than a God in Christ, a God reconciled in Christ, a God upon a mercy-seat, sprinkled with the blood of Christ.

2. It is called the throne of divine glory, Jer. xiv. 21. Do not disgrace the throne of thy glory; remember, break not covenant with us. The prophet there speaks of the temple, and the ark in it, the symbol of God's presence; which was typical of Christ, in whom the covenant of grace stands fast: and so it is called the throne of glory, because all the glory of God shines about that throne. As the grace of God is the glory of God, so all the glory of God shines in the face of Jesus Christ. Therefore,

3. It is called a throne of divine holiness, Psal. xlvii. 8. God sitteth upon the throne of his holiness. Holiness becomes his house, holiness becomes his throne, and holiness is his throne: there is nothing there, but the holy God, the holy Lamb, the holy throne; and they that are about it cry, Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts, Isa. vi. 3.

4. It is called the throne of his justice, Psal. lxxxi. 14. Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne. And Psal. xcvii. 2. Clouds and darkness are round about him, yet righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his throne. His glorious and holy throne of grace stands firm upon the base and foundation of justice satisfied for the sinner, and judgment execute against sin, in the blood of the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne. It is therefore no hindrance or impediment to our access to the throne of grace, that it is also a throne of justice; but rather a furtherance and encouragement, because there grace reigns through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ, Rom. v. 21. And, since grace reigns there through justice-satisfying righteousness, why then, there God may with honour meet with sinners, and there sinners may with hope draw near to God.—This is the throne of God and the Lamb.

2dly, Why is it called a throne? The place, in the midst whereof the Lamb is, is called a throne, on these accounts.

1. A throne is a place of powerful and majestic glory, honour, and dignity. Jesus Christ, the Lamb, is set in the midst of this place, crowned with glory and honour, Heb. ii. 9. His Father crowned him King there, saying, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever, Psal. xlv. 6.

2. A throne is a place of power and authority. Christ, the Lamb, is set in the midst of this throne; for, All power in heaven and earth is given to him, Mat. xviii. 18. All judgment is committed to him; and the government is upon his shoulders.

3. A throne is a place of height and eminency. Christ, the Lamb, is in the midst of this place; Isa. vi. 7. I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne high and lifted up; and his train filled the temple. His Father hath set him on the highest throne; he hath highly exalted him, and given him a name above every name, Phil. ii. 9.

4. A throne is a place of plenty; thence the royal bounty is communicated. Christ, the Lamb, is in the midst of this place; hence it is said, Col. i. 19. It pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell; and again, In him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowlege, all the treasures of grace; and out of his fulness we all receive, and grace for grace, John i. 16.

5. A throne is a place of beauty, as well as bounty; it is a beautiful and splendid place. And to see the Lamb in the midst of the throne, is to see the King in his beauty, Isaiah xxxiii. 17. Strength is within his holy place, and there doth beauty shine; there doth glory shine.

6. In a word, a throne is a place of pleasure, peace, joy, and triumph. The Lamb is in the midst of this place: having ascended up on high, and led captivity captive, Psal. lxviii. 18. He sits triumphant upon the throne, making all his enemies his footstool. If he triumphed over them on the cross, as it is said, Col. ii. 15. how much more does he triumph over them on the throne, making all believers sharers of his joyful triumph!

III. The next thing I proposed was, To show how the Lamb comes to be upon the throne. I shall tell you in a few words, that he bargained for the throne, he wrought for the throne, he fought for the throne, he died for the throne.

1. He bargained for the throne. In the counsel of peace, betwixt the Father and the Son, it was promised to Christ, that, upon his doing and suffering for his people, he should have a glorious throne, and a numerous retinue: that he should see his seed, and see the travel of his soul, and be satisfied, Isa. liii. 10, 11. The Lamb cries out, It is a bargain that I chearfully go into? Lo, I come; in the volume of thy book it is written of me: I delight to do thy will, O my God; thy law law is within my heart, Pſal. xl. 7, 8. Hence ſays the Father, I have made a covenant with my choſen, Pſal. lxxxix. 3.

2. He wrought for the throne. According to the bargain and covenant between the Father and him, he brought in everlaſting righteouſneſs, Dan. ix. 24.; he fulfilled all righteouſneſs, Mat. iii. 15. And hence he claims the crown and the throne; I have glorified thee on earth, I have finiſhed the work thou gaveſt me to do: And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own ſelf, with the glory I had with thee before the world was, John xvii. 4, 5.— Thus he wrought for the throne.

3. He fought for the throne. You may ſee how he fought, Iſa. lxiii. 1, 2, 3. Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? This that is glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatneſs of his ſtrength? I that ſpeak in righteouſneſs, mighty to ſave. Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel? and thy garments like him that treadeth in the wine-fat? I have trodden the wine-preſs alone, and of the people there was none with me: for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury, and their blood ſhall be ſprinkled upon my garments, and I will ſtain all my raiment. And on this account the Lamb ſits upon a triumphant throne, having ſpoiled principalities and powers; bruiſed the head of the old ſerpent; deſtroyed the works of the devil; and came off the field like a glorious conqueror. Therefore, the Lord ſaid unto our Lord, Sit thou at my right-hand, Pſal. cx. 1. In which pſalm you read both of the bloody battle, and the glorious enthronement of the Lamb.

4. He died for the throne. Having drunk of the brook in the way, therefore did he lift up the head, Pſal. cx. 7. And, becauſe he became obedient unto the death, even the death of the croſs; therefore God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name above every name, Phil. ii. 8, 9. When he had the croſs upon his back, he had the throne in his eye; For the joy that was ſet before him, he endured the croſs, deſpiſing the ſhame, and is now ſet down at the right-hand of the throne of God, Heb. xii. 2. And thus, for the ſuffering of death, he was crowned with glory and honour, chap. ii. 9.— Our faith then may ſee and be ſatisfied how he came by the throne. But, for widening and increaſing faith's view of this enthronement, I proceed,

IV. To the next thing propoſed, namely, To ſhew what may be imported in the Lamb's being in the MIDST of the throne. And,

1. That the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne, ſpeaks forth the dignity of his perſon, his ſupreme Deity, and equality with the Father. Though, in his infinite love, he thought it no diſparagement, at his Father's call, to make himſelf of no reputation, and take upon him the form of a ſervant; yet, being in the form of God, he thought it no robbery to be equal with God, Phil. ii. 6. And his Father thinks it no diſparagement to him, to call even the ſuffering Lamb, the crucified Jeſus, his fellow and equal; Awake, O ſword, againſt the man that is my fellow, Zech. xiii. 9.; yea, to crown him King upon his everlaſting throne, ſaying to him, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever, Heb. i. 8. O Sirs, if the Chriſt-diſparaging and ſoul-damning doctrine of Arians were true, the Lamb would not be worthy of ſuch a throne, far leſs the midſt of the throne.

2. That the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne, imports and ſpeaks forth the height of his exaltation. Beſides the natural right as God, that Chriſt hath to the throne, he hath a donative right as Mediator: and becauſe, as Mediator, he hath brought in glory to God in the higheſt; therefore, he is exalted to the higheſt throne that his Father can give him: I will make him my firſt-born, higher than the kings of the earth, Pſal. lxxxix. 27. And now, according to his promiſe, Let all the houſe of Iſrael know aſſuredly, that God hath made that ſame Jeſus that was crucified, both Lord and Chriſt, Acts ii. 6. And being now poſſeſſed of the throne, he hath on his veſture and on his thigh a name written, KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS; and the rather that it is a ſcarlet robe, a veſture dipt in blood, Rev. xix. 13, 14. to ſhow, that it is the worthy Lamb that was ſlain that is in the midſt of the throne.

3. That the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne, imports, I think, the perfection of his mediation, and exactneſs thereof. O but this part of the throne be fit for him, and he fit for it! It well becomes him to be there; he is the middle perſon between the Father and the Holy Ghoſt, and the middle perſon between God and man; and it well becomes him to have the middle part of the throne. The Mediator and mids-man having the midſt of the throne, it ſays, he is a perfect Mediator, a merciful and faithful High-prieſt, Heb. ii. 17.; faithful to God, and merciful to man; true to both parties, between whom he ſtands in the midſt of the throne.

4. That the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne, imports the beautiful order and equity of his adminiſtration. As the government is upon his ſhoulders, ſo it will be a juſt, righteous, and equal government: Behold, a King ſhall reign in righteouſneſs; even the man that ſhall be a hiding-place from the wind, and a covert from the tempeſt, Iſa. xxxii. 1. With righteouſneſs ſhall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity, for the meek of the earth. Righteouſneſs ſhall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulneſs the girdle of his reins, Iſa. xi. 4, 5. His adminiſtration ſhall be ſo righteous and equal, that none ſhall have occaſion to complain that he hath gone too far, either to the right-hand or to the left-hand of the throne: no; he will ever keep the midſt of the throne; and his government, like his covenant, will be well-ordered in all things.

5. That the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne, imports the acceſſibleneſs of the throne of God on every hand. The Lamb is upon the throne of God, and therefore there is acceſs to the throne; for, the Lamb being there, clothed with his veſture dipped in blood, we may come boldly to the throne of grace, and have boldneſs to enter into the holieſt by the blood of Jeſus, Heb. iv. 16. x. 19. If the Lamb were not there, ſuch guilty ſinners durſt not be ſo bold as to look a juſt and holy God in the face, or approach to his throne: But, O good news and bleſſed tidings! the Lamb being our Forerunner, we may boldly go as far forward, as the blood of the Lamb hath run in like a river before us; and that is to the very heart and centre of the throne of God. Yea, not only is the Lamb upon the throne, which ſpeaks acceſs thither; but he is in the midſt of the throne, which ſpeaks acceſs on every hand, and on every ſide of the throne. If he were only placed at the one ſide of the throne, it might be thought there would be no acceſs at the other ſide; but, being in the midſt of the throne, he is ready to welcome all comers from all quarters, ſaying, Whoſoever will, let him come, from eaſt, weſt, north, or ſouth; let him come on this ſide, or that ſide, or directly before the throne; yea, let any poor creature, who bluſhes to be ſeen, come ſliping ſecretly, as it were, behind the throne, like the woman with the bloody iſſue, that came behind him, ſaying, If I may but touch his garment, I ſhall be whole. O to get in if it were but behind the throne this day, to get a touch of the royal robes of the Lamb which is in the midſt of the throne! Welcome, ſinner, there is acceſs on every hand of the throne, for the Lamb is in the midſt of it. The Lamb of God, which lies in the midſt of his Father's boſom, he ſits in the midſt of his Father's throne, to welcome and receive all comers, ſaying, Him that cometh, I will in no wiſe caſt out.

or

6. That the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne imports, that the Lamb is the centre of all the glory that ſurrounds and encompaſſes the throne of God, or the throne of grace.—He is the centre of divine fulneſs, and of all the glorious perfections of God; for, In him dwells all the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily, Col. ii. 9. Every attribute of God ſhines gloriouſly in the face of Jeſus Chriſt.—He is the centre of all divine truths; and we cannot know any precious goſpel truths, or myſteries, in a ſaving and ſatiſfying manner, unleſs we know the truth as it is in Jeſus, Eph. iv. 21.—He is the centre of all the divine promiſes, being the centre of the covenant of grace, in whom it ſtands faſt, and in whom all the promiſes are, Yea and Amen, to the glory of God, 2 Cor. i. 20.—He is the centre of all divine bleſſings; for, God bleſſes us with all ſpiritual bleſſings in heavenly places, only in Chriſt, Eph. i. 3.—He is the centre of all divine grace; for, it is out of his fulneſs that we receive, and grace for grace, John i. 16.—He is the centre of all divine comfort; for, he is the conſolation of Iſrael; and he is anointed with the oil of joy and gladneſs above his fellows, Pſal. xlv. 7. that he may anoint with the ſame oil, and bring his people to fellowſhip with him in the ſame ſpirit of joy and conſolation, according to their meaſure.—He is the centre of all ſaving offices; being, as a PROPHET, the Wiſdom of God, for our illumination; as a PRIEST, the Righteouſneſs of God, for our juſtification; and, as a KING, the Power of God, for our ſanctification.—He is the centre of all ſweet relations; the Saviour, the Surety, the Head, the Husband, the All and in All of his people; their Light, and Life, and Strength, and Righteouſneſs, and Rock, and Refuge, and Portion.—He is the centrical place, where God and man may meet together; for, he dwells between the cherubims, on the mercy-ſeat, and over theſe; There will I meet with thee, Exod. xxv. 22. There will I commune with thee. And no communion with God can we have but in him, who is the Lamb in the midſt of the throne, and middle-perſon between God and us.—In a word, being in the centre of the throne, he is the centre of all things: he is the centre of all the ſins of the redeemed, for their expiation; for, the Lord hath laid on him, [or, made to MEET IN him,] the iniquity of us all, Iſa. liii. 6.—And the centre of all their ſervice, for their acceptation; for, We are accepted in the Beloved, Eph. i. 6. And thus he is ſomeway the centre of all things; for, as all things are in his hands, ſo all things in heaven and earth are ſaid to meet in him, Eph. i. 10. Col. i. 20. And therefore, the Lamb, who is in the midſt and centre of the throne, ought to be the centre of our hearts and affections, the centre of our love and delight.——Thus, among other things, he is the centre of all our proviſion. Which leads to,

V. The fifth thing propoſed, which was, To view the benefit of feeding that iſſues from the Lamb's being in the midſt of the throne; He ſhall feed them. Whatever other paſtoral care, rule, or government this word imports; yet I ſhall, becauſe this is a feaſt-day, conſider that part of his paſtoral care that is here expreſt by the word FEED: The Lamb that is in the midſt of the throne ſhall feed them. If I were to enlarge upon this ſubject, I might tell you how the Lamb feeds his church and people, with the manifeſtations of his glory, with the intimations of his love, with the communications of his grace, and with the conſolations of his Spirit: but I confine myſelf to the doctrine of the Lamb being in the midſt of the throne; and therefore I ſhall ſpeak to this feeding only as it relates to that doctrine. The Lamb that is in the midſt of the throne is the food; the Lamb that is in the midſt of the throne is the feeder; and the Lamb's being in the midſt of the throne makes the feeding of thoſe that are the followers of the Lamb, to have the following qualities. All our ſacramental food and proviſion, this day, muſt come from the throne of God, and of the Lamb. Therefore,

1. It muſt be kindly food and proviſion that comes from the throne, ſince the Lamb is in the midſt of it. The meek Lamb, the loving Lamb, that feeds his flock like a ſhepherd, gathers the lambs with his arms, carries them in his boſom, and gently leads thoſe that are with young, Iſa. xl. 11. He makes them to ly down in green paſtures, Pſal. xxiii. 2. He makes them to go out and in and find paſture, John x. 9. It is ſweet, and eaſy, and kindly feeding, that iſſues from the Lamb in the midſt of the throne. And yet,

2. It muſt be powerful feeding that comes from thence; it is from the throne of power: and, indeed, you will not feed to advantage this day, unleſs power come from the throne to make you take your food. It is the work of the Lamb in the midſt of the throne, to feed by the efficacy of his grace: all the means and miniſters in the world cannot make a ſoul open its mouth or heart for this food, till power come from the throne; and yet when it cometh, it comes ſo ſweetly and kindly, that there is nothing like force or violence. The man is made as frank and free, in going out after Chriſt, to be the food of his periſhing ſoul, as if there were no power at all put forth in the caſe. Power makes him eat and feed heartily; Thy people ſhall be willing in the day of thy power, Pſal. cx. 3.

3. It muſt be ſpiritual feeding that comes from the Lamb in the midſt of the throne; for his throne, his kingdom, is a ſpiritual kingdom, it is not of this world: The fleſh profits nothing; his words are ſpirit and life. Food for the ſoul muſt be ſpiritual food: The kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteouſneſs, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt, Rom. xiv. 17.

4. It muſt be plentiful proviſion and feeding that comes from the Lamb in the midſt of the throne; for it is a rich throne, and all fulneſs is there. There is plenty of wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption; abundance of all ſorts. Here is wiſdom enough, for the moſt ignorant; righteouſneſs enough, for the moſt guilty; ſanctification enough, for the moſt filthy; redemption enough, for the moſt ruined; comfort enough, for the moſt ſorrowful; ſtrength enough, for the weakeſt; They ſhall be abundantly ſatisfied with the fatneſs of thy houſe, Pſal. xxxvi. 8. O the plenty that is about the throne! Plenty of divine perfections to feed upon, when viewed in Chriſt. Indeed, the mildeſt attributes of God, out of Chriſt, will be a terrible ſight; but the moſt terrible attributes of God, in Chriſt, are a pleaſant feaſt; even juſtice, holineſs, and truth. Here is plenty of promiſes to feed upon, while the performance is delayed. Every thing in Chriſt is a feaſt; his names, and natures, offices, life, death, reſurrection, aſcenſion, interceſſion; his merit, his Spirit, his word, his fleſh, his blood, and victory.

comfort

5. It muſt be ſuitable food that comes from this quarter; for, the Lamb, being in the midſt of the throne, will diſtribute equally and ſuitably. He cannot poſſibly fail and miſcarry, by giving too much, or too little; being in the middle of the throne, and the middle perſon between God and man, to communicate what is ſuitable for God to give, and ſuitable for man to have, no more and no leſs does he communicate, becauſe he is the Lamb in the midſt of the throne. And, indeed, as a key is ſuited to a lock, ſo is Chriſt's fulneſs to our wants. We are diſeaſed, he is a Phyſician; we are loſt, he is a Saviour; we are debtors, he is the Surety; we are dead, he is Life; we are blind, he is Eye-ſalve; we are naked, he is Clothing; we are troubled, he is Reſt: Are we bewildered? he is a Guide: Are we in danger? he is a Guard: Are we benighted? he is a Sun: Are we aſſaulted? he is a Shield.—Who in heaven or earth can thus ſupply our wants, heal our wounds, bear our burdens, ſweeten our afflictions, ſubdue our enemies, as Chriſt? O ſuitable feeding to the ſoul is here in all caſes!

6. It muſt be joyful feeding and proviſion that comes from the Lamb in the midſt of the throne; for, the throne is a place of joy and triumph. Here muſt be the choiceſt cheer, amidſt the choiceſt company; God, and Chriſt, and angels, and ſaints. There is as much ſweetneſs in Chriſt, as there is fulneſs and ſuitableneſs: He is the fountain of ſweetneſs; his mouth is moſt ſweet, his preſence is moſt ſweet, his fruits are moſt ſweet; I ſat down under his ſhadow with great delight, ſays the church, and his fruits were ſweet to my taſte, Song ii. 3. Here are the ſweet rivers of living waters that drive away all death and ſorrow, as it follows here in the text.

7. It muſt be free proviſion and feeding that comes from the Lamb in the midſt of the throne. There is nothing to pay about a throne; this would be a diſgrace and diſparagement to the prince that poſſeſſes the throne: ſo here, all is to be had freely. The fineſt is always the freeſt, Iſa. lv. 1. The legaliſts, that cannot feed upon Chriſt and his righteouſneſs freely, but only on their own works and duties, they feed upon aſhes: the legal preacher, that cannot offer Chriſt freely, is like the unnatural fathers, that, when their children aſk bread, give them a ſtone; when they aſk a fiſh, give them a ſcorpion. What is our beſt performances but ſcorpions, ſerpents, ſtones, yea, poiſon to them that make them their ſoul-food? Nothing can feed the ſoul but Chriſt. Rabſhakeh threatened to make all the people on the wall to eat their own dung, 2 Kings xviii. 26.; the legal preacher accompliſhes this threatening, in a ſpiritual ſenſe; our beſt works are but dung; I will ſpread the dung of your ſacrifices on your faces, even the dung of your ſolemn feaſts. But, O Sirs, here the fineſt and ſweeteſt feaſt is the freeſt; from the throne of grace proceed all bleſſings freely.

8. It muſt be durable proviſion and feeding that comes from the Lamb in the midſt of the throne: for he ever lives upon the throne, and his throne is for ever and ever; and therefore everlaſting food comes from thence, and food that nouriſhes to everlaſting life: I am the living bread that came down from heaven, ſays Chriſt; if any man eat of this bread, he ſhall live for ever, John vi. 51. Here is proviſion for eternity; Labour not for the meat that periſheth, ſays Chriſt, but for that meat that endures to everlaſting life, which the Son of man ſhall give unto you, John vi. 27. What a fool was he, that filled his barns, and then ſaid, Soul, take thy reſt, thou haſt much goods laid up for many years! while God ſaid to him, Thou fool, this night ſhall thy ſoul be required of thee? But, O what wiſdom were it to lay up for eternity this day, that death may not be able to rob you of your ſtore, but that ye may have it all before your hand! The Lamb that is in the midſt of the throne lives for ever there to feed; He lives for ever to make interceſſion; he lives for ever to make proviſion: they have everlaſting food, who have the Lamb that is in the midſt of the throne to feed them.——Thus you ſee what ſort of feeding is to be had under the throne of the Lamb, and who it is that muſt cover our table this day, even the Lamb in the midſt of the throne; he hath mounted the throne, to be a feeder, and to let down bleſſings to the footſtool.

VI. The laſt thing propoſed, was, The application. Is it ſo, that our Lord Jeſus is the Lamb in the midſt of the throne? Hence we may infer theſe following particulars.

1. Surely we need not be aſhamed of a crucified Chriſt, nor our Chriſtian paſſover this day, the Lamb that was ſacrificed for us. Since now the Lamb is upon the throne, and in the midſt of the throne, the ſhame and reproach of the croſs is wiped away, with the glory and ſplendor of the throne. We need not be aſhamed of the croſs of Chriſt, who is now in the midſt of the throne. Let none deſpiſe thoſe that eſpouſe the cauſe and intereſt of the Lamb, whatever hardſhips they may be brought under before courts, councils, and judicatories on earth: they need not be aſhamed to go forth unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach. The great apoſtle Paul ſays, God forbid that I ſhould glory, ſave in the croſs of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. O believer, it is our greateſt glory to be bearing his croſs, who is now wearing the crown; to be followers of the Lamb that is in the midſt of the throne.

2. Hence we may learn, that the church of God is SAFE, ſince the Lamb that is their Head is in the midſt of the throne. Believers in Chriſt are happy and ſafe; their Head and Huſband, their Lord and King is upon the throne: the militant church, the fighting remnant, are in no great danger while he hath the government. Perhaps, there are ſome here, like Eli, whoſe hearts are trembling for the ark of God, and the work of God at this day, when ſo many axes and hammers are lifted up againſt the carved work of the doctrine, worſhip, diſcipline, and government of God's houſe: but let this be matter of joy to their hearts, that the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne; and therefore, as he rules in Jacob to the ends of the earth, and over-rules all damage done to his houſe, ſo he will make it appear in the iſſue, that, according to his word, Upon all the glory there ſhall be a defence, Iſa. iv. 5.

to

3. Hence we may learn, that the enemies of Chriſt may have a quaking heart, ſince the Lamb, whom they deſpiſe, is in the midſt of the throne. His Father, that ſet him on the throne, hath ſaid, Pſal. lxxxix. 23. I will beat down his foes before his face, and plague them that hate him. The heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing; the kings of the earth ſet themſelves, and the rulers take counſel againſt the Lord and his Anointed, ſaying, Let us break their bands, and caſt their cords from us. But he that ſits in heaven ſhall laugh, the Lord ſhall have them in deriſion: having ſet his King upon his holy hill of Zion, he will break them in pieces with a rod of iron, and ſhall daſh them in pieces like a potter's veſſel, Pſal. ii. 1,—9. The Lord reigns, let the people tremble; he dwells between the cherubims, let the earth be moved, Pſal. xlix. 1. The Lamb being in the midſt of the throne, is matter of terror to the enemies of his glory; for he ſits upon the throne of power, and the Lamb will be a Lion to tear them in pieces.

4. Hence we may learn, that there is a ſure foundation laid for the faith and hope of life and juſtification by the blood of the Lamb. Since the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne, the throne of grace is a door of hope; and, that our hearts may be raiſed and lifted up to lively hope, the Lamb that was ſlain is raiſed and lifted up to the throne. Did he riſe again for your juſtification? and does his reſurrection ſeal upon our conſciences the ſufficiency of his death, and the acceptableneſs of his righteouſneſs unto God? Much more may our faith and hope be confirmed herein, that he is exalted to the midſt of the throne; for his Father had never put ſo much honour upon him, had he not been infinitely well-pleaſed and ſatisfied with his obedience unto the death. We may now read the dream that Jacob had at Bethel, Gen. xxviii. 12. Behold, a ladder ſet upon the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: the ladder is the Lamb; the foot of the Ladder was fixt in the midſt of the earth when he was here in a humbled eſtate; and now the top of the ladder is fixed in the midſt of the throne: all the rounds of it are completed, that we may aſcend by this way from earth to heaven.

5. Hence we may learn, what good reaſon there is for having a high eſteem of Chriſt, ſince God hath ſo highly exalted him, to the very midſt of the throne. O believer, ſhould not Chriſt be high in our valuation, when God hath ſet him ſo high! No wonder then that it is ſaid, If any man love not our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, let him be ANATHEMA MARAN-ATHA; that is, accurſed until our Lord come, 1 Cor. xvi. 22. Wo will be to them that will not put honour upon him, whom God the Father put ſo much honour upon, and that as our Redeemer and kinſman!

6. Hence learn, that the throne of God needs not be terrible untous, ſince the Lamb, the meek Lamb, is in the midſt of the throne; ſinners need not fear to go to the throne of God as long as the Lamb is there. If unbelief look toward the throne, it views it only as it is the throne of God, and ſo fills the ſoul with ſlaviſh fear, and frightful apprehenſions: but true faith views it as the throne of God and of the Lamb; and the view of the Lamb in the midſt of the throne, raiſes ſome joy, hope, and pleaſure in the midſt of the heart. Why, there is meekneſs as well as majeſty; grace, as well as grandeur, about the throne, becauſe the Lamb is there.

7. Hence we may learn what ground there is to expect the great God to be preſent in the midſt of us this day, becauſe the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne. We would have no ground to expect that God would be with us on the foot-ſtool, if Chriſt were not with God upon the throne. Chriſt promiſed, upon his aſcending to the throne, that he would be with his people, ſaying, Lo, I am with you always, Mat. xxviii. 20. He promiſed, when he went up to the throne, he would ſend down his Spirit; If I go away, I will ſend him, John xvi. 8. Therefore, if he be, by his Spirit, in the midſt of us this day, it is becauſe he is in the midſt of the throne. It is eaſy for him to be both ſitting glorioufly in the midſt of the throne, and at the ſame time walking graciouſly in the midſt of the golden candleſticks, Rev. ii. 1. He is both the bleſt Λόγος, the Word of God; and the bleſt IMMANUEL, God with us. The ſeven ſpirits are ſaid to be before the throne. The Spirit of God is one, but his gifts, operations, and influences are various: and the Lamb, that is in the midſt of the throne, hath the Spirit to give; and, having ſaid that he will ſend him, O let us look to the throne, and thence expect the Spirit according to his word.

8. Hence we may learn what is the mark of a worthy communicant, namely, if he be a true believer of this doctrine, that the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne. Let a man examine himſelf upon this, and ſo let him eat. I aſk not if you ſay you believe, or think you believe; but I call and injoin you to try if you truly believe that the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne. For helping you to this ſearch, you may conſider two things, namely, what view you have of this turth, and what virtue you find in it.

(1.) What view have you of this truth? If you truly believe it, then you view it with approbation. Is your heart ſatisfied that the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne? Do you cordially approve of the Father's ſetting him ſo high? Did it ever fill your heart with joy and ſatisfaction, and with ſome ſecret pleaſure and exultation, that God hath put ſuch honour upon Jeſus? And have you thus received this truth in the love of it, and in the ſweetneſs of it? O did ever your heart leap, as it were, within you, to think that the throne of God is alſo the throne of the Lamb, and ſo a throne open to you to come boldly unto by the blood of the Lamb, that encircles the throne like a rainbow? How does your heart ſtand affected to this truth? With the heart man believes unto righteouſneſs, Rom. x. 10.

(2.) What virtue have you found in this truth for leading you to enthrone Chriſt, as the Father hath done? As the Father hath ſet the Lamb in the midſt of the throne of glory; ſo, have you ſet him in the midſt of the throne of your heart? Is he, that is in the midſt of the throne of God, in the midſt of the throne with you? Surely, to them that believe he is precious, [or, an honour,] as the word may be read, 1 Pet. ii. 7. And they put this honour upon him, even to ſet him in the midſt of the throne. O my dear friends, let me tell you, that by this you may try and examine yourſelf, and prove your ownſelf, whether Chriſt

Christ be in you: if he be in you at all, he will be in the midst of the throne. You are not fit for a communion-table, and at your peril be it if you go, and yet some other thing than Christ hath the throne of your heart: if self be in the midst of the throne, if the world be in the midst of the throne, if your lusts be in the midst of the throne, Christ is not in you. It is true, the heart of the believer, while here, is not quite free of sin, and self, and the world: they may fight for the throne, and many times they may be seen to win the throne of their heart; but, sure I am, they never got peaceable possession of the throne of their heart. The believer is free from peace with sin, though he is never free from war with sin in this world: his league with it is broken, he can never consent to its rule and government any more; and hence, whenever sin usurps the throne, like Adonijah, then the believer enters his protest against it before the King of kings, saying, Lord, hast thou not said, that Solomon shall reign? Hast thou not promised, that grace shall reign, and that sin shall not have dominion? O down, down with this usurper; and let Christ have his own proper room and place, which is the midst of the throne. Hath virtue come from the throne of the Lamb to enable you to enthrone Christ in the midst of your heart? Hath he the throne of your esteem, the throne of your delight, the throne of your affection? Felt you ever any virtue coming down from the throne of Christ, to dethrone sin, and to draw your heart up to the throne of God? Did you ever find so much grace descending from the throne, as to make your hearts ascend to the throne? And is it the view of the Lamb's being there, that fires your heart, and makes it flame upward to the very midst of the throne where he is? Again,

Lastly, Hence we may learn the duty of sinners that hear this doctrine of the Lamb's being in the midst of the throne. I think it is your duty, yea, sure I am, it is your duty, to come and see the Lamb in the midst of the throne, to come and match with the Lamb, and then to the marriage-supper of the Lamb.

(1.) It is your duty to come and see this great sight, the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne. If the question be, Where is the Lamb? The answer is, In the midst of the throne. But, if the question again be, Where is the throne, that we may see it, and the Lamb in the midst of it? We answer, God's throne of glory is properly in heaven; but his throne of grace is really on earth, as well as in heaven; it is erected in the church, and in this gospel-dispensation, declaring that God is in Christ reconciling the world to himself. A God in Christ is a throne of grace every where, and a glorious throne every where is the place of our sanctuary, Jer. xvii. 12. Hence, when the apostle says, Let us come boldly to the throne, he does not mean locally climbing up to heaven, but believingly approaching to God in Christ, as held forth in the gospel of his grace. Why then, as Christ is in the midst of the throne, so the throne is in the midst of this house.

QUEST. What will we see, if we come and see the Lamb in the midst of the throne?

ANSW. You will see that the throne of God is patent to sinners, because the Lamb is there; and that there is access with boldness from all quarters, at every side of the throne, because the Lamb is in the midst of it. The blood of the Lamb encircles the throne, and sprinkles the mercy-seat; and therefore, guilty sinners may come, through this guilt-expiating blood. Here you will see the most dreadful attributes of God divested of all their dread and terror, and appearing amiable. Infinite holiness and infinite justice are awful attributes, and both are upon the throne of God, but the Lamb is in the midst of them: holiness is gratified, justice is satisfied, every attribute is glorified; Mercy and truth meet together, righteousness and peace kiss each other, and all harmoniously conspire, because the Lamb is in the midst of them. The mildest attribute would be dreadful to sinners, if the Lamb were not in the midst of them; but the most terrible attributes are amiable and lovely, when you see the Lamb in the midst of them.

Here you will see the most terrible dispensation of God smilling in your face, when you see the Lamb in the midst of them; for, though clouds and darkness are round about him, yet righteousness and judgment are the habitations of his throne. He that rides in heaven by his name JAH, and makes the clouds his chariots, as he sits in the midst of his throne; so he sits in the midst of the cloudy and dark dispensations of our day, to order and over-rule. Black clouds are over the church of Scotland, and the government, as it is in the hands of men, is all in disorder and confusion, and turned upside-down*; but, if you see the Lamb in the midst of these dispensations, you will see that the government is upon his shoulders; and that not only justice and judgment are the habitation of his throne, but that justice and judgment sit with mercy and grace; and God hath some glorious design on foot, however terrible to his enemies, yet merciful to all the followers of the Lamb.

In a word, here you will see all the glory of God, when you see the Lamb in the midst of the throne. O the throne of glory is a throne of grace, because the Lamb is there; the throne of justice is a throne of mercy, because the Lamb is there; the throne of infinite holiness is accessible by guilty sinners, because the Lamb is there. O come and see.

(2.) It is your duty to come and match with the Lamb. O sinner, who hath been married to the devil hitherto, married to your lusts, married to the world; O man, woman, whether old or young, will you come and be the bride, the Lamb's wife? as the word is, Rev. xix. 7. Let none dare to go to the marriage-supper of the Lamb, to the communion-table, until once they have given their heart and hand to the Son of God, and joined in marriage with the Lamb; and, O may this be a marriage-day. It is a great part of our work to court a bride for the Lamb, and then to lead her to the table; and, O may drawing power come from the throne, to draw out many hearts after him! O sinner, the Son of God, the Lamb of God, is come to court your heart, saying, My son, give me thy heart; and he is come to offer himself to thee, man; to thee, woman, saying, Behold me, behold me: come to me, that you may have life. What for a match would you have? Would you be well married, and happy in a husband to all eternity?

* Matters in the church, at this time, had a very dismal aspect; errors of the most pernicious consequence abounding; impieties of the grossest nature prevailing; incroachments upon the Lord's heritage, of the most grievous kind, taking place; as observed above, p. 149, 322, 454, 631.: And yet the sword of discipline drawn forth with more keeness against those who faithfully testified against these evils, than against the authors, perpetrators, and promoters of them; as may be seen, p. 661.

himself

1. Are you for an honourable match, a royal match? O here is the King of kings, the Lamb in the midst of the throne; The head of all principalities and powers.

2. Are you for a rich and oppulent match? Here is the Lamb in the midst of the throne, in whom are hid unsearchable riches, and all the fulness of the Godhead; everlasting treasures of grace and glory.

3. Are you for a bountiful match? O there is none like the Lamb in the midst of the throne for a generous Spirit, willing and ready to lay out all his riches, that out of his fulness ye may receive, and grace for grace.

4. Are you for a beautiful match? Behold the Lamb in the midst of the throne, the King in his beauty; he is white and ruddy, and altogether lovely: no wonder, for he is the brightness of his Father's glory; all the glory of God shines in his face. Some of God's glory shines in the works of creation, the sun, moon, and stars; some of it in the works of providence: but all the glory of God is here. He is the temple of God, and there doth beauty shine, Psal. xcvi. 6.

5. Are you for a loving, as well as a lovely match? Behold, the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne is a mirror of love, without all dimension: O the height and depth, the length and breadth of his love! He loved and prayed for his enemies that murdered him; and how then must he love his friends that will match with him? Again,

6. Are you for a beloved match, who is valued and esteemed of all whose love and esteem is worth the regarding? O! the Lamb in the midst of the throne is beloved of all the holy angels, they admire and adore him; he is beloved of all the saints in heaven and earth; they say, This is our Beloved; he is beloved of God the Father, who says, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleased: he is hated of none but the devil and his wicked crew.

7. In a word, are you for an immortal match? Well, here is the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne; he lives for ever and ever: I am he that was dead, and am alive; and behold, I live for evermore. The best friends here in this world are mortal, and may leave you in a moment; but the Lamb is the King eternal, immortal: he lives for ever, and he can make you live for ever and ever. O mortal worms, whose bodies will be laid in the dust in a few days or hours, and who have nothing but a thin wall of flesh between you and eternity; are ye for a match that can abundantly jointure you for another world, and portion you for eternity? Is this a despicable bargain? Are your lusts and idols, and perishing vanities of a world, a better bargain? Nay, you dare not say it for your life. This offer of Christ, accept or reject it as you will, is worth ten thousand worlds.

8. Are you for a match that can pay all your debt to law and justice, that can supply all your wants, that can heal all your diseases, that can bear all your burdens, sanctify all your crosses, sweeten all your afflictions, subdue all your enemies, manage all your concerns, and make you happy for ever? Then come and match with the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne: a greater offer cannot be made to you than this most glorious King, upon the most glorious throne. O great proposal! Wonder men and angels, at this gospel-offer! Be astonished, O heavens and earth! If such a matchless match be offered and rejected, all the angels and saints that are about his throne will cry, Shame upon you for ever, that reject and refuse such a bargain; and we must say, AMEN; everlasting shame must be upon you. What was the Gadarenes blasphemy, but their preferring their swine to our Lord Jesus Christ, when he was upon the earth, and not yet upon the throne? But greater is your blasphemy, O sinner, if you prefer your swinish lusts to our glorious Lord, now exalted to the throne. What! prefer the swine, that are in the midst of the dunghil, to the Lamb in the midst of the throne! O base, brutish, mad, and deviliſh blasphemy.

I hope, by this time, there are none hearing me, but are so far self-convicted, that they see they must condemn themselves if they reject such an offer as is made to them; and therefore, I take witness upon it, that when the Lamb, that is now in the midst of the throne of grace, will be the Lamb in the midst of the throne of judgment at the last day, ye must own that the sentence of condemnation, that shall be then past against you, will be just and righteous, if you stand to your refusal: therefore, though this should be a rejected offer to-day yet it shall redound to the honour of the Lamb at the great day, insomuch, that the condemnation of you will be the justification of him; your own consciences witness, that he will be just when he speaks, and clear when he judges and adjudges you to hell and damnation, because of your neglecting the great salvation, and rejecting the offer of the great Saviour, the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne. By way of anticipation, the tribunal is now erected before-hand in your bosom, where God's deputy, conscience, sits as the judge; and there the Lamb is assoylled as free of your blood, and the sentence comes forth, that your blood is upon your own head. Well, I hope your judgment is persuaded of this, that such an offer is made to you, as is worthy of all acceptation: but, O Sirs, since the judgment may be informed and gained, while yet the heart is not engaged; therefore, though faith come by hearing what a worthy Lamb is offered to you, yet bare hearing will not do without the heart-drawing power of the Spirit which is before the throne: and therefore, this being the pure crystal river, that proceeds out of the throne of God and of the Lamb, Rev. xxii. 32. that this river of drawing influences of the Spirit may run down among you, I will put the best rope in your hand that I know for bringing down this blessing; it is even the Lamb's own sweet promise, John xii. 32. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men after me. Where observe, 1. The persons concerned. 2. The promise. And, 3. The condition of it.

[1.] The persons concerned, all men. There is an All among sinful men, that Christ the second Adam hath to draw to him; these were given of the Father to him, and they shall come, John vi. 37. Yea, these he must bring to him, John x. 16. He must draw them, and they shall hear his voice. But, lest any should hereupon say, Perhaps I am not among the number of the second

Adam's

Adam's all, that he is to draw; perhaps I am excluded by the ſecret council, or hidden decree of God from all eternity. Therefore, I will tell you what may ſatisfy you fully upon this point, that the Lamb, that is now in the midſt of his Father's throne, was in the midſt of his Father's counſels from all eternity; the Lamb was at that council-table: therefore, let not the thoughts of the eternal decree be terrible and dreadful to you; for the Lamb was upon the concert, and therefore nothing paſt at that council to the prejudice of any poor ſinner, that would venture his ſoul upon the blood of the Lamb. It was concerted there, that the ground and object of faith ſhould be no hidden counſel, no paſt decree, but a preſent openly declared truth; namely, that the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne; and that whoſoever will might come to him; and him that comes, he will in no wiſe caſt out: and, therefore, if you venture your life and ſalvation upon the Lamb that is at preſent upon the throne of grace, you have nothing either paſt or future to fear; neither any paſt decree, or any future wrath: and now, by this free offer of Chriſt to you all, God is accompliſhing his glorious decree, that you may be for ever happy upon your acceptance, or for ever inexcuſeable upon your refuſal.

[2.] The promiſe, which is, I will deaw all men unto me. In caſe any ſhould ſay, There is indeed a free offer, and a good bargain; but I have a reluctant as well as a deceitful heart; I cannot embrace the offer, nor bring up my heart to cloſe with Chriſt, and make up the match. Why, here is the encouraging promiſe, I will draw; that is, I will ſend the Spirit to draw out your heart, to make it riſe and mount, like a flame, towards the throne, where the Lamb ſits. But, if I do not find this drawing power, what encouragement have I to look for it? Why, obſerve,

[3.] The condition of this promiſe, If I be lift up from the earth. Not an uncertain condition, depending upon us, but a ſure condition, depending upon himſelf: If I be lifted up, or when I am lifted up. Now, the condition is performed; Chriſt was not only lifted up upon the croſs, but now he is lifted up to the throne. Now, Chriſt ſaid, John xvi. 8. If I go to the Father, I will ſend the Spirit; if I go to the throne, I will ſend down the Spirit in his drawing influences. And now, may you not plead, "Lord, the condition is performed, the time is come, thou art lift up, thou art upon the throne; therefore, let the cryſtal river run down out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb?" Is this the language of your heart and ſoul? Lord, draw, draw; thou that art the Lamb in the midſt of the throne, draw my heart to thee, according to thy word. Is your heart burning or beating, ſaying, "O I am the blackeſt, the vileſt ſinner that ever matched with ſuch a glorious One; but yet I find my heart beating and burning within me, ſaying, O to be drawn; O to have the Lamb that is in the midſt of the throne to erect his throne in the midſt of my heart, and to rule there in the midſt of his enemies; and to be all in all to me; for wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption, to me?" Why then, we may ſay, your heart is the throne, and the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne. And, if the drawing power of his Spirit hath made up the match between him and you, we are warranted to lead you next to the marriage-ſupper, where the Lamb that is in the midſt of the throne ſhall feed you.

A Word at the Cloſe of the SOLEMNITY on the Monday.

BEFORE you go, I ſhall conclude this ſolemn work in two words, one directed to the enemies of the Lamb, and another to the lovers of the Lamb in the midſt of the throne.

Firſt, To you who are enemies to him. If the Lamb be in the midſt of the throne, then let ſinners ſtoop to him; O ſink down at his feet, and be content to be ruled by him: if you be ruled by your own luſts, and by your ſins, you put Chriſt out of his throne in effect, and put your luſts in his room. O ſinner, conſider how you croſs and contradict the great God by this means: he hath ſaid of Chriſt, Pſal. ii. 6. I have ſet my King upon mine holy hill; I have ſet him in the midſt of the throne: and, are you ſaying to your luſts, Be ye king over me? Man, will you live in ſin, and ſin againſt him that is in the midſt of God's throne? If a thief cut a purſe when the judge is upon the bench, and the ſentence ready to paſs againſt him, he is worthy to be hanged: Chriſt is on the bench, in the act of judgment; O man, beware of ſinning againſt him: be afraid, O ye that are enemies to the Lamb, Enemies in your minds by wicked works: It is hard for you to kick againſt the pricks: Can you harden yourſelf againſt God, and proſper? Nay, you ſhall be ſo far from proſpering in this way, that the Lamb in the midſt of the throne hath a rod of iron, to break and daſh you to pieces. Conſider this, ye that forget God. The Lamb will in a little be a lion, to tear you to pieces, when there ſhall be none to deliver. The Lamb is yet upon the throne of grace, inviting you; but it may be this is the laſt invitation you ſhall have, till you ſee him upon a judgment-ſeat: and what ſhall be the effect of theſe goſpel-offers ye have enjoyed? Theſe ſolemn feaſts will not always laſt, and perhaps death will daſh you down to the duſt before another occaſion of this ſort. Can ye find in your heart to let Chriſt go, and this occaſion over, without getting any good of him? Are you content that ſalvation hath come ſo near you, and you loſe it for ever? If not, O will ye take the firſt opportunity of retiring to ſome corner, and crying to the Lamb in the midſt of the throne, to come and draw you, and back theſe precious means with his powerful bleſſing! He that is in the midſt of the throne hath been ſetting his throne in the midſt of Dunfermline, and ſaying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men! O let him not lift his tent till you be taken in!

Again, O crown him King whom the Father hath crowned! O might this be his coronation-day! A day of eſpouſals with the Lamb is his coronation-day: Go forth, O ye daughters of Jeruſalem, and behold king Solomon with the crown wherewith his mother crowned him in the day of his eſpouſals, and in the day of the gladneſs of his heart, Song iii. 11. Happy day, if you could go away, ſaying, Such a day, at the communion of Dunfermline, Chriſt was crowned King; I beheld King Jeſus with the crown wherewith his Father crowned him, and ſaw that the Father ſet him him in the midſt of the throne, and I helped to put the crown upon his head; for, through grace, I ſet him in the midſt of the throne of my heart, and crowned him King there: I found in my heart to dethrone ſin, and enthrone Chriſt. O is Chriſt crowned King here! Hath no virtue come from the throne to draw my heart, as the adamant draws the iron? The clucking of the hen makes the chickens to run; goſpel-preaching is the voice of the Lord Jeſus; and much of this you have had theſe days bygone. O have you run under his wings? See what Chriſt ſays to Jeruſalem, Matth. xxiii. 37, 38. O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem, how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your houſe is left unto you deſolate! May we hope that God will not yet leave Scotland deſolate, but that Chriſt will be crowned King in the church of Scotland? Though he be robbed of his royalties, and notwithſtanding of all unwarrantable Acts that tend to the hurt of his government, he is in the midſt of the throne.

2dly, To you that are the lovers of the Lamb, I offer firſt a word of comfort, and then a word of advice.

[1.] A word of comfort. Surely, Though the earth ſhould be removed, and the mountains be caſt into the midſt of the ſea; though external governments ſhould be diſſolved and overturned, yet, while the Lamb is upon the throne, all ſhall be ruled to advantage unto all the lovers of the Lamb. What though ye ſhould ſee the miniſters of Chriſt ſuſpended † or depoſed for adhering to the teſtimony of Chriſt, and endeavouring to keep a good conſcience in an evil day? Though they ſhould be reproached and perſecuted, yet ſtill there is a river, the ſtreams whereof make glad the city of God: and ſtill there is this great ground of comfort, that the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne, and the cryſtal river proceeds from the throne of God and of the Lamb: and upon this throne the Lamb rules righteouſly and mercifully, though men rule never ſo unjuſtly and cruelly; and in a little there will be an end of man's rule and government, but the Lamb's dominion is for ever and ever. God the Father hath proclaimed that he is the everlaſting King, ſaying, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever. The followers of the Lamb have unſpeakable ground of comfort in Chriſt, whatever trouble they have in the world; In the world you ſhall have tribulation, but in me you ſhall have peace, be of good chear; I have overcome the world, and I am now upon the throne; and ye at laſt ſhall overcome, and ſit down with me on my throne.

1. Here is comfort againſt deſertion. Though the Lord may hide himſelf, and ſeem to be far away, yet ſtill it is food to your faith, that the Lamb is in the midſt of the throne; and, as he never deſerts the throne, ſo he will never leave you, nor forſake you: Why? The promiſes are all Yea and Amen in him who is ever upon the throne, to make out his word.

2. Here is comfort againſt the croſs. While you have the croſs upon your back, you may keep the throne in your eye, and you may be ſure of pity and favour thence, becauſe the Lamb is there, who went from the croſs to the throne.

3. Here is comfort againſt the power of ſin, corruption, and ſpiritual enemies, be they never ſo powerful: for the Lamb is upon the throne of power, and all power in heaven and earth is given to him; and he is concerned, in honour, to deſtroy theſe enemies.

4. Here is comfort againſt want and weakneſs. Your ſtrength lies in the Lamb, and your ſpiritual proviſion flows only from him.

5. Here is comfort againſt church-tyranny. Times have been, when there was tyranny in the ſtate over the conſciences of men; theſe were reckoned very evil days: but, when there is tyranny in the church over the conſciences of men, it is in many reſpects worſe: for church-perſecution is a kind of blaſphemy; it is in the name of God to perſecute the people of God. But yet here is comfort in this caſe, that church-tyranny cannot keep the throne; Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowſhip with thee, which frameth miſchief by a law? No, no: They gather themſelves together againſt the ſoul of the righteous, and condemn the innocent blood, Pſal. xciv. 20, 21. The Lamb will keep the midſt of the throne, and tread down his enemies in due time.

What would make a church-government glorious and eminent? When the Lamb is kept in the midſt of the throne, and when his ſpiritual kingdom is kept diſtinct from the temporal kingdoms of this world. The government of the church is quite miſmanaged when the Lamb is put out of the throne, and temporal heritages are made the foundation of ſpiritual privileges: As for example, when in the choice of paſtors to any congregation, which is a ſpiritual privilege relating to immortal ſouls, the heritors of this earth, the heirs of a little yellow duſt, have ſuch a privilege and preference given them by virtue of their temporal inheritance, as if they were lords over the consciences of men, and lords over God's heritage: surely their secular advantage in the world can intitle them to no spiritual privilege in the house of God, no more than an earthly inheritance can intitle them to heaven: but to give them a dominion over the souls of men in this matter, is a practical dethroning of the Lamb from the midst of the throne. Church-officers themselves are discharged to usurp such a dominion as to be lords over God's heritage: it is unlawful for them to obtrude pastors upon a Christian people without their consent; far less have they power to put such a dominion over mens consciences into the hands of earthly superiors. How can they give what they have not themselves *? In spiritual matters we are to own no man lord, but he that is Lord of lords, the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne. Church-government is quite overturned, when the throne of Christ's spiritual kingdom is possest by any other in this world but only the Lamb.

† Alluding to the conduct of the Aſſembly and Commiſſion, in the proſecution carrying on at this time againſt Mr. EBENEZER ERSKINE, and his adherents. As this affair is frequently hinted at, it may not be improper here briefly to lay the matter open.—— The Church, at this time, was not only in imminent danger of being over-run with a pernicious ſcheme of Arian, Socinian, and Arminian doctrines, as formerly noticed, p. 70, 149, 322, 454.; but likewiſe of being peſted with a corrupt, erroneous, and time-ſerving miniſtry, for whom a wide door had been opened by ſeveral violent ſettlements on reclaiming congregations: The numbers of legal ſermons and dry moral harangues too evidently evinced the truth of it; and the eager diſpoſition appearing in many to graſp at Preſentations, and the Act of Aſſembly 1732. in favours of them, (obſerved above, p. 631, 648.) put the fact beyond all diſpute. This being the melancholy ſituation of matters at this time, Mr. EBENEZER ERSKINE, miniſter at Striling, thought it his duty, in a ſermon at the opening of the Synod of Perth and Stirling, at Perth, Oct. 10th 1732. to teſtify plainly againſt ſome of the prevailing evils of the times, particularly againſt the Act of Aſſembly 1732. and the proceedings of the Judicatories, in the ſettlement of miniſters over reclaiming and diſſenting congregations. This diſcourſe ſo galled and tormented ſome of the miniſters then preſent, that they puſhed and obtained of the Synod, an appointment of a Committee to conſider the particulars in the ſermon, ſaid to give offence. The expreſſions were condeſcended on, and anſwers given to them by Mr. Erſkine. The Synod, after ſpending three days on this affair, found Mr Erſkine cenſurable, and reſolved to rebuke him; from which ſeveral miniſters and elders diſſented: and Mr. Erſkine and Mr. Fiſher proteſted, and appealed to the Aſſembly 1733.—The Aſſembly having conſidered the Appeal, approved of the proceedings of the Synod, and appointed him to be rebuked and admoniſhed by the Moderator; though neither Synod nor Aſſembly had ſhown his doctrine to be contrary to the word of God and our Standards. Mr. Erſkine proteſted againſt this deed; and his Proteſtation was adhered to by Meſſrs. Wilſon, Moncrieff, and Fiſher. The Aſſembly ordered the foreſaid Miniſters to appear before the Commiſſion in Auguſt; and impowered the Commiſſion to ſuſpend them, if they did not withdraw their Proteſtation, and profeſs their ſorrow. They appeared before the Commiſſion in Auguſt, and were ſuſpended by them. The Commiſſion in Nov. 16. looſed their Relation to their reſpective charges, and declared them to be no longer Miniſters of this Church. The Aſſembly 1740, paſſed the ſentence of Depoſition againſt them, and others who adhered to them, and joined with them: and all this for their ſteadfaſt adherence to their principles, and miniſterial fidelity, in ſetting the trumpet to their mouth, and telling the houſe of Jacob their ſins, and Iſrael their tranſgreſſions! —— Theſe who incline to ſee more of this matter may peruſe Mr. Erſkine's printed Sermon, which was the foundation of this proceſs, together with the State of the Proceſs, and other public papers emitted to the world.

6. Here is comfort against death. Death shall not reign, because the Lamb is in the midst of the throne, and liveth for ever and ever, and hath the keys of hell and of death; and therefore death shall be swallowed up in victory.

7. Here is comfort against the fear of judgment; that awful day needs be no terror to the lovers of the Lamb, because, when the fiery tribunal will be erected, the Lamb will be in the midst of the throne; and the friends of the Lamb will be received into his bosom, while all his enemies will stand trembling before his throne.

8. Here is comfort in the view of a long eternity; that the Lamb, that is for ever in the midst of the throne, will for ever feed you, and lead you unto living fountains of waters, and wipe away all tears from your eyes. O! who can tell the happiness of the higher house, the glorious feeding and leading you shall have there, the everlasting and ever-living fountain of divine consolation, wherewith ye shall for ever be refreshed! The fountain is God, and his glorious attributes; Christ, and his inexhaustible fulness; the Spirit, and his everlasting consolation; a glorious Trinity: God, who is now a promising God, will then be a performing God. Who can tell the sweetness of that blessing, his wiping away all tears from your eyes? He that hath a bottle for your tears now, hath a napkin to wipe them all away then; for, Ye shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

Secondly, I offer a word of advice to you. O Sirs, if the Lamb be in the midst of the throne,

1. Then be quiet amidst all the mal-administrations of men, amidst all the mismanagements of church-men and church-judicatories; because, though men cannot be justified in their church-ruining projects, yet the Lamb being in the midst of the throne, hath a just, holy, and sovereign hand in ordering these evils, when he hath a controversy to plead with us. Let us see the hand of God in leaving men to themselves, to rob the church and people of God of their rights and Reformation-privileges. What was the hand of Pilate against Christ, the cruellest act that ever was done? Why, it was the hand of God himself: for it is said, when Pilate spake, saying, Dost thou not know that I have power to crucify thee, or to set thee at liberty? Christ answered, Thou couldst have no power except it were given thee of my Father. Even so say I, church-men or church-judicatories, courts or assemblies, could have no power to break down any of the carved work of Reformation; no power to harm the liberties of God's people in chusing their pastors; no power to obtrude ministers on Christian congregations, willing to chuse faithful pastors; no power to pass sentence against such as oppose that speat of defection, except it were given them of our Father; and therefore, let us be quiet and sober: we have some other thing ado than to break out in a passionate resentment against poor mortal men; the sinful instruments of the church's confusion and disorder. When Shimei railed upon David, Let him alone, says David, may be the Lord hath bidden him. The Lord, for our trial and chastisement, perhaps, hath required some in our day, Go and tread upon the rights of these people; go and reproach and persecute, suspend and despose these ministers, for keeping a good conscience in an evil time: I say, It may be the Lord hath bidden; yea, Is there evil in the city, and the Lord hath not done it? Is there evil in the church, and the Lord hath not done it? No, no: Well, what of that? This does not justify evil instruments, no; but it says, we are to be sober, and lay our hand upon our mouth, and bear the indignation of the Lord, because we have sinned against him: We are to be dumb, and not to open our mouth, because he does it. The Lamb in the midst of the throne hath the government upon his shoulders, and he is righteously ordering and over-ruling these matters for the profitable trial of his people, and the glorious praise of his name in the issue: The wrath of man shall praise thee, and the remainder of his wrath wilt thou restrain. The Lord hath his own time and way of restraining his enemies, and his own time and way of reforming his church; and when the Lord shall appear in his glory, he will build up Zion. Sometimes he sees fit to appear in his wrath, and then he lets out the wrath of man, the enmity of man, to the breaking down of Zion, and of his carved work: but there is another time, when he sees fit to appear in his glory, and then to restrain the wrath of man, and reform his church. And since he is appearing in his wrath in our day, letting out the reins of man's wrath, to the ruining of Reformation-work; O be sober and humble; and depend upon him as the Lamb in the midst of the throne, who hath the reins in his hand, to let them out, or take them in, as he pleases. Instruments are but his sword, his hand, by which he does as he pleases, Psal. xvii. 13, 14. Deliver my soul from the wicked, from men which are thy hand, O Lord. Think not then the government is out of Christ's hand, when men are doing many sad things, and giving many heavy blows to the work of God; No, no: men are but his hand; and it is the hand of God that justly and righteously is lying heavy upon his people. Look above men then; you have not to do with them; there is a turn of matters just as he is pleased to turn his hand; the Lamb is in the midst of the throne, and in the midst of heavy clouds hanging over Scotland; therefore look to him, that he may turn away his wrath; Psal. ii. 12. Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled

* Patronage has always been a great grievance to the church, and was carried on at this time with a very high hand, though contrary to Scripture, Reason, our Standards, and Acts of the church; particularly Act of Assembly at Glasgow 1638. as observed, p. 631, 648.

but

but a little: bleſſed are all they that put their truſt in him. Again,

2. If it is only the Lamb that is in the midſt of the throne, O then be tender of thoſe that are followers of the Lamb, while they are yet upon the footſtool, and not yet ſet down with Chriſt upon his throne. They are in danger in an evil day, wherein they are called to give teſtimony againſt the evils and corruptions of the day, to go aſide to ſome extreme or other. There are many thoughts of heart, and many needleſs words among people at preſent about the manner of teſtifying. Some are accuſed as if they were too far forward; others are accuſed as if they were too far behind, in their teſtimony. Well, not to meddle with miſtakes people may be under, it may be both theſe are true: for, who can ſay, I am clean, and do not err toward the right or left-hand, when they would appear for Chriſt and his cauſe? But, O be tender of the militant followers of Chriſt. I hope you will remember, that it is only the Lamb that is able to keep the midſt of the throne; and, I hope, we are all willing to ſubſcribe to this, that this honour only belongs to him, that he was able to keep the midſt of the way to the throne, without going to one ſide or other: none but himſelf was ever able to do ſo; let him alone have all the glory.

3. Let me ſay to you that have become the bride, the Lamb's wife, If the Lamb be in the midſt of the throne, O then ſee that ye frequent the throne. What more inviting argument than this can there be, that the Lamb is in the midſt of it? And the farther forward you approach ſo, much the better. Never reſt till you be in the midſt of the throne, where the Lamb is. You may have boldneſs to go as far as the Lamb goes; and you will find this the moſt pleaſant exerciſe in the world, and the moſt profitable alſo: for grace and mercy is about the throne of grace; it is a mercy-ſeat, becauſe the Lamb is there.

4. O believer, if the Lamb be in the midſt of the throne, even the Lamb, your Head, your Huſband, ſee that you live upon him by faith; let the Lamb be your feeder, and the Lamb your food every day: and beware you do not diſgrace your honourable Huſband. Are you married to the Lamb in the midſt of the throne? We read that Bathſheba ſaid to her ſon, Prov. xxxi. 4. It is not for a king, O Lemuel, it is not for a king to drink wine, nor for princes to drink ſtrong drink. So it is not for believers in Chriſt to drink and tipple, to ſwear and cheat; the graceleſs world do ſo. But, O believer, have you been at a communion-table? Hath the Lord graced and honoured you with marriage to the Lamb in the midſt of the throne? Do not diſgrace yourſelf; it is below your rank: ſee that you live as becomes theſe that are matched and married to the Prince of the kings of the earth.

I remember ſome years ago, after certain diſputing in the church about the doctrine of the goſpel, we had a ſolemnity here, on which occaſion I was led to ſpeak of the ſubſtance of GOSPEL-DOCTRINE, Chriſt given of God to be a covenant of the people †; and now I am obliged to remark, That after ſome contendings, or rather in the midſt of ſome contendings in the church about the government of his houſe, I have been led, without any deſign in me, but only as the text was pleaſant to my own ſoul, to ſpeak of the very ſum and centre of ECCLESIASTICAL GOVERNMENT, the Lamb in the midſt of the throne. I remember, at that former occaſion the Lord was preſent by his Spirit, and gave evidence thereof unto many; and now, I hope, at this occaſion alſo there ſhall be ſome bleſſings dropt down from the throne. And, O to be going away from this place, with this truth ſealed upon our heart, concerning the Lamb's being in the midſt of the throne! Come what will, there is no fear of the followers of the Lamb, and the ſufferers for him; for, The Lamb is in the midſt of the throne.

SERMON LIX.

STABILITY in the Faith, the CHURCH'S STRENGTH *.

ISA. XXX. 7. —— Their ſtrength is to ſit ſtill.

EVER ſince man departed from God, the only reſting-place, he has been, in vain, rambling among the creatures for ſafety and ſatisfaction; whereas, if we believe the word of God, we will ſee our only ſtrength and ſafety is to return to God in Chriſt, as the centre of reſt; and to ſit ſtill, and reſt upon him, and put confidence in him; as ſaith the prophet here, Their ſtrength is to ſit ſtill. Theſe who have been ſitting down at a communion-table, by profeſſing to ſit down under the ſhadow of the Almighty by faith, are to remember that it is their ſtrength to ſit ſtill; as they are well ſet, who can ſay with the church, I ſat down under his ſhadow with great delight, and his fruit was ſweet to my taſte; for, to ſit down, is to believe: ſo it is yet better, if, by unbelief, they do not riſe again; for, it is their ſtrength to ſit ſtill.

Jeruſalem and Judah were here threatened with ſome approaching dangers and deſolations, and it is thought to be by Sennacherib; and this peoples ſin, for which they are here reproved, was their truſting to the Egyptians; they were all in a hurry to bring help and ſuccour from them, without ſeeking counſel of God, and reſting upon him.

† See this elaborate diſcourſe above, Sermon IV. p. 47.

* This ſermon was preached in the year 1733; but at what place, we are uncertain: However, from ſome paſſages in the diſcourſe, it appears to have been delivered on the Monday after ſome ſacramental ſolemnity. Never before publiſhed.

We

We may observe in the words, the four following things.

1. The evil of this sin; the Egyptian shall help in vain, and to no purpose: compare this with ver. 3. and hence observe, That though they that trust in the power, providence, and promise of God shall never be ashamed of their hope; yet they that put confidence in any creature will find it their reproach, shame, and confusion: they will hurt instead of helping. God is true, and may be trusted; but every man is a liar, and may be suspected: we cannot expect too little from man, and too much from God.

2. Notice the prophet's intermeddling in this concerning matter, he publishes God's mind and commission. Observe, it is the duty of ministers to meddle sometimes in public matters, whether in church or state; they are to shew Jacob their sins, and Israel their transgressions: and this is a part of ministers work, to testify against sin in all. Christ was the light of the world; they should be like their Master, testifying against all sin, and all works of darkness. However, this is one of the great quarrels that the world have against the servants and people of God, because they bear testimony against their sins. Many that have some light, yet they put their light in a prison, Rom. i. 18. They hold the truth in unrighteousness; particularly, by not bearing witness against sin and defection in others, as well as in ourselves: it was the graceless expression of a graceless Cain, Am I my brother's keeper? What am I concerned with the souls of others, or the sins of others? What am I concerned with the public evils of the day I live in? Indeed, right religion begins at home, but it does not end there; it will come without doors with us.

3. The manner of the prophet's address to this people, I cried, concerning this: I CRIED; hence observe, That it is the duty of ministers to be earnest and zealous in reproving sin, and reclaiming sinners. Ministers are both seers and criers; and when they see the danger they should cry that people may hear, and flee out of harm's way. If one in the streets of a city were crying, Fire, fire! O what a running and motion is then? But when ministers cry, the fire of hell is ready to burn the wicked and ungodly, no person is moved; why? they are sensible of bodily danger, but no sense have they of soul danger, nor fear of the fire that burns both soul and body. Ministers need to cry about matters of eternity, that people may secure something that death may not be able to take from them; such as these, (1.) Saving knowledge; if you get this it will lodge with you to eternity; This is life eternal, to know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. (2.) Faith, saving faith, death will not be able to take it from you; All these died in faith. Again, (3.) Evangelical love of God in Christ; Love never fails. (4.) The favour of God, Rom. viii. 38, 39. I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life,—shall separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus. (5.) Pardon of sin, and washing in Christ's blood; These are they that have washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb. (6.) Faithful labours for the honour and glory of God; Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, they shall rest from their labours, and their works follow them. They enjoy the fruit of their labours; they will not lose one good thought, one prayer, one tear; he has a bottle for these. Some seek after worldly honour, but these will soon be at an end; their honour will soon be laid in the dust. Some spend their time and strength in pleasure; there these will soon be at an end, 1 John ii. 17. The lusts of this world passeth away, but he that doth the will of God, abideth for ever.

4. The prophet's doctrine, or the sum of his preaching and advice, in these words, Their strength is to sit still.

In which words you may notice, 1. The sedate life of faith, expressed by sitting still. 2. The advantages of that life of faith to believers, it is their strength.

[1.] By sitting still we are to understand a recumbancy upon God, resting on him, and trusting in him, and stedfast waiting on him, and abiding in the way of duty. This duty puts a man to less trouble than his rambling abroad among the creatures; he has no more ado but sit still. Some are at more pains to bring misery upon themselves, than God's people are to get the blessing. Esau hunted up and down, and was at a great deal of pains; yet Jacob sat at home, and got the blessing: He that believeth shall not make haste.

[2.] The advantage of this duty, it is their strength: they that sit still in a day of distress, Hoping and quietly waiting for the salvation of the Lord, this will be their strength and safety: when we have tired ourselves by seeking help from creatures, we will find it the best way for recruiting ourselves, to repose and settle upon the Creator; by trusting in him, waiting on him, and stedfastly adhering to him: this will keep us from much needless labour and fatigue; yea, it will secure to us the accomplishment of the promise, Luke i. 45. Blessed is she that believeth, for there shall be a performance. Hab. ii. 3. For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie: though it tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come, it will not tarry.

This text then has two parts, that are like the two pillars of Solomon's temple, the one JACHIN, and the other BOAZ; stability and strength; stability is one part of the text, and strength is the other: Their strength is to sit still.

OBSERV. That a church or people's strength and safety in perilous times is their steadiness and stability in the faith.

The prophet here speaks forth the duty of Jerusalem in a perilous and dangerous time, and shows, that that stability is their safety; and that it is stability in the faith, he here speaks of, you may see clear, from two other verses of this chapter, ver. 15. In returning and rest, shall ye be saved; in quietness and confidence shall be your strength. In returning to God, and reposing in him as your rest, in quiet acquiescing in him and confident dependance upon him. Ver. 18. The Lord is a God of judgment, blessed are all they that wait for him: this also explains it of the stability of faith.

This doctrine might be confirmed by many other scriptures, Heb. iii. 12, 14. Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God; for we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence stedfastly unto the end: importing, that our stability in the faith, is our safety in evil times, and at all times. Heb. x. 23, 25. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more more as you see the day approaching. In Col. ii. 19. there you read of a number that fell of in time of temptation, Not holding the head; not sitting still and abiding in Christ. Heb. xiii. 8, 9.—— But many other scriptures will offer in the sequel.

The method I propose for prosecuting this subject, through the divine favour, shall be the following.

I. To show what are these times that may be called perilous times, wherein people are ready to show much instability and unstedfastness in the faith.

II. Open up the nature of this stedfastness and stability in the faith.

III. Show that this stedfastness and stableness is people's strength and safety, in perilous times.

IV. Deduce some inferences for the application of the subject.

I. We are to show what are these TIMES that may be called perilous times. You may see the apostle's description thereof, 2 Tim. iii. 1,—8. This know also, that perilous times shall come; for men shall be lovers of their ownselves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthoughtful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heedy, high minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away. Now, as Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, so do these also resist the truth, men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith. If the last times be the most perilous times, then we seem to be among the very last; we are called to redeem the time, because the days are evil. There is a twofold evil, moral and penal; the moral evil of sin is the ground of all penal evil of punishment. Jerusalem here was not so much in danger from the Assyrians, whom God was sending upon them to punish them, as they were from their own sins, for which God stirred up the enemy to afflict them; or if when danger appeared, they had returned to the Lord, and rested on him; then in returning and resting they had been saved: but they departed from God and then all went to wreck with them. Times of departing from God, the only resting place, are perilous times. More particularly,

1st, Times of rebellion against God are perilous times. Of this, Jerusalem is here reproved; and for this a wo is denounced against her, Wo to the rebellious children, ver. 1. of this chapter. When may a people be called rebellious? Even when sin, which is rebellion, is come to such a height, that the Lord is obliged in honour to plead a controversy with the sinning people; as it is said, Hos. iv. 1, 2, 3. The Lord hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land. By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out, and blood toucheth blood. Therefore shall the land mourn, and every one that dwelleth therein shall languish, with the beast of the fields, and with the fowls of heaven, yea, the fishes of the sea also shall be taken away. Now, he may be said to have a controversy with a land for their rebellions, in four cases.

1. When all manner of sin and acts of rebellion abound, such as are there mentioned, so as they are not only the sins of such and such a person, nor of such and such a congregation, but they are become national, and universal, and epidemical; and I imagine this is but too just a description of our case.

2. When peoples sins are committed against many checks of conscience, many beams of light, many means of grace, many calls of providence, many instances of mercy and divine goodness; how provoking is it, as you see, Rom. ii. 2, 3. Thus highly aggravated against the patience and forbearance of God.

3. When the rebellion is so heightened that not only is the patience of God abused, but laughed at, and ridiculed, by a profane age, that begin to say, as 2 Pet. iii. 4. Where is the promise of his coming? Where is the threatening of his coming to judgment? Then it is a perilous time, because the Lord is angry, and will let men know that he is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness, though he be long-suffering to us-ward; and that he is not slack concerning his threatening.

4. When there is nothing standing between the rebellious people and the stroke, None to stand in the gap, and keep out the wrath that is coming in, Ezek. xxii. 30, 31. Or, when such as would stand in the gap, and plead with God, have no access to him this way; and when God is saying, upon the matter, though Noah, Daniel, and Job, were pleading for such a people, it is in vain.

2dly, Times of carnal consultation, or of following carnal counsel, are perilous times. This was the case of Jerusalem, Wo to the rebellious children, that take counsel, but not of me! (Where also we see, that this was a special branch of their rebellion, they are reckoned rebels against God, that take counsel, but not of him; and so follow their own carnal counsel.) Men take counsel, but not of God, when they consult with flesh and blood, with carnal ease, carnal friends, carnal reason, and are swayed with carnal arguments; when they consult with numbers and multitudes, and follow the supernumerary party, and so bind their faith to the belt of a majority, saying, Can such a great number be all wrong? and such a small number only right? Shall we be singular? Indeed, when vice becomes general, singularity is a virtue; when error in judgment, or practice, becomes universal, it is then a necessary duty to be singular. Whomsoever men take counsel with, if it be not with God, they rebel against him, and expose themselves to wo and misery. To take counsel even with learned and eminent men, even when they are in the right side of the question, and to believe so and so, because they believe, it is but a human faith, built upon a human testimony; and yet ordinarily the most learned Rabbies are the greatest enemies of Christ and his cause, John vii. 48, 49. Have any of the rulers and Pharisees believed in him? But this people, that know not the law, are cursed: Why, says flesh and blood, they are but a pack of ignorant fools, who differ from such great and learned men. Well, but it may happen, that even these may be blind, whom neither themselves nor others think to be so, as it was with the applauded Pharisee, who said, Are we blind also? Christ proves them to be so; and tells, that if blind follow the blind, both shall fall into the ditch. Thus also they take counsel, but not of God, that yield a blind obedience to the commandments mandments of men, as Iſrael did to the ſtatutes of Omri, Mic. vi. 16. and Ephraim, that willingly walked after the commandment, Hoſ. v, 2. This is charged upon Iſrael, Iſa. xxix. 13. Their fear toward me is taught by the precepts of men.

3*dly*, Times of carnal confidence and coverings, are perilous times, ver. 1. They cover with a covering, but not of my Spirit. The ſhadow of Egypt was their covering; they put their confidence therein: but it was a refuge of lies, a covering too narrow for hiding them, while they had no holy confidence in God, but a carnal confidence in men; they departed from God, partly through fear of men, namely, the Aſſyrians, and partly by truſting in men, viz. the Egyptians. The fear of man bringeth a ſnare. And it is an awful word to that purpoſe, Iſa. li. 12, 13. Who art thou, that thou ſhouldſt be afraid of man, that ſhall die, and of the ſon of man, that ſhall be made as graſs, and forgetteſt the Lord, thy Maker, that ſtretched forth the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth; and haſt feared continually every day becauſe of the fury of the oppreſſor, as if he were ready to deſtroy? And where is the fury of the oppreſſor? Many are like the Jews, John xii. 42. that durſt not profeſs Chriſt for fear of being laſhed out of the ſynagogue: and thus even ſome of the godly dare not make a public appearance for the cauſe and truth of the Lord Jeſus, for fear of being expoſed to the cenſures of the church, and fury of the prevailing party; but what ſays the Lord, in ſuch a caſe, to theſe that fear the reproaches, the revilings, and reſentment of men, Iſa. li. 7, 8. It is but the graſs of the field that oppoſeth you, All fleſh is graſs, Iſa. xl. 6. Are you afraid of withering graſs, and forget the everlaſting and everliving God? They may be reckoned fools that expoſe themſelves to the fury of a government, civil or eccleſiaſtic: why ſhould they expoſe themſelves to worldly loſſes and inconveniencies? But, if the commands of men be not agreeable to the commands of God; if they be unlawful and unwarrantable, it is the beſt wiſdom to ſit ſtill, and reſt obedient to God, and diſobedient to man; yea, this is their ſtrength and ſafety: it is better to ſuffer than to ſin; and we ſin, if we but yield a doubtful obedience to man, doubing if it be right; for, Whatſoever is not of faith, is ſin. It is always ſafeſt to keep back from ſin, and abide with Chriſt: all loſſes for his ſake are to be repaired an hundred fold in this life; that is good recompence, and the ſtock ſtill ſecure; In the world to come, eternal life. However, this is one part of carnal confidence, the fear of man; for, whom we truly fear, for their frowns, them we are apt to truſt, for their favours and friendſhip. And then, truſt in man, is another part of carnal confidence, which, when it prevails, ſhows it is a perilous time: this is croſs to the command of God alſo, Pſal. cxlvi. 3. Put not your truſt in princes, nor in the ſons of man, in whom there is no help. This is dangerous work, and points out a dangerous time, when truſting in an arm of fleſh is prevailing, Jer. xvii. 5. Curſed is the man, that truſteth in man, and maketh fleſh his arm; whoſe heart departs from the Lord. It is better to truſt in the Lord, than to put confidence in man. See Micah vii. 5. Jer. ix. 4. If we depend upon human power, for the preſervation of our church, or depend upon human policy, for the reformation of religion, we will find ourſelves ſadly diſappointed; It is better to truſt in the Lord, than to put confidence in fleſh. If we depend upon human laws, even for the ſecurity of our fortunes; or upon our compliance with whatever human authority injoins, for our freedom from outward trouble and trials, we but truſt in man, and confer with fleſh and blood: we truſt in a broken reed that will pierce us.

4*thly*, Times of inſtability are dangerous and perilous times. This is ſuppoſed plainly to be the ſin of Iſrael in the text, Their ſtrength is to ſit ſtill; to be ſtable and ſettled in the faith: but they were unſtable, unſtedfaſt, unſettled. Now, that times of inſtability are dangerous, may appear from theſe particulars.

1. Unſtable times are times of error; and theſe are dangerous. This is plainly inſinuate, Heb. xiii. 9. Be not carried about with divers and ſtrange doctrines; for, it is a good thing that the heart be eſtabliſhed with grace. Unſtable perſons are carried about with every error. This is the dangerous circumſtances of England and of Scotland in our day; what errors are ſpreading? Atheiſm is in a manner profeſſed by a number that call themſelves free-thinkers, who cannot think of a God, though it muſt be as certain that there is an eternal Being, as it is certain there is any being at all; for, there could be no ſuch effects, if there were not a ſupreme cauſe. —Deiſm is openly profeſſed by ſome, who deny all divine and ſupernatural revelation, and applaud the light of nature, though under a diſmal eclipſe.—Arianiſm has taken root, a denying the true and proper divinity and ſupreme Deity of Chriſt.—Legaliſm and Libertiniſm, which may well be joined together, becauſe they that deny Chriſt to be the end of the law for righteouſneſs, being not under grace, but under the law, ſin muſt have dominion over them.—Prophaneneſs and Immoralities, and all manner of errors and evils take place in unſtable times.

2. Unſtable times are times of temptation from men and devils; and it is much to continue with Chriſt in ſuch times: when men are tempted with the world, and tempted by the devil and his temptations, it is much to get that teſtimony, Luke xxii. 28. Ye are they that have continued with me in my temptation, and I appoint unto you a kingdom. A time of general temptation is a dark and dangerous hour, Rev. iii. 10. Becauſe thou haſt keep the word of my patience, I will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which ſhall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth. When temptation is ſo univerſal, no wonder the moſt part are carried down with the ſtream.

3. Unſtable times are backſliding times; times of defection and apoſtacy, and theſe are perilous times; for, the backſlider in heart ſhall be filled with his own ways; and, If any man draw back, my ſoul ſhall have no pleaſure in him. Surely theſe are perilous times in Scotland, when they are ſuch covenant-breaking times; wherein reformation principles and purity are given up, wherein truth falleth, and he that departeth from evil, and adhereth to covenanted truth, maketh himſelf a prey, Iſa. lix. 15.

4. Unſtable times are times of diviſion, and theſe are perilous times; for, a city, or houſe, divided againſt itſelf cannot ſtand. Then is deſolation near, when the anger of the Lord has divided a people; divided their hearts, ſo as they hate one another; and divided their tongues, ſo as they reproach one another, and ſpeak evil of one another; then is the land's name

juſtly

juſtly turned to a BABEL, Gen. xi. 9. The name of it is called BABEL, becauſe the Lord did there confound the language of all the earth, and from thence did the Lord ſcatter them abroad upon the face of the earth. When people's hearts and tongues are divided and confounded, then they are in hazard of being ſcattered and deſtroyed.

5. Unſtable times are times of the ſlighting of the goſpel, the heavenly manna. When people cannot reſt content with that proviſion which God makes for them in the goſpel, how dangerous is this! See 2 Chro. xxxvi. 14, 15, 16. They mocked the meſſengers of God, and deſpiſed his words, and miſuſed his prophets, until the wrath of the Lord aroſe againſt his people, till there was no remedy. Jer. xxvi. 4, 5, 6. Thus ſaith the Lord, If you will not hearken to me, to walk in my law, which I have ſet before you, to hearken to the words of my ſervants the prophets, whom I ſent unto you, both riſing up early, and ſending them (but ye have not hearkened) then will I make this houſe like Shiloh, and will make this city a curſe to all the nations of the earth. Was ever a nation more guilty than ourſelves? Judge then if we live not in perilous times.

6. Unſtable times are times of formality in religion; men having a form of godlineſs, without the power; yea, denying the power of it. When God has but the outſide; drawing near to him with the mouth, and honouring him with the lips: a formal carnal way of worſhipping God, inſtead of worſhipping him in the Spirit. Unſtable ſouls, that take up a profeſſion of religion, which degenerates into a formal outſide hypocritical devotion, are in a very dangerous caſe, as appears from the many woes Chriſt denounced againſt the Phariſees and hypocrites.

7. Unſtable times are times of ſecurity. Where there is no ſpiritual ſettlement there will be a carnal ſettlement, like Moab, that was at eaſe from his youth, and ſettled upon his lies and dregs, not being emptied from veſſel to veſſel, Jer. xlviii. 11. It it a dangerous time, when the wiſe and fooliſh virgins are ſleeping and ſlumbering; when men cry, Peace, peace; and, like the old world, put the evil day far off from them, ſudden deſtruction may be at the door.

8. Unſtable times are times of careleſs indifferency about the matters of God, and lukewarmneſs. When people are unſtable in the truth, they can never be zealous for it: the dangerouſneſs of this diſeaſe you read of, Rev. iii. 16. Becauſe thou art lukewarm, neither cold nor hot, I will ſpew thee out of my mouth; that is, reject thee with abhorrence. This, among others, is the ſin of our day, and ſhows we are living in perilous times. There are two things very ſad in Scotland.

(1.) Our light has worn out our zeal. It is ſeldom heard tell of, that light ſhould be an enemy to zeal and practice, till now it ſeems to be our miſery, that our light, knowledge, wiſdom, and politeneſs has blunted our zeal for God and for reformation principles and practice.

(2.) Our hazards have drowned our zeal; our apprehended hazards and difficulties have quenched the fire of zeal in many. The days have been in Scotland, when our difficulties and croſſes, hazard and dangers, have been as a burning coal to quicken our zeal for God, and make it the more fervent; but now, our difficulties and dangers are like ſo much wet timber laid upon the top of our zeal, like to drown it all out; and yet, where is the danger of ſtanding up for God and his cauſe? Where is the fury of the oppreſſor? Is it our ſtrength and ſafety to run away from God and duty? No, by no means: rather, is it not our ſtrength to ſit ſtill?

II. We now proceed to the ſecond thing propoſed, which was, To open up the NATURE of this ſtability in the faith, or ſteadineſs and eſtabliſhment therein. I would here, 1. Offer a ſcripture or two for ſhewing how this duty is commanded and commended. 2. What it ſuppoſes. 3. What it includes. 4. What it excludes. 5. What it infers.

1*ſt*, I would ſhow that it is both commanded and commended. I might cite many ſcriptures for this end; but I ſhall only quote one ſcripture, where it is commanded, and another where it is commended.

1. This ſtability in the faith is commanded, 1 Cor. xvi. 13. Watch ye, ſtand faſt in the faith, quit you like men, be ſtrong. Stand faſt in the faith; this is that duty which the apoſtle calls a continuing in the faith, grounded and ſettled, and not being moved away from the hope of the goſpel, Col. i. 23. This is that which he calls a being ſtedfaſt and immoveable, yea, always abounding in the work of the Lord, 1 Cor. xv. 58. This is that which is called an earneſt contending for the faith, once delivered to the ſaints, Jude ver. 3. And again, it is called a ſtanding faſt in one mind and ſpirit, ſtriving together for the faith of the goſpel, in nothing terrified by your adverſaries, &c. Phil. i. 27. In a word, it is called a being faithful to the death; Be thou faithful unto the death, and I will give thee a crown of life, Rev. ii. 10. In all which ſcriptures this duty of ſtability is commanded; and it is called a ſtanding faſt in the faith, to ſhow the influence that faith has upon perſeverance; for, by faith we ſtand, by faith we walk; by faith we live; by faith we fight; by faith we overcome; and all this, becauſe by faith we ſtand ſtill, and reſt upon a God in Chriſt, eſtabliſhed in the faith.—Thus it is commanded. Again,

2. This ſtability in the faith is commended; Rev. ii. 13. there the church of Pergamus is commended in theſe words, Thou holdeſt faſt my name, and haſt not denied my faith, &c. Where the thing they are commended for being ſtable in, is Chriſt's name, and his faith; that is, his goſpel, and the doctrine thereof. Paul is called a choſen veſſel to bear his name among the Gentiles; that is, his goſpel; and it may well be ſo called, becauſe, by the goſpel he makes his name known: and it is called the faith, becauſe it is the object of faith, the thing to be believed; and it is called his faith, becauſe he is the author of it; the ſum and ſubſtance of it. The giver of this goſpel-doctrine, ſubſtitutes himſelf in Adam's room, and fulfils the law, which to him was a covenant of works: and hence it is, that out of his obeying the law, the ſweet doctrine of the goſpel flows unto us; He is the end of the law for righteouſneſs, to every one that believeth. Now, this is what the church of Pergamus held, and would not deny, but gave their teſtimony to it againſt all the enemies that oppoſed it; no wonder, for it is the words of eternal life. We are not to think the worſe of any truth that it is oppoſed and controverted, and requires faſt holding, and violent holding; The kingdom of heaven ſuffers violence, and the violent take it by force. Nay, the more a truth is controverted the more commendable is a ſteady adherence to it. While we are in this militant ſtate, we cannot hold the truth without fighting; it is ſaid of the builders of the walls of Jeruſalem, Neh. iv. 18. That every builder had his ſword girded by his ſide, and ſo builded: ſo, in adhering to the truth of the goſpel, we are not to think ſtrange to hear of a banner in the banqueting-houſe of the goſpel; He brought me to the banqueting-houſe, and his banner over me was love. Why a banner in a banqueting-houſe? Becauſe we cannot keep the feaſt without oppoſition either from without or within. Many, when they ſee their believing a promiſe to be joined with a combat, they are diſcouraged; but ſpiritual builders muſt be ſpiritual ſoldiers, holding the promiſe in one hand, and the weapon in the other; the word in one hand, and the ſword in the other; the truth in one hand, and the armour of proof in the other. Faith without trouble or fighting is a ſuſpicious faith; for true faith is a fighting, wreſtling faith; and this is the faith that is here commended, as it is alſo, Rev. iii. 10. Becauſe thou haſt kept the word of my patience, I will alſo keep thee in the hour of temptation. Thou holdeſt faſt my name, and haſt not denied my faith, Rev. ii. 13.

ence

As to the denying of faith, there are four degrees of it. (1.) When men are ſilent through fear, unable to ſay, with Paul, I am not aſhamed of the goſpel of Chriſt. (2.) When men diſſemble, as Peter, I know not what thou ſayeſt. (3.) When they halt between two opinions, like theſe in the days of Ahab, that halted between God and Baal. (4.) When they expreſly deny the faith, as Peter denied Chriſt, I know not the man; and am not upon that ſide of the houſe, nor of that party. Thus, Chriſt is many times wounded in the houſe of his friends; ſometimes by a traiterous Judas, ſometimes by a timorous Peter. However, the denial of the faith goes on by ſuch degrees as theſe; every one of them draws on another: ſilence, through fear, draws on diſſimulation; diſſimulation draws on a halting between two, as it were, in a demurring what to do; and this halting draws on denying of the faith expreſly; for, apoſtacy is a ſlippery precipice; therefore men ſhould beware of the leaſt beginning, and of the leaſt ſhifting of the profeſſion of the faith, when called thereunto.

2dly, What this ſtability in the faith ſuppoſes? Surely it ſuppoſes peoples being once in the faith; as Paul deſigns Timothy, his ſon in the faith, 1 Tim. i. 2.; for, till once people be in the faith, they can never be eſtabliſhed in the faith, as the word is, Col. ii. 7. No more than a tree can be firmly rooted in the earth, that was never truly planted into it. Stability in the faith then, ſuppoſes a being in the faith; and that as it reſpects either the word of faith, the grace of faith, the obedience of faith, or the profeſſion of faith.

True ſtability in the faith ſuppoſes, 1. That we know the word of faith. 2. That we have the grace of faith. 3. That we make a profeſſion of faith. 4. That we yield the obedience of faith.

1. That we know the word of faith, or the doctrine of faith, or the truth; for a man can never be ſtable in the faith which he is ignorant of. If ever we will be eſtabliſhed in ſcriptural principles, we muſt be acquainted with the ſcriptures, the word of God, and know the truth as it is in Jeſus; and that not only a head knowledge, but a heart knowledge, that it may be a heart eſtabliſhment in the faith: this is called a receiving the faith in love, or a receiving the love of the truth, 2 Theſſ. ii. 19. Knowledge and affection ſhould grow together; for theſe people are moſt prone to error, who gain knowledge of truth, without affection to it; Becauſe they received not the love of the truth, that they might be ſaved. For this cauſe God ſhall ſend them ſtrong deluſions that they ſhould believe a lye; that they all might be damned who believe not the truth, but had pleaſure in unrighteouſneſs.

2. It ſuppoſes that we have the grace of faith; for, ſtability in the faith, being an eſtabliſhment in the grace of faith, as well as in the word or doctrine of faith, it muſt preſuppoſe, that a man has the grace of faith, otherwiſe he cannot ſit ſtill, or be ſtable in it; no more than one can be ſaid to ſit ſtill who has never ſat down: true ſtability then ſuppoſes, that a man hath once been made to ſit down, and reſt upon Chriſt as his righteouſneſs and ſtrength. We are called, 1 Pet. v. 9. to reſiſt the devil, ſtedfaſt in the faith; and that not only by a ſtedfaſt adherence to the word of faith, which was the weapon Chriſt made uſe of againſt the devil, when he quoted ſcripture to him, he refuted him by ſcripture; and this ſword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, is the weapon by which we are to reſiſt every temptation to ſin: but alſo, by a ſtedfaſt acting and exerciſing of the grace of faith, I mean, true ſaving juſtifying faith; becauſe this weapon of the word of faith cannot be uſed but by the grace of faith: for, to make uſe of the word of faith, without the grace of faith, is to do no more than the devil and his inſtruments can do, who will quote ſcripture as well as we; but to weild that weapon with the arm of faith, is what none but true believers, through grace, can do.

3. It ſuppoſes that we make profeſſion of the faith; why ſo? Becauſe ſtability in the faith, is a holding faſt the profeſſion of our faith without wavering, Heb. x. 23. They cannot be ſaid to hold faſt the profeſſion thereof, who never had a profeſſion, and never made a profeſſion. Men may be profeſſors, indeed, that are not true believers; but all true believers muſt be profeſſors, and ought to be profeſſors, and hold faſt their profeſſion, in the worſt times, without being aſhamed of Chriſt, or his cauſe; as Paul, who was not aſhamed of the goſpel of Chriſt, though oppoſed by the great, and wiſe, and learned of his day. Again,

4. It ſuppoſes that we yield the obedience of faith; of which we read, Rom. xvi. 26. This is a practical profeſſion, or confeſſion of Chriſt. There may be a verbal profeſſion with the mouth, without a practical profeſſion with the life; both ſhould go together: we ought to confeſs Chriſt with the mouth, Rom. x. 10. without being aſhamed to acknowledge our Maſter; and we ought to diſcover the ſincerity of our profeſſion by the whole tract of our converſation. This obedience of faith, or practical profeſſion, is either active or paſſive: active profeſſion is when our lives and manners do ſpeak and confeſs Chriſt, and evidence that we are not of theſe that profeſs to know him, but in works deny him. A paſſive profeſſion, is when we are ready to ſeal with our ſufferings and blood, what we profeſs with our mouths and actions: this is the profeſſion of martyrs, to whom it is given, in the behalf of Chriſt, not only to believe on him, but alſo to ſuffer for his ſake, Phil. i. 29. And here you ſee what is the obedience of faith, both active and paſſive.

paſſive. Now, true ſtability herein ſuppoſes a man's entering upon this obedience; for, how ſhall he be ſtable in it who never began to yield it? Stability in the faith then, being a ſtability in the doctrine of faith, in the grace of faith, in the profeſſion of faith, and in the obedience of faith, it ſuppoſes a man's knowing and underſtanding the faith which we ought to be eſtabliſhed in; believing what he underſtands; profeſſing what he believes; and practiſing what he profeſſes: and, indeed, faith not held in practice, will ſoon be denied in profeſſion, when the trial comes.

3*dly*, The next particular propoſed here was, What this ſtability in the faith includes. It includes two things, 1. An adherence to the faith. 2. A perſeverance in it.

1. A ſtedfaſt adherence to the faith, to the word of faith, the grace of faith, the profeſſion of faith, and the obedience of faith; this adherence to, or ſitting ſtill upon, the ſure foundation, is called a being rooted and built up in Chriſt, Col. ii. 6, 7. It is not enough that we receive Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, but we muſt walk in him, and be rooted and built up in him, by a daily improving of him. It is a fixed adherence to him notwithſtanding all fears, Pſal. cxii. 7. He ſhall not be afraid of evil tidings; his heart is fixed, truſting in the Lord; his heart is eſtabliſhed, he ſhall not be afraid, &c. Notwithſtanding all attacks of the enemy, and defeats by them. Though a believer be beat down, yet by faith he riſes, and keeps his ground; Rejoice not againſt me, O mine enemy; for, though I fall, I ſhall ariſe, Micah vii. 8. He that kills his enemy at the firſt blow, ſhows himſelf valiant; but ſo does he alſo ſhew a great deal of valour, who being often knocked down and wounded, yet riſes again and ſtands to it. Though the field be many times doubtful between faith and fear, between faith and doubting, yet faith overcomes by adhering to Chriſt, notwithſtanding difficulties in the way: thus Abraham ſtaggered not, but was fixed in his perſuaſion of the promiſe, being nothing moved by contrary appearances, but againſt hope believed in hope; over-looking both the deadneſs of his own body, and the the deadneſs of Sarah's womb.

2. It includes conſtant perſeverance in the faith; for, he that endures to the end ſhall be ſaved. They that caſt away their confidence intirely, were never built upon Chriſt; and that ſay, Why ſhould I wait for the Lord any longer? This is not to ſit ſtill, but to weary and withdraw from Chriſt. A true believer may be weary of his ſins, and weary of his life, but he will never be weary of his faith; he takes up Job's reſolution, Though he ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him. He buys the truth, and will never ſell it; he buys it at any rate, and will ſell it at no rate: but they that buy truth at an eaſy rate, no wonder that they ſell it at an eaſy rate; he that buys it for the ſake of the world, will ſell it for the ſake of the world; he that buys it for a luſt, will ſell it for a luſt.

There are two things we are to adhere to, and perſevere in, which yet the moſt part of people think needleſs; and theſe are, 1. The preſent truth; and, 2. The leaſt truth.

(1.) The preſent truth is what we are always to adhere to, and perſevere in, 2 Pet. i. 12. There the apoſtle ſpeaks of being eſtabliſhed in the preſent truth. If a man do not adhere to the truth, that is at preſent in controverſy in his day, he will adhere to no truth at all. The beſt evidence of integrity is freedom from the preſent corruptions of the times and place we live in; and adherence to the preſent oppoſed truth, ſo as to ſwim againſt the ſtream when it is ſtrong. Some think, what need we trouble our heads with a truth that is controverted among great and learned men? Really, Sirs, there is hardly one fundamental truth in religion, but what has been controverted by the devil and his inſtruments; and if we will not cleave to oppoſed and controverted truth, we muſt renounce the truth altogether. Nay, the more that Chriſt and his truths are oppoſed, the more ſhould we ſtand firm for him and it.

(2.) The leaſt truth is what we are to adhere to, and perſevere in, if we would be ſtable in the faith; he that is content to part with a hoove, is content to part with the whole of religion: as the true obeyer has a reſpect to all God's commandments; ſo the true believer has a reſpect to all his truths. The leaſt truth of God is a beam from the infinite Truth; and the man that will not adhere to the leaſt truth of Chriſt, will adhere to no truth in the day of trial for the truth.

4*thly*, The fourth thing here propoſed was, What this ſtability in the faith excludes? To this we reply, that among other things, it excludes theſe eight particulars following.

1. It excludes a fainting at the ſight of the croſs, Prov. ii. 10. If thou faint in the day of adverſity, thy ſtrength is ſmall. Sometimes the diſtant view of the croſs is more terrible than when it is at hand; and ſome have fainted at the diſtant view of it, that have rejoiced at the preſence of it. Peter was not ſo near the croſs, when only his Maſter was tried before the council, but he had a diſtant proſpect of it, and he fainted and fell by a ſilly maid challenging him; but when he came to be before the council himſelf, inſtead of fainting, you ſee what boldneſs he had, Acts v. 29. how he and the reſt of the apoſtles departed from the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to ſuffer ſhame for the name of Chriſt. The nearer the croſs of Chriſt is viewed, the ſweeter it is; and the nearer we come to it, the lighter. However, this fainting at the ſight of the croſs is excluded by this ſtability: the more ſtable, the leſs fainting.

2. This ſtability in the faith excludes a doubtfulneſs and heſitation about the truth, that we ſtand up for, and adhere to, in a time of trial, Rom. xv. 5. Let every man be fully perſuaded in his own mind. A man will never firmly adhere to, or ſuffer for that, which he is not fully perſuaded is a truth. I defy you to be a cleanly ſufferer for the cauſe of Chriſt, in a day of Scotland's defection, unleſs you can ſay, that you are really perſuaded, that the covenanted Reformation, doctrine, worſhip, diſcipline, and government of the church of Scotland, is the work of God, and founded on the word of God, and you have no doubt in your heart to the contrary.

3. This ſtability in the faith excludes a preſumptuous perſuaſion. We read of ſome preſumptuous believers, John ii. 23. to whom Chriſt would not commit himſelf, becauſe he knew them to be but rotten at the heart. Many have a faith that has neither God for its Father, nor the ſcriptures for its mother; it is a baſtard, that has neither true father nor mother. Chriſt will will not commit himself to such believers: they persuade themselves that they trust in Christ, but he knows them, that they cannot be trusted, and that they will not be trusty to him, or his cause.

4. This stability in the faith excludes wavering, and being tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, Eph. iv. 14. Some will have one religion this year, and another the next; one religion with this company, and another with that company. It is true, the faith of believers may be shaken by temptations from the devil, and his instruments, but yet it is not broken nor banished: he maintains an high veneration for the truth which he hears brangled, opposed, and borne down, and yet cannot sufficiently defend, like the woman that said, "Though I cannot dispute for Christ, yet "I can burn for him." But if your religion changes with the wind of temptation, or turns with the tide of the times, it is not worth a farthing.

5. This stability in the faith excludes doubleness of mind and tongue, James i. 8. A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways. Many have a double mind, a double face, a double tongue; and when this doubleness gets in among God's people, it marrs this stability. Peter learned a little of this doubleness and dissimulation, for which Paul took him to task, Gal. ii. 13. Some are expert in this trade of dissembling, that they may please every party; but their prudence will be their plague, who are not straight and upright for God, to the utmost of their power and knowledge: their policy will never be a cloak for their perjury, who, upon prudential considerations, desert the cause of Christ.

6. This stability in the faith excludes all sinful compliances with the courses of the times. To go further than conscience will allow, is to make shipwreck of faith, and a good conscience, 1 Tim. i. 19. Carnal reason says, Hold with the times, comply with the measures of the majority, be what it will; it is dangerous to do otherwise: but God says, Hold faith and a good conscience, and then you are safe; He that walks uprightly, walks safely.

7. This stability in the faith excludes sinful silence, when the cause and interest of Christ requires our testimony; For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, says the prophet, Isa. lxii. 1. The watchmen upon her walls are ordered not to hold their peace, but to cry aloud, and not spare. There are some scriptures that many are like to break their necks upon in our day, and that is one among the rest, Amos v. 13. The prudent shall keep silence in that time, for it is an evil time. Why then, say some in their practice, we should not speak a word for truth, let truth be never so much opposed; nor speak a word against any acts of Assembly, let them be never so contrary to scripture, and covenants both. But God never warranted any, according to their call, capacity, and station, so to keep silence as not to speak against the evils and errors of the times: this were inconsistent to his solemn orders to his watchmen, to give faithful warning to people, as they would not be guilty of their blood. And if God has said, he will send a sword to avenge the quarrel of his covenant, I think, we particularly, who preach the gospel unto you, would not be faithful, if we did not warn you that Scotland is in danger of God's wrath, as long as there is any standing acts of the national church, contradictory to, and inconsistent with the National Covenant; nor will ever any wrested scripture be a sufficient cloak to cover us from the guilt of sinful silence.

8. This stability in the faith excludes all sinful debates and disputings about known truths. We read, 1 Tim. iii. 5. Of perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, destitute of the truth: men that will bring known truths to be matter of debate, will never be stable; if the truth come not to be a matter beyond debate, and beyond dispute with them. Alas! all the precious truths of God, even some that were never debated in our land, are, now-a-days, become debatable points. It was never a point of debate, or debated in our reforming times, that ministers were to be settled by the call and consent of the people, but now it is turned to a debatable point; though we have the strongest arguments in scripture for it. Acts i. 23. we have an argument for it drawn from the greater to the less, in the whole church, or peoples being called to chuse the apostle, as far as was consistent with his being immediately chosen of God, as the office required; for, the people were to chuse the two, out of which GOD was to chuse one: and if they had such an hand in the choice of the extraordinary officer, much more ought they to have in the ordinary.—Acts vi. 3. we have an argument from the less to the greater, in the choosing of deacons; as the highest officers, the apostles, were not chosen of God, without the people, in the former example; so here the lowest officer could not be chosen by the apostles themselves, but by the people; though one might think the apostles were as good judges: and if the people must chuse these that take care of their alms or charity, much more concern have they in choosing such as take care of their souls.—Acts xiv. 23. we have a plain argument from the example, the apostles ordaining presbyters by the suffrage of the people, as it is well known the word χειροτονήσαντες signifies *. —And James ii. from the beginning, we have these arguments confirmed by the apostle, discharging all respect, in spiritual matters, to the rich man, with the gold ring and the gay clothing; intimating, that no temporal wealth or heritage can intitle them to any spiritual privilege, no more than an earthly estate can intitle a man to heaven; and consequently, no heritor of this earth, as such, has any right above others to chuse pastors to any congregation, which is a spiritual privilege relating to immortal souls; ministers themselves have no title to be lords over the consciences of men, far less have they power, by any act whatsoever, to make temporal heritors, or earthly superiors, lords over God's heritage. But for as clear as this is in scripture, and though it be one of the covenanted principles, yet it is turned now to a debatable point*.

* The word χειροτονήσαντες, in our version, is but half-translated; and made to run thus; And when they had ORDAINED them elders in every church. But according to Erasmus, who renders it, Cum suffragiis creassent, and Beza, Pasor, &c. who have it, per suffragia creassent, it should run thus, When they had, by SUFFRAGES, appointed to them elders in every church. All the old English Translations have it so; and it was retained by our last translators, until the version was committed by K. James, to some of the English bishops to be revised, who vitiate this, as well as thirteen other passages of the New Testament, to make them favour the church of England. The word here is not χειροθεσια, which signifies the action of ministers in ordaining; but it is χειροτονια, which is expressive of the peoples act in electing pastors, by elevation, or lifting up the hand, as was the custom at that time. In this sense the apostle uses it, 2 Cor. viii. 19.

be

Again, it is now turned a debatable queſtion, whether Chriſt be the ſupreme God, the moſt high God, though yet in ſcripture all the great names of God, all the glorious attributes of God, all the wonderful works of God, and all the worſhip due only to God be aſcribed to him †.—It is now a debatable point, whether there be any neceſſity for divine ſupernatural revelation, whether the light of nature be not ſufficient, without the ſcripture, to ſalvation ‡.—In a word, the greateſt points in religion are turned debatable points, and among the reſt, whether our national covenants be binding upon us.

Well, I ſay, ſtability in the faith excludes all ſinful debating about known truths; and when matters of faith are turned to debateable queſtions, it is a clear demonſtration of the inſtability of the times. If we would ſit ſtill, and be ſtable Chriſtians, we are to lay up known truths in our boſoms, as matters beyond debate; the debating of known truths is a ſin as pernicious as committing of known ſins, and the omitting of known duty, or neglecting of known commands.——Thus we ſee what this ſtability in the faith includes. The mentioning of theſe things plainly ſhow, that it is our ſtrength to ſit ſtill, and to be ſtable and fixed in the faith: there is little ſafety where there is little ſtability.

5thly, The next thing propoſed upon this head was, what this ſtability in the faith infers. And I ſhall conſider this queſtion, 1. With reference to the object. 2. With reference to the exerciſe of this ſtability in the faith. The firſt queſtion will relate to what we are to be ſtable in, when ſtable in the faith? and the ſecond to this, how we ſhould be eſtabliſhed?

[1.] What this ſtability infers, with reference to the object? And here we ſhall enumerate the following ten particulars on this point.

1. Stability in the faith infers, with reference to the object, wherein we are to be ſtable, a ſtability in reſpect of our principles: and hence we are called to hold faith and a good conſcience, 1 Tim. i. 19.: theſe two make up a right principle, namely, faith and a good conſcience. The object of a right principle is the truth, which is the object of faith. The ſubject of a right principle is conſcience, and that a good conſcience, a ſanctified conſcience; theſe two muſt be joined together, Hold faith and a good conſcience. Error is ſeldom accompanied with holineſs: faith and conſcience go well together; many join them very profanely, by ſwearing by them; few join them religiouſly, and hold them faſt together. The Spirit ſpeaks expreſly, that in the latter times ſome ſhall depart from the faith, 1 Tim. iv. 1. We do not know what is coming upon us; but it may be that theſe truths we now allow, and approve of, we may come to be aſhamed of, as ſome are at this day of our antient covenanted principles.

2. Stability in the faith infers, ſtability in reſpect of the promiſes. We ſee David taking hold of the promiſe, Pſa. lx. 6. God has ſpoken in his holineſs, I will rejoice: he ſees the mercy, truth, and holineſs of God are pledged for making out the promiſe. Now, we ought to be ſtable in the faith thereof: many times we take the promiſe, and upon the firſt temptation we caſt it away; but we are to hold the promiſe as we would do our life, ſaying, Lord, I hope in thy word; Lord, remember the word on which thou haſt cauſed me to hope. We are to expect good upon the head of the promiſe.

3. Stability in the faith infers, ſtability in reſpect of the relations wherein we ſtand to God, and he to us: the church maintains the faith of this, Song ii. 6. My beloved is mine, and I am his. And again, Song vii. 10. I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine. She ſays it backward and forward, He is mine, and I am his; and again, I am his, and he is mine: and, indeed, ſtability in the faith of this, is requiſite when enemies ſay, Where is thy God? And what claim have you to him more than others.

4. Stability in the faith infers, ſtability in duty, and particularly in the duty of the times, and in preſent duty, that God calls to in his preſent diſpenſations: as it is ſaid of the children of Iſſachar, that they had underſtanding of the times to know what Iſrael ought to do, 1 Chron. xii. 32. It may be ſaid of many of us, what Chriſt ſaid of the Phariſees, Mat. xvi. 3. that they could diſcern the face of the ſky, but could not diſcern the ſigns of the times. We have ſkill of many things, but no ſkill of preſent duty: but he that is eſtabliſhed in the knowledge of preſent duty, though there ſhould be never ſo many dangers and hazards in the way, he will venture upon duty, and tread upon the neck of hazard. See John xi. 7, 8. Jeſus ſaid unto the diſciples, Let us go into Judea. Again, His diſciples anſwered, Maſter, the Jews of late ſought to ſtone thee, and goeſt thou thither again? Jeſus anſwered, Are there not twelve hours in the day, and while a man walks in the day he ſtumbles not, becauſe he ſeeth the light. "I have, might he ſay, twelve "hour to walk in, and they are not yet end-"ed; there is no fear of hazard till my day be "done:" let not preſent duty be neglected from the proſpect of hazard. Danger hath many times more bulk in our eye than duty; but, if we follow Chriſt, duty will be more bulky in our eye than danger.

5. Stability in the faith infers, ſtability in our reſolution to follow duty. Thus Joſhua, chap. xxiv. 14, 15. when he is dealing with Iſrael, to whom he had been a leader, and endeavouring to confirm them in their reſolution to ſerve the Lord, Chuſe ye, ſays he, whither you will ſerve the gods on this ſide of the flood, or the gods on the other ſide of the flood; but as for me, and my houſe, we will ſerve the Lord. "Lay your hand to your "heart, might he ſay, and chooſe you whom "you will ſerve, but I am reſolute, I will ſerve "the Lord." Such a ſtability David profeſſes, I have ſworn, and I will perform, that I will keep thy righteous judgments.

6. Stability in the faith infers, ſtability in

* This reaſoning has a peculiar reſpect to the act of Parliament, 1710, reſtoring patronage, and the act of Aſſembly, 1732, in veſting heritors and elders with the power of election of miniſters. See above, p. 631, 635, 648.

† Alluding to the proceſs concerning profeſſor Simſon, briefly laid open above, p. 322. 454.

‡ About this time the principles of infidelity were greatly upon the increaſe; and ſeveral of the younger clergy but too juſtly ſuſpected as favourers of deiſtical tenets. Mr. Campbell, profeſſor of eccleſiaſtical hiſtory in St. Andrews, openly publiſhed to the world a ſyſtem of very pernicious principles; and amongſt others, "That the laws of nature, are in themſelves, a certain and ſufficient rule to "direct rational minds to happineſs; and that the obſerving theſe laws is the great mean and inſtrument of our real and laſting felicity." And the author of the Aſſembly's Catechiſm reviſed, etc. ſaps all the Peculiar Doctrines of Chriſtianity, and ſtrikes at the whole Scheme of Divine Revelation, contained in the ſaid Catechiſm. And ſo inſolent were ſome upon this point, that a little after this, one Mr. Nimmo, ſtudent in divinity, in a public diſcourſe in the divinity-hall of Edinburgh, made a blaſphemous attack upon the whole of Divine Revelation.

our

our courage and boldneſs to confeſs Chriſt before the world, when others deny him: it is an awful word, Mat. x. 32, 33. Whoſoever ſhall confeſs me before men, him will I confeſs before my Father which is in heaven; but whoſoever ſhall deny me before men, him alſo will I deny before my Father who is in heaven. It is recorded to the praiſe of Daniel, that when he was forbidden to pray to God, he is not daunted, but will openly worſhip him with his windows open toward Jeruſalem, when a royal ſtatute and decree was emitted, that whoſoever ſhould aſk a petition of any god or man, for thirty days, ſave of king Darius, he ſhould be caſt into the lions den; Daniel worſhipped God in all the ſolemn circumſtances he had formerly done: ſome might have thought he might have worſhipped and kept his window cloſe, without expoſing himſelf by ſuch a circumſtance; but when even the circumſtances of a teſtimony and confeſſion tends to glorify God, and the failing even in circumſtances would tend to diſhonour God, and gratify the enemy, they muſt be adhered unto. Hence ſay ſome, "He that cannot be a circum-"ſtantial confeſſor will never be a martyr."

7. Stability in the faith infers, ſtability in our war againſt ſin, and in our old and new victories we have obtained over our idols and luſts, that we loſe not that which we have wrought, 2 John ver. 8. Look to yourſelves, that we loſe not that which we have GAINED, as the word is in the margin. May we not ſay many times, What we gained in the forenoon we loſe in the afternoon; what victory over ſin we have gained in the evening, we have loſt in the morning; or, what we have gained in the morning, we loſe in evening. Perhaps you have got ſome ground upon your worldly-mindedneſs, ſome time ago; ſome ground upon your paſſion, ſome ground upon your luſts; but, alas! now all is gone. What need have we to look to ourſelves that we be ſtable in our war againſt corruption, ſtedfaſt in maintaining what victories we have got over our luſts!

8. Stability in the faith infers, ſtability in our ſpiritual frame, as far as poſſible. It is true, this is the moſt changeable thing in the world; who can ſpeak of a communion frame continuing eight days? yea, or eight hours? It is a very rare thing; yet this ought to be ſtudied, and means of maintaining a ſpiritual frame followed, particularly in the intervals of duty; not only by ſpiritual converſation, but alſo ſpiritual ejaculations towards heaven; Pray without ceaſing, ſays the apoſtle; that is, according to ſome, endeavour ſtill to maintain a praying frame.

9. Stability in the faith infers, ſtability in ſpiritual experience and experimental knowledge. This helps to courage in unſtable and dangerous times. Paul, ſpeaking of his ſufferings, ſays, Nevertheleſs I am not aſhamed; for I know in whom I have believed; and I am perſuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him, 2 Tim. i. 12. "I know what dealings I have "had with him, and what affairs I have com-"mitted to his truſt; I know what meetings "I have had with him, may a believer ſay, "what Bethel viſits I have had from him, and "what Peniel views I have had of him." Trying times may ſhake your experiences, and death will try them, and pehaps bring down twenty of them to one or two: we need to be ſtable and well eſtabliſhed therein.

10. Stability in the faith infers, ſtability in all the other graces of the Spirit. It infers ſtability in our love and affection to Chriſt, and his truth. The church of Epheſus is reproved becauſe ſhe fell from her firſt love, Rev. ii. 4. O! where is that love that once you had to Chriſt and his way? But were we ſtedfaſt in the faith, we would be ſtedfaſt in our affections to Chriſt and his cauſe.—It infers ſtability in our joy, ſo as to rejoice in Chriſt Jeſus; Though the fig tree ſhould not bloſſom, yet will I rejoice in the Lord; I will be glad in the God of my ſalvation.—It infers ſtability in our hope; Continuing in the faith, grounded and ſettled, ſo as not to be moved away from the hope of the goſpel, Col. i. 23. What the anchor is to the ſhip, that is hope to the ſoul, Entering within the vail, and having reſpect to the recompence of reward, with Moſes; living in expectation of the heavenly Canaan; and in this view preferring a ſhare with the ſuffering Iſraelites before all the riches of Egypt.—It infers ſtability in our zeal; many are like Gallio, who care for none of theſe things, whither God or Baal prevail; whither Dagon or the ark be ſet up; whatever religion is in vogue they ſet up for being like Reuben, Unſtable as water, and cannot excell: but ſtability in our zeal for God, and his intereſt, is duty at all times, eſpecially in times of greateſt hazard, though it ſhould coſt us the loſs of our lives as well as our livelihood: it will be gain at laſt.——Thus of the object of our ſtability, or what we are to be eſtabliſhed in.

[2.] What this ſtability infers, with reference to the exerciſe of this ſtability, or the duty of ſtedfaſtneſs.

1. This duty of ſtability infers and carries along with it grace in the heart as the predominant ſettler and eſtabliſher of the ſoul, Heb. xiii. 9. It is a good thing to have the heart eſtabliſhed with grace. Grace muſt be predominant in that exerciſe, in ſettling the heart in the day of trouble and temptation. Where there is little grace, there is much ebbing and flowing in religion.

2. This duty of ſtability infers, an immoveable motion, a conſtant moving, yet always immoveable, 1 Cor. xv. 58. Be ſtedfaſt and immoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord: the word ſignifies ever moving, and yet never moving; that is, ever moving within the circle of duty that God has caſt for him, but never moving over God's bounds.

3. This duty of ſtability infers, a continual watchfulneſs; Watch ye, ſtand faſt in the faith. Let him that thinks he ſtandeth take heed leaſt he fall. We ought to watch unto prayer; and watch unto the practice of known truth: every freſh diſcovery of truth quickening to the freſh practice of it: we ought to watch againſt ſin and particularly againſt the ſin of a backſliding time, wherein perjury is varniſhed over with the name of prudence. See Iſa. li. 20, 21.

4. This duty of ſtability infers and carries with it, daily renewed actings of faith upon the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Pet. ii. 4. To whom coming, as to a living ſtone; ye alſo as living ſtones are built up a ſpiritual houſe. It is a new coming to Chriſt that is there ſpoken of; the ſtable Chriſtian every day faſtens new grips, and takes faſter hold of Chriſt, leſt the former grip and former hold ſhould ſlip.

5. This ſtability infers, a daily ſucking in the ſap of the ſcriptures, in order to ſpiritual growth and ſpiritual ſtrength, 1 Pet. ii. 3. As new born babes, deſire fire the ſincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby, 1 Pet. ii. 3. The ſteady Chriſtian will be daily gathering a ſtock of ſcriptures, and a treaſure of truths into his boſom, that when the devil ſets his cannon of temptation againſt him, he may be ready to bring out a cannon of ſcripture quotations out of his boſom, as Chriſt himſelf did, Mat. iv. 3,—11. and thereby defeat the devil, and diſcomfit the ſtrong man.

6. This duty of ſtability infers, a patient waiting for the appointed time of the promiſe being accompliſhed; Hab. ii. 3. The viſion is for an appointed time; but at the end it ſhall ſpeak and not lye: though it tarry, wait for it, becauſe it will ſurely come. The Lord many times reſerves ſome precious word of promiſe to be made out to his friends, when they come to ſome ſad hour of trial and temptation; Becauſe thou haſt kept the word of my patience, I will keep thee from the hour of temptation, Rev. iii. 10. Until the dark hour come, perpaps he will not ſhow himſelf. God promiſes to deliver Iſrael out of Egypt, Exod. iii. 8.; but, behold the Lord keeps the out-making of the promiſe to a Red-ſea, and there he lets it drop into their cup: The Egyptians whom you have ſeen to-day, you ſhall ſeen them again no more for ever, Exod. xiv. 13. Think not ſtrange, if ſome ſweet promiſe be reſerved to a Red-ſea that is before you: Iſrael had never known the ſweetneſs of the promiſe, if a Red-ſea had not made it out. God has wonderful ways of making out his word through fire and water.

7. This duty of ſtability infers, a continual warfare, and fighting the good fight of faith, putting on, and keeping on, the ſpiritual armour, Eph. vi. 11, 12. And above all, taking the ſhield of faith, whereby we quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. When the devil is like to ſet all the houſe in a flame with his fiery darts, we are as faſt to bring water from the word of God, and throw it upon the fire to quench it. Yea, not only has faith the waters of the ſanctuary to caſt upon the flames, but alſo the blood of the covenant, the blood of Chriſt, to extinguiſh the fire; We overcome by the blood of the Lamb. Why, the believer can go, where the tempter cannot approach, and that is to the holieſt, by the blood of Jeſus; or to God, through Jeſus Chriſt, to bring ſtrength from on high.

8. This duty of ſtability in the faith infers, a living upon things unſeen, till we get the things that do appear; We look not at the things that are ſeen, but at the things that are not ſeen; for the things that are ſeen are temporal, but the things that are not ſeen are eternal, 2 Cor. iv. 18. How did Moſes bear up, when he choſed affliction with the people of God? Why, he endured as ſeeing him who is inviſible, Heb. xi. 27. Viſible things bulk moſt with us, but they are the moſt changeable things; therefore, they are beſt of in trying times, amidſt all outward changes, who look moſt to the things that are not ſeen, and which are eternal and unchangeable.

9. This duty of ſtability infers, eſpecially in perilous times, a taking up the croſs, and yet leaving the weight of it upon Chriſt. The croſs of Chriſt is like the yoke of Chriſt, of which he ſays, My yoke is eaſy, and my burden is light, Mat. xi. 30. We are not to take it up, in order to bear the weight and burden of it, but only to take it up, and lay the weight of it upon Chriſt himſelf, who ſo orders us, ſaying, Caſt thy burden on the Lord, and he will ſuſtain thee, Pſal. lv. 22. Our Lord never requires us to lift a burden, but with a deſign we ſhould lay it upon his own ſhoulders, who is the chief burden-bearer. When he calls us to a warfare, it is upon his own charges; therefore, if we have any faith, we need not be afraid of the croſs of Chriſt; it is rather matter of joy; Count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations, James i. 2. It is matter of gloriation; God forbid that we ſhould glory, ſave in the croſs of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Gal. vi. 14. We glory in tribulations, knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope; Rom. v. 3.

10. This duty of ſtability in the faith, in perilous times, infers a continuance in the faith in times of trouble; If ye continue in my word, ſays Chriſt, then are ye my diſciples indeed; and ye ſhall know the truth, and the truth ſhall make you free, John viii. 31, 32. Who will be the freeſt man in trying times? Even the ſtrickeſt man, who continues moſt firmly in the faith. There is a fourfold work of faith in this continuing exerciſe of it in a day of trouble.

(1.) It is the work of eſtabliſhed faith to take a new feaſt upon an old experience. The man comes ſometimes to a wilderneſs where there is nothing to be gotten but hunger and want, and then ſits down and ſearches around to find ſomething to ſupport him, and preſently recollects what he has formely enjoyed, and ſo falls upon a five or ſix-year-old experience, a twenty or thirty-year-old experince, and takes a feaſt upon it, ſaying, "For all that is come "and gone, I will remember the years of the right- "hand of the moſt High: I will remember thee from "the land of Jordan, and from the hill Mizar. "I will remember the works of the Lord; ſurely I "will remember thy wonders of old," Pſal. xlii. 6. lxxvii. 11. It is the work of faith, in the day of trouble, to take a new meal upon an old promiſe, as Jacob did, Gen. xxxii. 12. Thou ſaidſt, I will ſurely do thee good: and now, remember the word on which thou cauſedſt me to hope.

(2.) It is the work of eſtabliſhed faith, in times of trouble, to ſit down upon the hill of difficulties and ſtraits, and ſing that pleaſant ſong, Though the fig-tree ſhould not bloſſom, nor fruit be found in the vine, &c. yet will I rejoice in the Lord, and be glad in the God of my ſalvation. Though my houſe be not ſo with God; though my heart be not ſo with God as I would wiſh, yet he hath made with me an everlaſting covenant, well ordered in all things and ſure: and this is all my ſalvation, and all my deſire.

(3.) It is the work of eſtabliſhed faith, in a day of trouble and hiding, ſometimes to make uſe of ſome common relations to God as an argument for faith, till it get a more ſpecial relation to feed upon; Pſal. cxix. 73. Thy hands have made and faſhioned me; give me underſtanding that I may learn thy commandments. Thy hands have made me and faſhioned me; well, may not any reprobate wretch in the world ſay the ſame thing? True, but they cannot make ſuch an argument of it, Give me underſtanding that I may learn thy commandments.—Pſal. xxii. 9, 10. Thou art he that took me out of the womb; well, what of that? It follows in the next verſe, Thou art my God from my mother's belly.—Faith can take an argument from a general relation, till it get a more ſpecial relation to plead upon.

(4.) It is the work of faith to draw incouragements from diſcouragements: What more diſcouraging than to be called a dog? Matth. xv. 27. yet the poor woman draws incouragement out of it: Truth, Lord; yet the dogs eat of the crumbs that fall from their master's table. Hezekiah draws encouragement even from oppression; Isa. xxxviii. 14. O Lord, I am oppressed, undertake for me. David draws encouragement even from the greatest of his sins, Psa. xxv. ii. For thy name's sake pardon mine iniquity, for it is great. He daws an argument from his weakness, Psa. vi. 2. Have mercy upon me, for I am weak: and sometimes from his poverty and necessity, Psa. xl. 17. I am poor and needy, yet the Lord thinks upon me. Established faith will, from guilt, draw an argument for pardon; from pollution, an argument for purification; from sickness, an argument for healing, &c.

(5.) It is the work of established faith to dispute and deny the conclusions of unbelief, Psa. lxxxvii. 7, 8, 9. The conclusions of unbelief are, The Lord will cast off; the Lord will be favourable no more; his mercy is clean gone; his promise fails; he has forgotten to be gracious; he has in anger shut up his tender mercy: but faith first disputes these conclusions, saying, Will the Lord cast off for ever? will he be favourable no more? is his mercy clean gone? doth his promise fail for evermore? has he forgotten to be gracious? has he in anger shut up his tender mercy? It calls these conclusions into debate, disputing and questioning them, and then denies them in the following verse, I said, this is my infirmity; I will remember the years of the right-hand of the Most High; I will remember the works of the Lord, and his wonders of old. And whenever faith comes to deny the conclusion of unbelief, then it is at the head of the mount, as it were, at the top of the hill, and a song of triumph in its mouth, I will remember the years of the right-hand of the Most High, and his works and wonders of old.

(6.) It is the work of established faith, in a day of the trial of faith, to recover and restore the soul, when temptation has thrown it down into the mire. David fell before the temptation that was drawn from the prosperity of the wicked, and adversity of the godly, Psa. lxx. and says, ver. 13. Verily, I have cleansed my heart in vain, and washed my hands in innocency; for I am plagued all day long. Well, but whenever he went to the sanctuary of God by faith, then he recovers himself, and says, So foolish was I and ignorant; I was as a beast before thee: nevertheless, I am continually with thee: thou holds me by my right-hand; thou wilt guide me by thy counsel, and afterwards receive me into thy glory. Whom have I in heaven but thee, and there is none in the earth that I desire besides thee. My flesh and my heart faileth, but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion for ever. ——Thus we see what this stability in the faith infers and carries along with it. I now proceed to the next general head,

III. To shew that this stability and establishment in the faith, is peoples strength and safety in perilous time. For opening this head, I shall consider, 1. The evil and disadvantage of INSTABILITY. 2. The good and advantage of STABILITY in the faith.

1st, The evil and disadvantage of INSTABILITY and unstedfastness appears in these particulars.

1. Instability in the faith is hateful to God, who says, If any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him, Heb. x. 38. It provokes God to reject people, and to spew them out of his mouth. And why so? Because,

2. Instability in the faith is a greatly aggravated sin: it is a sin against knowledge; and the servant who knows his master's will, and does it not, is to be beaten with double stripes. It is a sin against profession and engagements, whether national or personal, in baptism and the Lord's supper. It is a sin against great love and mercy.

3. Instability in the faith has fearful idolatry wrapt up in it. When, by unbelief, we depart from the fountain of living waters, we turn to earthen cisterns, which can hold no water.

4. Instability in the faith is the greatest reproach; it is a leaving of God, even after experience: few have a profession of faith, but have tasted something of the sweetness of God's ways; and now, to prefer sin and lusts, what a reproach is cast upon God?

5. Instability in the faith is worse than profaneness, 2 Pet. ii. 21, 22. It had been better for them, not to have known the way of righteousness, than after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment. Instability being the porch of apostasy, where this is total, it is worse than profanity; for it is a greater sin to renounce Christ, than to refuse him.

6. Instability provokes God to write a bill of divorce against a people; it is a sin that separates between God and them; it is just with God to cast them off, when they cast him off. And, wo to a people when God departs from them!

2dly, The next thing was to speak of the good and advantage of STABILITY and establishment in the faith: and therein it will appear, that it is a church or peoples strength to sit still, and abide in the faith. The advantage of stability in the faith may appear in the following particulars.

1. Establishment in the faith puts a man in capacity to act for God, Isa. xi. 31. They that wait on the Lord, shall renew their strength. And again, They that know their God shall be strong and do exploits, Dan. xi. 32. They have strength to do for Christ: if we abide in Christ, by faith then we bring forth fruit to the praise of God.

2. Stability in the faith puts a man in case to suffer for Christ, and to continue with him in his temptation; and thereby the Christian is made sure of Christ's legacy; Ye are they who have continued with me in my temptations, and I appoint unto you a kingdom. This legacy is secured by the death of the Testator, Luke xxii. 28. The men of the world think they have a poor bargain, who venture all for Christ; but let me see were there is such a noble bargain, and so upmaking for time and eternity.

3. Stability in the faith puts a man in case to die for Christ, if he be called to it, Acts xxii. 13. What mean ye to weep, and break mine heart? I am content not only to be bound, but even to die at Jerusalem for the name of Jesus. His friends were weeping because he was going up to Jerusalem, where bonds and imprisonments were abiding him: but says he, I am content not only to be bound, but to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus: I value my life as well as you do; but when my life, and the Lord of life come in competition, my life shall go, though I had a thousand lives.

4. Stability in the faith puts a man in case to defeat the devil; for, by faith, we quench his fiery darts, and resist him stedfastly in the faith. Satan sought to winnow Peter, but Christ prayed for him, that his faith might not fail. This says, the devil has a sieve wherein he sifts and winnows, nows, and winnows both miniſters and people: and we may well affirm, that Satan has the miniſters and Chriſtians of Scotland now in a ſieve, and he is ſifting and riddling them; and it is like, more chaff than good corn will be found among us: but as for theſe that are ſtable in the faith, Satan loſes his pains and his profit with them; for, they will be able to overcome, by the blood of the Lamb, and the word of their teſtimony.

5. Stability in the faith makes a man reach the deſign both of the word and rod; it is the end of both to eſtabliſh us in the faith; wherefore comes the word to us, but that we may believe and be ſtrong in the faith? Wherefore comes the rod, but that by the trial of faith it may be ſtrengthened and confirmed? So that upon a man that is eſtabliſhed in the faith both word and rod have got their errand; none of them are in vain.

6. Stability in the faith is an honourable duty and exerciſe; for, faith is the crown, and ſtedfaſtneſs therein is a keeping of the crown, Rev. iii. 11. Behold, I come quickly; hold faſt what thou haſt, that no man take thy crown: and he lays no other burden upon us but this, Hold faſt till I come, Rev. ii. 24, 25.

7. Stability in the faith proves a man to be a true diſciple, John viii. 31, 32. If you continue in my word then are ye my diſciples; and ye ſhall know the truth, and the truth ſhall make you free. Men may reckon themſelves free by human laws and acts, though yet they abide not in the truth; but they that know the truth, and abide in it, are free by an act of the court of heaven.

8. Stability in the faith influences our growth in every grace; we will never add grace to grace, experience to experience, and faith to faith, unleſs we be ſtable in the faith; The path of the juſt is as the ſhining light, that ſhineth more and more unto the perfect day. When we are ſtedfaſt and immoveable, then we are always abounding in the work of the Lord. Except we ply the oars cloſe, we will go down the ſtream.

9. Stability in the faith evidences ſincerity and uprightneſs of heart, even as inſtability evidences hypocriſy, Pſal. xxvii. 37. Their heart was not right with God, neither were they ſtedfaſt in his covenant. Their unſtedfaſtneſs diſcovered that their heart was not right with God. Now, if you be ſteady and ſtable in the faith it will diſcover that your heart was right with God, and that is the great matter.

10. Stability in the faith makes a man uſeful in his generation; though he were alone, yet he is uſeful, as Noah, of whom God ſays, Gen. vii. 1. Come thou, and all thy houſe, into the ark, for thee only have I found righteous before me in this generation. How uſeful was he to the preſervation of a remnant! Elijah was alone as a prophet; and how uſeful was he in his day? He is called the chariots of Iſrael and the horſemen thereof. And though a man that is ſtable in the faith were of no other uſe but to give his teſtimony for God, exonerate himſelf in his day, it is a matter of conſequence to the generation, both paſt, preſent, and to come.

We need, Sirs, at this day, to exonerate ourſelves at the hands of our forefathers, who are gone; at the hands of our children, who are living; and at the hands of our poſterity that are to come. O Sirs, it is a queſtion we ſhould poſe ourſelves with, are we faithful to our fathers that went before us? Are we faithful to theſe that are cotemporary with us? And, are we faithful to theſe that are following after us, when we ourſelves are rotten in the duſt? —What are we doing, to exonerate ourſelves at the hand of our forefathers, who travelled night and day to get a covenanted work of Reformation brought to the pattern of God's word, and committed it to us, having left it whole and ſound at our doors? Alas! how is this work marred and defaced among our hands! How has the generation betrayed the truſt our fathers committed to us? — What are we doing to exonerate ouſelves at the hand of the preſent generation? Are we contending for the faith, and for the cauſe of Chriſt, againſt thoſe that are betraying it? —And, what are we doing to exonerate ourſelves at the hands of our poſterity? Are we tranſmitting Reformation-work whole and ſound to them? Or rather, are we not tranſmitting to them poiſon, inſtead of wholſom food; traſh, inſtead of truth; lumber and droſs, inſtead of ſilver and gold; and counterfeit, inſtead of good coin?

In a word, ſtability in the faith is our ſtrength and ſafety, becauſe it is God himſelf, Chriſt himſelf, that is our ſtrength and ſafety; he is the ſtrength of Iſrael; and therefore, our ſtrength lies in ſitting ſtill, and fitting near to him: our ſtrength lies not in the act of faith, otherwiſe it were enough to have once ſat down upon this foundation; but it lies in the object and ground of faith, our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; the Lord our righteouſneſs and ſtrength, on which alone true faith doth reſt and ſit ſtill: when we ſtay, by faith, in the midſt of our ſtrong tower, we are ſafe, becauſe the ſtrong tower is our ſafety: the ſtrength of faith is God himſelf in Chriſt; therefore, to abide in him, to ſit ſtill and reſt on him alone is our ſtrength. When a man runs to, and reſts upon an impregnable rock, where he is ſafe from the enemy, we do not mean that it is his act of reſting there that ſecures him, but the rock on which he reſts; yet we ſay, it is his ſtrength to ſit ſtill upon the rock, becauſe the rock is his ſtrength: ſo it is our ſtrengh to ſit ſtill on the Rock of ages; becauſe Chriſt the Rock of ages is our ſtrength, and when, by unbelief, we depart from him, then we deſert our ſtrength.

IV. The next thing was the application. All the application I offer at the time is in a few inferences.

1. If it be ſo, as has been ſaid, hence ſee, what to think of theſe who are ſo far from being ſtedfaſt in the faith, that they are ſtedfaſt in a courſe of ſin; inſtead of ſitting ſtill upon the Rock of ages, they are ſitting ſtill upon ſandy foundations that will ſink with them; they ſit ſtill in their ſins, and ſit ſtill in their errors, and ſit ſtill in their ſloth and ſecurity. Oh! how dreadful and terrible is their caſe! For God is ſaying to ſuch, Rev. xxii. 11. He that is unjuſt, let him be unjuſt ſtill; he who is filthy, let him be filthy ſtill; he that is erroneous, let him be erroneous ſtill; he who is wicked and ungodly, let him be ſo ſtill; he who is joined to his idols, let him alone. God is ſaying, Miniſters, let him alone; ordinances, let him alone; providences, let him alone; my Spirit, let him alone; My Spirit ſhall not always ſtrive with men upon earth.

2. Hence we may ſee what to think of the church church of Scotland at this day; how dangerous her circumſtances are, when inſtead of ſitting ſtill, and remaining ſtedfaſt in the faith, ſhe is receding and running away from her antient Reformation principles, and purity. How unſtable, like water, is the generation! How great is the apoſtaſy and defection of the day! And here we may ſee, if there ſhall be any ſchiſm, or ſeparation, in the church of Scotland very ſoon, upon the preſent emergency *, that you all know of, who will be the ſciſmatics and ſeparatiſts? Surely not theſe who ſit ſtill and remain ſtedfaſt in the faith, and upon the old foundation, but theſe who go off from our Reformation principles: theſe that ſit ſtill are the ſtrength and ſafety of a church, they that riſe and turn away, the ruin thereof.

3. Hence ſee matter whereby every one may try their ſtate and their ſtrength, by trying what ſtability they have in the faith. Have you a ſtable and ſtrong faith? (1.) Strong faith is a fighting faith; it fights againſt all diſcouragements and overcomes the greateſt difficulties and trials, 1 Sam. xxx. 6. Hab. iii. 17, 18. Heb. xi. 33, 34.; againſt the greateſt temptations to ſin, Heb. xi. 24, 25. (2.) It is a reſolute and wilful faith; Though he ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him. It ſtands not at providences ſeemingly contradicting the promiſe, Rom. iv. 19, 20.; againſt all diſcouragements; Why art thou caſt down, my ſoul? (3.) It is a wreſtling faith; I will not let thee go, except thou bleſs me. (4.) It is a violent faith; The kingdom of heaven ſuffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. (5.) It is a diſputing faith, it diſputes every inch; Truth, Lord, I am a dog; yet the dogs eat of the crumbs that fall from their maſter's table, Mat. xv. 22. (6.) It is an urging and arguing faith; it preſſes God with arguments taken from his own name, his own Son, his own promiſe, and his own perfections; mercy, faithfulneſs, truth, &c. (7.) It is a touching faith; Turba premit, fides tangit, Luke viii. 43,—48. (8.) It is an humbling faith, bringing in the deepeſt humility: the more confirmed and eſtabliſhed a perſon is, the more humble. Thus Abraham, Who am I that have taken upon me to ſpeak unto the Lord, which am but duſt and aſhes? Job when eſtabliſhed, Now I abhor myſelf. Iſaiah, when he got a confirming manifeſtation, ſays, I am unclean. Paul alſo, a confirmed Chriſtian, I am leſs than the leaſt of all ſaints. (8.) It is a faith that removes all legal fears, terrors, and torments, and yet increaſes godly ſorrow and goſpel repentance. It lives upon Chriſt, and not upon frames and enlargements; the doubting Chriſtian is up and down with his frames, if that be gone he thinks all is loſt; but the eſtabliſhed believer is ſecured in Chriſt, and his everlaſting righteouſneſs; even when the mutable frame is gone, it is not diſcouraged.

4. Hence ſee the duty both of ſinners and ſaints, or believers.

[1.] Of ſinners, to ſit down; we cannot exhort you to ſit ſtill, till once you ſit down, and take reſt in Chriſt. And therefore, O ſinner, ſit down and reſt upon a God in Chriſt as your Rock and reſting-place. Let me adviſe you, take a ſeat for your ſouls to ſit upon. Some of you know what an uneaſy thing it is to want a ſeat for your body, when you are weary walking or weary ſtanding; well, much more uneaſy will it be if you want a ſeat of reſt for your ſouls. Would you have your ſouls rightly ſeated and rightly ſettled? Will you tell me, can you find ſuch a right ſeat in all the world, as a God in Chriſt? Is there any ſeat or centre ſo proper for the ſoul? Is not God the ſeat and centre of the intellectual world? the centre of ſpirits, in whom they can find reſt? Is the world a proper ſeat for your ſouls to ſit down upon? Though you had your barns full, and were ſaying, Soul, take thy reſt, thou haſt goods laid up for many years: how ſoon can God ſay, Thou fool, this night ſhall thy ſoul be required of thee.—Is your own righteouſneſs a proper ſeat for your ſoul to ſit down and reſt upon, when your righteouſneſs is but filthy rags; and when there is as much ſin in your beſt duties as would damn you? Is it poſſible you can think, when death and judgment is before you, that you ſit ſafely enough there? or, do you think that the devil, the world, or the fleſh, can give you reſt and ſatisfaction, though you had all the advantages they can offer you? O ſinner, are you ſeeking to ſettle on this ſide Jordan? Though you ſhould ſit eaſy till the day of death, what will become of you upon the day of judgment? But would you have a ſeat on which you may find everlaſting reſt in death, judgment, and through eternity? Then, O come to Chriſt for reſt, and ſit down upon the Rock of ages. Here is a high and honourable ſeat; whenever you come to God you dwell on high, you ſit with Chriſt in heavenly places.—Here is a ſoft, and eaſy ſeat, He will keep him in perfect peace, whoſe mind is ſtayed on him, becauſe he truſteth in him. Here you may get reſt to your underſtandings in Chriſt, as a Prophet; reſt to your conſciences in him, as a Prieſt; reſt to your hearts in him as a King.—Here is a ſafe ſeat; when you reſt upon Chriſt for ſalvation, you cannot but be ſafe; He that believes ſhall be ſaved. Your deſires will ſit ſafely upon him, who is the deſire of all nations; your hope will ſit ſafely on him, who is the hope of Iſrael; your delight will ſit ſafely on him, who is the darling of heaven.—Here is a ſure ſeat, the ſure mercies of David; a firm ſeat, that cannot fail you in the day of need, and in the time of extremity. The covenant of works was not a firm and ſure ſeat; and to ſit down either directly, or indirectly upon the works of the law, is a ſandy foundation.—Here is a ready ſeat and juſt at hand; you need not ſay, We cannot aſcend to heaven, to ſit down upon this ſeat, it is near at hand, I bring near my righteouſneſs; and this righteouſneſs is the ſeat you are to ſit down upon.—And it is an everlaſting ſeat, an everlaſting righteouſneſs, where you may ſit ſafe and eaſy for ever. O ſeek not reſt any where elſe; ſit down under the ſhadow of the Almighty. But you may aſk, How ſhall I ſit down? Why, be convinced of the ſinfulneſs of your rambling among the creatures for help, relief, and reſt; and that in vain is ſalvation looked for from the hills or from multitude of mountains. Though you were to ſit down upon mountains of prey, mountains of gold or ſilver, this would not give reſt or relief to your ſouls; riches profit not in the day of wrath. Mountains of creature-aids and outward means will not do; therefore, cry to God, that he may ſet your feet upon a rock; upon himſelf, the Rock of ages; and cauſe you to ſit down under his ſhadow. The almighty power muſt make you willing and able: O cry then for a day of power.

[2.] The duty of ſaints, is to ſit ſtill and abide

* Our Author here, without doubt, alludes to the conduct of the Church-judicatories, in their proſecution at this time carrying on againſt the four Brethren, formerly briefly narrated, p. 661.

in

in Christ by faith, and to sit still in respect of stability in the faith. And that I may the more distinctly direct you to this, I would have you consider this stability,

(1.) As a privilege secured to you; this should excite you to it; for, as in working out salvation-work, we could have no encouragement if God had not promised to work in us, both to will and to do; so, in stability in the faith, we could have no encouragement, if this stability was not secured.

(2.) Consider it as a duty, and I would direct you to it in the following particulars.

1. O believer, labour after growth in grace, and particularly after establishing grace: There are these establishing graces; knowledge, Isa. xxxiii. 6. Wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of the times. The people that know their God shall be strong, and do exploits, Dan. ix. 32.—Faith, Isa. vii. 9. If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established. See 2 Chron. xx. 20.—Patience, James v. 8. Be patient, and stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.—Love, Song viii. 6, 7. Love is strong as death, &c.; Many waters cannot quench love, &c.—Joy, Neh. viii. 12. The joy of the Lord is their strength.—Humility, James iv. 6, 10. Self-confidence is the greatest weakness; Peter was weak when proud; humility is a man's going out of himself, and laying all his weight upon the Lord, who looks to the humble, hears the desires of the humble, and gives grace to the humble.—Fear, Psalm cxii. 1, 8. Blessed is the man that feareth the Lord; he shall not be afraid of evil-tidings, his heart is fixed, trusting in the Lord; his heart is established, &c.—Hope, Psalm xl. 1, 2. Rom. viii. 24. 1 John iii. 3.—Again, as you would endeavour, through grace, to grow in established graces; so,

2. To improve establishing means: prayer is an establishing mean, Psalm cxxxviii. 3. I cried to the Lord, and he answered me, and strengthened me with strength in my soul.—Praise, Psalm xliii. 4, 5. Upon the harp will I praise thee; then it follows, Why art thou cast down, my soul? and why art thou disquieted in me? still hope in God, for I shall yet praise him.—Communicating, while he is known in the breaking of bread, the bread of life is strengthening.—Fellowship with the saints, confirming one another, Heb. x. 23, 24, 25. As iron sharpeneth iron, so doth the countenance of a man his friend.—Diligent attendance on ordinances; the voice of Christ is quickening and strengthening: faith comes by hearing; and establishment in faith comes the same way.—Meditation, and spiritual conversation, and communication, are strengthening.

3. Seek after established manifestations, John ii. 11. He manifested forth his glory, and his disciples believed on him; that is, their faith was established and confirmed.—Manifestations have a convincing light, and over-powering evidence, making clouds flee away, and dashing the bottom out of all their doubts; thus Thomas, My Lord, and my God.—Manifestations have an instructive light; from darkness, wavering proceeds; and what we know darkly we easily suspect: but see Psalm xx. 6. Now, I know that the Lord saves his anointed; that is, now I understand it more distinctly.—In manifestations there are tastes of his goodness and sweetness, and this is a spring of stability: dry notions will never make a man stable: while the truth is not received in love, they will soon quit it for delusion; but when they have a sense of it, then their sense will plead better than learning and rhetoric; like a philosopher telling a man the sun is not shining, the grass is not green.—Manifestations carry power in them: there is a heart-burning power; this power will embolden the believer to avouch and plead for the truth, whosoever be against it, and whatever it costs, when they find the good effects of it in their own souls.—Manifestations carry still a suitableness to the case, trial, and necessity of the person to whom he manifests himself: when Abraham is to leave his fathers house, and to go, not knowing whither; to leave friends, means, relations, the Lord manifests himself to him as God Almighty, God All-sufficient.—These manifestations exactly meet with their necessities, and this makes them abide by him.—Manifestations always humble; and humility is the strength of all other graces: "What is the first grace? humility, said one of the fathers: What is the next? humility: What is the third? humility;" and so on, intimating, that this is a bulwark to every other grace. Hence,

4. Take heed of these things that hinder stability: as pride; Pride goes before a fall. God resists the proud. Remember Peter.—Worldliness: See 2 Tim. iv. 10. Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world, 2 Tim. vi. 9, 10.—Idleness; The hand of the diligent maketh rich, but idleness makes him poor, in grace, poor in purse.—Needless fellowship with wicked company; He that walks with the wise, shall be wise; but a companion of fools shall be destroyed. A man shall not be established by wickedness, Prov. xii. 3. But the heart is established by grace.

5. Seek much after establishing breathings of the Holy Ghost. The disciples were letting their grips go, and Christ breathed on them, and says, Receive ye the Holy Ghost. Much of the Spirit will bring about much reformation in the matters of God. Be content of the Spirit's comforting and supporting influences, under trials, without seeking any visible signs for your confirmation. The Jews seek a sign from Christ, but says he, No sign shall be given you, but that of the prophet Jonas; as Jonas was three days and three nights in the belly of the whale; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. Here is the sign, ye shall get many a cross; and I will strengthen you to bear them; and if you be not satisfied with these signs, ye will but tempt him. All the breathings of the Spirit are of an establishing nature; his quickening, sanctifying, and comforting influences. Wait the time of the Spirit's breathing, and of this wind of heaven blowing. Wait at the shore; though you cannot command the wind to blow; and be easy though he reserves the sweetest confirmation to the saddest times. Christ cures the blind man, John ix.; the Pharisees drag him from court to court, till at last they cast him out and excommunicate him; but then Christ took him in, and manifested himself; Dost thou now believe? Who is he that I should believe? says the man; Christ shows himself to him, and then he believed and worshipped. Well, perhaps a time of sweet consolation and confirmation is reserved till ye be cast out by a corrupt kirk and clergy, or to a more troublesome time, when you are at the extremity. He will season all with a new manifestation, a new communication.

6. Be cautious, and jealous of yourselves, and watchful; Let him who thinks he standeth, take heed lest he fall. Perhaps, you have laid up some truths in your bosom beyond all debate, but in the hour of trial you may be in hazard to quit them: who would have thought that the disciples would debate whether Christ was the Saviour of the world, the Saviour of Israel, after the many confirmations he gave of this? Yet, they not only debate it, but are in hazard to quit it, Luke xxiv. 22. "Oh! it would make a heart break to hear such language; We thought he was the Saviour of Israel; he that should have redeemed Israel:" there it was all quit to a thought. O then, Sirs, beware of witchcraft; O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you? &c. Gal. iii. 1. The devil and his instruments sometimes cast a kind of fascination over our eyes, to hide the beautiful face of truth, to make it look ill-favoured; beware of the devil's deception; he can make perjury look like prudence; and honesty, like rebellion against judicatories, &c. You may be confirmed in the faith, and yet make such a sudden change, as to cause all honest ministers and Christians wonder at you, as Paul says, Gal. i. 6. I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him who hath called you to another gospel. Beware of letting the fear of losses and crosses affrighten you; you may make fair offers of following Christ, and yet forsake him in the view of the cross. There came a man to Christ, Mat. viii. 19. saying, Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest: Christ will hardly get a fairer offer from any here; but what says Christ to him? The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head. What hinders the performance of this fair offer? Why, you must make yourself ready for losses and crosses, and follow Christ naked. Many men and women come the length of the cross, and there they bury all their resolutions. The cross has been the burial-place of many vows and promises; therefore, see that you be not scared and terrified with the fear of losses and crosses; know that what you lose for Christ will be the surest gain.

I might here add some encouragements to engage you to this duty.

(1.) If stability in the faith is the strength and security of the church, in most perilous times, then let us sit still and be stable, because the most perilous time is the very season wherein God has in all generations, made the most signal appearances for his church, in so much, that we have no more ado, in effect, when perilous times come, but to stand still; or, which is the same thing, to sit still, and see the salvation of God. Here I would offer eight instances of signal appearances in most perilous times: particularly in the first defection by sin; when our first parents fell; there God appeared in the first promise, wherein the devil was sentenced.—Israel's oppression in Egypt; then is Moses born; then the Lord appeared gloriously.—The Assyrians rage, under Sennacherib, against Jerusalem; then the Lord sent his angel.—Haman threatened the destruction of the Jews; then the Lord appeared, and brought about their deliverance.—Christ the Head laid in the grave, then the Lord appeared making that dark hour the porch of light and life.—The Jewish and Pagan persecutions against the first Christians, the Lord made these the mean of propagating the gospel, and the blood of the martyrs the seed of the church.—The antichristian tyranny, wherein the whore was drunk with so much blood, issued in the glorious Reformation; the Lord appearing in his glory building up Zion.—The bloody reigns in Britain, particularly in Scotland; the martyrdom in the late times, issued in the Lord's appearing by the merciful Revolution.—And now, when troubles and trials take place, our God is not dead; he will arise and have mercy upon Zion. The Lord sits upon the floods: the Lord sits King for ever. Hence,

(2.) To sit still in perilous times, is to sit where God sits; he sits upon the floods, and they sit with Christ upon his throne, not only when they come to heaven, but by faith upon earth; they sit and reign with Christ: as they shall judge the world at the last day, so they rule and judge even in this life, Psalm ii. 9. compared with Rev. ii. 26, 27. and with Psalm cxlix. 6, 7, 8, 9. This is the honour of all the saints; and hence the saints who are faithful to God in their day, not only judge and condemn the world, by their practice and their testimony, but in some respects execute the sentence against them, so as to torment them, Rev. xi. 10. The two witnesses tormented them who dwelt upon the earth.

(3.) To sit still is to sit easy amidst all the overflowing floods, because we sit still and rest upon him who sits upon the floods: this may give ease amidst whatever floods you are surrounded with. Is it a flood of tribulation, temptation, reproach? &c. the Lord sits upon the floods, and makes the floods his footstool, his throne. He treads upon the floods, and reigns amidst the floods, and makes the floods his chariot, wherein he rides, and his bench, whereon he judges righteously.

(4.) When we sit still by faith, we glorify God, and edify men; we honour God, and exonerate ourselves at the hands of men, both in the former, present, and following generations, as I said before.

SERMON LX.

FAITH'S PLEA upon GOD'S COVENANT *.

PSALM lxxiv. 20. Have respect unto the covenant.——

THE psalmist, in pleading for the church and people of God, and that he would appear for them against their enemies, uses several arguments; particularly, in the close of the preceding verse, there is something he pleads God may not FORGET, Forget not the congregation of thy poor for ever; and the rather he uſes this argument, becauſe he had ſaid, Pſal. ix. 18. The needy ſhall not be forgotten; the expectation of the poor ſhall not periſh for ever. There is, in this verſe, ſomething he pleads, that God may REMEMBER and have regard unto, Have reſpect unto the covenant. Thou haſt brought us into covenant with thee, might he ſay, and though we are unworthy to be reſpected, yet have reſpect unto the covenant of promiſe. When God delivers his people, it is in rememberance of his covenant, Lev. xxvi. 42. Then will I remember my covenant with Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob; and I will remember the land. We cannot expect he will remember us, till he remember his covenant: hence, therefore, we propoſe to illuſtrate the following truth.

* This was an evening-exercise on a preparation-day, before the celebration of the sacrament of the Lord's supper, at Kinglassie. The exact time cannot be precisely ascertained; but it is supposed to have been in the year 1733.

congregation

DOCT. That one of faith's ſtrong pleas with God is, that he would have reſpect to the covenant.

If we would deal with God for mercy, or plead with him for favour, or look to him for any good at this occaſion, let us expect it only upon this ground, the reſpect he hath to the covenant, and plead upon this argument.

The method we would obſerve, as the Lord ſhall aſſiſt, for briefly handling this ſubject, ſhall be the following.

I. What covenant it is he will have a reſpect to.

II. What it is for God to have a reſpect to the covenant.

III. What it is in the covenant he hath a reſpect to.

IV. What kind of a reſpect he hath to it.

V. Why he hath reſpect to it, and ſo why it is a ſuitable plea and argument in ſuing for mercy.

VI. Make ſome application of the whole.

I. We are then firſt to ſhew what covenant it is he will have a reſpect to. The covenant here ſpoken of is the covenant of grace and promiſe, made in Chriſt Jeſus before the world began, and publiſhed in the goſpel to ſinners. Jer. xxxii. 39, 40. And I will give them one heart and one way, that they may fear me for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them. And I will make an everlaſting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them, to do them good; but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they ſhall not depart from me. Ezek. xxxvi. 26. A new heart alſo will I give you, and a new Spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the ſtony heart out of your fleſh, and I will give you an heart of fleſh, &c. Jer. xxxi. 35. But this ſhall be the covenant that I will make with the houſe of Iſrael, After thoſe days, ſaith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts, and will be their God; and they ſhall be my people. See alſo Pſalm lxxxix. throughout. It is called a covenant of grace; becauſe grace is the beginning and the end, the foundation and top-ſtone of it; even grace reigning through righteouſneſs.—It is called a covenant of mercy; becauſe therein mercy to the miſerable is proclaimed through juſtice-ſatisfying blood; for there mercy and truth meet together; and all the ſure mercies of David are conveyed thereby.—It is called a covenant of peace and reconciliation; becauſe it both treats of peace with God, and makes it good.—It is called a covenant of promiſe; becauſe it lies in promiſes with reference to us; and theſe to be accompliſhed upon the condition already fulfilled in Chriſt's obedience and ſatisfaction; and becauſe therein the faithfulneſs of God is pledged, for making out all the promiſes to believers, the children of promiſe.—It is called a covenant of ſalt; becauſe it is an incorruptible word, An everlaſting covenant, well ordered in all things and ſure.—In a word, it is a covenant of help to poor, helpleſs ſinners, ſaying, I have laid help upon One that is mighty. O Iſrael, thou haſt deſtroyed thyſelf, but in me is thy help.—It is a covenant of pardon to the guilty, ſaying, I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſions for mine own ſake, and I will not remember thy ſins.—It is a covenant of ſupply to the needy, ſaying, When the poor and needy ſeek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirſt, I, the Lord, will hear them, I, the the God of Iſrael, will not forſake them.—It is a covenant of gifts, wherein grace and glory are freely given; and, in the diſpenſation thereof, God ſays, Come, and take all freely, himſelf, his Chriſt, his Spirit, and all, Rev. xxii. 17. Iſa. lv. 1.

II. We are to ſhew what it is for God to have reſpect to the covenant.

1. God hath reſpect to the covenant when he remembers it, and ſo remembers us, as in that forecited, Lev. xxvi. 24. I will remember my covenant, and then will I remember the land. Thus Pſal. cxi. 5. He hath given meat to them that fear him. Why, he will ever be mindful of his covenant. If he come to give us meat to feed our ſouls at this occaſion, the ground will be, he will be mindful of his covenant, mindful of his promiſe.

2. God may be ſaid to have reſpect to his covenant, when he regards it. He hath no reaſon to have reſpect or regard to us, but he ſees reaſon to have a regard to his covenant; he puts honour upon it, for reaſons that I ſhall afterwards ſhew, only I will ſay here, his honour is engaged therein, therefore he ſays, My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips, Pſal. lxxxix. 34. He hath more regard to it than he hath to heaven and earth; for he ſays, Heaven and earth ſhall paſs away, but my words ſhall not paſs away. He hath ſuch a regard to it, that he will never break it, but ever keep it.

3. He hath reſpect to his covenant, when he eſtabliſhes it. And when we pray, that he would have reſpect to the covenant, we not only pray he would remember the covenant, and regard the covenant, but eſtabliſh the covenant betwixt him and us, as he ſaid to Abraham, Gen. xvii. 7. I will eſtabliſh it between me and thee, and thy ſeed after thee. He ſhews reſpect to the covenant, when he makes the covenant take hold of us, and makes us take hold of the covenant; for then he makes us put reſpect upon him, and upon his covenant.

4. He hath reſpect to the covenant, when he performs the covenant-promiſes, according to Mic. vii. 20. Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, which thou haſt ſworn to our fathers from the days of old: and he does this, when he acts according to the covenant, or according to the mercy that made the promiſe, and the truth that is engaged to make out the promiſe.

In ſhort, the ſum of this prayer, as it concerns the import of the word RESPECT, Have reſpect to the covenant, is, "Lord, remember the "covenant, and ſo remember me; Lord, have regard

" regard to the covenant, and let me be re" membered on this ground, when there is " no other reaſon why I ſhould be regarded;
" Lord, eſtabliſh thy covenant with me, and
" ſo put honour upon thy name manifeſted in " that coverrant, and do to me according to the " promiſe of the covenant. Cauſe me hope in " thy word, and then remember the word on which " thou haſt cauſed me to hope; and deal with me
" not according to my ſin and deſert, but ac" cording to thy covenant and mercy in Chriſt
" Jeſus."

III. We are next to ſhew what it is in the covenant he hath a reſpect to, or that we ſhould plead upon.

1. Have reſpect to the covenant; that is, to the Mediator of the covenant. Though thou oweſt no reſpect to me, yet doeſt thou not owe reſpect; and haſt thou not a great reſpect to the Mediator of the covenant, to Chriſt, whom thou haſt given to be a covenant of the people? For his ſake let me be pitied; have reſpect to the relation he bears to the covenant, even to him who is the Mediator, Teſtator, Witneſs, Meſſenger, Surety, and All of the covenant. Have reſpect to his offices, and let him get the glory of his ſaving offices. It is a ſtrong plea to plead with God upon the reſpect he bears to Chriſt; God cannot win over ſuch a plea as that. He muſt own his regard and reſpect to Chriſt, who paid ſuch reſpect to him, and finiſhed the work he gave him to do.

2. Have reſpect to the covenant, by having reſpect to the blood of the covenant. The blood of Chriſt, that is repreſented in the ſacrament of the ſupper, it is the blood of the covenant, called, The new teſtament in his blood; becauſe all the promiſes are ſealed therewith, and ſo Yea and Amen in Chriſt: this is the condition of the new covenant. The covenant of works had only the active obedience of the firſt Adam for its condition; but the condition of the covenant of grace properly, is both the active and paſſive obedience of the ſecond Adam, his doing and dying. Now, Lord, have reſpect to that blood that ſealed the covenant: ſince the condition is fulfiled to thy infinite ſatisfaction, let the promiſed good be conferred upon me.

3. Have reſpect to the covenant, by having reſpect to the oath of the covenant, Heb. vi. 17. The promiſe is confirmed with the oath of God; That by two immutable things, wherein it is impoſſible for God to lye, we might have ſtrong conſolation, &c. Now, Lord, wilt thou not have reſpect to thine own oath? Haſt thou not ſworn by thy holineſs, thou will not lie unto David?

4. Have reſpect to the covenant, by having a reſpect to the properties of the covenant. This would be a large field; I ſum it up in a few words. Have reſpect to the covenant; that is, Lord, have reſpect to the fulneſs of the covenant, and let me be ſupplied, for there is enough there; it contains all my ſalvation, and all my deſire.—Have reſpect to the freedom of the covenant, and let me, however unworthy, ſhare of the grace that runs freely thence.—Have reſpect to the ſtability of the covenant, and let me be pitied, though unſtable as water, and infirm, yet the covenant ſtands faſt; remember thy word that endures for ever.—Have reſpect to the order of the covenant, that is well ordered in all things, as well as ſure. Though my houſe be not ſo with God, ſays David, yet he hath made with me an everlaſting covenant, well ordered in all things, and ſure. Though my houſe be out of order, and heart out of order, and my frame out of order, and all be in confuſion with me, yet ſee, according to thy covenant, to order all well.

IV. We proceed to ſhew what kind of a reſpect he hath to the covenant, that we may be the more engaged to plead upon it.

1. He hath a great and high reſpect to the covenant. It is the covenant of the great God, with his great and eternal Son, for the honour and glory of his great name; and therefore, he cannot but have a great and high reſpect unto it. His great name is manifeſted in it; and therefore, when we plead his reſpect to the covenant, we plead, in effect, ſaying, What wilt thou do for thy great name?

2. He hath a dear and lovely reſpect to the covenant; for, it is the covenant of his grace and love, wherein he ſhews his infinite love to Chriſt, and through him to a company of wretched ſinners. It is a covenant of kindneſs, Iſa. liv. 10. My kindneſs ſhall not depart from thee, neither ſhall the covenant of my peace be removed, ſaith the Lord, that hath mercy on thee; intimating, his covenant of peace, is a covenant of kindneſs, wherein he manifeſts his deareſt love; therefore, he hath a dear reſpect to it.

3. He hath a full reſpect to the covenant, a reſpect to every promiſe of it; They are all Yea and Amen, to the glory of God, 2 Cor. i. 20. He hath a reſpect to all of them, becauſe they are all Yea and Amen, and becauſe they are all thus ratified in Chriſt, to the glory of God. He hath a reſpect to every article of the covenant, Not a jot ſhall fall to the ground.

4. He hath an everlaſting reſpect to the covenant; therefore it is called an everlaſting covenant; it is ſecured by an everlaſting righteouſneſs; it is made between everlaſting parties; it is repleniſhed with everlaſting bleſſings; it is rooted in his everlaſting love: therefore he is ever mindful of his covenant, and will never ceaſe to have a reſpect to it.

Well then, ſay you, what need we pray and plead, that he would have reſpect to his covenant? Why, if it be ſure that he hath, and will for ever have, a reſpect to the covenant, then we may pray with the more aſſurance and confidence; ſo that there is here ſtrong footing for our prayer: but beſides, when we pray, and ſay, Have reſpect unto the covenant, we ſeek, that he would ſhew the reſpect that he hath unto it, that he would ſhew and make it manifeſt unto us, that we may have the faith of it, and enjoy the fruits of it, and the bleſſed effects of that reſpect to it, in our participations of the bleſſings thereof.

V. The next thing was, To ſhew why he will have reſpect to his covenant; and conſequently, whence it is ſuch a ſuitable plea and argument for us. Why,

1. When he hath a reſpect to the covenant, he hath reſpect to himſelf; the framer of it he owns himſelf to be, Pſal. lxxxix. 3. I have made a covenant with my choſen. Why then, the ſtrength of the plea is, Have reſpect to the covenant, and ſo have reſpect to thyſelf, and thy own glorious name and attributes, and let them be glorified, in ſhewing regard to the covenant.—Have reſpect to thy wiſdom that ſhines in the contrivance of the covenant, The manifold wiſdom of God;

God; yea, the wiſdom of God in a myſtery that here appears.—Have reſpect to thy power that ſhines in the efficacy of the covenant, not only for over-powering principalities and powers, but overcoming thyſelf, and the power of thine own wrath, by the power of thy love.—Have reſpect to thy holineſs, that ſhines in the holy oath of Jehovah, by which it is confirmed, and the holy obedience of Jeſus, by which it it fulfilled; ſo that, as by the SINFUL diſobedience of one, many were made ſinners, by the HOLY obedience of another GLORIOUS ONE, many are made righteous.—Have reſpect to thy juſtice, that ſhines in the blood of the covenant, the ſacrifice by which juſtice hath condign and infinite ſatisfaction.—Have reſpect to thy mercy and grace, that reigns through this righteouſneſs to eternal life.—Have reſpect to thy truth and faithfulneſs, that ſhines in accompliſhing all the promiſes of the covenant, upon the ground of Chriſt's having fulfilled the condition.—Have reſpect unto thy eternity and immutability, in the unchangableneſs of the covenant; ſhew that thou art God, and changeſt not.——Thus have reſpect to thyſelf.

2. When he hath reſpect to the covenant, he hath reſpect to his Son CHRIST, the centre of it, and in whom it ſtands faſt, as he owns, Pſal. lxxxix. 28. My covenant ſhall ſtand faſt with him. Why then, the ſtrength of the plea is, Have reſpect to the covenant, and ſo ſhew reſpect to thy Son: have reſpect to him in his perſon, as he is thy Son and our Saviour; IMMANUEL, God-man; in his divinity, wherein he is equal with God; in his humanity, wherein he is the maſter-piece of God's work.—Have reſpect to him in his purchaſe, which is the ſubſtance of the covenant bought with his blood.—Have reſpect to his death and reſurrection; for thou loveſt him on this account, John x. 17. Therefore doth the Father love me, becauſe I lay down my life, that I may take it up again; where we ſee that Chriſt, as dying and riſing in the room of his people, is the object of the Father's love, delight, and eſteem.—Have reſpect unto his interceſſion, wherein he prays for all the bleſſings of the covenant that he hath purchaſed: doth not the Father hear him always?—Have reſpect to his commiſſion, which is ſealed by thee; for, Him hath God the Father ſealed, anointed, and authorized unto all ſaving offices, relations, and appearances: let him get the glory of all theſe. O ſtrong plea!

3. When he hath reſpect to the covenant, he hath reſpect to his Spirit, the great applyer of the covenant-bleſſings, and executor of the teſtament, ſealed with the blood of Chriſt, and by whom covenant-love is ſhed abroad upon the heart, Rom. v. 5. Why then, the ſtrength of the plea is, Have reſpect to the covenant; that is, have reſpect to thy own Spirit, that he may get the glory of applying by his power, what Chriſt hath purchaſed by his blood.—Have reſpect to the promiſe of the Spirit that thou haſt made, that when he is come, he ſhall convince the world of ſin, righteouſneſs, and judgment, and teſtify of Chriſt, and glorify Chriſt, by ſhewing the things of Chriſt.—Have reſpect to the offices of the Spirit, as he is a Convincer, Sanctifier, and Comforter, according to the order and method of the covenant.—Have reſpect to the honour of the Spirit, who is the all in all of the covenant, in point of power, and powerful manifeſtation, communication, and operation.—Have reſpect unto the relations of the Spirit, as he is the Spirit of the Father and of the Son; the Spirit of the covenant, and of all the covenanted ſeed. Hence,

4. When he hath reſpect to the covenant, he hath reſpect to his people, on the account of the covenant of promiſe; for they, as Iſaac was, are the children of promiſe, Gal. iv. 28. Why then, the ſtrength of the plea and argument here is, Lord, Have reſpect to the covenant, and ſo ſhew regard and reſpect to us. We have no confidence to claim any reſpect at thy hand, but merely upon the account of the reſpect thou haſt to thy covenant.—Have reſpect to our perſons on this ground, ſince the covenant provides acceptance in the Beloved, Eph. i. 6. Look upon us in the face of thine Anointed, and in the glaſs of the new covenant.—Have reſpect to our prayers and performances on this ground, ſince the covenant hath provided much incenſe, to perfume the prayers and offerings of all ſaints, upon the golden altar that is before the throne, Rev. viii. 3.—Have reſpect to our tears, when we ſigh and groan, and mourn and weep before thee, ſince the covenant provides a bottle for our tears, Pſalm lvi. 8. Put thou my tears in thy bottle.—Have reſpect to our needs on this ground, when we are hardened, that we can neither pray nor weep, nor ſhed a tear, ſince the covenant provides ſupply to the poor and needy, Phil. iv. 19. My God ſhall ſupply all your need, according to his riches, in glory, by Chriſt Jeſus.

VI. I would now proceed to make ſome application of the ſubject in theſe four inferences.

1. Hence ſee a mark and character of true believers, that are fit for a communion-table, they are of God's mind; he hath a reſpect to the covenant, and they have a reſpect unto the covenant; and hence they know what it is to plead with God upon the reſpect that he hath to the covenant: they could not do ſo, if they had not a high reſpect to it themſelves; they have ſuch a reſpect to the covenant in kind as God hath.—They have a great reſpect to it, ſo as they eſteem it more than all things in the world; they would not give one promiſe of it, on which they have been cauſed to hope, for all the gold of Ophir.—They have a dear and kindly reſpect to it, as all their ſalvation and all their deſire; yea, and all their delight alſo. The word of grace is ſweeter to them than the honey and the honey-comb.—They have a full and univerſal reſpect unto it, and to all the promiſes of it; they reſpect the promiſe of purity as well as the promiſe of pardon; the promiſe of ſalvation from ſin, as well, and as much as the promiſe of ſalvation from hell; the promiſe of holineſs as well as of happineſs. As they have a reſpect to all God's commandments; ſo they have a reſpect to all God's promiſes; and particularly, as David had his golden pſalms, ſo they have their golden promiſes that they are made to hing upon.—Yea, they have an everlaſting reſpect to the covenant, and to the promiſes thereof, even when their frame fails them; when their ſweet enjoyments fail them, yet their reſpect to the covenant remains, and their reſpect to the Maker of the covenant, to the Mediator of the covenant, to the blood and oath of the covenant, to the Spirit of the covenant, and to the bleſſings and benefits of it. They have an everlaſting reſpect to the grace of the covenant of grace; they are adorers and admirers admirers of free grace. They have an everlasting respect to, and remembrance of the words of the covenant, particularly these words that have been let in with any life and power upon their soul, or that they have been caused to hope upon; whatever they forget, they can never forget such a word, that brought life to their souls; I will never forget thy words, says David; for by them thou hast quickened me. They have such an everlasting respect to the covenant, that, when they have nothing in the world to trust to, they will rely on the covenant, and confide in such a promise, and plead upon it, saying, Lord, Have respect to the covenant.

2. Hence we may see the misery of these that are unbelievers, and remain strangers to the covenant of promise, and have no respect to the covenant. It is misery enough, that God hath no respect to you; no respect to your person nor prayers, as it is said, To Cain and his offerings God had no respect, Gen. iv. 5. So God hath no respect either to your persons or performances; they are an abomination to him. Your prayers to him are but like the howling of a dog, if you have never taken hold of his covenant, nor seen the respect that God hath to the covenant. You have no respect to God, while you have no respect to that which he respects so highly.—And as he hath no respect to your persons or performances, so he hath no respect to your tears; they never flowed from faith's views of a pierced Christ.—He hath no respect to your souls, the redemption thereof ceaseth for ever, because you have no due respect to the Redeemer's blood and righteousness.—He hath no respect to your communicating; nay, he disapproves of it, and discharges you to sit down at his table, on peril of eating and drinking your own damnation.—God hath no regard nor respect to your salvation, because you have no regard nor respect to the Saviour he hath provided and offered. God thinks as little to damn you, as you think little to dishonour him. God thinks as little of you, as you little think of sin, and he hath as little respect to you, as you have little respect to Christ and to the covenant. Wo to you, if you remain in this case; for the day is coming wherein God will, before all the world, shew no more respect to you, than to say to you, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels. But,

3. Hence we may see the happiness of believers, that have such a respect to the covenant, as I was speaking of, a great, dear, full, and perpetual respect to it, and to the Mediator of it, who have taken hold of the covenant through grace, and who know what it is to take hold of God in the covenant, to take hold of God in a promise, and to hold him by his word, and rely upon him in it, saying, Lord, Have respect to the covenant; here is your great happiness, God hath a respect to you: What respect? Even to your persons and offerings, as it is said of Abel, Gen. iv. 4. God had a respect to him and to his offerings. Though you be saying in your heart, Oh! how can he have a respect to me, black and vile, and guilty me? Why? not for your sake indeed, be it known unto you, but for his covenant's sake, and his name's sake. He hath a respect to your praying and praising, and communicating; because he hath a respect to the covenant.—He hath a respect to your name; though the name of the wicked shall rot, your name shall be in everlasting remembrance; for God hath put his name in you; something of Christ in you, something of the covenant in you. Some observe, when Abram's name was turned to Abraham, that there was some of the letters of the name Jehovah put in Abram's name. Indeed, God gives the believer a new name, that he hath a respect unto.—He hath a respect to your suits and supplications; I have heard Ephraim bemoaning himself. O my dove, that art in the clifts of the rock, in the secret places of the stairs; let me hear thy voice, let me see thy countenance; for sweet is thy voice, and thy countenance is comely.—He hath a respect to his beloved doves, when pouring out their hearts before him; that voice that the world laughs at, God hath a respect to it.—He hath a respect to your blood; precious in his sight is the blood of his saints.—He hath a respect to your souls; and hence he gave his blood to be a ransom for them: and when your souls languish, he sends his Spirit to restore them; and when you die, he will send his angels to bring them to heaven.—He hath a respect to your bodies: you ought, being bought with a price, to glorify him in your souls and bodies, which are his. When your body goes to the dust, he will take care of that dust, and lose nothing of you, but raise you up at the last day, and make your vile bodies like unto his glorious body; and so shall ye be ever with the Lord.—He hath a respect to you, such a respect, that he puts honour upon you; Since thou wast precious in my sight, thou hast been honourable. He hath made you kings and priests to your God. Jacob was crowned a prince on the field of battle, the field of prayer, when he wrestled with the Angel and prevailed, as a prince. The poor wrestling man is a prince, and the poor wrestling woman a princess, in God's sight; This is the honour of all the saints. They have power with God, therefore no wonder that they have power over the nations, to rule them with a rod of iron; they judge and torment them that dwell upon the earth, even here: And know you not, that hereafter the saints shall judge the world? God hath a respect to you, and he will shew in due time; because he hath a respect to the covenant, and filled your heart with a respect to it also.

4. Hence see the duty incumbent upon us in pleading with God for his favour, presence, and blessing; let us go to him both in secret prayer, and in solemn approaches to his table, crying, Lord, Have respect to the covenant. I know not a case you can be in but the covenant exhibites a cure, and you are allowed to plead it, Ezek. xxxvi. 37. After many new-covenant promises, it is said, For this will I be enquired of by the house of Israel to do it for them; and how are we to enquire, but by pleading the respect he hath to the covenant.—Have you a polluted heart with the filth of sin, a polluted conscience with the guilt of sin? Why, here is an article of the covenant; I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols will I cleanse you, ver. 25. O then, go to God for cleansing, and plead, saying, O Lord, Have respect to the covenant.—Have you the old hard stony heart still within you, and would you have it renewed and softened? Here is an article of the covenant, A new heart will I give you, and a new Spirit will I put within you; I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. O then, go to God, and plead it, saying, Have respect to the cove- covenant.—Are you deſtitute of the Spirit, ſenſual, not having the Spirit? Do you find ſuch a want of the Spirit, that you cannot walk in God's way? Well, there is an article of the covenant here, ver. 27. I will put my Spirit within you, and cauſe you to walk in my ſtatutes. O plead for this great bleſſing, and ſay, Lord, Have reſpect to the covenant.

In a word, when you conſider what kind of a ſinner you are, conſider alſo what kind of a covenant this is; it is enough to ſay, that it is a covenant of grace, of all ſort of grace, for all ſort of ſinners that are out of hell. Are you under dreadful guilt? Here is a covenant of pardoning grace, ſaying, I will blot out thy ſin as a cloud, and thy tranſgreſſion as a thick cloud: return to me, for I have redeemed thee, Iſa. xliv. 22. O then plead he may have reſpect to the covenant.—Are you under fearful pollutions? O here is a covenant of purifying grace, ſaying, There is a fountain opened to the houſe of David, and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem for ſin and for uncleanneſs. O then plead he may have reſpect to the covenant.—Are you in darkneſs and ignorance, having no knowledge of God? O here is a covenant of enlightening grace, ſaying, They ſhall be all taught of God. O then plead it, ſaying, Lord, Have reſpect to the covenant.—Are you under deadneſs, and like dead and dry bones? O here is a covenant of quickening grace, ſaying, I am come to give life, and to give it more abundantly. The hour cometh when the dead ſhall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear ſhall live. O then plead that he may have reſpect to the covenant.—Are you in confuſion, and know not what way to take? O here is a covenant of directing grace, ſaying, I will bring the blind by a way they know not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known: I will make darkneſs light before them, and crooked things ſtraight.—Are you under ſad plagues and ſoul-diſeaſes, over-run with ſores from the crown of the head to the ſole of the foot? O here is a covenant of healing grace, ſaying, The Sun of righteouſneſs ſhall ariſe with healing in his wings. I am the Lord that healeth thee; I will heal your backſlidings. O then plead, ſaying, Lord, Have reſpect to the covenant.—Are you in extreme danger of hell and damnation, becauſe of your ſin and guilt? O here is a covenant of delivering grace, ſaying, Deliver his ſoul from going down to the pit, for I have found a ranſom. O then plead it, and ſay, Lord, Have reſpect to the covenant.—Are you in bondage unto ſin, Satan, and the world, a captive unto luſts, and ſhut up in unbelief as in a priſon? O here is a covenant of liberating grace! Proclaiming liberty to the captives, and the opening of the priſon to them that are bound.—Are you a ſtupid ſoul that cannot move toward God, nor ſtir heavenward, by reaſon of a backward will, like a brazen gate that reſiſts all the force of moving means? Well, but, O! here is a covenant of drawing grace, ſaying, When I am lifted up, I will draw all men unto me. As the power and virtue of the load-ſtone draws the iron, ſo the virtue of an exalted Chriſt draws the iron-bar of the will; Thy people ſhall be willing in the day of thy power. O then plead it, ſaying, Lord, Have reſpect to the covenant.

What other concerns have you?—Are you concerned for your children, that they may be partakers of covenant bleſſings, and ſaved of the Lord? O here is a covenant of extenſive grace, intailing bleſſings on us and our offſpring, ſaying, I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeed. O then look to God in behalf of your children, ſaying, Lord, Have reſpect to the covenant.—Are you concerned for the church, and the dangerous circumſtances ſhe is into by reaſon of cruel enemies? This ſeems to be the great concern of the pſalmiſt here, as appears from the body of the pſalm, and the words following the text: For the dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty. Theſe that live in darkneſs of ignorance and error, and in the works of darkneſs, are full of cruelty againſt the church and people of God, and they are ſurrounded with them, in ſo much that the church is like a lily among thorns, or a ſheep among wolves; what ſhall become of it? Why, here is a covenant of defence, and of defending and protecting grace, ſaying, Upon all the glory there ſhall be a defence; therefore, even when enemies break down the carved work with axes and hammers, ver. 6.; when they are caſting fire into the ſanctuary, ver. 7.; when they are ſaying, Let us deſtroy them together, ver. 8.: Yea, when it ſhall come to this, that a bloody ſword that is raging abroad, ſhall come over to us *, and that foreign or domeſtic enemies, or both, ſhall devour and deſtroy, and, perhaps, burn up all the ſynagogues of God in the land, as it is, ver. 8.; and when we ſhall not ſee our ſigns, and there is no more any prophet, nor any among us that know the time how long, ver. 9. In all ſuch caſes, what courſe ſhall we take, but that of the pſalmiſt here? Lord, Have reſpect unto the covenant.

Are you concerned about inward enemies, ſpiritual enemies, and moleſted with the powers of darkneſs? Is your heart full of the habitations of cruelty, and fearfully inhabited with cruel devils, cruel luſts, cruel corruptions that maſter and conquer, and prevail againſt you, ſo as you ly many a time wounded and dead at the enemy's feet? O here is a covenant of ſin-conquering grace, not only a covenant of mercy to your ſoul, but of vengeance to your luſts, ſaying, The day of vengeance is in mine heart, the year of my redeemed is come, Iſa. lxiii. 4. O then, implore the promiſed vengeance on all your cruel ſoul enemies, ſaying, Lord, Have reſpect to the covenant.

Are you concerned about your ſoul-poverty and indigency, not only as oppreſſed with enemies without and within, but oppreſſed with wants and neceſſities, being abſolutely poor and needy, and deſtitute of all good? O here is a covenant of ſoul-ſupplying grace, and of all needful proviſion, ſaying, When the poor and needy ſeek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirſt, I the Lord will hear them, I the God of Jacob will not forſake them; I will pour water upon him that is thirſty, and floods upon the dry ground. O then, plead the covenant, as the pſalmiſt here in the following verſe, O let not the oppreſſed return aſhamed: let the poor and needy praiſe thy name. Have reſpect unto the covenant.

In a word, let your caſe be the worſt caſe out of hell, this covenant contains all ſalvation as a

* Several foreign Powers, at this time, were at open war with one another: and, as formerly obſerved, p. 582. our own nation was alarmed with an open rupture with the court of Spain; who, as was then confidently affirmed, had entered into a formidable alliance with different Powers, in order to recover Gibraltar and Port-mahon: and, to favour their deſigns the better, gave out, that their intention was to invade Britain, and place the Pretender on the throne.—However, this rupture did not actually take place, till the year 1739.; nor the attempt to inthrone the Pretender, till the year 1745.

covenant

covenant of grace, of all grace, of all ſort of grace for all ſort of ſinners, and of all ſort of cures for all ſorts of caſes; and if you can get yourſelf wrapt within the bond of this covenant by believing and pleading it; then you draw God upon your intereſt, ſo that your concern is his concern, your intereſt is his intereſt, your cauſe his cauſe, as the pſalmiſt ſhews here, ver. 22. Ariſe, O God, plead thine own cauſe. It ſtands upon his honour, and he will do his own work in his own time. If ever you got grace to draw a bill upon God as a covenant-promiſing God in Chriſt, and have any bills lying tabled before the throne, and are ſometimes unable to plead and purſue the bill, with a Lord, Have reſpect unto the covenant: you have the ſtrongeſt encouragement to wait on him, and expect his anſwering the bill in due time; for, he will rather work marvellouſly, and create new worlds, rather turn all things to nothing than quit his concern in, or give up with his reſpect unto the covenant.

Are you concerned for the advancement of the kingdom of Chriſt in the earth as you ought to be? Here is a covenant of grace to the Jews, and grace to the Gentiles; grace to the heathen nations, ſaying, I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermoſt parts of the earth for thy poſſeſſion.—Are you concerned about generations to come, about the riſing generation, when there is little hope of the preſent? O! here is a covenant of grace to ſucceeding generations, till the end of the world, ſaying, I will make thy name to be remembered in all generations; therefore the people ſhall praiſe thee for ever and ever.

Are you concerned about your latter end, and how it ſhall fare with you when in the ſwellings of Jordan, how you will fight the laſt battle? O here is a covenant of death-conquering grace, ſaying, Death ſhall be ſwallowed up in victory; O death, I will be thy plague; O grave, I will be thy deſtruction.—Are you concerned about a goſpel-miniſtry, and thoughtful whether it ſhall be continued? There is many a word in this covenant about it; but eſpecially that, Chriſt is exalted to maintain and ſupport a goſpel-diſpenſation to the end of the world, Mat. xxviii. 20. Whatever ſpot of the earth he chuſe or refuſe, he having aſcended on high, hath received gifts for men, yea, for the rebellious alſo, that the Lord God might dwell among them, Pſal. lxviii. 18.

SERMON LXI.

FAITH's PLEA upon GOD's WORD *.

2 SAM. vii. 25. —— Do as thou haſt ſaid.

DAVID was a ſtrong believer; and it were our great advantage to follow him in his faith: and in this word that I fix upon to ſpeak to, there are two ways wherein his faith works, 1. By believing the divine word, Thou haſt ſaid ſo and ſo. 2. By pleading the accompliſhment thereof, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

1. Faith works by believing his word, Thou haſt ſaid. The object and ground of faith is the divine ſaying; and faith reſts upon a thus ſaith the LORD; it is not upon a thus ſaith a MAN, or thus ſaith a MINISTER; nay, nor thus ſaith an ANGEL. Divine faith can ſtand only upon a divine teſtimony; Thus ſaith the LORD; thou haſt ſaid. If you have faith then, you have received the word, not as the word of man, but, as it is indeed, the word of God, which effectually works in you that believe. Faith acts by taking God's word, Thou haſt ſaid; thou haſt promiſed; thou haſt ſpoken in thy holineſs.

2. Faith acts by pleading the accompliſhment of the promiſe, Do as thou haſt ſaid. God is not a ſpeaker only, but a doer; he is not a promiſer only, but a performer: and faith looks to a promiſing God, that he may be a performing God; and ſo puts him to his word.

OBSERV. That it is the buſineſs of true faith, to take God's word, and to put him to it.

In the illuſtration of this doctrinal propoſition, we would incline through divine aid, to eſſay briefly the following things.

I. To ſhew, that it is the buſineſs of faith to take God's word.
II. That it is the buſineſs of faith to put him to his word.
III. How faith takes God's word.
IV. How it pleads the accompliſhment of the promiſe.
V. Whence is this the buſineſs of faith to take God at his word, and to put him to his word.
VI. Make application of the whole.

I. We are firſt to ſhew, That it is the buſineſs of faith to TAKE God's word, or to take him at his word: this is plain, becauſe the word is the immediate object of faith. We have no other glaſs wherein to ſee God ſavingly, but his word, particularly his word of grace and promiſe; Rom. x. 8. Say not, Who ſhall aſcend to heaven? that is, to bring Chriſt down from above; or, Who ſhall deſcend into the deep? that is, to bring up Chriſt again from the dead. The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth and in thy heart: ſo then, faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. FAITH is a relative word, it relates to the faithfulneſs of the ſpeaker; believing relates to a word to be believed. That it is the buſineſs of faith to truſt in the word of God, is evident from the whole ſcripture. How many times, Pſal. cxix. doth the pſalmiſt ſpeak of truſting in his word, and hoping in his word, and rejoicing in his word, and ſo taking him at his word.

* This was an evening-exerciſe on a preparation-day, before the celebration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, at Burntiſland, in the year 1733.

II. We

II. We come, in the next place, to shew, That it is the business of faith to put him to his word, or to plead the accomplishment of his word, that he would do as he had said: this is evident from Psal. cxix. 49. Remember the word unto thy servant, upon which thou hast caused me to hope. And how many times doth he plead with God, to do to him according to his word? Quicken me according to thy word, ver. 25. Again and again we have this repeated, as ver. 107, 154. Strengthen me, according to thy word, ver. 28. Save me, according to thy word, ver. 41. Be merciful to me, according to thy word, ver. 58. Deal well with thy servant, according to thy word, ver. 56. Let thy merciful kindness be my comfort, according to thy word, ver. 76. Uphold me, according to thy word, ver. 116. Give me understanding, according to thy word, ver. 169. Deliver me, according to thy word, ver. 170.—All comes to this, Do as thou hast said.

III. We proceed now to shew, How, or in what manner, faith takes the word of God.

1. It takes it by an intelligent apprehension of it in the understanding. The man is taught of God, and gets his eyes opened, to see the faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation; he sees it to be the word of God, and a word spoken in season to his weary soul. They will never take the word by faith that do not understand it; Philip said to the Eunuch, Understandest thou what thou readest? So we may say, Understandest thou what thou hearest? Are your eyes opened to see the wonders of his law or doctrine; to see the glory of Christ held out to you in the word?

2. Faith takes the word of God by a particular application of it with the heart; insomuch that it is a cordial apprehension, a cordial assent that is given to the word; With the heart man believeth unto righteousness. Saving light goes to the heart. Many have only their heads enlightened, their judgments informed, but not their hearts engaged, nor their affections captivated. Faith is a cordial applying the word, and that particularly to the man's own benefit; whether we call it assurance or not, it comes to the same thing: as when in conviction the threatening is applied, the man trembles under the fear of hell and wrath, because he applies the law-threatening to himself, saying, I am the man to whom this threatening is spoken: so, in the day of conversion or believing, the promise is applied, the man is relieved with the view of the grace and mercy of God in Christ, because he applies the gospel-promise to himself, saying, "I am the man to whom this promise is "spoken, and I receive and rest upon Christ "for salvation, as he is promised or offered to "me in this gospel; To me is this word of salva-"tion." And if the man did not take it to himself, there would be no believing at all. But then,

IV. The fourth thing proposed, was, To shew how faith pleads the accomplishment of the promise.

1. It pleads upon the mercy that made the promise, that it is everlasting mercy, unchangeable mercy; The Lord, the Lord God merciful and gracious.

2. It pleads upon the truth that is to make out the promise; it is called, The truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, Micah vii. 20.; that his name is faithful and true.

3. It pleads upon the power of the promiser, Being fully persuaded, that he that hath promised is able to perform; that he hath not out-promised his own promise, or said what he cannot do.

4. It pleads upon the blood of the covenant that seals all the promises thereof; hence they are all Yea and Amen in Christ Jesus.

5. It pleads upon the love of God to Christ; this is to pray in his name, that God, for the love he bears to Christ, would do as he hath said.

6. It pleads upon the unchangeableness of God and of his word; that his word endures for ever, and that he is God, and changes not, therefore the sons of Jacob are not consumed.

7. In a word, it pleads upon his oath, Heb. vi. 10. God willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise, the immutability of his counsel, hath confirmed it by an oath; that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lye, we might have strong consolation, who have fled for refuge, to lay hold upon the hope set before us.

8. And lastly, it pleads upon his name; What wilt thou not do for thy great name?

V. The fifth thing proposed, was, To shew whence is this the business of faith to take God at his word, and to put him to his word. Why, because,

1. It is the end and design of God, in giving his word; These things are written, and spoken, that we may believe in the Son of God, and that believing, we might have life in his name, John xx. 31. The gospel is preached in vain, if men do not take God at his word, and then hang upon it.

2. Because thus we glorify God; and the more we rest upon the divine word, the more we glorify him; Abraham was strong in faith, giving glory to God. We give him the honour of his truth, and other pefections this way.

3. Because thus we engage the honour of God upon our side, when we put him to his word; his honour is engaged, He cannot deny himself.

4. Because faith hath no other way of living, but upon the word of God; Man liveth not by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. Thy word was found of me, and I did eat it. This is my comfort in my affliction, thy word hath quickened me.

VI. The last thing proposed was the application of the subject, which, indeed, was the principal thing intended. Here is a fit exercise before the solemn communion-work, to go to God and say, O do as thou hast said. Consider what he hath said, and take him at his word, and put him to it, that he would do to you accordingly. Whatever your case be, surely there is some word relative to it.

Some may be thinking, alas! God hath said nothing to me, that I may put him to his word. Why, man, if the gospel, that is in this Bible, be preached to you, and if there be any word of grace therein suitable to your case, then put not away the word from you, but take it, and plead upon it, that God would do as he hath said. If you can see any word of promise suited to your case, and to your need, then put to your hand by faith, and lay hold upon his word.

Oh! say you, is there any word from God about my case, who am a poor, needy creature, like to starve for want of a spiritual meal, and a hearty draught of the living waters that go out from Jerusalem. What hath God said, or hath he said any thing concerning me? Yea, he hath ſaid, Iſa. xli. 17, 18. When the poor and needy ſeek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirſt, I, the Lord, will hear them, I, the God of Iſrael, will not forſake them. I will open rivers in dry places, and fountains in the midſt of the valleys. I will make the wilderneſs a pool of water, and the dry land ſprings of water.—Hath he ſaid ſo? Then take him at his word, and put him to it, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

Oh! but is there any word from God for me, who have been long waiting about ordinances, and never yet ſeen his glory, as I would deſire to ſee it? What hath he ſaid concerning me? Why, he hath ſaid, that he waits that he may be gracious; that he is a God of judgment, and bleſſed are all they that wait for him, Iſa. xxx. 18. He hath ſaid, The viſion is for an appointed time, but at the end it will ſpeak, and not lye: though it tarry, wait for it, becauſe it will ſurely come, and not tarry, Hab. ii. 3.—Hath he ſaid ſo? Then take him at his word, and put him to it, ſaying, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But is there any word from God, concerning my caſe, that find my conſcience challenging me for prodigious guilt; there was never ſuch a guilty perſon on the face of the earth? Are you groaning under guilt? Hear what he ſays, Heb. viii. 12. I will be merciful to your unrighteouſneſs, and your ſins and iniquities will I remember no more. Iſa. xliii. 25. I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſions for mine own ſake, and will not remember thy ſins.—O then! take hold of his word, wherein he proclaims indemnity, and put him to it, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But, ſays another, is there any word from God concerning me, that am compaſſed about with ſuch ſtrong corruptions, and conquering luſts, that ſin gets the maſtery of me? Would you be delivered? Hear what he ſays, Micah vii. 19. He will ſubdue our iniquities, and caſt all our ſins into the depths of the ſea. Rom. vi. 14. Sin ſhall not have dominion over you; for ye are not under the law, but under grace. Iſa. lxiii. 4. The day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the year of my redemption is come.—Hath he promiſed to take vengeance on your luſts? Then take him at his word, ſaying, O do as thou haſt ſaid.

But is there any word to me, that am ſuch a filthy monſter, ſuch a polluted creature in heart and way, that am ſtinking, as it were, in the grave of ſin? He hath ſaid, Ezek. xxxvi. 26. From all your filthineſs, and from all your idols will I cleanſe you. Zech. xiii. 1. There is a fountain opened to the houſe of David, and to the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, for ſin and for uncleanneſs.—Is there a promiſe of cleanſing? Then take him at his word, and cry, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But is there any word to me a backſlider, a grievous revolter, that many times after vows have made inquiry; my promiſes and reſolutions have been but paper-walls before the fire of temptation? Are you afflicted with this, and would have relief? Behold, he ſays, Jer. iii. 22. Return, ye backſliding children, and I will heal your backſlidings. Hoſ. xiv. 4. I will heal your backſlidings, and love you freely. I will be as the dew to Iſrael.—Hath he ſaid ſo? Then let your heart ſay, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid?

But what doth God ſay to me, that have no ſtrength for any duty or difficulty, that am weak like water? Would you have relief in this caſe? God ſays, 2 Cor. xii. 9. My grace ſhall be ſufficient for thee, and my ſtrength ſhall be made perfect in thy weakneſs. Iſa. xl. 26. He giveth power to the faint, and to them that have no might he increaſeth ſtrength.—Doth he ſay ſo? Then put him to his word, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But is there any word concerning me, that am brought to a great difficulty, and know not what to do, or what hand to turn me to; I am ſtraitened what courſe to take: doth God ſay any thing to me? Yea, he doth: Iſa. xlii. 19. I will bring the blind by a way they know not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known. I will make darkneſs light before them, and crooked things ſtraight. Iſa. xxx. 22. Thine ears ſhall hear a voice behind thee, ſaying, This is the way, walk ye in it. I will guide thee by my counſel.—Doth he ſay ſo? Then put him to his word, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But what ſays God to a poor ſoul that is haraſſed with the temptations of the devil, and ready to be deſtroyed with the fiery darts of the wicked one? God ſays, I will bruiſe the head of the ſerpent. Rom. xvi. 20. The God of peace ſhall bruiſe Satan under your feet ſhortly. For this cauſe was the Son of God manifeſted, to deſtroy the works of the devil.—Hath he begun to deſtroy him? and hath he ſaid, Thou ſhalt bruiſe him under thy feet? Then put him to his word, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

Alas! but what ſays God to a poor deſtitute creature, and hath nothing, no good, no grace, no light, no life, no ſtrength? He ſays, Philip. iv. 19. My God ſhall ſupply all your wants, according to his riches in glory, by Chriſt Jeſus. Pſal. ix. 18. The needy ſhall not always be forgotten; the expectation of the poor ſhall not periſh for ever. There is bread enough, and to ſpare, in your Father's houſe.—Hath he ſaid ſo? O then! put him to his word, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But what ſays God to me, that am longing, longing, earneſtly longing for ſome taſte of his goodneſs, ſome view of his beauty; ſome communion and fellowſhip with him? Why, God ſays to you, that he will ſatisfy the longing ſoul, and fill the hungry with good things. Matth. v. 6. Bleſſed are they that hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſs; for they ſhall be filled. Hath he ſaid ſo? Then let your heart ſay, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

Oh! but is there any word for one that hath a quite other caſe to tell you of, that hath no longing deſire, no hunger, no thirſt, that hath as much need as any longing ſoul here; but I have no ſpiritual longing, not ſo much as a deſire, but, like the parching earth, the dry ground, that can have no active thirſt, but hath many a wide cleft? God ſays, Iſa. xliv. 3, 4. I will pour water on him that is thirſty, and floods upon the dry ground; even my Spirit upon thy ſeed, and my bleſſing upon thine offspring. They ſhall grow up as among the graſs, as willows by the water-courſes.—Have you no other thirſt, but like that of the dry ground, and hath he promiſed a flood? Then, O put him to his word, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

Oh! but is there any word for me, that am like the barren ground and unfruitful, that bears nothing but briars and thorns, and I find this ground is rejected, as nigh unto curſing, whoſe end is to be burned? Is this your fear and concern? Hear that word, Iſa. lv. 13. Inſtead of the thorn ſhall come up the fir-tree; and inſtead of the briar, the myrtle-tree; and it ſhall be to the Lord for a name, and for an everlaſting ſign that ſhall not be cut off. Hoſ. xiv. 8. I am like a green fir-tree, from me is thy fruit found.—Hath he ſaid ſo? Then put him to his word, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

Alas!

Alas! but is there any word for me, that have been a fool, a mocker, a ſcorner, that have laughed at all religion and godlineſs; is there any merciful word that I may take hold of? Yea, God ſays, Prov. i. 22. Ye ſcorners, that delight in ſcorning, and fools, that hate knowledge, turn ye at my reproof: behold, I will pour out my Spirit unto you; I will make known my word unto you.—Doth he ſay ſo? Then put him to his word, ſaying, O do as thou haſt ſaid.

But what ſays God to one that hath a plagued heart, a hard heart, a baſe heart, full of all manner of evils, and all the plagues of hell? Why, God ſays, Ezek. xxxvi. 26. A new heart will I give you, and a new ſpirit will I put within you; I will take away the ſtony heart out of your fleſh, and I will give you an heart of fleſh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cauſe you to walk in my ſtatutes. And whatever be the plague, he hath ſaid, I am the Lord that healeth thee.—Hath he ſaid ſo? Then, O put him to his word, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

Ah! but doth God ſay any thing to a ſtupid wretch, that only hears you, but is no more affected than the ſtones of the wall, and that is quite dead, and can no more ſtir than a rock, and hath no more life than a dead corpſe? God ſays, and, O that he would ſay it with power, Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon theſe ſlain, that they may live. Ezek. xxxvii. 12. I will open your graves, and cauſe you to come out of your graves, and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, and ſhall put my Spirit in you, and ye ſhall live.—Hath he ſaid ſo? Then, O put him to his word, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But, Oh! is there any word that God ſays concerning me, that hath forfeited God's favour, by heaping up great and inſuperable mountains betwixt him and me, that I fear he will never come over? Why, he ſays, Zech. iv. 7. Who art thou, O great mountain? before our Zerubbabel, thou ſhalt become a plain. He ſhall bring forth the head-ſtone with ſhooting, crying, Grace, grace, unto it. He can make the mountains ſkip like rams, and the little hills like lambs.—Hath he ſaid ſo? Then, O put him to his word, and ſay, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But is there any word for one that is filled with fear of heavy judgments coming upon the land, and upon an apoſtate-church? Yes, he ſays, Iſa. xxxii. 2. A man ſhall be a hiding place from the ſtorm, and a covert from the tempeſt: as rivers of water in a dry place, as the ſhadow of a great rock in a weary land. When you ſee matters running into confuſion, church-members betraying the privileges of the church, and the church of Scotland deſtroying herſelf with her own hand, not only boars out of the foreſt waſting her, and wild beaſts of the field devouring her, but enemies in the boſom of the church making themſelves famous, for lifting up axes and hammers to break down the carved work of her doctrine, diſcipline, and government *, remember the Lord hath ſaid, that when he builds up Zion, he will appear in his glory; and that upon all the glory there ſhall be a defence; that at evening time it ſhall be light; that the darkeſt part of the night may uſher in the morning-ſtar of a Reformation in ſpite of hell: for I would incline gladly to hope God will not leave Scotland, though we have left him. He took infeftment by Solemn National Covenant ſix times †; and he hath had martyrs for his kingly office, that have aſſerted his royal prerogatives at the expence of their blood: therefore, let us apply that word, He will ariſe and have mercy on Zion.—Hath he ſaid ſo? Then, O take him at his word, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But is there any word for a poor creature that is in bondage through fear of death? If I have run with the footmen, and they have wearied me; then, how can I contend with horſes? And if in the land of peace, wherein I truſted, they wearied me, then, what will I do in the ſwelling of Jordan? I tremble to meet with the king of terrors? Why, he hath ſaid, Hoſ. xiii. 14. I will ranſom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death: O death! I will be thy plagues; O grave! I will be thy deſtruction. Death ſhall be ſwallowed up in victory. Plead then, that he would do as he hath ſaid.

But I want aſſurance of all theſe things, may one ſay. Well, what mean you by that, man, woman, that you want aſſurance? I ſuppoſe many do not underſtand themſelves, when they ſay they want aſſurance; for, what better aſſurance would you have than the word of God? If you have his word, and take his word, you need no better aſſurance. If a man of credit, whom you can depend upon, give you his word for ſuch a thing, then you depend upon it, and ſay you are aſſured of it; for you have his word. There is an aſſurance of ſenſe, that is, the aſſurance of the work, when you have got the thing that is promiſed; this is not properly aſſurance, it is enjoyment: but the aſſurance of faith is the aſſurance of a word. And though the aſſurance of ſenſe be ſweeteſt, yet the aſſurance of faith is the ſureſt aſſurance: for, what you got in hand from God you may ſoon loſe the benefit and comfort of it; but what you have upon bond in the promiſe, is ſtill ſecure. If you take God's promiſe, you have the beſt aſſurance in the world: but if you ſay you want faith, you cannot take his word, or truſt his word, then this is plain dealing; I fear this indeed be the caſe of the moſt: then you want aſſurance indeed, becauſe you want faith, and cannot take his word, nor give him ſo much credit. But if any be ſaying, that is indeed my caſe; I cannot believe his word: doth God ſay nothing to me? Is there any word ſuited to my caſe? Yes, there are promiſes of faith as well as to it; Zeph. iii. 12. I will leave in the midſt of them a poor and afflicted people, and they ſhall truſt in the name of the Lord. In him ſhall the Gentiles truſt,—Hath the Author of faith ſo promiſed? Then, O take him at his word; cry for faith, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But may one ſay, I would deſire not only to have the word, but the accompliſhment of the word; I would not only have the promiſe, but the performance; and there are ſome promiſes I have been looking to, ſome ten or twenty-years-old promiſes, that I think I got the faith of; but, alas! the accompliſhment is not yet come; there are ſome prayers and petitions I have had long tabled upon the ground of the promiſe: What doth God ſay to one that hath never got theſe promiſes accompliſhed, nor theſe prayers anſwered? Why, man, be thankful,

* What the Author here alludes to, is laid open above, p. 70, 149, 631, 648, 661, 670.
† This was done at different periods betwixt the year 1580, and 1650.

ful, if you have got grace to believe the promiſe; for ſo much faith as you have to take God's word, ſo much aſſurance you have that the word will be made out. If you be waiting upon a promiſing God, give him his time, and behold the womb of the promiſe will ſhortly open and bring forth; for it will not travel beyond its time; Bleſſed is ſhe that believed; for there ſhall be a performance of thoſe things that were told her from the Lord, Luke i. 45. And your fits and ſtarts of unbelief, O believer, ſhall not hinder the performance of the promiſe you have once believed ſavingly; If we believe not, he abideth faithful; he cannot deny himſelf, 2 Tim. ii. 13. Will he deny his word, will he deny his oath? No, no; he will have reſpect to his covenant; becauſe he hath a reſpect to himſelf.

But what ſays God of one that is afflicted, and mourning for the deſolations of Zion, and particularly for the ſins and defections of the day we live in? I will tell you what he ſays, They that ſow in tears ſhall reap in joy; and though you have your mourning time for Zion, you ſhall alſo have your rejoicing times; Rejoice ye with Jeruſalem, and be glad with her, all ye that love her: rejoice for joy with her, all ye that mourn for her, Iſa. lxvi. 10. He ſays, that he will ſet a mark upon the foreheads of them that ſigh and cry for all the abominations that are done in the midſt thereof, Ezek. ix. 4. Bleſſed are they that mourn, for they ſhall be comforted, Mat. v. 4.—Why then, look to him to do as he hath ſaid.

But ſays another, I am one that has a family, and children that the Lord hath given me, and it is my concern, not only that I may be bleſſed myſelf, but that my ſeed and offspring may be bleſſed; is there any word for me in this caſe? Yea, what think you of that word? Iſa. xliv. 3. I will pour my Spirit upon thy ſeed, and my bleſſing upon thine offspring. What think ye of that covenant made with Abraham, which you are called to lay hold upon by following his faith? Gen. xvii. 7. I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeed. You have not only the covenant of Abraham to look to, but the entail of the covenant to your poſterity to look to, Iſa. lix. 21. This is my covenant with them, ſaith the Lord, My Spirit that is upon thee, and my words that I have put in thy mouth, ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy ſeed, nor out of the mouth of thy ſeeds ſeed, ſaith the Lord, from henceforth and for ever. He hath ſaid, that children are his heritage, Pſal. cxxvii. 3.; and that his righteouſneſs is unto childrens children, Pſal. ciii. 17.; The promiſe is unto you and to your children? Acts ii. 39. O take him at his word, and cry, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But what do you ſay to one that finds himſelf deſerted of God, and that God anſwers neither by URIM nor THUMMIM. I go foreward, but he is not there; backward, but I cannot perceive him: On the left-hand, where he doth work, but I cannot behold him: He hideth himſelf on the right-hand, that I cannot ſee him, Job xxiii. 8, 9. The Comforter, that ſhould relieve my ſoul, is far removed, Lam. i. 16. God ſays, Iſa. liv. 7, 8, 10. For a ſmall moment have I forſaken thee, but with great mercies will I gather thee: In a little wrath I hid my face from thee, for a moment; but with everlaſting kindneſs will I draw thee, ſaith the Lord thy Redeemer. For the mountains ſhall depart, and the hills be removed, but my kindneſs ſhall not depart from thee, neither ſhall the covenant of my peace be removed, ſaith the Lord, that hath mercy on thee.—Hath he ſaid ſo? Then, O take him at his word, ſaying, Lord, do as thou haſt ſaid.

But what doth God ſay to one that is toſſed with one wave of affliction upon the back of another, Deep calling unto deep, at the noiſe of God's water-ſpouts; all his waves and billows are gone over me, Pſal. xlii. 7. Why, God ſays, Iſa. liv. 11, 12, 13, 14. Oh thou afflicted, toſſed with tempeſts, and not comforted, behold, I will lay thy ſtones with fair colours, and lay thy foundations with ſapphires: And I will make thy windows of agates, and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy borders of pleaſant ſtones: And all thy children ſhall be taught of the Lord, and great ſhall be the peace of thy children: In righteouſneſs ſhalt thou be eſtabliſhed. Yea he ſays, Pſalm xci. 15. He ſhall call upon me, and I will anſwer him; I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him, and honour him. Many ſuch ſweet words of grace he ſpeaks. O then, take his word, and plead, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But is there any word to one that is loſt in the wilderneſs, and knows not where he is, ſo as to think it impoſſible that miniſters can find him out? I think I am loſt in a thicket, and it is impoſſible to find out my caſe in your preaching, it is a matchleſs caſe, a nameleſs caſe. Why, may be that word concerns you, Iſa. lxii. 11. Behold thy ſalvation cometh; and thou ſhalt be called, Sought out, not forſaken? And Hoſ. ii. 14. I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderneſs, and there will I ſpeak comfortably to her; or, as the word is in the margin, ſpeak to her HEART. O comfortable, when God ſpeaks not only to the ear, but to the heart!—Well, hath he ſaid it? O then, take his word and plead, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But is there any word to one that hath been incorrigible under correcting providences, and hath his corruptions irritate by the croſs, and rebellion rather increaſed by rods, inſtead of being reclaimed by word and rod? Is there any caſe like mine, or is there any word for me to lay hold upon? Yes; what think you of that word, Iſa. lvii. 17, 18. For the iniquity of his covetouſneſs was I wroth, and ſmote him: I hid me, and was wroth, and he went on frowardly in the way of his heart. Well, what follows? I have ſeen his ways, and will heal him; I will lead him alſo, and reſtore comforts unto him, and to his mourners. O aſtoniſhing wonder of free grace! that it was not ſaid, I have ſeen his ways, and will DAMN him; but I have ſeen his ways, and will HEAL him: I have ſeen his ways, and will SAVE him.—Hath he ſaid ſo? Then put in your petition, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But is there any word to ſuch as are under the power of unbelief and impenitency? The goſpel is preached to believers and penitents: O God forbid but it was not preached to ſinners, that are both unbelieving and impenitent, in order to bring them to faith and repentance: why, what ſays God to ſuch? He ſays, what they ought to lay hold and plead upon, Pſal. cx. 3. Thy people ſhall be willing in the day of thy power. Acts v. 31. Chriſt is exalted at the right-hand of God, to be a Prince and a Saviour, to give repentance to Iſrael, and forgiveneſs of ſins. Plead then he may do as he has ſaid.

But is it poſſible that God is ſpeaking to any that hath been a notorious ſinner? Perhaps, all the country knows that I have been a ſcandalous debauchee, a leud and wicked ſinner, a profane graceleſs wretch. O! if any were charmed with the joyful ſound of goſpel-grace to-day, he ſays, Iſa. i. 8. Come now and let us reaſon together, ſaith the Lord: though your ſins be as ſcarlet, ſcarlet, they ſhall be as white as ſnow; though they be red like crimſon, they ſhall be as wool. Though you have ſinned to the uttermoſt, I am able to ſave to the uttermoſt; is your name wonderful, as a ſinner? Behold his name is Wonderful, as a Saviour.—O hath he ſaid ſo? Well, go and plead his word, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But beſides my wickedneſs, I am groſly ignorant; doth God ſay any thing to a poor brutiſh ignorant creature like me? Would you be taught? There is a word you may take hold of, John vi. 45. It is written in the prophets, They ſhall be all taught of God. And, who teaches like him?—Hath he ſaid ſo? Then take him at his word, ſaying, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But is there any word from God for one that hath crucified ſo many convictions as I have done; yea, and virtually crucified the Son of God afreſh, by rejecting his calls, grieving his Spirit? Yea, we are called to preach the goſpel to every creature, and even to the crucifiers of Chriſt; Repentance and remiſſion of ſin muſt be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jeruſalem, Luke xxiv. 47. Why beginning at Jeruſalem, among the crucifiers of Chriſt? Becauſe they have moſt need of his blood to waſh them. Chriſt came to ſave ſinners, the chief of ſinners?—Hath he ſaid ſo? Then put in your bill, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

But will you tell me, Is there any word for one that cannot think that it is as you are ſaying, that there is any merciful word in God's mouth, or any merciful thought in God's heart towards me; it cannot enter into my thought; I cannot let it light in my mind or heart? Why, God ſays, Iſa. lv. 8, 9. My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, ſaith the Lord: for as the heavens are higher than the earth, ſo are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts. You are not to meaſure his thoughts by yours, no more than you can meaſure theſe wide heavens with your arms: but God knows his own thoughts, and what ſays he of them? Jer. xxix. 11, 12, 13. I know the thoughts that I think towards you, ſaith the Lord, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an expected end. Then ſhall ye call upon me, and ye ſhall go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you. And ye ſhall ſeek me and find me, when ye ſhall ſearch for me with all your heart.—Hath he ſaid ſo? Then go and plead his word, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

In a word, Do you want his preſence? He hath ſaid, Lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world: I will never leave thee nor forſake thee. Are you afraid of hell and damnation? He hath ſaid, Deliver his ſoul from going down to the pit, I have found out a ranſom.—O what encouragement is here to go and pray and plead, ſaying, Lord, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

O Sirs, ſearch the ſcriptures, and ſtudy the word of God; conſult and conſider what he hath ſaid; let there be no mouldy Bibles among you; let not the duſt of your Bibles witneſs againſt you, for your eternal ſalvation depends upon your believing what he hath ſaid: therefore ſtudy the faith of what he hath ſaid. The Spirit is promiſed, and the ſcriptures are written to work this faith; Chriſt is exalted, and the throne of grace is erected to give this faith; and this faith comes by hearing what he hath ſaid: by hearing not what Plato hath ſaid, or Seneca hath ſaid; what this or that man hath ſaid, but what God hath ſaid in his word, in this Bible, which is a book ſo prefaced, and ſo atteſted as never any other book was: the Old Teſtament is prefaced by all the miracles wrought by Moſes; the New Teſtament was prefaced by all the miracles wrought by Chriſt. And as Moſes's miracles were wrought before the Old Teſtament was written, ſo Chriſt's miracles were wrought before the New Teſtament was written: never a book was ſo atteſted as this, even by a cloud of witneſſes, a cloud of miracles, a cloud of martyrs, who ſealed with their blood the truth contained in it. God, in the New Teſtament, exactly fulfils what he hath ſaid in the Old; yea, the preſent ſtate of all the world is a viſible performing of ſcripture-prophecies.—Are not the Jews at this day a ſcattered and deſpiſed people, as the ſcripture ſaid they ſhould be? Hath not God done as he hath ſaid?—Is not Antichriſt, the long-lived man of ſin, and the cruel man of blood, as the ſcripture told he ſhould be. Thus it is done as he hath ſaid.—Are not the Pagan parts of the earth the dark places and habitations of cruelty, as the ſcripture ſays they ſhould be? Thus it is as he hath ſaid.—Do not the ſeven churches of Aſia ly deſolate, as they were threatened, unleſs they repented? Thus it is as he hath ſaid.—Is not Mahomet, the falſe prophet, and his followers like the waters of the great river Euphrates, to which they are compared in ſcripture? And thus it is as he hath ſaid.—Does not the whole world ly in wickedneſs, as the word of God ſhews? And ſo it is as he hath ſaid.—Is not every ſaint as a brand plucked out of the burning, as the ſcripture ſpeaks? And ſo it is as he hath ſaid.—Are not Deiſts and ſcoffers walking after their own luſts, and ridiculing the promiſe of Chriſt's coming, as the ſcripture ſpeaks? And ſo it is as he hath ſaid.—Are not the black marks of perilous times in the laſt days upon us, as the ſcripture ſpeaks? And ſo it is as he hath ſaid.—Are not the fooliſh virgins as many, yea, and more than the wiſe, and all ſlumbering and ſleeping, and all according as he hath ſaid?—Doth not the Spirit ſpeak expreſly, that in the latter times ſome ſhall depart from the faith, and accordingly it is as he hath ſaid?—Is not the goſpel a ſavour of life to ſome, and a ſavour of death to others?—Is not Chriſt precious to ſome, and a ſtone of ſtumbling and a rock of offence to others, as the ſcripture ſpeaks? And ſo it is as he hath ſaid.——Look about you, and ſee if any thing that falls out be not an accompliſhment of the word: and, O how ſhould you value this word! not a jot or title of it ſhall fall to the ground.

Walk in this garden of the ſcripture, and pluck up the flowers of goſpel-promiſes, and put them in your boſom; live by faith upon the promiſe, and be perſuaded, whatever ſtands in the way, that he will do as he hath ſaid. He will do ſo, for what he hath ſaid he hath written, what he hath ſaid he hath ſealed, what he hath ſaid he hath ſworn, what he hath ſaid he will never unſay; therefore, take hold of his word of grace, and hold him at his word in life and death, ſaying, Do as thou haſt ſaid.

SERMON LXII.

The promiſing GOD, a performing GOD *.

GEN. xxviii. 15. — For I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of.

AT the laſt ſacramental ſolemnity of this ſort, I ſpoke a little upon the great plea and prayer of faith upon the divine promiſe, in the words of David, 2 Sam. vii. 25. — Lord, do as thou haſt ſaid. We may now look upon this text that I have read, as the gracious anſwer of God to that prayer of faith, in the words of the great God himſelf to Jacob, I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of; or, till I have done as I have ſaid.

What God ſaid once to Joſhua, chap. i. 5. — I will not fail thee, nor forſake thee, is applied as ſpoken to all believers, Heb. xiii. 5. I will never leave thee, nor forſake thee. Even ſo, what God ſaid to Jacob here, doth equally belong to all believers in Chriſt; I will not leave thee, till I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of. Hath God condeſcended to ſpeak to you, and cauſed you to hope upon his word of grace, or promiſe, at this, or any former occaſion? Here is good news to take away with you, that the promiſing God will, in due time, be a performing God, and that you may not think long, and weary or faint in your mind, apprehending what a weary time it may be between the promiſe and the performance. Here is ſupporting encouragement in the mean time, I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of. What I have ſaid I will do, and will not leave thee till I have done it.

In the preceding part of this chapter, you find Jacob was forced to flee from his father's houſe upon the account of the wrath of his brother Eſau: he is haſtened away to Padan-aram; and on his way he comes to Luz, which afterwards, on the account of a notable emergent, was called BETHEL, where God ſignally appeared and diſcovered himſelf to him in great glory, ſuitably to his ſtrait. Here he was benighted, ver. 11. and was obliged to ly in the open field. Some of the ſaints and ſervants of God have been put to great hardſhips, through the violence and rage of their perſecuting brethren. But though Jacob's bed was hard, yet his reſt was ſweet; while he had a hard pillow of ſtone under his head, the Lord appeared to him in a dream, and ſpake comfortably to him. God's time of ſpeaking comfort to his people, is readily when they are moſt deſtitute of other comforts; then he is moſt kind, when brethren come to be moſt unkind.

You may obſerve two things, firſt, what God ſhewed to Jacob; and then, what he ſaid to him.

1. What he ſhewed to him; he manifeſted to him his glory, as the God of providence, and the God of grace in Chriſt, who is here repreſented to him by the ladder reaching from heaven to earth, ver. 12.; and all the intercourſe between heaven and earth is by this ladder.

2. What he ſpake to him, ver. 13. And he dreamed, and behold a ladder ſet upon earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold, the angels of God aſcending and deſcending on it. As the viſion was ſuitable to his preſent caſe, letting him underſtand that he had a good guide, and a good guard, not only the angel of God, but the Lord of angels; ſo the words that God ſpake to him were ſuitable to his preſent need. The Lord ſpake from the top of the ladder; for all the glad tidings we receive from heaven come through Jeſus Chriſt. Here are former promiſes made to Abraham and Iſaac, his father and grandfather, repeated and ratified to Jacob; whereby God intimated, that he would be the ſame to him that he had been to them. Here are freſh promiſes made to him ſuited to his preſent condition. He was to leave his kindred, and to want their preſence: God promiſed to be preſent with him; I am with thee. He was in the fear of Eſau: God promiſed, ſaying, I will keep thee. He was journeying to an unknown place: God promiſed to keep him in all places whitherſoever he went. He was apprehenſive he would never ſee his own country again; God promiſed he would bring him again to that land. He ſeemed to be left of all his friends and relations: God promiſed, ſaying, I will not leave thee. Providence ſeemed to croſs the promiſe, while he is thus going as an exile to a place far diſtant: God aſſures him of the performance of all he had ſaid, in due ſeaſon; I will not leave thee, till I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of. When God ſpeaks to his people, he ſpeaks to the point; he ſpeaks to the caſe; his words are ſuited to their preſent exigencies; and not only ſo, but to their future ſtraits alſo. Jacob knew not, but God knew and foreſaw what hardſhips he would meet with in his uncle Laban's ſervice; and in a ſuitableneſs to the event that was to take place, he aſſures him, ſaying, I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of. This was ſuch a gracious manifeſtation, and ſuch a wonderful intercourſe that God had with Jacob, as obliged Jacob to put a remark upon the place, and call it BETHEL, the houſe of God, the gate of heaven.

The text is not ſo much a new promiſe, as a repeated confirmation of what he had before promiſed, for eſtabliſhing and fortifying of Jacob's faith; for, ſays God, I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I HAVE ſpoken to thee of. Where we may obſerve two things.

1. A confirming word concerning the iſſue; or what he would bring out of theſe promiſes, that they ſhall not be mere ſayings, but doings; I will

* This ſermon was preached on a thankſgiving-day, immediately after the celebration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, at Abbot's-hall, Oct. 22. 1733. It hath undergone three impreſſions.

will do what I have ſpoken to thee of. Have I ſaid it, and will I not do it? In the end the viſion ſhall ſpeak.

2. A ſupporting word in the interim, that faith may not faint in the mean time before the accompliſhment come, I will not leave thee, until I have done it. Jacob might think, Alas! it may be a long time between the promiſe now made, and the accompliſhment of it. What will become of me in the mean time! And, indeed, he had dark days, and hard ſervice before his hand; and there was long twenty years between Bethel-viſit here, where he met with God, and God ſpake to him in this manner, and Peniel-viſit, when he wreſtled with God and prevailed, and when God came to do for him ſome of the great things he here had ſpoken to him of. And in that interval of twenty years, between Bethel and Peniel, many viciſſitudes and changes, trials and difficulties occurred in Jacob's lot; but for this ſupport in the mean time, God aſſures him that he would never leave him, until he had done that which he had ſpoken to him of. Hence the doctrine I would ſpeak a little unto is,

OBSERV. That whatever dark and diſmal days may befal the children of God, upon the back of ſweet Bethel-viſits that he allows to them; yet he will not leave them, till he hath accompliſhed all the Bethel-promiſes that he made to them.

He will never leave them, till he do what he hath ſpoken to them of. He will go on, till he hath done as he hath ſaid. We may ſay of our Lord Jeſus, when once he hath ſpoken to a ſoul, and begun to do graciouſly, as Naomi ſaid to Ruth concerning Boaz, Ruth iii. 18. Sit ſtill, my daughter, till thou knoweſt how the matter will fall: for the man will not reſt, till he hath finiſhed the thing this day. Even ſo, when Chriſt hath begun to ſpeak kindly, the poor believer may ſit ſtill and wait patiently, till the appointed time of accompliſhing his word; for, the God-man will not reſt until he hath finiſhed the thing. We may be confident of this very thing, that he that hath begun the good work in us, and ſaid the good word to us, will perform it, and finiſh it, Phil. i. 6.; I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of.

We find how this doctrine was verified, both in Jacob and his ſeed.

1. In Jacob's own perſon. After this diſcovery of God that he enjoyed at Bethel, many dark days, and much hard ſervice he endured, yet God did not leave him. When Laban caſt down his countenance on him, and ſaid, putting him in mind of his Bethel-viſit he made to him, and the Bethel-vow he cauſed him to make, Gen. xxxi. 13. I am the God of Bethel. Yea, God never left him, till he did what he ſpoke to him, both in proſpering him in the place where he was a ſtranger ſo long, and in bringing him back to his own land though he was in great danger: when Laban was purſuing him behind, and his brother Eſau meeting him in the face, yet God preſerved him according to his word, and brings him back to the land he promiſed to bring him to, and then ſends him to viſit Bethel, Gen. xxxv. 7. where he built an altar, and called it EL-BETHEL; that is, the God of Bethel; and ſo remarked the goodneſs of God to him, in not leaving him till he had done all that he ſpoke to him of.

2. In Jacob's ſeed this doctrine was verified, particularly with reference to the promiſe made to them, concerning their inheriting the land of Canaan, and expelling the Canaanites to make room for them. See and compare Joſh. xxi. 43,—45. with Joſh. xxiii. 14, 15. and 1 Kings viii. 56. God will take his own time of doing what he hath ſpoken; but he will be ſure to do it, whatever difficulties interveen between the promiſe and performance.

In handling of this ſubject, I would incline to obſerve the following method, through divine aſſiſtance.

I. What we are to underſtand by the Bethel-viſits, that God may allow his people.

II. Conſider ſome of the dark days that may follow upon theſe Bethel interviews.

III. Conſider and explain the promiſe here made, that he will not leave them, till he hath done that which he hath ſpoken to them of, notwithſtanding of the dark days that may interveen between the promiſe and the accompliſhment.

VI. Offer ſome grounds upon which the believers may be aſſured, that God will not leave him, till he hath done that which he hath ſpoken to him of.

V. Deduce ſome inferences for the application.

I. The firſt thing propoſed was, To ſhew what we are to underſtand by the Bethel-viſits God may allow his people. In order to this, I premiſe, it is ſure none are acquaint with what we call a Bethel-viſit, except theſe that are in a peculiar manner bleſſed of the Lord, as Jacob was, of whom his father Iſaac ſaid, I have bleſſed him, and he ſhall be bleſſed, Gen. xxvii. 33. They are the bleſſed objects of God's love, and the bleſſed heirs of the promiſes, brought into covenant with God, and joined to the Lord by converting grace and ſaving faith. And as none are acquainted with Bethel-viſits but theſe that are thus bleſſed; ſo it is with great variety, that the Lord's people do enjoy ſuch appearances of God. Though they have not all experience of Bethel-interviews with God, of the ſame meaſure and degree with that of Jacob; yet they have ſuch experience of meeting with God as are ſubſtantially the ſame. Whatever difference there may be in circumſtances; yet they are ſuch, as they may call the place BETHEL, the houſe of God, the gate of heaven.

In the illuſtration of this point, I ſhall here obſerve 1. The ſubſtance. 2. The ordinary circumſtances of ſuch interviews with God as may be called Bethel-viſits.

1ſt, The ſubſtance, or ſubſtantial part thereof, is God's gracious meeting with them, ſo as they may have it to ſay, The Lord God of the Hebrews met with us, Exod. iii. 18. And that either in public ordinances, or in ſecret duties, by night or by day, in the city or in the field; and this meeting hath theſe two things eſpecially in it, which we find was in Jacob's meeting with God here in Bethel, the one is the manifeſtation of his glory, and the other is the communication of his mind.

1. This Bethel-viſit includes a manifeſtation of his glory. Jacob here ſees the glory of God in Chriſt repreſented as the ladder reaching between heaven and earth. Why then, you may call that a Bethel wherever it hath pleaſed God to reveal Chriſt in you, and to open your eyes to ſee his glory in the face of Jeſus Chriſt, as the way to the Father, and as the ladder by which you may aſcend up to heaven. Have you you ſeen, at this, or any former occaſion, Chriſt to be, as it were, the ladder ſet upon the earth, in his humiliation, and reaching unto heaven, in his exaltation, and ſo that all the rounds and ſteps of the ladder are compleated in his incarnation, life, death, reſurrection, aſcenſion, and ſitting at the right-hand of God; and by him do we believe in God, who raiſed him from the dead, that our faith and hope might be in God? 1 Pet. i. 21. And have we thus, by faith, ſtept up the ladder, or are we on the way ſtepping up as we can, through grace, upon the view of Chriſt as the only ladder, the only way? Hath thus the God that commanded light to ſhine out of darkneſs, ſhined into our hearts, not our heads only, but our hearts, to give us the light of the knowledge of his glory in the face of Jeſus Chriſt, ſo as our hearts have gone out after a revealed Chriſt? Well, this is one ſubſtantial part of a Bethel-viſit, the manifeſtation of his glory.

2. This Bethel-viſit includes a communication of his mind. Jacob here not only hath God manifeſting his glory to him, but alſo communicating his mind as a promiſing God, ſaying, I am your father's God, The God of Abraham and Iſaac; and in teſtimony that I will be your God alſo, I will do ſo and ſo to you: and thus he communicates his mind to him by promiſes of grace. Why then, you may call that a Bethel-viſit, when God comes and intimates his love, or communicates his mind, and ſpeaks into your heart by ſome word of grace and promiſe, opening up ſome ſecret truth of the goſpel to you, and opening your underſtanding to apprehend, and your heart to apply it, and cauſing you to hope in his word, as Yea and Amen in Chriſt. If God hath ſpoken a word to your heart, and made you take him at his word, ſo as you can look to him and ſay, Remember the word on which thou haſt cauſed me to hope, whereever it was, you may ſay the name of the place was BETHEL, and that you found him in Bethel, and there he ſpake to you, Hoſ. xii. 4. Now, concerning theſe viſits, we may remark four things.

(1.) That the Lord may allow a Bethel-manifeſtation and communication to his people, and yet they may not know that God is preſent with them, in ſuch a manner as he is, till an after reflection thereupon. Hence ſaid Jacob here, ver. 16. when he awaked out of his ſleep, Surely God was in this place, and I knew it not. God's people may be ſurpriſed with his viſits, that though they cannot but be conſcious of his coming, when he approaches to them, yet they may not be ſure about the qualities of that viſit, whether it was a ſaving divine manifeſtation, till they come to examine and reflect upon it, and find that it was none other but the powerful preſence of God: for, they carry their own evidence along with them; Surely he was here.

(2.) Bethel-viſits fill the ſoul with a holy awe of God, ver. 17. How dreadful is this place? They that will ſee God will ſee cauſe of holy trembling and bluſhing before him, and the ſight will humble and fill them with holy awe and reverence. Saving diſcoveries do not elevate and puff up with pride, but impreſs the ſoul with holy dread. The ſweet pleaſure and joy that attend the diſcovery is tempered with holy fear and awe, in ſo much, that they fear the Lord and his goodneſs, and rejoice with trembling. The place where God manifeſts himſelf is both a joyful and a dreadful place. Praiſe is the moſt joyful and heartſome exerciſe; yet God is ſaid to be fearful in praiſes, becauſe of the dread and awe of God that is on the heart of theſe that praiſe him; for, Great is the glory of the Lord which they ſee who ſing in the ways of the Lord.

(3.) Divine viſits are not excluded from any place; even here, where Jacob little thought of meeting with God, here he meets with him, he finds him in Bethel, and ſays, This is the houſe of God, and the gate of heaven. Wherever we are, in the houſe or field, if we meet with God there, we may call it the houſe of God, and the gate of heaven; for, heaven is in his gracious preſence.

(4.) Divine viſits are quickening, ver. 18. He riſes early in the morning, and ſets about ſolemn worſhip of the God that appeared to him. He ſets up the ſtone for a pillar, and anoints it as a memorial of what paſt, and gave the place a new name. As ſweet communion we have with God ought to be remembered; ſo his grant of mercy calls for our return of duty. Jacob is here alſo quickened to vow himſelf away to the Lord, and promiſe to ſerve him; and, indeed, our vows and promiſes are then regular and evangelical, when they are the fruit of God's manifeſting himſelf in the covenant of promiſe to us, as to Jacob here: for, whatever we promiſe, we can perform nothing but in virtue of his promiſe to us.

2*dly*, As to the ordinary circumſtances of ſuch Bethel interviews with God. Several of theſe may be gathered from the hiſtory of Jacob, and will be found to correſpond with the believer's experience, as in theſe following particulars.

1. That in the Lord's ordinary way of dealing, when he deals effectually with poor ſouls, and when he hath a mind to bring them to a Bethel, he readily brings them to a wilderneſs, and there deals powerfully with them, and ſpeaks kindly to them; or, to their heart. Thus here Jacob is in the wilderneſs, being baniſhed from his father's houſe. Though he was a ſon of the promiſe, ye he was forced to run to a ſtrange country. God allures his people, and brings them to a wilderneſs, and then ſpeaks comfortably; gives them the valley of Achor for a door of hope. Some here readily have come to this communion, or the like, and have found themſelves in a wilderneſs of confuſion, darkneſs, and deſpondency, and yet had, ere all was done, ground to call the place BETHEL, by reaſon of his meeting with them, and ſpeaking kindly to them.

2. The ſweeteſt diſcoveries of God are readily uſhered in with the darkeſt nights. God's viſit is ordinarily like the break of the day upon the back of a dark night. And, indeed, Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning, Pſal. xxx. 5. As it was literally in the dark night that God viſited Jacob here; ſo you will ſee what a dark night of trouble, diſtreſs, and perplexity Jacob was in when he met with God at Peniel, and wreſtled with the angel and prevailed; Jacob was left alone; and there wreſtled a man with him till the break of day, Gen. xxxii. 24. He had been before this compaſſed with clouds of fear on the account of Eſau, who was meeting him with four hundred men. You that are in a dark night of fear and diſtreſs may be encouraged to wait on, for readily the Lord uſhers in manifeſtations of himſelf with the darkeſt nights.

3. As the Lord is pleaſed to uſher in ſweet manifeſtations manifeſtations of himſelf with a dark night; ſo readily a dark night follows upon their ſweet manifeſtations. And many times they are as a blink before a ſtorm; and the people of God often find this to their ſad experience, making them ſee ground to be ſober after their ſweet experiences. Jacob had a good night in Bethel; but new ſtraits followed upon it, particularly in the hard ſervice and harſh treatment he met with from Laban. Here is a viſit; and preſently follows a night of trouble again. We mention this, not for your diſcouragement, but that you may not be ſurpriſed; for, there may be a ſudden turn in your ſpiritual affairs: I ſaid, my mountain ſtands ſtrong; but thou didſt hide thy face, and I was troubled.

4. Sometimes the night that follows upon the Lord's manifeſting himſelf may be darker, and the darkneſs of it greater than the night they had before their Bethel-manifeſtation. Jacob was in a ſtrait before the Bethel-viſit, through the fear of Eſau; but after that kindly viſit, the ſtrait was greater, and the night darker, while he had not only the fear, but the feeling of Laban's diſpleaſure: perhaps you had a dark night before the Lord paid you a viſit; but what if a darker night ſhall follow upon that viſit, even ſome grievous temptation to raze all again. The church was brought to the banqueting houſe, and his banner over her was love; yet afterwards to the dark ſhadow, where ſhe cries, I ſought him, but I found him not. What a ſweet communion had the diſciples with Chriſt at the laſt ſupper! yet followed with the darkeſt night of temptation, trouble, and ſcattering: the ſhepherd of Iſrael himſelf being ſmitten, the ſheep were ſcattered. When the Lord allows you ſweet Bethel-interviews and bleſſings, you may miſtake them, and think they preſage nothing, but a life of joy and comfort henceforth, and that former trials are at an end; and yet they may be only preparations for approaching trials, and encouragements to faith and hope under future troubles. This leads me,

II. To the ſecond thing propoſed, which was to ſhew, what dark and diſmal days may follow upon theſe Bethel-diſcoveries. There are theſe following dark days, or rather dark nights, that may follow upon Bethel-viſits.

1. A dark night of long abſence, a night of weary diſertion may follow. Jacob had not, for twenty years, ſuch a night as he had at Bethel: there may be long twenty years travel between Bethel and Peniel. Perhaps you had much heavenly-warmneſs by a live coal from the altar, when God manifeſted himſelf, and you got a heart to cloſe with Chriſt. The place was like a heaven upon earth to you; but, perhaps, many a weary day you have had ſince that time. May be you have never had ſuch a gale ſince that time. Or, if this communion hath been a Bethel to you, think it not ſtrange, though a night of abſence and hiding may follow, and though the night be long.

2. A dark night of forgetfulneſs may follow upon the Bethel-viſit, ſo as it is hard to know how ſecure people may grow; and they may loſe the ſweet impreſſion of the viſit, and have little or no kindly rememberance of the ſweet days they had at Bethel. This dark night followed upon Jacob's meeting with God here; it ſeems he had much forgotten it, till God puts him in mind of it, ſaying, Gen. xxxi. 13. I am the God of Bethel, where thou anointedſt the pillar, and vowedſt the vow. Jacob, might he ſay, do you not mind the time? do you not mind the place? do you not mind the two pillars? do you not mind the promiſe? do you not mind the Bethel, where I ſhewed my covenant to thee, and accepted thy vows unto me? Be not diſcouraged with the fear of Laban behind purſuing you, and Eſau before meeting you; it is enough to drive all fears and diſcouragements away, that I am the God of Bethel; I am the ſame God now, that I was at that day to you: however, Jacob had loſt the ſweet impreſſion, and loſt the kind rememberance of Bethel, till God himſelf was the remembrancer. In the dark night of oblivion, all may go out of ſight, and out of mind.

3. A dark night of temptations, fears, and diſcouragements may follow upon a ſweet Bethel-viſit. The gracious encouragement that God gave to Jacob afterwards, ſhews what fears and diſcouragements he was under, and under which he was ready to ſink, if God had not ſupported and comforted him from time to time. Well, even after a Bethel-viſit you may be grievouſly tempted, to call all that you met with but a deluſion; yea, to think that it was Satan that was working with you, and not the living God; and to think that your coming to a communion-table was but a taking a ſeal of your own condemnation. Some may be tempted to fear that God hath a controverſy with them, and does not obſerve their affliction. It ſeems this was a part of the dark night that came upon Jacob; and therefore God ſhews him that it was an ungrounded jealouſy; For, ſays he, I have ſeen all that Laban hath done to thee, Gen. xxxi. 12. Though thou waſt not ſenſible of my care, yet I have all this time had a ſpecial care about thee, and increaſed thy ſtock, notwithſtanding of what Laban did. It is hard to believe the divine care in a dark day, wherein we apprehend his diſpleaſure; and yet when he returns, he can make us ſee he had a ſpecial care of us, when we know not of it; and that he hath been doing all things well, even when we were fearing all theſe things were againſt us.

4. A dark night of wants and ſtraits may follow upon Bethel-viſits; both outward and inward wants: temporal wants, ſuch as Jacob mentions, when he complained that Laban had changed his wages ten times, Gen. xxxi. 41. Spiritual wants, and want of comfort, ſuch as Jacob was under, when in his ſtrait he could draw no comfort, even from an old Bethel, till God gave him a new viſit, by telling him, that he was the God of Bethel. Think not ſtrange, though, upon the back of Bethel-viſits, you be tryſted with great ſtraits, outward and inward, and perhaps can draw no comfort from a back-look upon Bethel; for, whenever you can draw comfort and encouragement from it, you may reckon it a new viſit; when, in a dark day, you can remember him from the land of Jordan, and remember what God did to you at ſuch a time.

5. A dark night of perſecution, even by friends and brethren, may follow upon Bethel-viſits, as Jacob found after this viſit, when perſecuted by Laban, his father-in-law, and Eſau his brother, that was conceived in the ſame womb with him, though God mercifully reſtrained their anger and fury, that they got not not their will of Jacob; For the wrath of man ſhall praiſe God, and the remainder thereof he will reſtrain. Think not ſtrange then, even from Bethel-meetings with God, though you ſhould be tried with a dark night of perſecution, even from envious friends and falſe brethren. The church and ſpouſe of Chriſt ſpeaks of a Bethel, Song i. 4. The king hath brought me into his chambers, we will be glad and rejoice in thee; and yet a hot and ſcorching perſecution followed, ver. 6. The ſun hath looked upon me. Why? My mother's children were angry with me. There is hardly any perſecution more grievous and violent, than that of angry brethren; but they are under a reſtraint; they can go no further than God permits: only we need not think ſtrange to ſee church-perſecutions, even after Bethel-viſits.

6. A dark night of backſliding and relapſe into former unwatchfulneſs, ſecurity, and ſloth may follow upon the Bethel-viſit, though it was ſolemnly renounced at Bethel. Jacob ſeems to have been under a lamentable decay, as to the exerciſe of faith that once he had at Bethel, till once God returned and quickened him again. Chriſt ſaid to his diſciples after the communion, Ye ſhall all be offended, becauſe of me this night: you ſhall all turn your backs upon me: you may lamentably relapſe to theſe ſins that were renounced. I know not your particular caſe; but whatever it is, it hath been the ſad experience of God's remnant. You may relapſe to the omiſſion of known duty; yea, to the embracement of known idols, the very thing that parted between God and you. This is a ſad and ſorrowful night, that you need to take care you bring not upon yourſelves through unwatchfulneſs, in ſo provoking the Lord to anger with you, as he was with Solomon, 1 Kings xi. 9. It is ſaid the Lord was angry with him, becauſe his heart turned from the Lord God of Iſrael, which had appeared to him twice. What a ſad matter is it, if after a Bethel-interview with God you turn your back upon the God of Bethel! Will you alſo go away?

7. A dark night of ſtrange diſpenſations may follow upon Bethel-interviews. Various trials, viciſſitudes, and changes, ſuch as was in Jacob's lot, between the time of Bethel-promiſes and Peniel-performances thereof; Jacob did not want chaſtiſements; If his children break my law, I will viſit their tranſgreſſions with rods, and their iniquities with ſtripes; nevertheleſs my loving-kindneſs will I not utterly take from him, nor ſuffer my faithfulneſs to fail, Pſal. lxxxix. 30,—33. God may cover your table at Bethel, but behold afterwads the ordinary means of relief may fail you, as it was with Jacob in Laban's family; even ſo, the means of ſpiritual relief may fail you. You may go to preachings, and return as dark as before. You may go to your cloſet, and that mean may fail you. You may go to public ordinances and ſacraments, and theſe means may fail you. Though at Bethel you, perhaps, thought, Oh! I will never be what I have been; I will never do as I have done: I will never doubt nor fear any more: yet all this may be out of ſight, and the comforter that ſhould relieve your ſoul, may be far from you, Lam. i. 19. Strange diſpenſations may befal you. All God's waves and billows may paſs over you, and deeps call unto deeps, Pſal. xlii. 7.

8. A dark night of perplexities amidſt theſe ſtrange diſpenſations may follow upon Bethel-interviews. Thus it was with Jacob before he came off from Laban's houſe, he know not what to do till the Lord directed him to ariſe and return to the land of his kindred, Gen. xxxi. 13. You may come to ſuch a night of perplexities that you know not what to do, or what hand to turn you to. You may come to look upon yourſelf as in a periſhing condition, and to ſay your ſtrength and hope is periſhed from the Lord. Remembering your affliction and miſery, the wormwood and the gall, Lam. iii. 18, 19. What ſhall I ſay? May we not obſerve, with fear and trembling, that ſome who have met with God have afterwards come under dreadful dark clouds both in point of ſin and miſery?—Some have been ſo far left to ſin after manifeſtations, as deſervedly to be called devils: Peter got ſuch a diſcovery of God in Chriſt, that the Lord ſays to him, Bleſſed art thou Simon Bar-Jona: fleſh and blood hath not revealed theſe things to thee, but my Father that is in heaven. Yet inſtantly Peter is left ſo far to ſin, that Chriſt ſays to him, Get thee behind me Satan; thou ſavoureſt not the things that be of God, Matth. xvi. 17, 23. And what think you of his denying his maſter with curſes? Let us not imagine they are all ſtrangers to Bethel-interviews with God that deny, or do not zealouſly own the cauſe and intereſt of Chriſt at this day. But let us fear and tremble to conſider how far the children of God may be left to depart from him and his way, in a dark time, and in a day of temptation. It is poſſible that good men may be left to ſin, and to juſtify their ſin. I will be loth to ſay, that they are all wicked men that juſtify their ſinful proceedings in public matters at this day, and that juſtify their perſecuting rage and anger at their brethren, when I conſider how Jonah juſtified his anger againſt God, ſaying, I do well to be angry. So it is poſſible that even ſome, that have met with God, may juſtify their anger at their brethren, ſaying, We do well to be angry even unto death, and angry even to ſuſpenſion, depoſition, excommunication †. I hope none need be offended, if I have charity for ſome that are of that opinion, through their ignorant zeal, while carried away like Barnabas, with the diſſimulations of the day, and whoſe eyes God will open in due time, to ſee that their anger was as ill founded as that of Jonah's. For, if ever God met with them at Bethel, when he is pleaſed to return, their eyes will readily be opened, and they will ſee they did ill to be angry with their brethren that were contending for the rights of their mother's houſe: yea, another merciful turn upon their hearts will make them ſay, as Jacob's ſons once did of Joſeph, We are verily guilty concerning our brother. So we hope of ſome, if ever they have met with God at Bethel, ſurely upon the Lord's return they will regret their miſcarriage, and ſay, We have verily been guilty concerning our brother. — However, as ſome that have met with God may come under dreadful clouds of ſin; (for we are not to unfaint them all, and every one that are carried down the ſtream of defection, though we are to have no charity for their ways, yet let us not meddle with their ſtate, till we ſee if God ſhall reclaim them) ſo in point of miſery, ſome that have met with

† Our author is here alluding to the conduct of the church-judicatories, in the proſecution, at this time, carrying on againſt the reverend Mr. Ebenezer Erſkine, and his brethren, formerly laid open, p. 661. See likewiſe, p. 631, 648, 670.

with God may be put to say, Oh! he breaks me with breach upon breach, and runs upon me like a giant; yea, while suffering his terrors, they have in a manner been distracted, and sometimes cursed the day wherein they were born. —— Thus you may see what dark days may follow upon Bethel-interviews with God; and yet, after all, the promise stands good to all the seed of Jacob that have met with God at Bethel. He will not leave them, till he hath done that which he hath spoken to them of.

III. The third general head proposed was, To consider and explain this promise, I will not leave thee, till I have done that which I have spoken to thee of. For explaining hereof there are these following questions that we would propound and answer. 1. How God speaks to his people? 2. How he doth or accomplisheth that which he hath spoken to them of? 3. When is it that he will do that which he hath promised? 4. What is the import of this privilege, that he will not leave them? 5. In what sense it is said, he will not leave them, till he hath done what he hath promised?

1st, How God speaks to his people, when they have a Bethel-visit of him? I answer, in a few words,

1. He speaks divinely, he speaks like himself, letting them know that it is he that speaks: as he said to the woman of Samaria, John iv. 26. I that speak to thee, am he; so says he here to Jacob, It is I that speak to thee; I will not leave thee, till I have done that which I have spoken. Never man spake like this man: man's speaking only reaches the ear, but God's speaking reaches and touches the heart. Hence,

2. He speaks powerfully, as it is said of Christ, He spake as one having authority, and not as the scribes: so, when the Lord speaks, there is power and authority accompanying the word, either in its first coming, or in its after-working, upon the heart. Ye received the word, not as the word of man, but, as it is in truth, the word of God, which worketh effectually in you that believe, 1 Thess. ii. 13.

3. He speaks particularly, as here to Jacob, I will not leave THEE, till I have done that which I have spoken of to THEE. People may hear the word delivered in general to all the congregation; but it doth them no good, till they hear it in particular spoken to them. Then God calls the person by name, and says, To thee I speak; and the heart says, It is to me that God is speaking. O! hath God spoken to thee, man, to thee, woman?

4. He speaks kindly and comfortably; Hos. ii. 14. I will allure her, and bring her to the wilderness; and then speak comfortably to her. His kindness in speaking appears most evidently when it is in a wilderness case he communicates himself: every word he speaks to Jacob here, is a word of kindness. O the light, life, strength, and comfort that the word brings when God speaks it! He hath a view both to their present comfort and their future support, when he speaks with them in Bethel.

5. He speaks plainly and not in parables: for he opens their understandings to apprehend, and their hearts to apply; For to them it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven; to others it is not given, Mat. xiii 11. The word of grace is a sealed book, till the Lion of the tribe of Judah open the seal.

6. He speaks suitably to their case; for, he hath the tongue of the learned, to speak a word in season to the weary, Isa. l. 4. He adapts his words here to Jacob's weary case, as I shewed in the explication. He gives them a word that suits their difficulties. Sometimes they have difficulty about this, and sometimes about that and the other affair, and they come with their burdens before the Lord, and he presents a word to them relative to them. —Sometimes they are burdened about their provision; and he gives a word for that: Bread shall be given thee, and thy water shall be sure.—They are burdened with fears of danger; and they get a word for that: Fear not, for I am with thee: The eternal God is thy refuge.—Sometimes they want direction; and get a word for that: I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known; I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight.—They want the Spirit; and they get a word for that: I will put my Spirit within you; and the water that I give shall be in you a well of water springing up to everlasting life.—They want strength for duty or trial; and they get a word for that: My grace shall be sufficient for thee, and my strength shall be perfect in thy weakness. —They want pardon; and they get a word for that: I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy transgressions, for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins.—They want to have sin subdued and mortified; and get a word for that: Sin shall not have dominion over you.—They want something for the church; and they get a word for that: That the wall shall be built in perilous times; that at evening time it shall be light; and upon all the glory there shall be a defence. —They want a blessing for their children; and they get a word for that: I will be thy God, and the God of thy seed *.

2dly, The next question here, was, How he doth what he hath spoken to them? I will do what I have spoken of to thee. Why,

1. He will do it faithfully: Not a word shall fail of what he hath spoken, Josh. xxi. 45. The history of Jacob shews how faithfully God accomplished his promise, and all that he spoke to him; and he hath faithfulness for the girdle of his loins. God is not man, that he should lye, nor the son of man that he should repent. He will do what he hath spoken, surely, and certainly; The vision shall speak, it shall surely come.

2. As he will do certainly what he hath spoken, so he will do it wonderfully, and he will work wonders before he do it not; Heaven and earth shall pass away, before one jot of his word fall to the ground. And it is in a very marvellous and mysterious way, that God doth accomplish his word through a world of dark dispensations, through fire and water he brings them to wealthy land. Though impassable mountains be in the way; yet he will come and do what he hath said, and give his people occasion to say when he comes, It is the voice of my Beloved, behold he cometh skipping upon the mountains, leaping upon the hills.

3. He will do what he hath spoken, and do it remarkably. Thus he did what he said to Jacob; and if the believer may put a remark upon the Bethel-visit, when he comes to promise; much more upon the Peniel-visit, when he comes

* See a vast many more of the cases of the saints stated and solved, in the preceding Sermon, p. 685, —689.

comes to perform what he hath promiſed. In the Bethel-viſit, we ſee him by faith in his word: but in the Peniel-viſit we ſee him by ſenſe in his work: for then he not only ſays, but does what he hath ſaid, and ſhews himſelf face to face.

4. When he doth what he hath ſpoken, he doth it ſurpriſingly. Jacob was not expecting ſuch a way of God's accompliſhing his word. Pſal. cxxvi. 1. When the Lord turned back the captivity of Zion, we were like them that dream. He ſweetly ſurprizes when he comes to do what he hath ſpoken: Then was our mouths filled with laughter, and our tongues with ſongs: the Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad. Again,

5. When he doth what he hath ſpoken, he doth it glorioufly. His glory ſhines in all his works, and eſpecially in accompliſhing his promiſes, that are Yea and Amen in Chriſt. He makes the glory of his wiſdom, power, holineſs, the glory of his mercy, truth, and faithfulneſs to ſhine in the accompliſhment; he doth more than he hath ſpoken, and is better than his word, Exod. xv. 1. When God accompliſhed his promiſe of delivering Iſrael out of Egypt, and out of the hand of Pharaoh and his hoſt, then their voice was lifted up, ſaying, I will ſing unto the Lord; for he hath triumphed glorioufly.

6. When he doth what he hath ſpoken, he doth it ſeaſonably; The viſion is for an appointed time, but at the end it ſhall ſpeak and not lye: though it tarry, wait for it; becauſe it will ſurely come, it will not tarry, Hab. ii. 3. It will not tarry beyond the appointed time, nor beyond the proper time; and therefore, let faith wait upon a faithful God, who will do as he hath ſaid. This leads,

3*dly*, To the third queſtion, When is it that he will do what he hath ſpoken to them of? You may take the anſwer of this in the following particulars.

1. Some things he hath ſpoken relate to a day of trouble; and when that day comes he will do what he hath ſpoken to them of; I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him, and honour him, Pſal. xci. 15. Hence his people never enjoy more of his preſence and pity, than in days of tribulation and affliction. And ſometimes he lets the trouble come to an extremity, before he ſenſibly accompliſh his promiſe of help; I was brought low, and he helped me, Pſal. cxvi. 6.

2. Some things that he hath ſpoken to them of relate to a day of temptation; and when that comes, then he will do what he hath ſpoken. He hath ſaid, Rom. xvi. 20. The God of peace will bruiſe Satan under your feet ſhortly. He hath ſaid, 1 Cor. x. 13. That he is faithful, and will not ſuffer them to be tempted above what they are able to bear; but with the temptation will make a way to eſcape. And hence it is, for ordinary, in a time of great and grievous temptation, he opens ſome door by which they eſcape from time to time, while they wait upon him.

3. Some things that he hath ſpoken relate to a day of work, of great work that he puts into their hand; and when that day comes, he doth that which he hath ſpoken. He hath ſaid, That he works in us both to will and to do of his good pleaſure, Phil. ii. 13. He hath ſaid, that he will ſtrengthen, he will uphold with the right-hand of his righteouſneſs, Iſa. xli. 10. And hence it is, that his people can ſometimes ſay with Paul, I can do all things through Chriſt ſtrengthening me. Though we are not ſufficient of ourſelves, to think any thing as of ourſelves, yet our ſufficiency is of God. And hence the church, Iſa. xxvi. 12. Thou haſt wrought all our works in us. And David, Pſal. lvii. 2. I will cry unto God moſt High, unto God that performeth all things for me.

4. Some things that he hath ſpoken of relate to a day of warfare: and when that day of bloody battle comes, he doth that which he hath ſpoken. He hath ſaid concerning this, even he who is the Captain of ſalvation; the Lord mighty in battle hath ſaid, for the encouragement of his ſoldiers, Who go a warfare upon their own charges? 1 Cor. ix. 7. He is the ſtrength of their ſalvation, that covers their head in the day of battle, Pſal. cxl. 7. And hence it is, that according to his word, his people are ſaid always to triumph in Chriſt Jeſus, and to be more than conquerors. See Pſal. xviii. 30, 32, 34. The word of the Lord is tried: He is a buckler to all thoſe that truſt in him. It is God that girdeth me with ſtrength: He teaches my hands to war; and bows of ſteel are broken by mine arms. All their ability to ſtand in a day of trial and danger flows from this.

5. Some things he hath ſpoken of relate to the day of death: and when that comes, he will do what he hath ſpoken to them. He hath ſaid, Death ſhall be ſwallowed up in victory, 1 Cor. xv. 54. He hath ſaid, Hoſ. xiii. 14. I will ranſom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death: O death! I will be thy plagues; O grave! I will be thy deſtruction. And hence it is, that as all believers in Chriſt are bleſſed in death, for, Bleſſed are the dead that die in the Lord, and that ſleep in Jeſus; ſo ſome believers have got the ſenſible and comfortable view of this, even when paſſing through that valley between time and eternity, and have fallen a ſinging in the midſt of the valley, and ſaying, O death, where is thy ſting? O grave, where is thy victory? Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Though I walk through the valley of the ſhadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me, thy rod and thy ſtaff they comfort me. With the ſtaff of the promiſe in their hand, they walk through Jordan dry ſhod. And when the ſoul is ſeparated from the body, then it enters into the reſt that remains for the people of God, according to that which he hath ſpoken.

6. Some things that he hath ſpoken relate to a day of judgment; and when that day comes, then he will do what he hath ſpoken to them of. He hath ſaid four times in one chapter; namely, John vi. That he will raiſe them up at the laſt day; and 1 Theſſ. iv. 13. That if we believe that Jeſus died, and roſe again, even ſo, upon the ſame ground, and with the ſame certainty, them that ſleep in Jeſus will God bring with him; and that the dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt, and meet the Lord in the air; and ſo ſhall they ever be with the Lord. He hath ſaid, 1 Cor. xv. 52. That in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the ſound of the laſt trump, the dead ſhall be raiſed incorruptible: That this corruptible ſhall put on incorruption, this mortal ſhall put on immortality. He hath ſaid, Col. iii. 4. When he who is our life ſhall appear, we ſhall appear with him in glory. He hath ſaid, Phil. iii. 21. That he will change our vile bodies, and make them like his glorious body, according to the working, whereby he is able to ſubdue all things to himſelf. He hath ſaid, That the ſaints ſhall enter into the joy of their Lord, and ſhall judge the world.

What I have ſaid, may give ſome light to the queſtion, When will he do what he hath ſpoken ken to his people? He will do all that he hath ſpoken, partly here, and perfectly hereafter. He hath promiſed eternal life to the believer: He that believeth on the Son, hath everlaſting life. This he doth in part here, and to perfection hereafter; and we may appeal to every believer of any ſtanding, if the promiſe of heaven and glory be not, even in part, allowed him here by a perſonal poſſeſſion. He is poſſeſſed of heaven, not only,

(1.) By union to Chriſt, ſo as his Head is in heaven, Chriſt the Fore-runner having taken poſſeſſion, and gone to prepare the place for him; ſo that he ſits with him in heavenly places; but alſo,

(2.) By communion he hath ſome perſonal poſſeſſion, if you conſider what heaven is.—Is heaven a ſtate of light, perfect light? The believer hath the begun poſſeſſion of this, in ſo far as he hath the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Jeſus Chriſt.—Is heaven a ſtate of liberty, perfect liberty? The believer hath the begun poſſeſſion of this, in ſo far as at any time his bonds are looſed, and the Spirit of God is poured out upon him; where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.—Is heaven a ſtate of love, perfect love? The believer hath the begun poſſeſſion of this, in ſo far as the love of God is ſhed abroad upon his heart, by the Holy Ghoſt; and the love of Chriſt conſtraineth him to duty and ſervice.—Is heaven a ſtate of perfect holineſs? The believer hath the begun poſſeſſion of this, in ſo far as he is ſanctified in Chriſt Jeſus, and going on to perfection; yea, is already perfectly holy in deſire.—Is heaven a ſtate of perfect joy? The believer hath this alſo in begun poſſeſſion, when he is filled with joy and peace in believing; yea, ſometimes with joy unſpeakable and full of glory.—Is heaven a ſtate of triumph and victory? The believer hath the begun poſſeſſion of this, when he boaſts in the Lord, and ſays, Thanks be to God, which always cauſes us to triumph in Chriſt.—Is heaven a place of praiſe and wonder at the grace of God, and the glorious perfections of God? The believer hath the begun poſſeſſion of this alſo, when ſometimes his heart is filled with the high praiſe of God, filled with wonder at his matchleſs love and diſtinguiſhing grace. He would invite all the world to wonder and praiſe. Yet, O what a ſmall portion of heaven hath he here, in compariſon of what he ſhall have! He ſhall drink of the river of pleaſure for ever. Yet that part he enjoys here, is the earneſt of the full poſſeſſion, and the evidence that he will do all that he hath ſpoken to them of, concerning grace and glory, and every good thing.

4thly, The next queſtion was, What is the import of this privilege, I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of? Why, how can it be ſaid he will not leave them; when yet, after Bethel-viſits and Bethel-promiſes given them, they may be tryſted with ſuch dark nights as I have been ſpeaking of? For clearing this ſubject, there are theſe two remarks I would offer.

1. The firſt remark is, "That there are ſome "reſpects wherein God may be ſaid to leave "people;" as,

(1.) When he takes away his word, his candleſtick, his ordinances, and brings a famine, not of bread and water, but of the word of the Lord, Amos viii. 11, 12. This is the worſt famine in the world.

(2.) When he takes away his Spirit, and commands the clouds to rain no rain, Iſa. v. 6. This is a fearful leaving; for, though the word and ordinances remain, yet, if the Spirit be away, then the word can do no good, it hath no power to convince or convert, to confirm or comfort.

(3.) When he takes away his ear, and doth not regard their prayers; when he doth not ſuffer them to pray, nor anſwer their prayer, but ſhuts them out, Lam. iii. 8.

(4.) When he takes away his hand, his help and aſſiſtance, and leaves perſons to themſelves, to their own luſts and counſels; My people would not hearken, Iſrael would have none of me: therefore I gave them up to their own heart luſts; and they walked after their own counſels, Pſal. lxxxi. 11. Alas! a ſad leaving! But then,

2. The ſecond remark I offer is, "That there "are ſome reſpects wherein God will not leave his "people." Either,

(1.) He will never leave them really, but in appearance. And hence they many times think, and fear he is away, when he is really preſent; Verily God was in this place, and I knew it not, ſays Jacob. Or,

(2.) He never leaves them abſolutely, but in ſome reſpect: he may leave them in reſpect of the influence of grace, though he doth not leave them as to the preſence of grace. He may leave them in reſpect of comfort; though he may allow the influences of grace, yet he may deny the comfort of grace. He may leave them in reſpect of aſſiſtance, though he may allow them the comfort of grace, yet he may deny them that aſſiſtance and ſtrength they want, and alſo the ſenſible anſwer of their prayers. Or,

(3.) He never leaves them totally, but in ſome degree. He may leave them to be buffeted by Satan; but will not leave them to be overcome by Satan. And he may leave them to be harraſſed and captivated by ſtrong corruptions; though he doth not leave them to be conquered thereby. Or,

(4.) He never leaves them finally, but for ſome time: he may hide his face for a little moment, but with everlaſting kindneſs will he have mercy on them, Iſa. liv. 7, 8. He will never leave them, ſo as to forget to do what he hath ſpoken to them of.

This promiſe then, I will never leave thee, it ſays, that ſomething of God is ever with them, and in them. They have in them a well of water, ſpringing up to everlaſting life, John iv. 14. God loves to ſtay where once he comes, I will not leave thee.—It ſays alſo, that he will not ſtay away: though he hides himſelf out of ſight, he will not be long away.—It ſays, that in whatever reſpect he may be ſaid to leave them for a while, yet he will return to their joy; Now you have ſorrow; but I will ſee you again, and your heart ſhall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you, John xvi. 22.—It ſays, there are ſome things God will never deprive them of, never take away from them. He will never take away his love and favour; For he hath loved them with an everlaſting love. He will never take away his covenant of peace and of promiſe from them; The mountains ſhall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindneſs ſhall not depart from thee, neither ſhall the covenant of my peace be removed, Iſa. liv. 10. I will never leave thee, nor forſake thee, Heb. xiii. 5.

5thly, The next queſtion is, In what ſenſe it is ſaid of Jacob, and of all the ſpiritual ſeed of Jacob, that God will not leave them, until he hath done that which he hath ſpoken to them of? To explain this a little further, I ſhall ſhew, 1. In what ſenſe we are to underſtand this interim promiſe, I will not leave thee. 2. In what ſenſe we are underſtand this particle until; which ſeems to point at a period of this promiſe.

[1.] In what ſenſe are we to underſtand this interim-promiſe, I will not leave thee? Why, whatever way he may be ſaid to leave his people, yet,

1. He will never leave them Godleſs, but will ſtill be their God: for, his covenant with them is, I will be their God: they can never be ſo far left, but that God is ſtill their God, and they may ſtill go to him as their God.

2. He will never leave them Chriſtleſs: he hath given Chriſt, the unſpeakable gift of God, to them; and he will never recal that gift; For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance: they ſhall ſtill have Chriſt in them the hope of glory. Hence,

3. He will never leave them Spiritleſs: he hath given his Spirit to you who are believers; and this anointing which you have received of him abides in you; I will pray the Father, and he ſhall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever, John xiv. 16. The Spirit may be hid in the believer, but never abſent.

4. Hence he will never leave them comfortleſs; John xiv. 18. I will not leave you comfortleſs; I will come to you. However the ſtreams of their comforts may be abated, yet the ſpring of comfort ſtill remains; and hence the well of conſolation now and then ſprings up.

5. He will never leave them helpleſs, but ſtill be to them a preſent help in time of trouble: even when they have deſtroyed themſelves, yet in him is their help. He helps their infirmities when they cannot pray. He helps them up when they are down. He helps them forward when behind.

6. He will not leave them hopeleſs, even when they are ſaying, My hope is periſhed from the Lord; yet he opens to them a door of hope in the valley of Achor. They are never again without God, and without hope in the world. Their hope lives. Yea,

7. He will not leave them faithleſs: For he hath prayed for them, that their faith fail not. Their faith may indeed languiſh, and be like to give up the ghoſt, as that of the diſciples, when they ſaid, We truſted that it had been he which ſhould have redeemed Iſrael; but now we doubt of this fundamental article of our creed. But when their faith was juſt at the failing, the Lord Jeſus reſtored and revived it.

8. He will not leave them friendleſs and fatherleſs: he is a friend that ſticks cloſer than a brother; and as a father pities his children, ſo the Lord pities them: as a father chaſtiſes his children, ſo the Lord chaſtiſeth them; as a father provideth for his children, ſo the Lord provideth for them, that they may not be in total want, between the promiſe and the time of the performance.—Thus he will not leave them, until he hath done that which he hath ſpoken to them of. He will not leave dealing with them; he will not leave bleſſing of them; he will not leave guiding of them and guarding of them; he will not leave making all things working together for good to them, and working for the accompliſhment of his promiſe.

[2.] In what ſenſe are we to underſtand this particle, until, which ſeems to point at a period of this interim-promiſe. Surely the meaning is not, that when he hath done that which he hath ſpoken to them of, then he will leave them; but rather that then they will no more need ſuch an encouraging word as this, I will never leave thee: for then they will be free of all fear of his leaving them. But the word imports,

1. That there may be a conſiderable time between the promiſe and the accompliſhment; between the time of God's ſpeaking to them, and the time of his doing what he hath ſpoken. There was twenty years diſtance between theſe two in Jacob's caſe.

2. It imports, that in this interval God is carrying on his work; I will not leave thee, until I have done it. Saying and doing is all one to God, he ſpeaks the word, and it is done; and when he hath ſpoken the word, it is always a-doing, till he hath done it completely.

3. It imports, that though he be ſtill carrying on his work, yet it may be hid from our eyes, what way he is doing it; and though we may ſuſpect, on this account, that God hath left us, and left his work, when we do not ſee him with us, nor ſee what he is doing; yet he is not away, when he is delaying the accompliſhing of his word, to our ſenſe and feeling, but only taking his own time and his own way, whoſe ways are infinitely higher than our ways, and his thoughts than our thoughts.

4. It imports, that this interval of time, wherein God is carrying on his work, though in a way hid from our eyes, is the time of faith, wherein we are called to wait upon a promiſing God, believing that not only he will be a performing God in due time, to our ſenſible feeling and experience; but that he is a performing God at preſent, making all interveening providences ſo many ſteps towards the accompliſhment of his word, though to carnal ſenſe and reaſon, they may ſeem to be ſo many letts and impediments to hinder the accompliſhment thereof. Joſeph had it revealed to him once and again, that he would be lord over his brethren, and that all the family ſhould yield obeyſance to him. How was this accompliſhed? Why, he is thrown into a pit; he is ſold into Egypt for a ſlave; and afterwards he is caſt into a priſon: theſe ſeemed all ſo many letts and obſtructions, in the way of ſuch advancement. How could faith keep its ground here? unleſs it ſhould ſhut its eye upon providences, and open its eye upon the promiſe, and keep it fixed upon a promiſing God, and then it would ſee all theſe ſeeming letts to be ſo many ſteps towards the accompliſhment of the promiſe, I will not leave thee, till I have done what I have ſpoken: therefore, let faith ſee and believe, that I am ſtill carrying on my work, and doing what I promiſed, whatever ſecret hidden ways I take to bring about my counſel; I am ſtill doing, and will not leave thee, till I have done what I have ſpoken to thee of.

IV. The fourth general head propoſed was, To offer ſome grounds of the doctrine, upon which the believer may be aſſured, that God will not leave him, till he hath done that which he hath ſpoken to him of, and that he will be all that he hath promiſed to him at Bethel.

1. Believers may be aſſured of it, upon the ground of the unchangeableneſs of God. There may be many viciſſitudes and changes in thy caſe: it is only the communion-day above that ſhall have no more night. Thou wilt certainly change, and change ere it be long: but dareſt thou ſay, God will change as oft as thou doſt? Thinkeſt thou that he will change in his love, when when thou changeſt in thy frame? No; he will reſt in his love, Whom he loves, he loves to the end. Thy ſecurity ſtands upon God's immutability; I am the Lord, I change not; therefore the ſons of Jacob are not conſumed, Mal. iii. 6.

2. Believes may be aſſured, that God will not leave them, till he hath done what he hath ſpoken; and aſſured upon the ground of God's foreknowledge. What makes men many times alter their ſentiments is, becauſe there are many things fall out contrary to what they projected; but God foreſaw what would be; he foreſaw, that even after a Bethel heart-burning interview with God, thou wouldſt grow lukewarm and indifferent; yet notwithſtanding of this, he met with you in Bethel, and ſpake with you there; and therefore he will do what he hath ſpoken to thee. He foreſaw what a prodigal, what a backſlider you would be, yet he gave his word to you; and therefore he will not go back.

3. You may be aſſured he will not leave you, believer, till he hath done what he hath ſpoken; becauſe he is faithful: Heb. x. 23. 1 Theſ. v. 23. Faithful is he that hath promiſed, who alſo will do it. Though, when his children break his law, and keep not his commandments, then will he viſit their tranſgreſſions with the rod, and their iniquities with ſtripes: nevertheleſs his loving-kindneſs will he not utterly take from him, nor ſuffer his faithfulneſs to fail. Once hath he ſworn by his holineſs, that he will not lye unto David, Pſal. lxxxix. 30,—35. God is faithful who hath called you to the fellowſhip of his Son.

4. Believers may be aſſured of this upon the ground of the divine power; or, becauſe God is Almighty, and able to do what he hath ſpoken. The apoſtle ſays, Rom. xi. 23. The Jews ſhall be grafted in. Why? For God is able to graft them in again, having once promiſed it, and ſaid that he will do it. It is enough to ſupport our faith, that he is able to do what he hath ſaid. Abraham's faith leaned upon the power of God, Rom. iv. 21. He was fully perſuaded, that he that had promiſed was able to perform. You may then be aſſured, believer, that he will never leave you, till he hath done what he hath ſpoken; unleſs you can ſuppoſe, that he hath out-promiſed his own power, and ſaid more than he is able to do.

5. It is evident he will not leave you, till he hath done what he hath ſpoken, if you conſider the experience of his people, and your own experience. The experience of God's people, from the beginning of the world, who have always found God to be as good as his word, and the ſame God, that he manifeſted himſelf to be at their Bethel-meeting with him. They have ſtill found him to be the God of Bethel, whatever jealouſies they entertained of his love; yet, upon their return, after their dark days was over, they found that his word endureth for ever, and that he never came ſhort of his promiſe; but that notwithſtanding all their temptations, they were continually with him, holding them by his right-hand, Pſal. lxxiii. 23. They ſtill found him welcoming the returning prodigal, ſaying, This my ſon was dead, and is alive, was loſt, and is found. Now, is it conſiſtent with their experience? And will he take a ſingular way with you? Yea, thou dareſt not deny, believer, but thou haſt found God to be ſtill the God of Bethel, even though many times you were fearing that God would never ſmile upon you again; yet, upon your looking back to his holy temple, you have been made to ſay, O he is the ſame, and his love is not altered nor changed; and that he hath not forgotten his promiſe. Hence, how many times have believers reaſon to ſet to their ſeal to David's exerciſe and experience, Pſal. xxx. 9, 10, 11. when he is crying, What profit is there in my blood, if I ſhall go down to the pit? They fell a praying, Hear, Lord, and have mercy upon me; Lord, be thou my helper; and then have been made to ſay, Thou haſt turned for me my mourning into dancing, thou haſt put off my ſackcloth, and girded me with gladneſs. May not then experience aſſure you, that he will not leave you, till he hath done that which he hath ſpoken.

6. The everlaſting nature of the covenant of promiſe may aſſure you of this; Though my houſe be not ſo with God, yet he hath made with me an everlaſting covenant, well ordered in all things, and ſure, 2 Sam. xxiii. 5. The bargain was not left to your making a covenant with him, but God himſelf made it with you; and therefore you ſhall be kept by his power, through faith to ſalvation. Though thou ſhouldſt change a hundred times, God will not change one word of the ſweet bargain he made with you: becauſe,

7. It is his bargain made with Chriſt; I have made a covenant with my Choſen, and my covenant ſhall ſtand faſt with him, Pſal. lxxxiv. 3. And hence, If his chidren break my law, I will viſit their iniquity with rods: nevertheleſs my loving-kindneſs will I not take from him, ver. 30, 33. And becauſe I will not take it from him, I will not take it from them. Your aſſurance then of his not leaving you, till he hath done what he hath ſpoken, may ſtand upon the everlaſting love that he hath to Chriſt, and the ſtanding bargain between Chriſt and him. He cannot fail you, becauſe he cannot fail his Son Chriſt, who hath ſealed the covenant with his blood, and in whom therefore all the promiſes are Yea and Amen, to the glory of God: and ſo the glory of God in Chriſt, the glory of his mercy and truth in Chriſt, obliges him to do as he hath ſpoken.

8. There is one ground of aſſurance more that I offer, as it lies in the boſom of the text, namely, the divine will and pleaſure; I WILL not leave thee, until I have done that which I have ſpoken. I WILL NOT; it is my will and pleaſure not to leave you till all be done. You have a word, 1 Sam. xii. 22. The Lord will not forſake his people for his great name's ſake: Why? Becauſe, it hath pleaſed the Lord to make you his people. Thus it is ſaid, Deut. vii. 7, 8. The Lord ſet his love upon Iſrael; Why? Becauſe he loved them: he will, becauſe he will. And who hath reſiſted his will? His will is uncontroulable: and hath he manifeſted his will in this, that he will not leave you, till he hath done what he hath ſaid? Then you may be aſſured of it, for he will do all his pleaſure; and well may you ſay, Thy will be done. The covenant of grace is made up of I wills, Ezek. xxxvi. 25, and downwards: I WILL give thee a new heart; a new ſpirit WILL I put within you: I WILL take away the heart of ſtone; I WILL give you a heart of fleſh: I WILL put my Spirit within you, &c. ten or twelve I wills. And this part of the covenant, delivered by Jacob in the text, is like a crowning promiſe put upon the head of all: I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of. And what better aſſurance would you have than this, that God ſays, I will? What he will do, muſt be.

V. The fifth general head propoſed, was, To make make application of the whole in ſome inferences. If it be ſo as I have been ſaying, hence ſee,

1. Whence it is that ſome may ſeem to be, of all men, the moſt miſerable, who are yet of all men the moſt happy; I mean believers in Chriſt, that are acquainted with Bethel-meetings with God, and to whom God hath ſpoken favourably and graciouſly.—They may ſeem to be moſt miſerable, in reſpect of the dark and diſmal nights that may follow upon their ſweet converſe with God; and yet are the moſt happy perſons in the world, in reſpect of their having God, binding and obliging himſelf never to leave them, till he hath performed all the gracious promiſes of the covenant to them: This is the honour of all the ſaints; God will not leave them, though they ſeem to be left by all the world. And God will do what he hath ſpoken to them of, though clouds and darkneſs, and mountains of difficulty ſtand in the way.

2. See whence it is that ſome may ſeem to the moſt happy perſons in the world, who are yet the moſt miſerable; I mean, unbelievers, whether they be profane or profeſſors, that have no acquaintance with God in Chriſt. They may ſeem to be moſt happy people for a while, in reſpect they know not what it is to have a dark day, a day of trouble and adverſity; they have peace and proſperity in the world: They are not troubled as other men, neither are they plagued like other men, Pſal. lxxiii. 5. They have no fear either from church or ſtate. They have eaſy conſciences, that can comply with every thing, right or wrong, that is impoſed upon them, whether by civil or eccleſiaſtical authority. They can ſell truth, to buy peace, and ſo they live at eaſe; and yet they are the moſt miſerable, becauſe they are left and forſaken of God, and are not the children of the promiſe, to whom God hath ſpoken peace; but the heirs of the threatening, againſt whom God hath denounced judgment, to whom he hath ſpoken wrath; yea, and ſworn in wrath, that they ſhall not enter into his reſt: for there is no peace, ſaith my God, to the wicked. And whatever temptations the people of God may be under to fret or grieve at their proſperity; yet, whenever the believer goes to the ſanctuary, then will he ſee their end, and how they are ſet but in ſlippery places, and ſuddenly caſt down into deſtruction.

3. Hence ſee, that the ground of faith ſtands immutable amidſt all changes. The moſt dark and diſmal days cannot hinder the accompliſhment of the divine promiſe; neither need any dark providence, or heavy diſpenſation, hinder the exerciſe of faith, and the life of faith in the divine promiſe. Nay, theſe croſs providences may rather further the life of faith, than hinder it: for, faith is never properly exerciſed; but upon the ſuppoſition of dark providences, croſſing and ſeeming to oppoſe the accompliſhment of the promiſe: becauſe, in ſuch a caſe, the ſoul hath nothing to do but to believe; nothing to look to but the promiſe; nothing to confide in but a promiſing God, and this is downright and honeſt believing; like that which our Lord Jeſus called the ruler of the ſynogogue unto, when news came that his child was dead, Fear not, only believe, Mark v. 36.; for then it is time for God to ſhew himſelf. Faith hath a But that can ſtand out againſt all the arrows of croſs providence that are ſhot againſt it; Thou, O God, ſhalt bring them down into the pit of deſtruction: bloody and deceitful men ſhall not live half their days; BUT I will truſt in thee, Pſal. lv. 23. He had been ſpeaking of many hard things in his way, ſuch as his being pained, becauſe of the voice of the enemy, and the oppreſſion of the wicked, ver. 3. How they caſt iniquity upon him, and in wrath hated him; yea, but I will truſt in thee. As God will accompliſh his promiſe notwithſtanding all the Buts that are in the way; ſo there is ground for faith to truſt confidently, becauſe God hath ſpoken; therefore no matter, though men and devils really, and dark promiſes ſeemingly, ſpeak to the contrary.

4. Hence ſee who are the greateſt bleſſings to a church or nation. Surely theſe to whom God hath ſaid, that he will not leave them. God hath not altogether left the church or the land where any ſuch are in it: but if they were gone, then God is gone alſo; and Wo to them when I depart from them, ſaith the Lord. Some are fond to have God's people perſecuted, and his ſaints baniſhed out of their coaſts: they cannot bear their faithfulneſs and honeſty, they are a torment to them; but yet what ſhould become of a church or land if God's faithful remnant were gone: his preſence would go with them, and none would remain behind to whom God hath ſaid, I will not leave them. Then would that church be left of God, and wo would be to them. May we not ſay with the prophet, Iſa. i. 9. Except the Lord had left us a very ſmall remnant, we had been as Sodom, we had been like unto Gomorrah? Surely when a church begins to caſt out the faithful from among them, then they begin to deſtroy themſelves, and to bring down wo upon their own heads.

5. Hence ſee, where lies the ſafety of God's children, when they are caſt out by their friends and brethren, as Jacob was in a manner caſt out at all hands; he was the object of his friend Laban's envy, and his brother Eſau's ſpite and rage, which occaſioned his being caſt out of his Father's family, and the country of his kindred for twenty years. Well, but where was his ſafety? Why, when all other comforts left him, God ſaid, I will not leave thee till I have done what I have promiſed. God's promiſe was his inheritance, and God's preſence was his guard, amidſt all frowning providences: and ſo it is, and will be, with all the true ſpiritual ſeed of Jacob. Whoever leaves them, God will not leave them; whatever men ſpeak reproachfully againſt them, yet God ſpeaks comfortably to them: yea, and whatever men do againſt them, God will do for them, and do all that he hath ſpoken to them of.

6. Hence ſee the different ſtate of the church viſible from the church inviſible upon earth; or the difference between the true and faithful children of God, and any particular viſible church. Why, all true believers have this promiſe ſecured in their perſons, that God will never leave them till he hath accompliſhed all his promiſes of grace and mercy to them. He hath ſaid, I will never leave thee nor forſake thee; but it cannot be ſaid of any particular viſible church, that God will never leave them. God hath left many particular churches, and called them, LO-AMMI, ſaying, Ye are not my people, and I will not be your God, Hoſ. i. 9. And how far he may leave the church of Scotland, who can tell? The glory ſometimes departs from the threſhold to the mountains; and God ſeems to be making fearful removes from the preſent generation. I would not love to give any juſt offence, offence, nay, nor to grate the ears of any hearers with reflections upon any that are but poor, mortal, ſinful men, like ourſelves, ſubject to the like paſſions, and clothed with the like infirmities: but I would deſire to keep mine eyes on a higher hand than any ſinful inſtruments of the church's miſery and confuſion. They could do nothing if God were not provoked by our ſins to leave them to themſelves, and to their violent meaſures. Who gave Jacob to the ſpoil, and Iſrael to the robbers? Did not the Lord, he againſt whom we have ſinned? May we not ſay of the church of Scotland, Her rowers have brought her into great waters? Ezek. xxvii. 26. But it is our ſins that have provoked God to leave the rowers and managers, who could do nothing either againſt the ſacred office of miniſters, or the Chriſtian rights of people, except it were given from heaven, as Chriſt ſaid to Pilate, Thou couldeſt have no power againſt me, except it were given. As I love not to offend or grate any, as I ſaid, ſo I would not be chargeable with ſinful ſilence in ſuch a time, when God ſeems to be ſaying, Cry aloud, and ſpare not; tell the houſe of Iſrael their ſins. Wo would be to us, if we ſhould be afraid of man, that ſhall die; or the Son of man, that ſhall be as graſs, Iſa. li. 12. May we not conſider, as a matter of lamentation, how far God ſeems to have left the church of Scotland and her judicatories? I ſhall not aſſert, at this time, what I ſhall ſpeak by way of ſuppoſition, and leave it to every one to judge whether it be matter of lamentation before God in caſe the ſuppoſition ſhould be found a truth. And I ſhall ſpeak in the firſt perſon of the plural number, that I may take in myſelf as having a hand, as well as others, in provoking the Lord to leave us.

If God hath left us and our judicatories to make unſcriptural and unwarantable acts, denuding the Lord's people of their juſts rights and Chriſtian privileges; would it not be lamentable? If he hath left us ſo far as to make theſe acts terms of communion, ſo as none ſhall have communion with us that dare oppoſe theſe unwarranted proceedings.—Again, if he hath left us ſo far as to indulge Arians and Blaſphemers, and deal gently with theſe that are guilty of fundamental errors, and yet to proceed violently and furiouſly againſt ſome of the friends of truth, and to ſhew hardly ſo much regard for the ſupreme authority and dignity of the Son of God, as we ſhew for the ſupreme authority and dignity of our erring aſſemblies; if this were ſo, would it not be lamentable?—If God hath left us ſo far as to deſtroy ourſelves by ſacrificing a covenanted reformation and covenanted principles, together with the ſacred office of miniſters, and the ſpiritual rights of people, that would adhere thereto, and all unto what we call church authority and good order, which yet is but another name for church tyranny, and dreadful confuſion; would not this be very lamentable?—If God hath left us to caſt out of our boſom ſome that are, perhaps, the friends and favourites of heaven, and that, becauſe of their faithful teſtimony againſt the evils and defections of the day; would not this be lamentable, and evidence that God hath very far left us?*—Theſe and many other things I might ſuppoſe.

What is the world ſaying, but that our rowers have brought us into great waters? Ezek. xxvii. 26. What is this they are ſaying of the judicatories of the church of Scotland in our days? Are people ſaying, that God hath left us and our judicatories, ſo far as to make unſcriptural and unwarrantable acts, and impoſe ſinful terms of communion? &c. Are they ſaying, that Bethel is turned to Bethaven? That Philadelphia is turned to Laodicea? It would be good news if there were no truth in what the world are now ſaying of us. But if there be any truth in it, then ſurely God hath left us very far; and who knows how far he may yet remove? Better ſword, famine, and peſtilence among us than that God ſhould utterly leave us. But how far ſoever he may leave a viſible church, yet he will never leave his inviſible remnant: for to them he hath ſaid, I will not leave thee till I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of.

7. Hence ſee reaſon to try what ſide you are upon, whether you be a Jacob or an Eſau. They were both born of the ſame mother, and lay in the ſame womb, but the one was bleſſed and the other curſed. You may be of the ſame mother-church, yet born after the fleſh, and not after the Spirit. If you be the true ſeed of Jacob, then you will know ſomething of a Bethel-interview with God. Hath God ever brought you to a wilderneſs, and there met with you, and ſpoke comfortably to you? Have you ever ſeen the glory of God in Chriſt as a ladder to heaven, The way, the truth, and the life, ſo as you were made to cloſe with him, and aſcend up to God by this ladder? For, by him we believe in God, who raiſed him from the dead, and gave him glory, that our faith and hope might be in God. Have you heard God ſpeaking to you, and communicating his mind, or diſcovering himſelf as a promiſing God in words of grace to your humiliation, ſanctification, and conſolation? O man, woman, if all places be alike to you, ſo as you never met with God in a place that might be called BETHEL; and if all words of ſcripture be alike to you, ſo as you know no word on which he hath cauſed you to hope, you are yet a ſtranger to Iſrael: but if you can point at the place where the Lord God of the Hebrews met with you once a day, ſo as you can ſometimes look back upon it with pleaſure, ſaying, O! I thought it was a BETHEL, a houſe of God; and if you point at the word with which God opened your heart, as he did the heart of Lydia, and made it the porch both of holineſs and comfort, it is good. Did he make the word to you, as it was to Job, Better and more precious than your neceſſary food; and as it was to Jeremiah, The joy and rejoicing of your heart; and as it was to David, Sweeter than the honey, or the honeycomb, and the very ground on which he hath cauſed you to hope? and are you from that time to this ſtill hoping in his word, when the Lord reſtores your ſoul out of its ſleepy fit? Why, then, it ſeems you are a child of promiſe, to whom God hath ſaid, I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of.

8. Hence ſee the duty of all who hear me, both unbelievers and believers.

[1.] Ye that are unbelievers, and know not the God of Bethel, but are ſtrangers to the covenant of promiſe, living without God and without hope in the world; living in the luſts of the fleſh; poor, wretched, worldly creature, drunkard, whoremonger, Sabbath-breaker, or hypocrite, that may be comes to communions, but never had communion with God there, and never came out of Sodom to this day, that was never brought to a wilderneſs of fear and deſpair, and then to a Bethel of hope and comfort in God, as a promiſing God in Chriſt; I would tell you your duty in two words.

* That theſe particulars, ſuggeſted here only by way of ſuppoſition, are but too juſt, nay, poſitive facts, may be ſeen evinced above, p. 70, 149, 322, 454, 631, 648, 661, 670.

(1.) It is your duty to conſider the dangerous ſtate you are into. And I muſt tell you a terrible word for awakening your ſeared conſcience, if God would bleſs it for that end. As you have been hearing that God is bound, by his own promiſe, never to leave his children, till he doth that which he hath ſpoken to them of in the goſpel: ſo, on the other had, that ſame God is bound and obliged, by his threatening, if you remain in that ſtate, never to leave contending with you, until he hath done that which he hath ſpoken of in the law; that is, you are under the curſe of the law, and God is obliged to curſe you. He that is faithful to his promiſe, and will accompliſh it to all that flee in to Chriſt, is as faithful to his threatening, and will accompliſh it to all that remain out of Chriſt. What a trembling heart would you have, man, woman, if you were but in Paul's caſe, when more than forty men bound themſelves with an oath, that they would not eat or drink till they had killed him? If ſo many men were bound under oath to kill and deſtroy you, I ſuppoſe it would take ſleep from your eyes, and make you reſtleſs how to eſcape their fury; and yet their oath could relate but to a temporal life. But tremble and fear to think, that the great God is bound, by ſolemn oath, to damn and deſtroy you to all eternity, if you remain in that Chriſtleſs ſtate; He hath ſworn in his wrath, that you ſhall not enter into his reſt, Heb. iii. 11.

(2.) It is your duty to flee from this wrath to come, by fleeing to Bethel, to the God of Bethel, to a promiſing God in Chriſt. You will never go to heaven, if you go not to Bethel by the way; I mean, if you remain ſtrangers to Chriſt. Think not theſe are words of courſe that we are ſpeaking to you; for, as knowing the terrors of God, we perſuade you to flee out of Sodom, and away from the divine wrath: ſo, I hope, knowing the comforts of God, as the God of Bethel, we would perſuade you to come and ſee what is to be ſeen at Bethel, and to come and hear the voice of a promiſing God that is to be heard there. What we have heard and ſeen, may we not declare unto you, that there is ſuch a thing as Bethel-interviews with God? And wo to us who are miniſters, if we be preaching to you an abſolutely unknown God, an unknown Bethel, an unknown Jeſus! If we know neither the terrors nor comforts of God at any time, I think we would have no commiſſion to ſpeak any of them to you, my dear friends, whom I never expect to ſee all again in our preſent circumſtances, till we ſee Chriſt coming in the clouds of heaven. In the fear of God, and in the faith of our meeting together before his tribunal, I would tell you, that the great day's meeting we ſhall have, will be terrible to you; if before you leave this world, you know nothing of a Bethel-meeting with God, as a promiſing God in Chriſt.

Therefore, let me exhort you, in the laſt of the feaſt, and in the proſpect of the great day, to come to Chriſt, in whom all the promiſes are Yea and Amen, to the glory of God. Come to him, by owning that you cannot come of yourſelf. Come to him, by crying to him, that he would draw you. Come to him, by believing that you cannot believe as you ſhould. Come to him, by believing that you are curſed, wretched, and undone without him, and that you ſhall be bleſſed and happy in him. Come to him, by believing that you have no righteouſneſs but guilt, no ſtrength but weakneſs; and that in the Lord only you have righteouſneſs and ſtrength. Come to him, by believing that you have nothing, and that he hath all; and that you can do nothing, and he can do all for you. Come to him, by imploring him to be your Prophet, Prieſt, and King; your wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption. Come to him, not upon ſuch and ſuch terms and conditions, that you are ready to dream you muſt come up to; but come to him, by coming down to his terms; that is, to be willing to be ſaved by free grace. Come down, Zaccheus, for this day ſalvation is come to thy houſe: ſo, ſay I, come down, ſinner, from the tree of legal qualifications, and legal hopes, built upon your own naughty duties. Come down, for you cannot ſave yourſelf by all your climbing, nor bring ſalvation to yourſelf; but this day ſalvation is come to your houſe: ſalvation is come to you, becauſe you cannot come to it; ſalvation is come to your hand; ſalvation is come to your heart. The Saviour is knocking at the door of your heart, and calling you to come down, and take the free ſalvation that is come to you; Whoſoever will, let him come and take of the water of life freely. It may be this ſhall be the laſt communion you ſhall ſee in time, and the laſt communion-offer that ever you ſhall hear; or, if you be ſpared in time, it may be the laſt communion you ſhall have with peace in the church of Scotland; it may be ſo, and it may be otherwiſe; only we have had long forty years peace, and it is poſſible the preſent emergencies in this church may be the beginning of ſorrows: but whatever be a-coming, as death and judgment certainly is coming upon you ſpeedily, it is ſafeſt for you to come to Jeſus the Mediator of the new covenant; let not the laſt offer be ſlighted: Oh! let us not part with one another, till there be good ground to hope, we ſhall not part with Chriſt. Alas! I fear before this day eight days, yea, perhaps, before the cock crow twice, this offer of Chriſt will be forgotten, and out of your head. Some pitiful trifle in a world will take all out of your heart; but I here take your conſcience to witneſs, forget as you will, that this offer ſhall not be altogether in vain, though it ſhould be ſlighted; for, when the book of conſcience ſhall be opened at the great day, this ſhall be called to remembrance, that ſuch a day at Abbot's-hall, after a communion there, Chriſt and ſalvation, from ſin and wrath, came to you to be freely received, and yet you rejected it; and this will contribute to glorify the juſtice of God in condemning you, and make it evident to all the world, that he is clear when he judges.

Wo is me, if there be not ſo much as a deſire kindled in your heart after our glorious Lord! If you think eternal ſalvation worth your while, O ſinner, and this offer of it no contemptible thing, then I may adviſe you to ſet ſome little time time apart, after this occaſion is over, and betake yourſelf to ſome place, whether in the houſe or the field, where you may have a little retirement from the world, and there cry to God, that he may follow this offer and this occaſion, with power upon your heart for drawing you to the Lord and his way; while you are thus employed, who knows, but before you come from your knees, the place may become a BETHEL, a houſe of God, where you will ſee and know him as a promiſing God in Chriſt Jeſus; for, in this way ſome have had a meeting with him that they will never forget. O! be reſtleſs in waiting on him in the uſe of all appointed means, till he manifeſt himſelf to you ſavingly; for, when once he doth ſo, you may be ſure he will never leave you, till he hath perfected the good work according to his promiſe.

[2.] To you that are believers in Chriſt, and know what it is to have ſome Bethel-interviews with God, either at this occaſion, or formerly. Are you in this happy ſtate, and have God for your cloſe companion, who having begun to do you good, will not leave you, till he hath done all that he hath ſaid to you? Your duty is both to be joyful in your promiſing God, and fruitful in the work of faith.

(1.) In the faith of this promiſe, you ought to be joyful. Is it nothing to you, that God himſelf is your everlaſting companion, ſaying, I will not leave you? That he is a promiſing God to you, and hath condeſcended to ſpeak to you? That he is your agent, to do what he hath ſpoken? And that he hath bound himſelf never to leave you, until he hath done what he hath ſpoken? O! whatever dark days may come, it is your duty to be joyful in him: Though the earth ſhould be removed, and the mountains caſt into the midſt of the ſea; here is a river that makes glad the city of God; that makes glad the children of God: God is in the midſt of them; and hath ſaid, I will not leave you.

OBJECT. Alas! but may a child of God ſay, How can I take in this comfort, when I find the Lord hath left me? Though he ſaid once, I will never leave you, yet it may be a deluſion; for I feel the contrary in many ſad effects of his abſence.

O unbelieving believer, will you, with Thomas, never believe, till you feel! The ground of your faith is God's promiſe, and not your feeling. But, for ſatisfying the ſoul, that may be under a dark cloud of deſertion, ſaying, The Lord hath forſaken, and my God hath forgotten; ſin prevails, and God is out of ſight; I would have you to remark, That there are tokens of God's preſence with you, believer, even when you do not obſerve them, by reaſon of the clouds that are upon you: For example, whence is it that you are not ſwallowed up like a ſhip in a whirlpool; and that there is ſome ſecret grain of hope in the heart, even when your unbelief is ready to ſay, My hope is periſhed? Why, the reaſon is, he hath not altogether left you.—Whence is it that you are like the burning buſh, all in a flame many times, and yet not conſumed; burning, but not burnt; flaming, but not conſumed? You do not obſerve this; yet it is obſervable, that you are preſerved to this day, to this hour, amidſt the flames of temptation, and the floods of corruption: why? the matter is, he hath not yet left you.—Whence is it that you can never give over duties altogether; and, however the tempter prevail to ſlacken your hand, yet you cannot for your heart give up with all religious people, and with all religious duties, wherein you think communion with God may be had? Why, the reaſon of this is, he hath not altogether left you.—Whence is it that you do not break God's priſon, through utter deſpondency, and go away, and take your pleaſure with the reſt of the wicked world? Even when you are in the priſon of deſertion and unbelief, you dare not think of bidding farewel to God, or departing wickedly from him, or of bidding the Almighty depart from you; nay, is there not ſomething in your heart, even at your worſt, that ſays, O! if he would come! O! when will he come? This ſays, he hath not altogether left you.—Whence is it that you cannot agree with ſin? The more it prevails upon you, the more you abhor it, and abhor yourſelf for it, and dare not give way to it. Doth not this evidence there is ſome ſecret power and preſence of God with you, and that he hath not yet left you.—Whence is it that when you ſtray from your true reſting-place, you cannot reſt any where elſe, and can find no quiet in your mind, till you be back again? Poſſibly you fall a ſeeking reſt and peace in the creature, in the world, in recreations and diverſions, and perhaps in your duties, and yet there was ſomething in your heart, that ſaid, Oh! it is not here, it is not here; you find vanity written on all, till you return to your firſt Huſband.—Again, Whence is it, that at your worſt the leaſt word of news from him concerning his return, makes your heart leap within you for joy, as the babe in Elizabeth's womb, at the ſalutation of Mary, while the news of his return, and the hope of his coming again gives you a glad heart? Surely he is not far off; and even when you are moſt ſecure and ſtupid, moſt dead and dull, there is a ſecret wiſh at the bottom of your heart, O for ſuch a day again, wherein the candle of the Lord ſhined on me! O that it were with me as in months paſt!—Whence is it, that the outward ſhell of ordinances cannot content your heart, without the kernel of communion and fellowſhip with God? And that the dead letter of the word cannot pleaſe you, without the living Spirit accompanying it? Why, he hath not left you to be content with any thing without himſelf.—Whence is it, that the intereſt of Chriſt, is your intereſt, and that you cannot join with the defections of the day, nor ſide with the errors of the times, but ſtill deſire to be on Chriſt's ſide? Why cannot you turn with the tide of the times? Even becauſe the Lord hath not altogether left you.—In a word, Whence is it, that the leaſt diſcovery he makes of himſelf is joyfully welcome to you, when he, as it were, but ſoftly knocks, ſilently tirles at the door of your heart; My Beloved put in his hand by the hole of the door, and my bowels were moved for him? Song v. 4. When he ſeems to be on his way to you, you are ready to ſay as Laban to Abraham's ſervant, Gen. xxiv. 31. Come in thou bleſſed of the Lord.—Well, whence are all theſe things, but from this, that he is ſtill preſent, though you ſee him not, and that he hath never altogether left you, but is ſtill remembering his promiſe, I will not leave thee?

(2.) It is your duty to be fruitful in the work of faith. O believer! give glory to God, by believing that he will not leave you, till he hath done that which he hath ſpoken to you of. Dark and cloudy days, that may follow upon Bethel-interviews terviews cannot hinder God's doing what he hath ſpoken; and therefore, let it not hinder your believing that he will do what he hath ſpoken to you of. Hath he ſpoken to you of pardoning your ſins? And hath he ſpoken to you of ſubduing your corruptions? Hath he ſpoken of ſupplying all your wants? Hath he ſpoken to you of bearing all your burdens? Hath he ſpoken to you of healing your diſeaſes? Hath he ſpoken to you of your proviſion and through-bearing in the world? Hath he ſpoken to you of your protection in time of danger? Hath he ſpoken to you of ſatisfying your deſire? Hath he ſpoken to you of guiding you by his counſel, and bringing you to his glory? Hath he ſpoken to you of your trials, that he will ſupport and uphold with the right-hand of his righteouſneſs? Hath he ſpoken to you of your ſeed, that he will be your God, and the God of your ſeed? Hath he ſpoken to you of your death, that death ſhall be ſwallowed up in victory? Hath he ſpoken to you of eternal life, that you ſhall be for ever with him? Hath he ſpoken to you of his love, that he hath loved you with an everlaſting love? Hath he ſpoken to you of his Spirit, that his Spirit ſhall be in you as a well of water, ſpringing up unto everlaſting life? Hath he ſpoken to you of his bleſſing, that he hath bleſſed you, and ye ſhall be bleſſed, and that in bleſſing he will bleſs you? Hath he ſpoken to you of his preſence, that he will never leave you nor forſake you, that he will be with you in trouble? Hath he ſpoken to you of his care about you, that he will make all things work together for your good? Hath he ſpoken to you of his abſence, that he will return, that he will ſee you again, and your heart ſhall rejoice? Hath he ſpoken to you of his anger, that it endureth but a moment, and that with everlaſting kindneſs he will have mercy on you. —— Whatever he hath ſpoken, O give him the glory of his truth, by believing that whatever he ſeems to be doing by outward frowning providences, yet he will never leave you, till he hath done what he hath ſpoken to you of. It is your duty to keep your eye ſhut upon dark providences, and to keep your eye open upon the clear promiſe?

Has he ſaid, he will not leave you, till he hath done what he hath ſaid? Then wait upon him in the due uſe and improvement of all means, till he do his work, and do not leave him. Return his promiſe by your practice, ſaying, Lord, haſt thou ſaid, I will not leave thee, until I have done what I have ſpoken? Behold, through grace, I reſolve I will not leave thee, until thou haſt done what thou haſt ſpoken: He is a God of judgment, and bleſſed are all they that wait for him. Hath he ſaid, and promiſed to this effect? Then, O put a favourable conſtruction upon all his frowning diſpenſations! According to your faith of his promiſe, and of his favour therein, ſuch will be your faith of his favour amidſt all afflicting providences. Whatever diſtreſs and difficulty you meet with; yet let faith ſtill ſay, for all this, I hope he will do as he hath ſpoken: for all this, I will not quit my hold of him, but hope in his word.

O believer! remember that whatever God hath ſaid to thee, he hath ſaid it with a ſurely, as he ſaid to Jacob, Gen. xxxii. 12, I will SURELY do thee good. And when Jacob came to a ſtrait, he put God in mind of it, Thou didſt ſay, I will ſurely do thee good; and therefore let your faith be acted with a ſurely, grounded upon the truth and veracity of God, ſaying with David, Pſal. xxiii. 6. SURELY goodneſs and mercy ſhall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the houſe of the Lord for ever. We live by faith and not by ſight; and therefore, though dark days ſhould come, you ought to believe when you cannot ſee, And bleſſed is ſhe that believed, for there ſhall be a performance of theſe things which were told her from the Lord, Luke i. 45. The word of the Lord endureth for ever, Pſal. xix. 9.

Let the faith of the promiſe appear in your ſanctification, holineſs of heart, ſpeech, and behaviour. Having theſe promiſes, dearly beloved, let us cleanſe ourſelves from all filthineſs of the fleſh and ſpirit, perfecting holineſs in the fear of God, 2 Cor. vii. 1. Let it be evident to all the world you converſe with, that now you are clean, through the words that he hath ſpoken to you. He that hath this faith and hope, purifieth himſelf; for faith brings all its purity out of Chriſt; or, which is all one, out of the promiſe, which is Yea and Amen in Chriſt. The faith of God's love will work by love to a holy God, and his holy ways: therefore, O believer! let your life be a life of faith; and reſolve, through grace, to live and die in the faith of his love, which he himſelf expreſſeth in this promiſe, I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of.

SERMON LXIII.

The Combination and Conjunction of JOYS; or, the joyful Approach of the SAVIOUR, chearfully welcomed by the Church's Echo of Faith *.

PSAL. xl. 7. — Lo, I come! — SONG ii. 8. The voice of my Beloved! Behold, he cometh!

WE have a communion-ſolemnity in view: but if the queſtion be propoſed, How ſhall we have communion with God at this occaſion? Two things are neceſſary to it. 1. His coming to us graciouſly: there is no communion with him to be expected, unleſs he come: ſo he ſaith in the firſt text here, Lo, I come. 2. Our apprehending his approach, and giving him

* This Sermon was preached on Saturday the 27th of April 1734. being the preparation-day before the celebration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper at Abernethy, upon the 28th. Never before publiſhed.

welcome

welcome entertainment, upon his coming: then, and not till then, have we communion with God, when we hear his voice, and see him, as it were, on the tops of the mountains, and say, The voice of my Beloved! behold, he cometh!

In the words complexly viewed, we have two things more generally. 1. Here is intimation given to the church, by the Lord Jesus; Lo, I come! 2. Here is notice taken by the church; Behold, he cometh! Here is the joyful voice of the Son of God; Lo, I come! And here is the joyful echo of the church; The voice of my Beloved! behold, he cometh! Mark the frame HE is in when he speaks of his coming; it is a joyful frame; Lo, I come! I delight to do thy will, O my God. And observe the frame SHE is in, upon the intimation of his coming; it is a joyful frame: Behold, he cometh! He speaks with a joyful Lo; Lo, I come: and she speaks with a joyful behold; Behold, he cometh!

These two words being all the subject I propose to speak of, at the time, I shall refer the further explication of them to the prosecution of this doctrinal observation.

DOCT. That Christ's coming to his people graciously, in their time of need, is a joyful and delectable coming, both to him and them.

The time wherein CHRIST said here; Lo, I come! was a time of great need, even when sacrifice and offering would not; when there was no hope of salvation from any other quarter, unless he himself had undertaken it: then said he, Lo, I come!—The time wherein the CHURCH here said, Behold, he cometh! was a time of great and felt need; for the Lord had withdrawn himself behind mountains of sin and guilt, till he paid a new visit, that made her cry out with joy, Behold, he cometh!

That Christ's gracious coming to his people, is joyful both to him and them, will appear in the sequel; only it is enough here to demonstrate it, that as HE is a joyful proclaimer of his own approach, saying, Lo, I come! So SHE is the joyful beholder thereof, saying, Behold, he cometh!

The method I would here endeavour to observe, as the Lord shall be pleased to assist, shall be the following.

I. To observe what comings of Christ to his people are joyful to him and them.
II. Show what makes his coming joyful to him.
III. What makes his coming joyful to them.
IV. What expressions of joy in him are imported in his, Lo, I come!
V. What expressions of joy in them are imported in their behold; BEHOLD, he cometh!
VI. Show whence is this combination and conjunction of joys; or, why it is that, like a resounding echo, his Lo, I come, is answered, with a Behold, he cometh.
VII. Deduce some inferences for the application of the whole.

I. The first thing proposed was, To observe what comings of Christ to his people are joyful to him and them. Here I shall mention only four comings of the Lord Jesus, namely, his coming in the flesh; his coming in the clouds; his coming in the word; and his coming in the Spirit.

1. His coming in the flesh was a joyful coming both to him and his people. The first text here is particularly applied to his coming in the flesh, Heb. x. 5, 7. Sacrifice and offering thou wouldst not, a body hast thou prepared me; then said I, Lo, I come, (in the volume of thy book it is written of me) to do thy will, O God. Which shows also, that this was a joyful and delightful coming, though it was upon that errand of being a sacrifice to divine justice for our sins, when no other sacrifice would do the business. And surely this coming of Christ is a joyful coming to his people, and brings ground of joy unto all people; Behold, said the angels to the shepherds upon Christ's coming in the flesh, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people; for to you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord, Luke ii. 10. And it is probable, as many divines show, that these words of the spouse here, saying, Behold, he cometh! hath a particular reference to Christ's coming in the flesh. The Old-testament saints saw his day afar off, and rejoiced in the view they had of it by faith. They saw him coming skipping in the dark mountains of shadows, and ceremonies, and typical sacrifices, to be the substance of all the shadows. In a word, his coming in the flesh is the very root and foundation of the joys of all the redeemed: if he had not thus come, according to the promise, they would never had any ground of joy; but faith's view of this coming, or of God in our nature, God incarnate, God made manifest in the flesh, is a fountain-head of joy; God being in Christ reconciling the world to himself; being bone of our bone, and flesh of our flesh; and we having access to God through him, who became like unto us in all things, except sin. O Sirs, do you believe that there is a man in heaven called IMMANUEL, God-man? We read of joy and peace in believing: surely you never believed there was such a man, God in our flesh, if it never afforded any joyful thought to you.

2. His coming in the clouds is a joyful coming, both to him and his people: this is what is called his second coming, Heb. ix. 28. To them that look for him, he will appear the second time, without sin unto salvation. And, indeed, this will be a joyful coming to Christ; for it is a coming to salvation: when he comes to save, he comes always joyfully. When he came first to save, by the price of his blood, he came leaping and skipping joyfully; and much more when he will come to finish the work of salvation, and to perfect the salvation of all the redeemed. His coming to marry his people is joyful to him, much more when he comes to consummate the marriage. Christ had an eye to this in his coming to suffer: He endured the cross, and despised the shame, for the joy that was set before him, Heb. xii. 2. even to the joy of an exalted state: and, you know, that the last step of his exaltation is his coming to judge the world at the the last day; then he will be glorified in his saints, and admired in all them that believe.—And as it is a joyful coming to him, so it is to his people. It is true, it will be terrible to his enemies that slighted his coming to save, and neglected the great salvation; for, He will come in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel, 2 Thess. i. 8. His second coming will be dreadful to them that do not welcome his first coming: and, Behold he cometh in the clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also that pierced him, and all nations shall wail because of him, Rev. i. 7. But to his people, to his followers, lowers and ſervants, to all that welcome him now, his coming is joyful; they will welcome him with joy, ſaying, Even ſo, Come, Lord Jeſus. They long for his coming; and they are called to lift up their heads with joy, becauſe the day of their redemption draweth nigh. They cry to him to haſten his coming, Haſte, my Beloved, and be thou like a roe or young hart on the mountains of Bether. No wonder, for then they enter into the joy of their Lord. Chriſt, who here ſays, Lo, I come! will as certainly come the ſecond time, as he came the firſt; and as he came the firſt time, in order to his coming the ſecond; ſo he ſpeaks of his ſecond coming with a behold; Behold! I come quickly, Rev. xxii. 20. And the church's joyful echo follows, Even ſo, Come, Lord Jeſus, come quickly.

3. His coming in the word, to court a people for himſelf, is a joyful coming to him and to his people; for then, as it is, Rev. xxii. 17. Both the Spirit and the bride ſay, Come. The Spirit of Chriſt, and the bride of Chriſt, joyfully invite ſinners to come to Chriſt: hence a goſpel day is called the day of the Son of man. And Chriſt, in the goſpel diſpenſation, ſays, Lo, I come! He comes riding in the goſpel chariot; he comes with out-ſtretched arms, ſaying, Behold me! behold me! — And his coming thus is joyful to all his people, Rom. x. 15. How beautiful on the mountains are the feet of them that preach the goſpel of peace; that bring glad tiding of good things! His coming in the word is joyful to them, in ſo much, that nothing in the world is ſo precious to them as the word; it is ſweeter than honey and the honey comb. Thy word was found of me, and I did eat it, and it was to me the joy and rejoicing of my heart: this is their food; Man lives not by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. This is their comfort in their affliction. His word quickens them; they hear his voice therein, and ſay, It is the voice of my Beloved! behold, he cometh! leaping on the mountains, ſkipping on the hills. But his coming in the word is only joyful and beneficial, as it is attended with what follows, namely, his coming in the Spirit: for,

4. His coming in the Spirit is a joyful coming; and this is that which makes all the former ways of his coming to be joyful. We have no joyful view of his coming in the fleſh, nor joyful hope of his coming in the clouds, nor joyful apprehenſion of his coming in the word, unleſs we have ſome ſhare of his coming in the Spirit, as a Spirit of faith and conſolation: his coming in the Spirit not only to court, but to win the heart; not only to deal, but to prevail with ſinners, by his convincing and converting power.—This coming is joyful to him; for, it is a day of the gladneſs of his heart; Song iii. 11. Go forth, O ye daughters of Zion, and behold king Solomon, with the crown wherewith his mother crowned him, in the day of his eſpouſals, in the day of the gladneſs of his heart: for then he ſees the travel of his ſoul and is ſatisfied, Iſa. liii. 11. And, O this ſhould encourage us to pray for the Spirit, the promiſed Comforter, ſince nothing gladens the heart of Chriſt more than the giving of the Spirit to convince of ſin, righteouſneſs, and judgment, and ſo to comfort his people.—And, on the other hand, this coming of Chriſt in the Spirit, cannot but be a joyful coming to his people; for then they are anointed with the oil of gladneſs, and get the oil of joy for mourning, and the garments of praiſe for the ſpirit of heavineſs. Then they get their bands looſed; their maladies healed; their doubts reſolved; their fears diſpelled, &c. When Chriſt ſays here, Lo, I come! let us view therein the promiſe of his coming in the Spirit: for, why did he come in the fleſh, but that he might come in the Spirit? Having come in the fleſh, and finiſhed his work, according to his word; he promiſes the Spirit, and ſends the Spirit; He ſhall glorify me, John xvi. 14. When the Comforter is come, whom I will ſend to you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, he ſhall teſtify of me, John xv. 26. His coming in the fleſh was the great Old Teſtament promiſe; and his coming in the Spirit the great New-Teſtament promiſe: and as the Old-Teſtament was but a porch to the New; ſo his coming in the fleſh was to pave the way for his coming in the Spirit; therefore, when you hear him ſay, Lo, I come! take up the meaning of it not only to be, Lo, I come in the fleſh; but alſo, Lo, I come in the Spirit. And, O Sirs, is this his voice! What ſay you to it? Is there any joyful echo in your heart welcoming him; ſaying, The voice of my Beloved! behold, he cometh! Surely if he comes in the Spirit to you, at this occaſion, it will be a joyful coming. —— I might here ſpeak of his coming in his providence; his coming at death: his coming firſt to begin, and his after coming to advance his work; but his joyful comings are only ſo by his coming in the Spirit. I go on,

II. To the next thing propoſed, which was to ſhow, what makes his coming joyful to HIM. And what makes him come with a joyful, Lo, I come! Why,

1. He rejoiced from eternity in the thoughts of his coming; and therefore cannot but rejoice in the accompliſhment of his word and deſign, Prov. viii. 23, 31. Ere ever the earth was, he rejoiced in the habitable parts of the earth, and his delights were with the ſons of men. It was in the council of peace he ſaid to his Father, Lo, I come! I delight to do thy will; and in the fulneſs of time he ſays in our hearing, Lo, I come! O to give a joyful welcome to that joyful Lo!

2. His coming is joyful to him; becauſe he comes clothed with a commiſſion from his Father; and he rejoices to run his errands. It is his Father's will that he executes when he comes; and therefore he ſays, I delight to do thy will, O my God. This commandment have I received of my Father, to lay down my life for my ſheep. And therefore, with deſire he deſired this paſſover, even to be himſelf our paſſover ſacrificed for us. He hath a commiſſion to come; for he is the Sent and the ſealed of God; God ſo loved the world, that he ſent his only begotten Son; that whoſoever believeth in him, ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life. Him hath God the Father ſealed. He comes in his Father's name, and his Father's ſeal appended to his commiſſion.

3. His coming is joyful to him, becauſe it is on a glorious deſign of glorifying the Father; and therefore, when he comes he ſays, Now, is my Father glorified; now is the Son of man glorified, and God is glorified in him, John xiii. 31. When he came, and was juſt ready to lay down his life, and having done his work, he ſaid, John xvii. 4. I have glorified thee on earth, I have finiſhed the work thou gaveſt me to do. He brought in glory and honour to all the perfections of God, and full reparation to all his injured attributes.

4. His coming is joyful to him, becauſe, as his his coming was on a glorious design, with reference to his Father, God being glorified by his coming, whether in the flesh or by the Spirit; so it is on a loving design toward his people, to whom he comes. He comes to save them, and justify them, and sanctify them, and comfort them, and heal them, and help them; and all for love, because he has loved with an everlasting love, therefore he comes to draw with loving-kindness. Love makes him come joyfully: it was love made him come joyfully in the flesh, and love makes him come joyfully in the Spirit; love made him come at first, and, notwithstanding many provocations, love makes him come again, according to his word, I will see you again, John xvi. 22. Now you have sorrow, but I will see you again, and your hearts shall rejoice. O the height, and depth, and length, and breadth of his love! He comes joyfully, because he lives cordially. But I go on,

III. To the next thing proposed, namely, what makes his coming joyful to his people, what makes them welcome him with a joyful behold, BEHOLD, he cometh! Why,

1. Because his coming is their life: when he came in the flesh, He came to give life, and to give it more abundantly, John x. 10. And when he comes in the Spirit, he comes to give life, to give the well of water springing up to everlasting life, John iv. 14. Whenever he comes, life enters the dead and dry bones. We are like dead carcases, our spirits sinking within us; but whenever the Spirit of life comes in the word, then we get up, as it were, to our feet; then we have life; He that hath the Son, hath life: whenever he comes, and that we have him with us, then the life of faith, the life of repentance, the life of love, the life of joy, the life of humility, the life of holiness, and the life of comfort come: we live or die as he comes or goes. If life be sweet, then his coming must be sweet; and of all lives the life of God, a spiritual life, hid with Christ in God, is the most pleasant and glorious.

2. His coming must be joyful to them, because his absence is their death; yea, his absence is a hell to them that know what a heaven his presence makes: hence their many Ohs when he is away; Oh! when will thou come unto me? Oh! that it were with me as in months past! And hence their many how longs, when he is away; HOW LONG wilt thou forget me, O Lord? HOW LONG will thou hide thy face from me? Psal. xiii. 1, 2. They cannot live without him; or if his absence be to such a degree, as that they are careless, stupid, and unconcerned, yet they that know what his joyful presence is, will grant, that their careless times are their sad and sighing times; they are not their joyful times; they are not their life, but their death. and they never expect to have a joyful life till he come again.

When he is away from the church, then all goes to confusion: The servants of the house begin to smite their fellow servants, Matth. xxiv 46. Why, because the Lord delays his coming: they begin to smite them with sentences of suspension, or seclusion, as at this day*: when he is away, then the shepherds begin to rule his people with force and violence, Ezek. xxxiv. 4. And what is the effect of that? See ver. 6. My sheep wandered over all the mountains: my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search, or seek after them. Why, might not this smite the hearts of rigid rulers, to see the flock scattered here and there, upon the violent obtrusions of hirelings upon them†? No; none did search out, or seek after them. They even slight them as an ignorant mob, a rabble, that need not to be regarded, [and, indeed, if matters go on at this rate, if God do not stir up the insuing Assembly, (viz. 1734.) to take course with these disorders, the ruin of the church of Scotland is but beginning.] But whence are all these confusions? May we not say, as it is, Duet. xxxi. 17. Are not these evils come upon us, because our God is not amongst us? When he is away from a church, nothing but confusion and disorders take place; but when he comes back, then his work is revived, Zion is built up, reformation restored. When he goes away from a particular believer, Oh! what a hell of confusion till he returns! His presence gives rest, but his absence trouble; Thou didst hide thy face, and I was troubled.

3. His coming is joyful to them, because the errand on which he came is merciful. What does he bring when he comes? Why, he even brings God with him, and all the fulness of God: and so he brings the chief good with him. God is in Christ, and all the fulness of the Godhead in him; and therefore, when he comes, all good comes: when he comes graciously, he comes in the capacity of a friend, to help; a physician, to heal; a shepherd, to feed; He feedeth among the lilies. When he comes, his presence is a reviving and refreshing presence; an enlightening, inlivening, and enlarging presence; sometimes a confirming and comforting presence; a humbling and a sweetly-debasing presence; yea, it is an exalting and dignifying presence. The effects of his coming are most joyful; for, when he comes to his people, then their sins are pardoned, their wants supplied, their enemies conquered, their crosses sanctified, their kingdom secured; and therefore his coming must be joyful to them.

4. His coming is joyful to them, because his coming is all their heaven upon earth; yea, his presence is the heaven of heavens. What is heaven, but a being like him, by seeing him as he is? Now, this heaven is begun on earth when he comes; for then they behold his glory, and are changed into the same image, 2 Cor. iii. 18. How can they be but joyful at his coming when they consider who he is: he is enough to make a heaven whatever way they look to him: if they look to him absolutely, He is altogether lovely; the brightness of his Father's glory. When they look to him comparatively, He is fairer than the sons of men; more glorious than all the mountains of prey. When they look to him relatively, he is their Head and Husband; their God and Guide; their righteousness and strength; their light, life, joy, and all. O says the strong believer, My beloved is mine, and I am his: he is mine, and I will not part with him for the whole creation. O says the weak believer, the doubting believer, O if he were mine, I would not part with him for a thousand worlds. In a word, he is such a heaven to them that nothing can make up

* A short account of what is here alluded to, may be seen above, p. 661.

† That the Lord's heritage was grievously oppressed at this time, may be seen laid open, p. 631, 648, 670.

the

the loss of his presence: ministers cannot do it; ordinances cannot do it; angels cannot do it. Ordinances are but the shell, without the kernel, when Christ is not in them; all creature-comforts cannot supply his room. Naturalists say, The loadstone cannot draw in presence of the diamond; surely, when Christ is present with a soul, all the pomp and pride, all the gallantry of the world, will have no influence on the soul. Offer the believer mountains of gold and silver instead of Christ, Get thee behind me, Satan, will be his answer: Thy money perish with thee, that lays it in balance with the Son of God. Offer me something better than Christ, then you will see what I will do.—There are so many thousand excellencies in Christ, that might be so many thousand reasons why his coming is joyful, that they cannot but say upon the notice of it, Behold, he cometh!

IV. The fourth thing proposed was, What expressions of joy in the Lord Jesus is imported in this, Lo, I come! What sort of joy does it express?

1. I think this, Lo, I come! expresses present joy: Lo, I come! It is something like that of John xiii. 32. Now is the Son of man glorified: there was a time when he said, Now is my soul troubled, and what shall I say? John xii. 27. But when he comes graciously, he says upon the matter, Now is my soul satisfied, now is my heart glad; the Lo, is in the present time, and I come is in the present tense; Lo, I come! And if Christ be presently saying with reference to any company here, Lo, I come to you! O it is a present joy to him; he comes rejoicing; he comes leaping and skipping; his set time of coming is the time of the gladness of his heart.

2. It expresses active joy; Lo, I come! He rejoices to do good: it is his joy to do service to his Father and his friends. And if he rejoiced in his work when he came to save by the price of his blood; how must he rejoice when he comes to save by the power of his Spirit? The natural sun is said to rejoice as a strong man to run his race, Psal. xix. 5. It is a metaphorical speech; for, the sun is not capable of joy; but, without metaphor, it is true of the Sun of righteousness, the Lord Jesus Christ; he is a strong man, the man of God's right-hand, whom he hath made strong for himself: and he rejoices to run his race; he rejoices to arise with healing under his wings: Lo, I come!—It is an active joy.

3. It expresses certain joy. The Lo, is a note of certainty; the thing is certain and true; Lo, I come! And his joy is certain; certain, true, solid joy. There is nothing more certain than that believers have sometimes joy unspeakable; but these are only streams that flow from the joy that is in Christ's heart. His joy is the fountain of their joy; He is anointed with the oil of joy above his fellows: and the fellowship they have with him is by some drops of that oil of joy. Can they be certain of the streams and the drops when these are allowed? How much more is it certain, that all true joy centres in him. Believers have sometimes a fulness of joy; but their fulness is the fulness of the streams, or of the vessel; but his fulness is the fulness of the ocean. If it be certain, there is a stream of joy in the believer sometimes, much more that there is the spring of joy in Christ.

4. It expresses communicative joy; designing his people should share of his joy, Lo, I come! The joy that Christ has, as Mediator, is a fulness of joy, designed for his peoples use, that out of his fulness we may receive, and grace for grace, and joy for joy; grace answering grace in Jesus; and joy answering joy in him. Yea, Christ, as Mediator, is anointed with the oil of joy, the Spirit above measure, that he may communicate this joy, and give to them the oil of joy for mourning, Isa. lxi. 3. The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, for he hath anointed me to preach good tidings to the meek; to comfort all that mourn; to give them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. Christ has a commission from his Father to communicate his joy; and therefore it must be communicative.

5. It expresses triumphant joy, conquering joy; Lo, I come! And nothing shall hinder my coming, nor stop me in my course. Mountains nor hills cannot hinder the sun rising; this points out his coming as a conquerer, notwithstanding principalities and powers in his way, he can easily throw them down; Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? This that is glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of his strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save, Isa. lxiii. 1. Behold it is I: Lo, I come!

6. It expresses solemn joy. He comes with a solemnity, Lo, I come! according to the council of a glorious Trinity. Now, when the purpose of heaven is come to the birth, and the decree breaks forth, and the fulness of time is come, he takes heaven and earth witness, as it were, to his solemn march on the errand: he says it with a loud Lo! that all the world of men and angels may notice, Lo, I come! And, indeed, all the elect angels break forth into joyful songs of praise at this solemnity: when he came in the flesh, they sang, Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth, and good-will towards men. And when he comes in the Spirit to convert a soul, there is joy in heaven over the soul that repents. —It is solemn joy.

7. It expresses infinite joy. If we consider who the person is that speaks, namely, GOD, assuming our nature in the person of his eternal Son. The joy of an infinite God must be infinite joy. Finite creatures cannot tell what infinite joy is; nay, the joy of saints is joy unspeakable and full of glory; what then must be the joy of the King of saints? It is infinitely above speech and expression, infinitely glorious. The joy of saints is unspeakably great; the joy of the man Christ, of the human nature, is unspeakably greater; but the joy of God, of God in our nature, is infinitely great above all finite apprehension. Finite thoughts are lost in this infinite depth.

8. It expresses everlasting joy, and eternal joy: joy from everlasting, before time; and to everlasting, after time. It is true, the Lo, I come! as I said first, imports present joy, with respect to our view of it, but with respect to God, nothing being past or future, but all things eternally present to him, this Lo expresses the everlasting joy he had, and will have for ever in this work now transacted in time. It is said, Psal. civ. 31. The glory of the Lord shall endure for ever. The Lord shall rejoice in his work; the Lord Jehovah shall rejoice in all his works together, (as we have it in the metre.) Why? his glory is everlasting glory, his joy everlasting joy in all his works; especially in that work wherein all his glory shines ſhines moſt brightly, his ſaving work, of which he is here ſpeaking, when he ſays, Lo, I come! —Thus you ſee what ſort of joy is expreſſed in this, Lo, I come!

V. The fifth thing propoſed, What expreſſions of joy is imported in the echo from the church, The voice of my Beloved! behold, he cometh! What ſort of joy does this expreſs?

1. It expreſſes joy with ſurpriſe. O but his coming fills the believer with a ſweet ſurpriſe, like that, Or ever I was aware, Song vi. 12. How abruptly does the church here ſpeak, like one ſuddenly raviſhed! The voice of my beloved! behold, he cometh!

2. It expreſſes joy with wonder and admiration: Behold, he cometh! Wonder, O heavens and earth, that he ſhould come to the like of me! And wonder that he ſhould come back again, after I have heaped up mountains and hills of provocation in his way. Is this the manner of man, O Lord? and what can David ſay more? What can I ſay, but ſit down and wonder!

3. It expreſſes joy with faith; Behold, he cometh! The eye of faith firſt ſees him coming, and then the tongue of joy ſings, Behold, he cometh! Faith cometh by hearing; what? even the voice of Chriſt, the joyful ſound of the goſpel. Chriſt rides in that chariot; and the believer, by faith, hearing the noice of his chariot wheels; yea, the ſweet voice of him that rides in the chariot, who has grace poured into his lips, then he cries out, The voice of my beloved! behold, he cometh!

4. It expreſſes joy with love. And, indeed, as faith is the head, ſo love is the heart of the new creature: and the joy here is a loving joy; for it is in the view of Chriſt as her Beloved, The voice of my Beloved! behold, he cometh! He is the Beloved of the Father, who ſays, This is my beloved Son; and the true believer is of the Father's mind, ſaying, This is my Beloved, this is my friend, O daughters of Jeruſalem. And what but joyful love, makes her here ſpeak, with her heart at her mouth, The voice of my Beloved!

5. It expreſſes joy with praiſe and adoration (as well as wonder and admiration;) The voice of my Beloved! behold, he cometh! O bleſſed be the comer, as it is, Pſal. cxviii. 26. Bleſſed is he that comes in the name of the Lord. It is a behold of adoration, as well as admiration; and, indeed, they both go together, an admiring heart, is an adoring heart: as the preſence of Chriſt makes a heaven in the heart; ſo it ſtirs up the heart inſtantly to the work of heaven, which is to ſing his praiſe, and to glorify his name, ſaying, O glory, glory, glory, to him for coming to the like of me, that was afraid he would never give me a viſit. O! let all the world praiſe him with me; Behold he cometh!

6. It expreſſes joy with humility; Behold, he cometh! and cometh even to me: What am I, and what is my father's houſe? Behold he cometh to me! I had no power to come to him, no heart to come, and I would have remained for ever at a diſtance from him, if he had not condeſcended graciouſly to come unto me: I could do nothing but depart from him by an evil heart of unbelief; but he comes; His own arm bringeth ſalvation: and he comes with all the ſalvation I need. Self is ſunk to nothing at the appearance of this glorious HE; Behold, HE cometh!

7. It expreſſes joy with contempt of the world: Behold, he cometh! and his appearing darkens all the glory of the world, and makes it diſappear, as the ſtars at the riſing of the ſun. I count all but loſs and dung, for the excellency of the knowledge of him. O how little does the believer think of the world, when Chriſt comes! (πάντα ζημίαν πάντα σκύβαλα,) all is dung and dog's meat, as the apoſtle phraſes it, Phil. iii. 8.; earthly crowns, kingdoms, thrones, and ſceptres are but little deſpicable toys. Here, here, is an object worth the beholding; let mine eyes be for ever turned away from beholding vanities: Behold, he cometh!

8. It expreſſes joy with deſire that others may ſee and behold him; Behold, he cometh! O that all the world would come and ſee what I ſee, come and enjoy what I enjoy! They that ſee the glory of Chriſt, though they ſlight a world of vanities, yet they pity a world of periſhing ſinners, and would gladly be inſtrumental in bringing others to Chriſt; Come, SEE A MAN that told me all things that ever I did; is not this the Chriſt? ſaid the woman of Samaria. Thus David, Reſtore to me the joy of thy ſalvation; then will I teach tranſgreſſors thy way, and ſinners ſhall be converted unto thee.

In a word, this, Behold, he cometh! expreſſes joy with all the qualities of heavenly and ſpiritual joy. —It expreſſes unſpeakable joy, as appears by her broken ſpeech, The voice of my Beloved! —It expreſſes glorious joy; for it flows, from a view of his glory, Behold, he cometh! —It expreſſes holy joy; for ſhe rejoices to ſee him come ſkipping and leaping upon the mountains and hills of ſin and guilt, and levelling all the high towers of ſtrong corruption in his way. O how glad to ſee him coming down, and making the mountains to melt before him! So it is a holy joy; the very oppoſite of all carnal and ſenſual joys. —It expreſſes a quickening and ſtrengthening joy; for now her heart is open, her lips are open, whatever indiſpoſition for duty took place before; now the joy of the Lord is her ſtrength. —Again, it expreſſes a ſolid and well-grounded joy; it is no fancy, no deluſion, nor enthuſiaſm; no: the word and Spirit both concur to this joy. The voice of my Beloved! there is the word: Behold he cometh! there is the Spirit. Words cannot give the believer joy without the Spirit; and the Spirit will not without the word: the joy of the Holy Ghoſt is ſtill grounded upon, or agreeable to the word. —Finally, it expreſſes a welcoming joy; Behold, he cometh! Lo, I come, ſays Chriſt; Behold, he cometh! ſays the church: Even ſo, come Lord Jeſus, come quickly: come and welcome with a thouſand good-wills. O may he be a welcome gueſt here!

VI. The ſixth thing propoſed was, To ſhow whence is this combination and conjunction of joys: Or, why is it, that, like a reſounding echo, his Lo, I come! is anſwered with a behold, he cometh! Whence is this? Why,

1. It proceeds from the mutual RELATION between him and his people, between him and his church: he is the Bridegroom; and ſhe is the bride; he is the Huſband, and ſhe is the ſpouſe. He has commanded other huſbands to leave father and mother, and to cleave to his wife; and he has done ſomething like that himſelf: he that ſaid, Thy Maker is thy Husband, left his Father's boſom for the ſake of his bride, ſaying, Lo, I come! and the conjugal tye being mutual, the believer having having the Spirit of his glorious Husband, whenever he hears the voice of an approaching Jesus, is obliged to say, The voice of my Beloved! behold, he cometh!

2. It proceeds from the mutual SYMPATHY between him and them: hence, what affects him, does affect them; what touches them, touches him; He that touches you, touches the apple of mine eye, says Christ: they stand kindly affected also to him. This mutual sympathy and love, flows from the union between Christ and them. He is the Head and they are the members of his body; and both Head and members being animated by one and the same Spirit, his joy must be their joy. When they come to have his glorious presence in heaven, they are said to enter into the joy of their Lord: and when they have his gracious presence on earth signified to them with a joyful Lo, I come! they have some begun enterance into his joy; that makes them say with joy, Behold, he cometh!

3. His gracious coming is joyful both to him and them, because of the mutual ONENESS of NATURE between him and them. As he is a partaker of their human nature; so they are partakers of his divine nature, 2 Pet. i. 4. Hence, as he knows their frame, and what sort of a voice is most suited to their capacity, and accordingly speaks to them by the whispering of his Spirit in the word; so they know his voice from the voice of a stranger, John x. 5. They know the sound of his feet upon the mountains.

4. His gracious coming is joyful both to him and them, because of the mutual AGREEMENT in DESIGN between him and them. His ultimate end and design is the glory of God in their salvation; their ultimate end is the same, even that God may be glorified in their salvation. Now, when he comes to pursue this design so joyfully, they cannot but welcome him joyfully: Sing, O heavens; and shout ye lower parts of the earth; break forth into singing, ye mountains; for the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified himself in Israel, Isa. xliv. 23.

5. His gracious coming is joyful both to him and them, because of the mutual INTERCOURSE between him and them at meeting: he hath always some good news to bring them from the Father, which he is glad to tell them, and they are glad to hear; and they, on the other hand, have something to tell him which they cannot tell the world. And as they are glad of his coming to have an opportunity to tell him their mind; so he is glad to hear them: O my dove, that art in the clifts of the rock, in the secret places of the stairs, let me hear thy voice, and see thy countenance; for sweet is thy voice, and thy countenance is comely, Song ii. 14. He has something to do with them, and they have something ado with him; and therefore, when he joyfully draws near to them, they joyfully draw near to him; and visit each other with endearing embraces. Truly, indeed, his visits are always visits of kindness, and theirs are ordinarily of business; his business is to give, and their business is to get; but then the visits are most sweet, when they are visits of love on both sides.

6. His gracious coming is joyful both to him and them, because of the mutual INTEREST and CONCERN they have both in the covenant of promise, which is a fountain of joy, and belongs primarily to Christ, in whom the covenant stands fast, and in whom all the promises are, Yea, and Amen; and secondarily to believers in him, who are all the children of the promise. It is promised to Christ, that he shall see of the travel of his soul, and shall be satisfied, Isa. liii. 11. And it is promised to the believer, clothed with the character of a meek person, that he shall eat, and shall be satisfied, Psal. xxii. 26. Now, when Christ comes graciously to his people, both he and they must be satisfied; for he comes to accomplish the promise made to himself and to them. Hence mutual satisfaction cannot but take place.

In a word, his joy is the fountain of theirs; their joy arises from the powerful influence of his joyful approach, upon their joyful reception of him; his joyful, Lo, I come! does instantly create their joyful, Lo, he cometh! he having put an echoing principle within them. The joyful sound of his, Lo, he cometh! cannot but meet with a joyful resounding and rebounding of their, Lo, he cometh!

VII. The seventh thing proposed was, To make some application of the subject, by deducing some inferences.

1. Is it so as it has been said, That Christ's coming to his people graciously, in their time of need, is a joyful and delectable coming, both to him and them, then we may see, what it is would make a sweet communion-day among us, amidst these sad and lowring days wherein we live. We live in sinful and sorrowful days; but Christ's joyful approach, with a Lo, I come! would make a joyful day among us at this occasion: and, O that he would speak powerfully, that many here may be made to say, The voice of my Beloved! behold, he cometh! He can make the gospel-trumpet to convey his voice. Indeed, if the devil, and his instruments, could get their will, you would not enjoy a gospel-ministry; and, if our rowers, that have brought the church of Scotland into deep waters, had got their will, this and some others would have been vacant congregations *; there would have been no communion solemnities here: when men would have shut the gospel-door, O may God himself come and open the door, and open the mouth of ministers, and make his voice to be heard; his joyful, Lo, I come! I come to give you a little reviving in your bondage; when men are most unkind, I come to show my kindness; as it is said, Dan. ix. 25. The wall shall be built in perilous times. The times we live in are perilous times, in respect of sin, error, apostasy, and defection from Reformation-purity and principles; a time wherein the rights and privileges of poor people are injured, the office of the ministry retrenched, faithful ministers ejected, and the power of presbytery invaded; a time of confusion in church and state, at home and abroad †; a time wherein God's wrath is threatened to be poured out: these are indeed perilous times; but hath the Lord said, The wall shall be built up in perilous times? O may this perilous time be a building time; according to the word, When the Lord shall build up Zion, he will appear in his glory. Let us seek a glorious appearance of the Lord at this occasion: and what do we know but he is saying,

* Alluding to the sentences passed upon the four brethren, formerly narrated, p. 661.

† The justness of the charge here exhibited, and a short account of the facts here alluded to, may be attained, by consulting what has been formerly narrated, p. 149, 454, 631, 648, 661, 670, 671, 683.

even

even with reference to this very time, Lo, I come! O may we hear his voice, and say with joy, Behold, he cometh!

2. Hence see the sweetness of fellowship with God in Christ; why, it is a partaking of his joy and happiness, his glory and triumph; it is a meeting his joyful, Lo, I come! with our joyful, Behold, he cometh! Happy are the sheep of Christ, who know his voice: And, Oh! how miserable are you who hear, and yet do not know the joyful sound! What makes the word and ordinances sweet to the believer? Why, it is their hearing his voice therein; his joyful voice, therein; his joyful voice, that gives them a joyful heart. But, what makes these same ordinances such a burden and weariness to you, poor graceless man? Why, you have never heard the voice of Christ, his loving voice, his majestic voice, his powerful voice, that goes out through, and in through the heart, and penetrates and ransacks the secret recesses of the soul. What makes believers lament the absence of Christ? Why, then their joy is removed; they are always either rejoicing in his presence, or lamenting his absence, except when they fall into a nap of security, till his joyful voice awake them again. But, alas! what makes you, poor Christless sinners, live an unconcerned life, though Christ should be never so long away? Why, you are not acquainted with his coming and going, nor with the sweetness of communion with him. But, O poor soul, may it not stir you up to seek after acquaintance with him; to hear that the believer's joyful communion is no less than a partaking of the joy of his Lord. Christ's joy is their joy, though not of the same measure; for Christ is anointed with the oil of joy and gladness above his fellows; yet it is of the same quality; for they have fellowship with him in his joy, whenever he comes to them.

3. Hence see the difference between the law and the gospel; or between the voice of God in the law, and the voice of God in the gospel: his voice in the law is a terrible and dreadful voice; for therein he comes in wrath, with threatenings and curses in his mouth: but the voice of Christ in the gospel is a charming voice, a joyful sound of salvation to sinners, and a door of hope. Whatever word tends to work despair, and to leave a man hopeless, is the voice of the law; but the gospel shows the door of hope in the valley of Achor, and that with a pleasant sound of grace, mercy, pardon, and pity: Lo, I come! Hence, as the law is never preached to good purpose, except in a subserviency to the gospel; so gospel-believers are these who first have believed the law, or heard God's voice in the law, which hath made them despair of all help in themselves, and their own righteousness and duty: and next, they have believed the gospel, or heard Christ's voice therein, which has brought them to a lively hope, yea, to joy and peace in believing.

4. Hence see both the nature of faith and of unbelief.—On the one hand, we may, from this doctrine, see the nature of faith, in its correspondency with its objects; both its immediate object, the word; and its principal object, Christ, the speaker, whose voice sounds in our ears by this gospel. The word says, Behold, he cometh! and faith says, Behold, he cometh! Christ says, Behold! Lo, I come! and faith says, The voice of my Beloved! behold, he cometh! The gospel is nothing else but a proclamation of Christ's coming; his coming to give life, his coming to save sinners by the price of his blood, and the power of his Spirit; and faith is a setting the seal to a present lo, with a present behold. The first act of faith looks neither backward to what is anterior or past, such as the decree of God, or the design of Christ, his intention in dying; nor does it look forward to posterior things, as if it believed a state of salvation that is to come; but it looks to a present truth, a present saying, as the gospel is called, a faithful saying, and so a present lo; Lo, I come! and offer myself to you, man, to you, woman; Lo, I come! and bring salvation with me. Faith, under the influence of the Spirit, says, The voice of my Beloved! behold, he cometh! I hear the voice of God speaking to me through such a minister, and inviting me the chief of sinners. And I joyfully welcome a coming with salvation unto me: there is a persuasion and appropriation in it to the man's self; and according to the measure of this particular application to itself, such is the measure of joy. There would be no joy at all, if the soul should put away the message from himself; but receiving it to himself, he rejoices in the voice of Christ as his Beloved.—But next, it shows us also the nature of unbelief, on the other hand; the evil heart of unbelief contradicts the word of Christ; Christ says, Lo, I come! Unbelief says, O he will not come; no, no: he will never come to the like of me. Indeed, a believer may say, and hath good reason to say, I fear my sins provoke him to stay away; and it will be a wonder if he come to the like of me. But it is gross unbelief to say he will not come; I do no expect so much good at his hand: and hence unbelief is said to make God a liar: it contradicts and blasphemes. O to get faith this day, to welcome Jesus saying, Lo, I come! and to expect good at his hand.

I might next apply it for trial and examination. What know you of this joyful coming of the Son of God? It is this coming of the Lord Jesus that only can make your coming to a communion-table profitable and warrantable: if you know nothing of his joyful approach graciously to you, you cannot approach with his allowance to his table; for, if he never came to you, by his Spirit, you never came to him by faith; and so you are an unbeliever: and if you remain in this case, you never had a right to his table here, nor shall have a share of his table above.

QUEST. How shall I know, if ever he came thus to me? For helping you in this important inquiry, I would ask you these few things following.

1. Have you ever apprehended the distance between Christ and you? Was you ever made sensible of the dreadful distance between him and you; a dismal distance; a damnable distance; an invincible and insupereable distance? Have you seen an utter impossibility of saving yourself from it, unless the Lord had come to you? This is the Lord's ordinary way: when he brings to light, he makes sensible of darkness; when he brings to life, he makes sensible of deadness and lifelessness; when he brings to faith, he makes sensible of unbelief; when he brings to love, he makes sensible of enmity; when he brings to holiness, he makes sensible of wickedness; and when he brings to acquaintance, quaintance, he makes ſenſible of eſtrangement; and before he comes near, he makes ſenſible of diſtance.

2. Have you heard his voice ſaying, Lo, I come? Have you heard, not the voice of miniſters only, but the voice of the chief Shepherd; and know it to be his voice, by the majeſty of it, by the power that attended it, by the ſweetneſs that was in it? Has the goſpel come to you not in word only, but in power? 1 Theſſ. i. 5. Was there ſuch light, life, liberty, and joy accompanying the voice, as made you ſure, at the time, that it was not the voice of man, but of God, who ſpake like himſelf?

3. Have you ſeen him coming, and apprehended him, by the light of the Spirit, revealing the Son in you? Have you ſeen the glory of God in the face of Jeſus Chriſt? Have you ſeen his fulneſs, ſuitableneſs, and ſweetneſs; his glory, worth, and excellency, by a light ſhinning not into the head only, but the heart?—It is a ſpiritual light, fleſh and blood cannot reveal it; education, and external revelation, however ſubſervient it may be, yet cannot contribute unto it, without ſupernatural revelation.

4. Have you joyfully welcomed a coming Jeſus? ſaying, in effect, The voice of my Beloved! behold, he cometh! Have you apprehended the mountains that were in the way between him and you; particularly the mountains of ſin and guilt? Has this accented your joy, that he came over all the mountains, and melted down the mountains, and made your heart to melt down before him alſo, becauſe of your heaping up ſuch mountains between him and you.

5. What intercourſe have you had with him? what mutual embracement? Did you get him in your arms, and wreſtle with him for the bleſſing? Did you get grace to call him your Beloved; and to ly in his boſom, and melt in tears of joy? I know there may be intercourſe and fellowſhip with him, even where this is not the attainment; but ſomething like this ordinarily takes place, when he and his people meet together, after ſome black interveening clouds have kept them long aſunder; when his joyful Lo, meets with that joyful ſalutation, Behold, he cometh! it is the voice of my Beloved!

6. What are the fruits and effects of his coming? Beholding his glory, was you changed? Surely, if there was never a change wrought upon you, but that you remain as vain, frothy, and carnal in your converſation and deportment as ever, he has not come to you. But has his coming imbittered ſin, and made you differ with yourſelf, and ſubmit to his righteouſneſs for your juſtification, and to his holineſs for your ſanctification? His great errand is like his name, JESUS, to ſave his people from their ſins: from the guilt of ſin, by his merit and righteouſneſs; and from the power of ſin, by his ſpirit and grace. What joy has his coming raiſed in you? Surely, the joy of his ſalvation, as it is a ſin-killing joy, ſo it is a ſoul-ſtrengthening joy; The joy of the Lord is their ſtrength, Neh. viii. 10. Did this joy ſtrengthen you to believe? and ſtrengthen you to pray? and ſtrengthen you to hope? and ſtrengthen you to wait upon him? and ſtrengthen you to ſerve him? and to run the way of his commandments with enlargement of heart?

QUEST. Are there any ſigns of his coming? What are the prognoſticates of his coming?

ANSW. (1.) It would be a token of his coming; if we were ſenſible of, and afflicted for his abſence, ſaying, O that I knew where I might find him! a longing deſire after him, ſaying, O! when wilt thou come? He will ſatisfy the longing deſire.

(2.) Another ſign of his coming is, if we were ſeeking after him, and wreſtling with him for the bleſſing; he is near to them that call upon him; and theſe who ſeek him ſhall find him.

(3.) If we were waiting for him in his appointed way; for, they who wait upon him, ſhall have to ſay, This is our God, Iſa. xxv. 9.

(4.) If we were finding ourſelves to have a name to which the promiſe opens a door of hope. Is there any hope of his coming for a poor inſolvent bankrupt, who fears that the word of the Lord is againſt him? Why, that name is in the promiſe; To this man will I look, even to him that is poor, and of a contrite ſpirit, Iſa. lxvi. 2.—Is there any hope of his coming to a poor needy creature, who can find no relief to its ſoul? Yes, that caſe is in the promiſe; When the poor and needy ſeek water, and there is none, I the Lord will hear, I the God of Jacob will regard.

We ſhall now ſhut up the whole diſcourſe with a word by way of exhortation. Is Chriſt ſaying, Lo, I come? O Sirs, hear and believe, ſo as you may cry out joyfully, The voice of my Beloved! Behold, he cometh! For motives,

1. Conſider who it is that ſpeaketh; it is God in our nature, IMMANUEL, God with us. The word of ſalvation is to you ſinners, as well as to you ſaints: his voice is, Lo, I come to ſave ſinners; I am not come to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance: yea, To you, O men, do I call; and my voice is to the ſons of men, Prov. viii. 4.

2. He ſays it with a Lo! that all the world may give attention to it; Liſten, O iſles, unto me; and hearken ye people from afar, Iſa. lxix. 1. He is ſpeaking to the iſles, particularly to the iſle Britain, that has long refuſed to hear his voice. The goſpel is to be preached to every creature.

3. The reaſon why he is ſaying to you in this goſpel, Lo, I come, to ſave ſinners, is, that ſinners may welcome him and ſay, The voice of my Beloved! Behold he cometh! Even the firſt welcome of faith may be in theſe terms, and ſhould be ſo; for, his manifeſting himſelf thus, in the word, is the ground of faith, though his manifeſting himſelf by the Spirit, is the cauſe of faith, and abſolutely neceſſary to create that faith. But, as faith comes by hearing; ſo, hear, O ſinner; hear this word as the voice of the Spirit of Chriſt: hear what the Spirit ſays to the churches. Liſten to the word, till you hear and underſtand that it is the Spirit of Chriſt; or Chriſt, by his Spirit, ſpeaking to you, and ſaying, Lo, I come to you.

OBJECT. "Chriſt ſpeaks not here to me, but "to his Father, ſaying, Lo, I come! I delight to "do thy will, O my God."

ANSW. It is the better for you and me, and the ſurer ground of faith and hope; for, it is a word to his Father concerning us, and about his coming to ſave us. It were ſure enough, if it were ſpoken immediately to us; but it is ſtill the ſurer, that it is ſaid to the Father concerning us: and he will not retract what he hath ſaid to his Father. Therefore,

4. Conſider, that his coming in the Spirit, to accom-accompliſh ſalvation by power, is as ſurely to take place, as his coming in the fleſh has already taken place; therefore, when he ſays, Lo, I come, to ſave by the power of my Spirit! Let faith ſay, Behold, he cometh, to ſave me!

OBJECT. "But has he purpoſed to ſave us "all? If not, how can there be ground for us "all to believe?"

ANSW. Whom he has purpoſed to ſave, is a ſecret; but whom he calls to believe, and look to him for ſalvation, is no ſecret; Look unto me, and be ſaved, ALL the ends of the earth, Iſa. xlv. 22. And faith, as I ſaid before, is not to look to any ſecret, either paſt or to come, but to the word of ſalvation, to a preſent Lo; Lo, I come! And if you venture on his word, without more queſtions, we can aſſure you, from his word, you are ſafe: take him at his word, when he ſays, Lo, I come!

5. Conſider, that mountains are no hinderances; he comes ſkipping on the mountains, and leaping on the hills. There is a mountain of darkneſs in your mind; a mountain of obſtinacy in your wills; a mountain of carnality and earthlineſs in your affections; mountains of guilt lying on your conſciences; and mountains of objections, doubts, and fears, in your hearts: but all theſe are nothing to him. Therefore, O take his word for it, Lo, I come! and ſay, Behold, he cometh! ſkipping on the mountains. He can come over them all with one leap, with one ſkip.

6. Conſider, that it is his joyful voice, both in the Old and New Teſtament, Lo, I come! He was glad to come in the fleſh of old, and he is as glad to come in the Spirit now, according to his promiſe: and, O Sirs, will you not gladly welcome him? O! is he ſaying ſo gladly, Lo, I come? What are you ſaying, poor ſoul? If you cannot ſay, The voice of my Beloved! then, O will you ſay, It is the voice of the Father's Beloved, who has ſaid, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleaſed? And if you welcome him, as the Father's Beloved, you are quite ſafe. If you cannot ſay, Behold he cometh juſt now; yet, will you ſay, He that ſhall come will come; and wait upon him in his own way? He waits to be gracious; and he is a God of judgment; bleſſed are all they that wait for him.—Again, if you cannot ſay, Behold he cometh to my obſervation; yet will you ſay, Even ſo, come Lord Jeſus, come quickly? And thus pray for his coming graciouſly and mercifully; Come, Lord Jeſus; come to merciful judgment againſt all my luſts, and prepare me for thy general judgment. Come in the Spirit. Come in power and great glory at this occaſion. O he comes, ſkipping and leaping! Let your heart leap within you at the thoughts of it.

OBJECT. "But I do not feel; I do not ſee "his coming."

ANSW. Bleſſed are they that believe, and have not ſeen. If you do not ſee and feel, yet do you not hear him ſay, Lo, I come? Faith comes by hearing, and not by ſeeing: while you hear his word, you hear his feet upon the mountains: therefore, againſt hope believe in hope, ſaying, Lord, I believe; help mine unbelief: It is the voice of my Beloved! behold he cometh!

Well, Sirs, What think you, will he not come to the feaſt? Have we no reaſon to think that he will come? Yea, I think we have.—Why, it is a time of need among his poor people; and his throne of grace is erected for a time of need: therefore we are called to come boldly to it, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.—It is a time of trouble and diſtreſs, and he is a preſent help in the time of trouble; and a refuge for the oppreſſed.—It is a time wherein many of his people are in a wilderneſs of darkneſs and diſpondency; and he has ſaid, I will bring her to the wilderneſs, and there will I ſpeak comfortably to her; or, IN TO HER HEART.—It is a time wherein many of his people, from all corners, and, I hope, many praying people, are met about his hand; and he has ſaid, Where TWO or THREE are met together, in my name, there will I be in the midſt of them.—It is a time wherein ſome of his ſervants, and many of his people are like outcaſts in the church, deſpiſed and caſt out by the judicatories; and he hath ſpoken in his word of gathering the outcaſts of Iſrael, Zeph. iii. 18. Iſa. lvi. 8. Pſal. cxlvii. 2. The Lord doth build up Jeruſalem: he gathereth together the outcaſts of Iſrael.—Why then, ſhall we not expect his coming, when, at the ſame time, he is ſaying, Lo, I come?——May faith's joyful echo in our hearts ſay, The voice of our Beloved! Behold, he cometh!

SERMON LXIV.

The Time of NEED, a Time of LOVE. *

EZEKIEL xvi. 8.

Now, when I paſſed by thee and looked upon thee; behold, thy time was a time of love.—

MY friends, if you have been believing communicants this day, your Lord has been giving you a love feaſt. But now, ſince the table is drawn, and the feaſt ſeems to be over, leſt you reckon his love withdrawn alſo, I am come, upon the back of the feaſt, to give you a love-letter, written with his own hand, and directed to you, that you may lay it up in the cabinet of your hearts, and never either forget nor jealous his love at any time, which he hath ſhown to you at this, or ſome other time of your need. The words of the letter are, Now, when I paſſed by thee, and looked upon thee; behold, thy time was a time of love.

* This Subject was handled in Five Sermons. The firſt was preached on the Sabbath evening, immediately after the celebration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper at Dunfermline, July 14. 1734. The other four were delivered after the ſolemnity. Never before publiſhed.

The moſt remarkable event that befel the Jewiſh church of old, as to its outward condition, was the ſhadow of the ſpiritual mercies, deſigned for the true Zion of God; and therefore, I am to ſpeak of the bleſſings whereof this is an emblem: it is a New-teſtament mercy in Old-teſtament dreſs. Under this ſhadow is hid the moſt ſubſtantial ſpiritual bleſſings.

In the words we may obſerve the four following particulars.

1. A miſerable time aſcribed to the ſinner, called, Thy time.

2. A merciful time aſcribed to the Saviour, called, The time of love.

3. The happy conjunction, or meeting, between that miſerable time, and this merciful time, Thy time was a time of love, and wherein I ſhowed my love.

4. The ſtrangeneſs and wonderfulneſs of this conjunction, BEHOLD! thy time was a time of love. It is matter of aſtoniſhment, and worthy of a note of admiration.

I reſerve the explication of theſe particulars to the proſecution of the following doctrine.

OBSERV. That it is matter of wonder and admiration, that God ſhould ſhow his love to ſinners, at ſuch a remarkable juncture, that their time of need and miſery, appears to be his time of love and mercy. BEHOLD, THY TIME WAS A TIME OF LOVE.

The method I would incline to handle this ſubject in, under the divine favour, ſhall be the following.

I. We ſhall ſpeak a little of the SINNER'S time of need and miſery, as it is deſcribed in the context.

II. Of GOD'S time of love, as it is here alſo repreſented and ſhadowed forth.

III. Make it evident, that he ſhows his love at ſuch a remarkable juncture, as makes it appear, their time of need is his time of love.

IV. Show that this is matter of wonder and admiration.

V. Deduce ſome inferences for application of the whole.

I. We are to ſpeak a little of the time of need and miſery, as here pointed out in the context.

1. The time of need here pointed out is, when we are in a polluted ſtate; repreſented by the infant caſt out of the womb; I ſaw thee polluted in thine own blood, neither waſhed with water, nor ſalted, nor ſwaddled, ver. 4. When grace and mercy take hold of a ſinner, it is even when living in the puddle and filthy mire of original and actual pollution: the underſtanding polluted with darkneſs, the will with enmity, and the affections with carnality and ſenſuality.

2. The time of need is when we are in an helpleſs, naked, and deſtitute ſtate, having no eye to pity, or have compaſſion upon us; No eye pitied thee to do any of theſe things unto thee, to have campaſſion upon thee, ver. 5. Grace and mercy ſtep in with help when we can contribute no help to ourſelves: when all refuge fails, and all help is gone, ſurely it is a time of need.

3. The time of need, here mentioned, is when we are in a loathſome ſtate; in an unpleaſant ſtate, as new born children wallowing in their blood; Thou waſt caſt out to the loathing of thy perſon, ver. 5. Grace then beheld with an eye of love and pity, even when we are loathſome to beholders.

4. The time of need is when we are in extreme hazard, upon the very brink and precipice of utter ruin, juſt chocked with our own blood, ready to die and expire, being expoſed, and caſt out to the open fields, ver. 5. And what was it but a field of blood, a field of danger, a field of death? And what is this time of need, but the time of death, wherein we are dead in ſin, and dead in law? which is plainly ſuppoſed, ver. 6. I ſaid to thee, when thou waſt in thy blood, Live; intimating, that the time of need was a time of ſpiritual death, and obnoxious to eternal death, upon the brink of hell and damnation.——This is the time of need here repreſented.

II. The next thing I would touch at alſo is GOD'S time of love, as here ſhadowed forth; that extremity is his opportunity; that time of need is the time of his ſhowing his love. And what this time of love is, may appear particularly from theſe four things in the context.

1. His time of love is a time of love-calls, wherein he calls to us, and cries, as he did to Lazarus in the grave, and ſays to us, Live; ver. 6. I ſaid unto thee, when thou waſt in thy blood, LIVE; yea, I ſaid unto thee, when thou waſt in thy blood, Live. Theſe love-calls are doubled, that they may be effectual; he ſays it, and repeats it again: and we are never called effectually, till we hear him twice. In the time of love, therefore he ſays unto us, Live; yea, he ſays to us, in our blood, Live: he ſays it outwardly, in the word, and then he ſays it inwardly, by the Spirit; he ſays it into the ear, and then ſays it again into the heart: then the heart that was a dead grave opens, and takes in the living Jeſus, the Spirit of life enters, and the dead ſoul begins to live and breathe ſpiritually. The quickening word creates in the ſoul a life of care and concern about ſalvation, What ſhall I do to be ſaved? A life of deſire, after Chriſt the Saviour; O ſays the poor ſoul, I would give a thouſand worlds for him! And afterwards, in various degrees, a life of faith, love, hope, and joy.

2. His time of love is a time of love-viſits; When I paſſed by thee, ſays the words here: it is an alluſion to paſſengers, that, on their way, meet with miſerable objects in a deplorable condition, and extend pity toward them: I paſſed by thee. It is ſpoken after the manner of man, but done after the manner of God, who is pleaſed to give gracious viſits to the ſoul, whom he once quickens by his word of power. It is true, all his viſits in this world are but like a paſſing by; they are but paſſing viſits, as it is ſaid to Moſes, Exod. xxxii. 23. While my glory paſſes by, I will ſhow thee my back parts; for my face ſhall not be ſeen. It is in heaven we ſee him face to face, without interruption; but here we are to be content if we get ſome view of his glory as it paſſes by.

3. His time of love is a time of love-glances, or of loving looks; When I paſſed by thee, and LOOKED upon thee. It is not a look of obſervation only, for he beholds all things; they are naked and open before him, but a look of commiſeration. It is a look wherein his heart follows his eye.—In the time of love, the Lord gives his people ſometimes an appropriating look, an affectionate look; His countenance beholdeth the upright, Pſal. xi. 7.—Sometimes a directing look, I will guide thee with mine eye, Pſal. xxxiii. 8. If he takes his directing eye off us, we never make a right ſtep.

—Sometimes

—Sometimes a convincing look, a penetrating look, ſuch as he gave to Peter, that pierced, melted, and diſſolved his heart; Jeſus looked on him, and he went out and wept bitterly.—Sometimes a comforting look, Iſa. lxvi. 2. To this man will I look, even to him that is poor, and of a contrite ſpirit, and trembleth at my word. With a look he breaks the hard heart; and with a look he heals the broken heart.—Theſe are his love-glances.

4. His time of love is a time of love-tokens: and here are many tokens of conjugal love in the context; ſome antecedent, ſome concomitant, and ſome conſequent, to the marriage.

(1.) Some love tokens antecedent to the marriage; betwixt Chriſt and them. Such as, beſides what I have already named, theſe immediately following the text, Thy time was a time of love; and I ſpread my ſkirt over them, and covered their nakedneſs: there is the marriage robe wherewith he covers his naked bride, the garment of his righteouſneſs. Yea, I ſwear unto thee; there is the marriage oath, by which his word is confirmed, That by two immutable things, by which it is impoſſible for God to lye, they might have ſtrong conſolation, &c. And I entered into a covenant with thee; there is the marriage bond; the covenant that ſtandeth faſt in Chriſt: here all is done to her hand, when ſhe could do nothing. I entered into a covenant with thee, ſaith the Lord God. And thou becameſt mine; there is the marriage relation conſtitute, and the union betwixt Chriſt and his bride made up. I became thine, and thou became mine: I became thy Head and Huſband, and thou became my bride and ſpouſe; I manifeſted my good-will toward thee; and I made thee willing in the day of my power.

(2.) Some love tokens concomitant are here mentioned, from ver. 9,—14. Then waſhed I thee with water, ver. 9.; yea I thoroughly waſhed away thy blood from thee. This points out both pardoning grace, waſhing the conſcience from the guilt of ſin; and purifying grace, waſhing the heart from the filth of ſin; Whom he loves, he waſhes: hence the ſong of the redeemed is, To him that loved us, and waſhed us in his blood. And he waſhed us from our blood; it is bloods in the original: and he waſhes us from blood guiltineſs; both from the guilt of our own blood, and the guilt of the blood of Chriſt; in his blood he waſhed us from our blood.—Again, I anointed thee with oil, ver. 9. Here is another notable love token concomitant with the marriage, His giving the Spirit, the oil of gladneſs, wherewith he is anointed above meaſure; this he doth according to his promiſe, I will put my Spirit within you, and that not only to begin the good work, to quicken and renew, but to abide in us, and ſubdue ſin more and more, and advance grace more and more, to help our infirmities, to be a pledge and earneſt of the glorious inheritance, to guide us to the land of uprightneſs, and to comfort us under all our troubles in the wilderneſs, till we come to enter into the joy of our Lord.—Again, clothing neceſſary for benefit and comfort, mentioned ver. 10. and an inventory of more that ſerved for ſtate and magnificence, mentioned ver. 11, 12, 13. Whatever literally theſe things import to the Jewiſh nation, yet ſpiritually they refer to the precious graces and bleſſings wherewith Chriſt adorns his bride.—Yea, here is not only raiment, but food, ver. 13. Thou didſt EAT fine flour, honey, and oil; pointing out the beſt cheer, The feaſt of fat things, and wines on the lees; heavenly manna; the fleſh and blood of the Son of God. Whom he loves with a conjugal love, he gives them food and raiment, and all proviſions neceſſary.—Yea, not only ſo, but beauty and renown, ver. 14. Thy renown went forth among the heathen, for thy beauty; for it was perfect through my comelineſs which I put upon thee. What comelineſs, what glory does he put upon his bride? Even his own glory, according to that wonderful word, John xvii. 22. The glory which thou gave me, I have given them. What glory the Father gives the Son, the Son gives the bride; and ſo they are beautiful through his beauty, and glorious within, through his glory; righteous, through his righteouſneſs. O what love tokens are here!

(3.) Some love tokens conſequential are here alſo mentioned; not only conſequential to the marriage, but conſequential to our adulterous carriage after marriage; the love tokens poſterior to this is his marvellous recovering of his backſliding bride, after her whoriſh departure from him: ſee the ſum of the charge, ver. 15. But thou didſt truſt in thine own beauty, and played the harlot becauſe of thy renown, and pouredſt out thy fornication on every one that paſſed by. This charge of the bride's whoredom is enlarged to the 60th verſe of the chapter, in many particulars. And her departure from her Lord is uſhered in with diſtruſting of him, and truſting in her own borrowed robes, and created graces; and indeed, an evil heart of unbelief is the ſpring of departure from the living God: all our whoriſh departures from our glorious Lord and Huſband, ariſe from that ſource. But behold the love tokens of reſtoring grace and recovering mercy uſhered in with a nevertheleſs, ver. 60. NEVERTHELESS I will remember my covenant with thee, and will eſtabliſh unto thee an everlaſting covenant: though thou haſt broken covenant with me, I will remember my covenant with thee; thou haſt been ſo provoking, and I have been ſo provoked by thee, that one would think there was no reconciliation to be expected, but that the bargain was wholly broke, yet he was ever mindful of his covenant, that ſtands faſt in Chriſt; and his rememberance will create a rememberance in us; Then thou ſhalt remember thy ways and be aſhamed, ver. 61. O here is great love in putting us in rememberance, and putting us to ſhame! This is more fully expreſſed in the laſt verſe; That thou mayeſt remember, and be confounded, and never open thy mouth any more, becauſe of thy ſhame, when I am pacified toward thee, for all that thou haſt done, ſaith the Lord God. Behold! what rays of love ſhine out after that dark night of diſtance and ſinful departure! God is in Jeſus Chriſt pacified toward us for all that we have done amiſs againſt him; and when God deals thus graciouſly, what effect doth it produce? Why, whenever the father of the prodigal ran to him and kiſſed and embraced him, then the prodigal ſon was aſhamed, and confounded, ſaying, Father, I have ſinned againſt heaven, and before thee. The more ſenſe we have of pardoning mercy, and of God's being pacified, the more will grief and ſhame for ſin have room in our hearts, that ever we ſhould have offended ſuch a gracious Lord. The ſoul is confounded with the ſenſe of God's aſtoniſhing mercy, in returning to ſuch a deſperate backſlider, that plaid the harlot with ſo many lovers; and confounded in the view of its own madneſs and ingratitude;

tude; in ſo much, that theſe love-tokens of recovering and reſtoring mercy, conſequential to the bride's whoriſh breaking of her marriage-bond; theſe love-tokens that are like new converſions, may be even more remarkable than the firſt converſion, or the firſt love-tokens ever were.

Now, here is God's time of love; it is his time of love-calls, love-viſits, love-looks, and love-tokens; love-tokens antecedent, concomitant, and conſequential to the marriage. The antecedent tokens point out divine commiſeration, and his love of pity and compaſſion in our baſe and black eſtate. The concomitant tokens point out divine delectation, and his love of delight and complacency in our beautified ſtate by his grace. The conſequential tokens point out divine reſtoration, or his reſtoring and receiving love, after our apoſtaſy.——This ſubject of divine love, and of his time of love, is of vaſt extent, therefore I have confined myſelf to a glance at it, from the context only.

III. The next thing propoſed was, To make it evident, that he ſhows his love at ſuch a remarkable juncture, as to make it appear our time of need is his time of love; our time of miſery is his time of mercy; our worſt time, the time of manifeſting moſt kindneſs. This is plain from what I have already ſaid; yet it may be neceſſary further to evince it, both from the beginning of the good work, and from the progreſs thereof in the Lord's people, both when they are ſinners, and when they are ſaints: their worſt time is ſtill his time of love.

1*ſt*, When they are SINNERS, and when he begins the good work, it were enough to ſay that he comes to convince and convert them in mercy, when they are in a ſtate of nature and alienation from God, and rebellion againſt him; but I ſhall advance a few inſtances, to put the matter beyond queſtion.

1. We find God has ſhewed love and mercy to ſinners when they have arrived at a monſtrous perfection of ſinning againſt him; as we ſee in Manaſſeh, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 10,—13. And the Lord ſpake to Manaſſeh and to his people, but they would not hearken; wherefore the Lord brought upon him the captains of the hoſt of the king of Aſſyria, which took Manaſſeh among the thorns, and bound him with fetters, and carried him to Babylon. And when he was in affliction, he beſought the Lord his God, and humbled himſelf greatly before the God of his fathers. And prayed unto him, and he was entreated of him, and heard his ſupplication, and brought him again to Jeruſalem into his kingdom. Then Manaſſeh knew that the Lord he was God. God ſhewed mercy to him when he was at his worſt, uſing all magical arts, making the ſtreets of Jeruſalem run with blood; then God ſaid to him when he was in his blood, Live. He caſt the ſkirt of love over him, and his time was a time of love.

2. We find God hath ſhewed mercy and love to ſinners when they have been embruing their hands in the blood of the ſaints, madly perſecuting the church and people of God. Thus, you know, he ſhewed mercy to Paul, as he himſelf declares, Acts xxvi. When he rode to Damaſcus, God ſnatched him as a brand out of the burning, and ſhot a beam of love into his heart, when he might have deſtroyed him with a thunderbolt of wrath.

3. We find God has ſhewed mercy when ſin has, to appearance, been beyond mercy, by ſinners their embruing their hands in the blood of the Son of God, the Saviour of the world; yet he ſaid to them when they were in their blood, Live. For many of the Chriſt-crucifying Jews are convinced and converted, Acts ii. and made ſo many trophies of the riches and freedom of his grace. Their time of ſin and miſery was his time of love and mercy.

1. We find he has ſhewed mercy to ſinners that have ſpent all their time in ſinning againſt him; witneſs the thief on the croſs, and theſe called at the eleventh and laſt hour: mercy has ſtept in between them and the pit, when they were juſt ready to fall into hell. What aſtoniſhing mercy is this! that the Son of God ſhould ſay to a man that had ſpent all his days in ſin, to the very laſt day of his life, and then to tell him, This day ſhalt thou be with me in paradiſe. But whether ſooner or later there is none to whom he effectually ſays, Live, but he ſays it when they are in their blood; their very worſt time is his time of love.—But I paſs many other inſtances.

2*dly*, When they are SAINTS, or in the progreſs of his loving-kindneſs toward them, ſtill their time of need is his time of love; their worſt time his loving time. Hence,

1. Theſe and the like declarations, Pſal. iv. 1. O God, thou haſt enlarged me, when I was in diſtreſs. Pſal. cxvi. 6. I was brought low, and he helped me. Pſal. cxxxvi. 23. He remembered us in our low eſtate; for his mercy endureth for ever. Deut. xxxii. 36. The Lord ſhall judge his people, and repent himſelf for his ſervants, when he ſeeth that their power is gone, and that there is none ſhut up or left. Nothing left but black clouds of deſpair, and black ſigns of wrath, and black fears of ruin, then ſhine forth the fair beams of love.

2. For this cauſe is the throne of grace erected, that there we may find grace to help in time of our need, Heb. iv. 16. For this cauſe God takes names to himſelf, importing our time of need to be his time of love. Pſal. ix. 9. he is called a refuge in time of trouble. Iſa. xxv. 4. A ſtrength to the poor, a ſtrength to the needy in their diſtreſs. A refuge from the ſtorm, a ſhadow from the heat, when the blaſt of the terrible one is as a ſtorm againſt the wall. Iſa. xxxii. 2. He is called a hiding place from the wind, a covert from the tempeſt; as rivers of waters in a dry place, and as the ſhadow of a great rock in a weary land. He is our hope in an evil day.

3. Conſider, for further clearing this, the harmony between our time of need and his time of love: hence ordinarily your time of darkneſs is his time of inlightening love, according to that word, To the upright there ariſeth light in darkneſs. Though I walk in darkneſs, the Lord will be a light unto me.—Your time of deadneſs is his time of quickening love; hence that prayer, frequently in the Pſalms, Quicken me, according to thy word.—Your time of fear is his time of favour, according to that word, Fear not, for I am with thee.—Your time of difficulty is his time of direction, according to that word, I will lead the blind in ways they know not; and in paths which they have not known.

4. His time of love to his people, or of manifeſting his love, is ordinarily when their time of need is moſt notable. He does not always ſhow his love at the time that we think the time of need, but that he knows to be the time of need, which is when the time of need is moſt extreme. Hence his time of love is ſometimes, in their extremity of guiltineſs, when they have made him ſerve with their ſins, and wearied him with their iniquities, then he hath ſaid, I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſions, for my name's ſake, Iſa. xliii. 25.—Sometimes in their extremity of rebellion and incorrigibleneſs; when, though he hides himſelf and ſmites, yet they have gone on frowardly in the way of their hearts, even then he has ſaid, I have ſeen his ways, and will heal him, Iſa. lvii. 18.—Sometimes in their extremity of remiſneſs, when they had neither heart nor hand for prayer and pleading with himſelf for his pity; When he ſaw that there was no man, and wondered that there was no interceſſor; therefore his own arm brought ſalvation, Iſa. lix. 16.—Sometimes in the extremity of want and neceſſity, Iſa. xli. 17. When the poor and needy ſeek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirſt, I the Lord will hear, I the God of Jacob will not forſake.—Sometimes in the extremity of affliction, when deep calleth unto deep, and all his waves and billows paſs over them, then he commands his loving-kindneſs in the day-time, and in the night his ſong is with them, Pſal. xlii. 7, 8.—Sometimes in their extremity of deſertion, when they are ſaying, The Lord hath forſaken, and my God hath forgotten me; then he appears ſaying, Can a woman forget her ſucking child, that ſhe ſhould not have compaſſion on the ſon of her womb? Yea, they may forget; yet will I not forget thee, Iſa. xlix. 14, 15.—Sometimes in the extremity of temptation, when burnt with fiery darts, and buffeted by Satan, he readily relieves with loving words; My grace ſhall be ſufficient for thee, my ſtrength ſhall be made perfect in thy weakneſs, 2 Cor. xii. 9.—Sometimes in the very laſt extremity, in the extremity of death, and the extremity of their extremity; when, like Lazarus, they are ſtinking in their graves of ſin and ſecurity, then he ſpeaks the quickening word, and ſays to the dead and dry bones, Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon theſe ſlain, that they may live.

in

QUEST. May not God leave his own in their moſt extreme need, and in their laſt battle?

ANSW. We cannot tell what God may do when he goes out of his ordinary road; judgment is his ſtrange work, eſpecially when it ſeems to be execute toward a ſaint; but God may ſuffer ſtrange and extraordinary things to fall out toward ſaints themſelves, as preſages of ſtrange and extraordinary wrath and vengeance coming upon a ſecure generation: but certainly it is God's ordinary way to help his people in their laſt extremities, and make their time of greateſt need his time of love, wherein he ſteps in for their ſalvation. Nay, what am I ſaying, that it is his ordinary way? Let me correct the word, in ſpite of the devil, and unbelief, and all dark and diſmal-like providences; I will take back the word and ſay it is his conſtant way. Though a ſaint in the laſt battle ſhould die diſtracted, and ſeem to be a ſacrifice to the devil and his inſtruments; yet that laſt extremity is the time of love, wherein he leads them through the darkeſt trance to the faireſt field of everlaſting joy and triumph. When we conſider what power the devil got over the body of Chriſt, to carry it hither and thither, what do we know how far he may get power over the body of a member of Chriſt? We find, upon Satan's application againſt Job, there was a twofold power given him; the firſt was, all that he hath is in thy power; the ſecond was, he himſelf; that is, his body; Behold he is in thine hand, only ſpare his life. If God had but allowed a third application, and had let out another link of the enemy's chain, the utmoſt would have been even take his life, and I will take him home. But this, by way of digreſſion, though yet, I hope, not far out of the way.

I have ſhown you, that all our time of need, both from firſt to laſt, is his time of love; Thy time was a time of love.

If any further enquire, Why God chuſes to make ſuch a time of need and extremity to be his time of love? I ſhall only anſwer in a word. God, in his ſovereignty, having fixed a time for the decree's breaking forth, wherein theſe with whom he travelled ſo long in the womb of his electing and redeeming love ſhould be brought forth, he keeps the time to the moment that he fixed upon; and he waits to be gracious; that is, he waits the time of love, and he makes it jump with our time of need and extremity, for magnifying the riches and freedom of his grace, and for engaging the ſinner the more to himſelf, and to his ſervice; and he makes his time of ſhowing love at firſt, and always afterwards, to the end of the believer's life, to jump and agree with their extreme neceſſity, for accenting the ſong of the redeemed in heaven, To him that loved them, and waſhed them in his blood, and pulled them out of the fire, and plucked them out of the devil's hands, and raiſed them from the bottom of hell, to the battlements of heaven; from the depths of miſery to the heights of glory; he makes the depths of his love to anſwer the depths of their extremity. As by this means he ſhews his glory, ſo he ſtains the pride of man, makes his viſits more precious, kills our enmity with his kindneſs, quickens love to him, and learns us to truſt in him even at the worſt; and ſhows the height of his thoughts above our thoughts, as the heaven is higher than the earth, he having thoughts of peace towards us, when we reckoned he hath thoughts of wrath, and deſigns to ruin us.——Thus he ſhows his wonders.

IV. The next thing was, To ſhow that this is matter of wonder and admiration, which is the fourth thing in the text, BEHOLD! Behold, thy time was a time of love.

1. It is wonderful, if we conſider the nature of GOD, the Lover. If we look to his ſpotleſs holineſs, and that he is of purer eyes than that he can behold iniquity, O how myſterious and wonderful is it! that he ſhould ſhow his love to any of Adam's black poſterity, ſo ſpotted with iniquity?—If we look to his infinite juſtice, that he can no more ceaſe to puniſh ſin, than he can ceaſe to be God; juſtice being as eſſential to his name as mercy. How wonderful is his love! If he had not found a ranſom, there would have been no vent for his love; but grace reigns through Chriſt's righteouſneſs.—Again, if we look to his infinite highneſs, it makes his love wonderful: his majeſty is infinite; he is the high and lofty One that inhabits eternity. Surely we may cry, when he comes to ſhow his love, Lord, I am not worthy that thou ſhould come under my roof.

2. It is wonderful, if we conſider the nature of MAN, the loved object, to whom he ſhows mercy. What are we by nature? enemies to God, rebels to the crown of heaven, children of the devil; who but a God could anſwer his own queſtion? How ſhall I put you among the chil- dren, and give thee the pleasant land? How shall I give thee a title to heaven, that art so justly intitled to hell? If we look upon our baseness, O the wonders of his kindness! May we not say with wonder, Will God in very deed dwell with men on earth, on the earth his footstool? May we not sing, as Psal. cxiii. 6. Who is like unto the Lord our God, that dwelleth on high, who humbleth himself to behold things that are in heaven? And much more may we say, Who is like unto him, that humbleth himself to show his love to worms on the earth? Whence is this that the King of glory should look upon vile dust? If we view the opposition we make to his love, the resistance he meets with from the devils of hell without us, and, the devils of lusts, sin, and corruption within us, and how we fight against his love and kindness, is this the manner of man to show love in this case? O wonderful! O condescending Jesus! O patient Christ! whom we have kept so long at the back of the door, that yet he should both forgive and forget all the wrongs we have done him, saying, Thy sins and iniquities will I remember no more! We commit the fault, and he makes satisfaction. And if we view not only the bad entertainment he gets from us, at the first discoveries of his love; but the affronts he meets with afterwards, from time to time, the abuses of his goodness, turning his grace to wantonness, grieving his Spirit, and madly following other lovers, till he hedge up our way with thorns, that we may not overtake them: O wonderful! that after this, love should reclaim us, and make us say, We will go and return to our first husband, for then it was better with us than now, Hos. ii. 7.

3. It is wonderful, if we consider, that a time of love is denied to millions of better creatures than us. It was never allowed to fallen angels; there was never such a word as that, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with angels that fell; but, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and among men. Has he not past many nations, and come to us, proclaiming the joyful sound of everlasting love in Christ Jesus? in so much, that nothing hinders our enjoyment of it, but unbelief, and hardness of heart; and amongst us, are there not some more highly privileged than others? O believer, wonder that he hath passed by a thousand, and shewed his love to you the worst of them all, and even when you was at your worst. O wonderful distinguishing love! that passes by twenty houses, and falls upon one! that passes by twenty souls, and comes upon yours! Many a heart here this day never yet was touched or fired with this love, and your heart may be set a burning within you.

4. It is wonderful, if we consider, the long train of the time of love; both the train of blessings it infers, and the train of times it includes. What a train of blessings does the time of love infer? or, what good is done to the soul? It brings life, and light, and pardon, and peace; justification, adoption, and sanctification; grace, glory, and every good thing; it brings God, and Christ, and the Spirit, and with them all things. The time of love is the time of gifts, when God gives Christ and all things with him. What a long train and tract of times it includes? The time of love has a beginning only in our view, but to God it has neither a beginning nor an end: the time of love began before time, in the heart of God from all eternity purposing, and in the heart of Christ from all eternity transacting with the Father in our room; therefore, he has said, Jer. xxxi. 3. I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with loving-kindness have I drawn thee. The time of love to us is when he lets down the cords of his love, like a heart-string, to draw up our hearts to his heart: and as the time of love runs through every period of the believer's life, while he is here, in so many fruits and effects of divine love, let out from time to time; so it is never at an end, so long as his love to Christ endures; though he visit their transgressions with rods, yet his loving-kindness will he not take away from him, nor consequently from them; for, his seed shall endure for ever, Psal. lxxxix. 32, 33, 36. The love that he shows in the time of love, includes love before time, from all eternity; and love after time, even to all eternity; therefore it is justly wonderful, and expressed with a behold! Behold, thy time was the time of love!

V. I come to the fifth thing, which was the application. Is it so, as has been said, That God shows his love to sinners at such a remarkable juncture, that their time of need and misery appears to be his time of love and mercy, then,

1. Let us apply it for admiration. O let us admire and adore the wonders of redeeming love! It deserves our highest admiration; when we have spent our thoughts upon it, it is fit we should supply the defect of our thought with admiration. Let us admire the height, and depth, and length, and breadth of this love of God in Christ; that the guilt of criminals should be transferred upon the innocent, and he exposed to the stroak of justice: that the immortal God should be clothed with mortality; the wonder of angels exposed to the reproach of men; that he who was in the form of God should appear in the form of a servant; and the Lord of life become obnoxious to the pains of death, and all that the love of God might vent toward sinners, and that he should take occasion to show his love to sinners when they are at their worst.—Herein let us see and admire the freedom of the grace and love of God; that he should take hold of such profane persons, such polluted persons, such loathsome persons! O that the time of loathing should be the time of love!—Herein see and admire the power of the grace of God, that can conquer sinners at the height of their rebellion, and overcome their enmity, and supply all their needs.—See and admire the wisdom of the grace and love of God, that he should consult the concerns of his own glory and our good so wonderfully. He consults the glory of his justice while mercy vents through a ransom, and grace through righteousness, that magnifies the law, and satisfies the justice of God: he consults our good wonderfully by showing his love at a time wherein his love may do us most good; see and wonder at the wonderfulness of his mercy, love and grace.

2. Let us apply it for examination. Try what share you have had of this wonderful love of God in Christ; and whether your time of need has been his time of love, either now, at this occasion, or formerly. For gaining time, I forbear offering marks and evidences of this, and only propose, that you reflect upon what has been said concerning the time of need and the time of love.

(1.) What

(1.) What ſenſe have you ever had of the time of need? Have you ever ſeen yourſelf in your polluted ſtate, lying in your blood? Your helpleſs ſtate, no eye to pity you? Your loathſome ſtate, caſt out to the loathing of your perſons? Your dangerous ſtate, in the open field, lying open to the wrath and vengeance of God? Have you ever got a ſenſe and conviction of your dead ſtate, as being under the power of ſin, and under the ſentence of the law? The time of love is uſually uſhered in with a ſenſe of ſin, and fear of wrath. Was you ever pricked in your hearts, and made to cry, What ſhall I do to be ſaved? If you never felt a time of extreme need, it ſeems you never have known a time of love. But,

(2.) What experience have you of the time of love upon the back of your extreme need? Got you ever a loving call with power? A quickening word, when you was in your blood? A word that put life into your dead ſoul? Got you ever a love-viſit, and a view of the glory of the Lord Jeſus, and of God in him? Though it was but a paſſing viſit; yet has he paſſed by you, ſo as to give you a ſight of his back parts, by the bye? for, Now we ſee through a glaſs darkly.——Got you ever a love-look, that made you look again unto him; a look that pierced and pained your heart, and made you ſick of love to him, and deſire after him?——Got you ever any love-tokens; whether got you theſe I mentioned, that may be called antecedent to the marriage? Did he ever caſt his ſkirt over you, and make you flee under the covert of his blood and righteouſneſs? Did he ever ſwear to you, and enter into covenant with you, by making you to take hold of his covenant, and word of grace and promiſe?—What know you of the love-tokens concomitant to the marriage? Did he never waſh your heart and conſcience in his blood, by giving you joy and peace in believing? Did he never anoint you with the oil of his Spirit, ſo as the chariot-wheels of your ſouls have been made to run ſweetly and ſwiftly, by reaſon of this anointing, in the duties of religion? Has he never ſatisfied your longing ſoul? Though you have not got what you would be at, yet by giving you ſo much as made all the world taſteleſs to you, and Chriſt above all things precious? (If he has not fed you with joy, has he fed you with godly ſorrow and mourning for ſin?) Has he never beautified your deformed ſoul, by letting you ſee your own vileneſs and deformity, and that all your beauty, ſtrength, righteouſneſs, and ſtore was only in himſelf; and made you to ſee that all your excellency lay only in him, in whom all the ſeed of Iſrael are juſtified, and ſhall glory?—What know you of the love-tokens conſequent to the marriage, and, perhaps, to your whoriſh departure from him? Did he ever ſhame you for your unkindneſs by his ſurprizing returns, ſo as you was confounded and aſhamed when he was pacified toward you? Did ever the renewed ſenſe of his love and grace, manifeſted to a rebel and runaway like you, melt your heart, and lay you in the duſt before him?——Try what love-tokens he has given you in the time of your extreme need. Behold, thy time was a time of love.

I ſhall now cloſe with a ſhort advice, to you who never met with a time of love, in point of power engaging your heart to the love of Chriſt. Though you have enjoyed a time of love, in goſpel offers, and loving courtſhips, yet you have deſpiſed his loving offers to this day. O what art thou doing, ſinner, while deſpiſing the riches of divine love, goodneſs, forbearance, and long-ſuffering? The ſcripture tells you what you are doing, Rom. vii. 5. thou art treaſuring up wrath to thyſelf againſt the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God. Oh! you that were never convinced of a time of need, nor affected with your diſmal ſtate, as lying in your blood, nor concerned about a time of love, or a day of power, remember, that there is a time of wrath, and a day of death, and judgment a coming; and if you remain deſpiſers of the grace and love of God, the wrath coming upon you is both the wrath of God and of the Lamb; not only the wrath of an angry God, which is terrible vengeance, but the wrath of the ſlighted Lamb of God, which is double vengeance: How ſhall you eſcape if you neglect ſo great ſalvation? Terrible wrath is coming upon goſpel ſlighters in Scotland; upon goſpel deſpiſers in Dunfermline; do you hear of this wonderful love and yet ſlight it? Then, Behold, ye deſpiſers, wonder, and periſh! He that believeth not ſhall be damned; the wrath of God abideth upon him. Gave you never any entertainment to the news of grace and love, but to abuſe it to laſciviouſneſs, and turn the grace of God into wantonneſs, and to encourage yourſelves in ſin and wickedneſs? As ſure as you have now a day of grace, the day of wrath is a-coming; and perhaps this is the laſt hour of the day of grace, and of the time of love, and what will you do with it? Will you let it paſs away, and be for ever loſt? O ſinner! ſince the time of wrath is not yet come, though it is at hand; ſince the time of love is yet laſting, will you take and accept of divine grace and love, when he comes to give you now, perhaps, the laſt offer? And he has ſpared you out of hell till you get it; that either upon refuſal, you may be for ever inexcuſable; or upon acceptance, you may be for ever happy.

Well then, you that have miſpent all the time of life, and the time of love till now; he that yet continues the time of love with you, the time of love-offers is ſaying to you, Behold me, behold me, in order to marriage with me. Come and take me, for a match to your ſouls, to make it up for ever. O Sirs, will you match with him that can pardon all your ſins, and pay all your debt, ſupply all your wants, and heal all your wounds? Can cover all your ſpots, and cleanſe all your filthineſs, and looſe all your bands, theſe bands of ſin, hell, and death wherewith you have been bound all your days? Will you, that can do nothing, leave him that can do all things for you? Will you, to whom death and judgment ſeem to be terrible, in a little, will you have him that can make death ſafe, and judgment ſweet, and all trials by the way eaſy to you, by giving either a merciful ſupport under them, or merciful iſſue to them? O will you, that are liable to an eternity of torments, have him that can give you an eternity of joy and happineſs, in the viſion and fruition of himſelf? Will you have him to make you holy and happy? If you have no will to this bargain, then ſurely, though you periſh eternally, God does you no wrong, while he gives you your will, and lets you alone, ſaying, Ye will not come to me that you might have life. Nothing but his omnipotent power can make you willing; but ſince this goſpel is the organ of his power, and that if his drawing power be let down effectually by any means in the world, it will be by these cords of love and grace that are hanging down among your hands; therefore, Come, sinners.

of

To let down the cords as far as I can, by his warrant, be what thou wilt, To you is the word of this salvation sent; the grace and mercy of God is laid in your lap; if you shake it not away from you, by unbelief and enmity, you shall have it, be what you will: why? what are you, or what have you been? Are you a drunkard, swearer, Sabbath-breaker, whoremonger, adulterer, a filthy Magdalen, or bloody Manasseh, that have hitherto contemned the grace of God, and the Son of God? Are you the worst that ever breathed on the face of the earth; no matter; while this time of love lasts, grace is content to take you at your worst, and to make the worst time that ever you had, to be the best time that ever you saw. What are you, sinner? Are you a monster of sin? Are you a devil for sin? Be it so, since you are not yet a devil in hell, but a devil on earth, and a devil in flesh, that is not such a wonder as a God in flesh; and behold here is an incarnate God come to save incarnate devils. To you that are yet out of hell, he is saying, Look to me, and be saved, all the ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none else. To you that are yet in the flesh, and not yet damned spirits, the word of God says of this God in Christ, O thou that hearest prayer, to thee shall all flesh come, Psal. lxv. 2. All that are yet human flesh, are welcome to come to him; whatever sort of flesh you be, be you never such filthy flesh, or deviliish flesh; God has sent his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, that all sinful flesh may come to him, that he may form them into the likeness of an holy God.

If any trembling heart here be thinking, O is it possible that this call is to me, that this offer is to me? Yes, to thee, man, woman; to thee, lass, lad; to you that are farest off and neareft hand me; to every one of you within these walls, this offer of love and mercy comes in his name, that has said, Go, preach the gospel to every creature, to every rational creature under heaven. What say you? I was never so unfit to come or so unable; I am at the very worst in sin and misery, at the very height of wickedness and wo. What? is it the time of the greatest need of grace, power, and pity? Well, God who waits to be gracious, perhaps has been waiting till this moment, and waiting for this moment that your time of need may be his time of love, and your time of misery his time of mercy: are you content it should be so? Has this word taken hold of your heart, saying, Oh! What shall I do to be saved? O! a thousand worlds for Christ. Indeed, an offer of him is worth a thousand worlds, much more himself: do you see it to be so? and are you made willing to have him that he may save you from sin, as well as from hell? And to save you presently, that you may never be a slave to your sins any more but a servant to Jesus? Then we may say, Behold his time is a time of love, not only in point of offer, but a time of love in point of power.

I intended to have addressed myself to you whose time, either now or formerly, has been a time of love: but time does not permit; and this will fall in as natively afterwards.

SERMON LXV.

EZEK. xvi. 8.

Now, when I passed by thee and looked upon thee; behold, thy time was a time of love.

[The second Sermon on this text.]

THE time of life is short and uncertain, and we cannot improve it aright, if we be not acquainted with a time of love. The time of trouble is what we may all lay our account with; for, Man is born to trouble; and we cannot have true peace or rest therein if we know not a time of love. The time of death is approaching; and what have we to sweeten the thoughts of death, if we know nothing of a time of love? It is therefore most necessary we know it.

Having formerly improved this subject in an use of admiration and examination, we shall now, at this time, improve it in an use of information, by deducing two inferences.

1*st*, Hence see, that God, in sovereignty, may disappoint his people, and make the time of seeming anger and of wrath-like dispensations to be a time of love. As his thoughts are not our thoughts, nor his ways our ways; so, his time is not our time: we may hope he will manifest his love at such a time, and he may disappoint our hopes; and we may fear he will display his anger at such a time, and he may disappoint our fears, by manifesting his love. He makes his time of seeming wrath toward his people to be his time of love.

As this inference is suitable to the text, context, and doctrine; so being suitable to the circumstances of many here under visible evidences of God's anger in their families*; I shall insist a little upon this by answering these four questions. 1. What seeming anger may be showing toward his people whose time is notwithstanding a time of love? 2. What love designs may be carrying on by these wrath-like dispensations? 3. What love is there in these angry-like dispensation? 4. What lessons may we learn from this inference?

QUEST. 1. In what respect may he seem ANGRY with these whose time, notwithstanding, is a time of LOVE?

ANSW. 1. It is most angry-like when they fall into sin, when he suffers them to sin, and leaves them to themselves, as he did David, Peter, Hezekiah, 2 Chron. xxxii. 25, 31.; and leave them to heart-hardness; Wherefore hast thou hardened our hearts from thy fear? Isa. lxiii. 17.

2. When they are under many grievous temptations, and buffetings of Satan, as Paul, 2 Cor. xii. 7.; and Job, as you read, chapter first.

3. When they are under sad desertion, saying, as Psal. xxii. 1. My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? How long wilt thou hide thyself? Psal. xiii. 1, 2.

4. When they are under great outward affliction on their persons, families, friends, names, estates, or otherwise, Psal. xxxiv. 19. Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth them out of them all. 2 Tim. iii. 12. If any man will live godly in Christ Jesus, he must suffer persecution.

You will, perhaps, say, Is there no difference between the afflictions of the godly and of the wicked? To this we reply, No difference as to the matter of them, and in their own nature; but vastly vaſtly different in their uſe: even as water in baptiſm taken out of a well, ſo much of the water of that well may be taken for waſhing the hands, ſo much for baptizing; it is the ſame water, but the latter is made uſe of as a ſeal of God's covenant. Thus, when a fever comes, the godly man's perſon, or child, may be as ſorely handled as the wicked; but the one is bleſſed, and not the other: the uſe of affliction to the one, and to the other, is vaſtly different, Jer. xxiv. The prophet here ſees a viſion of two ſorts of figs, the one was good figs, and the other bad, and naughty. And what are theſe but two ſorts of people, that were carried captive to Babylon? Some of them, as good figs, whom God took a care of when carried away, to whom he ſays, that he will have his eyes upon them for good, and not for evil; and that he will bring them again: but as for the other, he ſays, that his eyes were upon them for evil and not for good; and that he would pull them down. Thus, all the people go to captivity together; but yet never think he had no more reſpect to his own among them, than to others. Afflictions come upon the wicked, ſeeking ſatisfaction; but upon the godly, for correction. God out of love chaſtiſes them for their faults. There is a great difference when God, with a rod, ſtrikes his enemies out of anger; and when, with that ſame rod, he ſtrikes his children in love. Therefore, when judgments come upon a land, or a place, let not the godly themſelves think they ſhall be free; but as when a beſom comes to ſweep a houſe, if there be droſs and dirt in it, and alſo diamonds and ſome gold among it, both of them may be ſwept to the door together; but this is the difference, the dirt rots away, but the diamonds or gold remains of as great worth as it was at firſt, till it be ſought and got again.

* At the time when this sermon was preached, most of the children in Dunfermline were seized with the small pox, and vast numbers of them dying.

The godly may lay their account with ſuch troubles and afflictions as the wicked meet with. Why?

(1.) Theſe who are partakers in ſin, muſt be partakers in puniſhment; for, though the godly were guiltleſs in men's eyes, yet before God, and in their own eyes, they are guilty, and ſinful as others are; for, it is hard to live with the wicked, and not be infected with their plagues, and ſo they muſt have part of their judgment.

(2.) There is no promiſe made to any of that ſort, as to exempt them from the croſs. Hence the true Iſraelites and Canaanites cannot be diſcerned by theſe outward things; yet ſay not there is no difference between the afflictions of the one, and the other, as I have ſhown above.

QUEST. 2. What LOVE DESIGNS may be carrying on by thoſe WRATH-LIKE diſpenſations?

ANSW. 1. The firſt love deſign thereby is to make ſin bitter, and bring off their hearts from it, and make them leave it. Fooliſhneſs is bound up in the heart of a child, even of God's children; but the rod of correction drives it off, Prov. xxii. 15. See Jer. ii. 19. Thine own wickedneſs ſhall correct thee, and thy backſlidings ſhall reprove thee: Know then and ſee that it is an evil and a bitter thing, that thou haſt forſaken the Lord thy God, and that my fear is not in thee, ſaith the Lord God of hoſts. By this ſhall the iniquity of Jacob be purged, Iſa. xxvii 9.

2. The next love deſign is, to heal their hearts: to humble the lofty heart, and ſoften the hard heart: therefore he puts them in the fire to melt them; they are naturally hard, ſtout, light, and proud: God melts them with this fire; Thou haſt tried us with fire, as ſilver is tried. See Job xiii. 16. For God maketh my heart ſoft.

3. The third love deſign is, to make them weary of this world, by finding they meet with ſuch bad entertainment in it; Ariſe ye, and depart, for this is not your reſt, for it is polluted, it ſhall deſtroy you even with a ſore deſtruction, Mic. ii. 10. Hence John xvi. 33. In the world ye ſhall have tribulation, but in me ye ſhall have peace; be of good cheer, I have overcome the world.

4. Another love deſign is, to awaken them; but he gives them ſomething ado, and keeps them buſy and fighting: Theſe are the nations God left to prove Iſrael by them; ſlay them not, leſt my people forget, Judges iii. 1. Jer. xlviii. 11. They would ſtink and corrupt if they were not carried into captivity, and emptied from veſſel to veſſel.

5. The next love deſign is, to exerciſe faith and patience; Rom. v. 3. We glory in tribulation, knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope. James i. 2, 3. Count it all joy when you fall into divers temptations; knowing that the trial of your faith worketh patience; but let patience have her perfect work.

6. Another love deſign is, to bring them to themſelves, by prayer, and other duties, otherwiſe they would miſtake themſelves, Hoſ. v. 15. and vi. 1. In their afflictions they ſhall ſeek me early, ſaying, Come let us return to the Lord, for he hath broken, and will heal. True, indeed, hypocrites may cry, when they are afflicted; When he ſlew them, then they ſought him; and they returned and enquired early after God:—Yet they flattered him with their mouths, Pſal. lxxviii. 35, 36. But even the children of grace need to be ſpurred up by the rod; and then they cry to their Father in another manner than hypocrites, in a kindly and cordial manner, Iſa. xxvi. 16. There it is ſaid of his people, Lord, in trouble have they viſited thee; they poured out a prayer when thy chaſtening hand was upon them: then they viſited thee; they were growing ſtrangers to God before the trouble came; they made him few viſits, and were like to grow out of acquaintance with him: but now they begin to renew their acquaintance with him; they poured out a prayer: formerly, before trouble came, they prayed, but their prayers were but drops; they came but ſlowly forth, drop by drop, like water out of a ſtill; but now their prayers are poured out like water out of a fountain: they pour out their prayers, and pour out their hearts in prayer before the Lord, when his chaſtening is upon them; They poured out prayer; in the margin it is a SECRET SPEECH: they may meet with God in public duties and ordinances, but eſpecially their main intercourſe with him is in ſecret; there they ſpeak with God, and commune with him: and thus by afflictions and chaſtiſements their communion with God is advanced.—In a word, ſuch are his love deſigns, by trials and wrath-like diſpenſations, that thereby he makes his mercy the ſweeter to them when it comes; and their love to God the greater, becauſe of his power and pity manifeſted to them in their afflictions.

QUEST. 3. What LOVE is there in theſe afflictions, in puniſhments and chaſtiſements? What love appears in them?

ANSW. Beſides what I have ſaid, 1. There is love in the meaſure of the affliction; while it is not not in fury, but in measure, and in pity; Fury is not in me.—In measure when it shooteth forth, thou wilt debate with it: He stayeth his rough wind in the day of his east wind, Isa. xxvii. 4, 8. As a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him, Psal. ciii. 13.

2. There is love in bringing them under one evil, to save them from a greater; 1 Cor. xi 32. They are chastised of the Lord, that they may not be condemned with the world. See Heb. xii. 6, 7, 8.

3. There is love in making them thus sharers of the mercies of the covenant; for afflictions are a covenant promise; See Sam. vii. 15. and Psal. lxxxix. 31, 32. For which the saints have prayed, as Jer. x. 24. Correct me, Lord, but in judgment; not in thine anger, lest thou bring me to nothing: Thus Psal. vi. 1. and xxxviii. 1.

4. There is love in that thus he favours and honours them to take them under his correction and care: See Job vii. 17. What is man, that thou shouldst magnify him? and that thou shouldst set thy heart upon him? Why? how doth he magnify and favour him? It follows, ver. 18. And that thou shouldst visit him every morning, and try him every moment.

5. There is love in his giving sweet cordials between-hands to bear up their spirits; particularly, some cordials of the new covenant; some words on which he causes them to hope, Psal. cxix. 49. Remember thy word unto thy servant, upon which thou hast caused me to hope. Hence it follows, ver. 50. This is my comfort, in mine affliction; for thy word hath quickened me. He quickens and refreshes with his words of grace.

6. There is love in the constant presence of grace that he allows them under their trouble, according to his promise, Heb. xiii. 5. I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee. Psal. xci. 15. I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him, and honour him. When the goldsmith has cast the gold into the fire, he leaves it not there; nay, then he waits best upon it, that he may suffer it to get no more of the fire than he sees meet.

In a word, such love there is in their afflictions that he is therein carrying on all the love designs that I was mentioning on the former head, and thus preparing them for the heavenly kingdom; Our light affliction, that is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, 2 Cor. iv. 17. They would die and rot in their sins, if they were not poured out from vessel to vessel.

QUEST. 4. What LESSONS may we learn from this inference?

ANSW. 1. That we ought not to seek so much to be rid of troubles; we ought to submit and comply with the troubles that are upon us, seeing they are such excellent things, so profitable and medicinal: we ought neither to lothe at, nor fret under God's physic.

1. We ought to accept of the punishment of sin, saying, I will bear the indignation of the Lord, because I have sinned. We should turn up our cheek to him that smiteth, and not weary of the Lord's chastisments, seeing it is for sin; Why should a living man complain? a man for the punishment of his iniquities? Therefore,

3. We ought to quite sin, saying, What have I any more to do with idols? God's designs, by trouble, to destroy some idol: join with him in seeking the destruction thereof; I will go, and return to my place, till they acknowledge their offences, and seek my face, Hos. v. 15.

4. Give way to the Lord Jesus Christ, and make open doors for him; for this is the great design of all afflicting dispensations: for they are so many knocks at the doors of our hearts. Give way to him in a fourfold capacity.

(1.) As a reprover, Rev. iii. 15, 16, 17. Take with the charge of lukewarmness in being neither cold nor hot.

(2.) As a Counsellor, Rev. iii. 18. Hearken to his counsel, as a Prophet, and buy his eye-salve; his counsel, as a Priest, and buy his white raiment; his counsel, as a King, and buy his tried gold.

(3.) Give way to him as a Corrector, a loving corrector, Rev. iii. 9. As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: he corrects us for our faults, and for our amendment. Be patient, which is a continued submission, and if sense fail, hold by the word.

(4.) Give way to him as an importunate Suitor, Rev. iii. 20. Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with me. He knocks by his word, and by his Spirit, and by his rode; invite him to come in, saying, as Laban in another case to Abraham's servant, Gen. xxiv. 31. Come in, thou blessed of the Lord: wherefore standest thou without? O come in and do not stand knocking, but make king's keys, and exert thy power and come in with salvation.——So much may suffice for the first inference. Hence,

2*dly*, I infer, that neither the sinning nor the suffering circumstances of the people of God, in this world, is inconsistent with his special love to them. Thy time, (though in the context both a sinful and afflicted time,) was a time of love. By the love of God here, I do not understand, either benevolence or good-will, for this is common; God so loved the word, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him, should not perish, but have everlasting life. He has sworn that he has no pleasure in the death of sinners. God may take pleasure in the execution of his justice, but doth not in the punishment of the creature; As I live, I have no pleasure in the death of sinners. Nor do I here understand his love of beneficence; for, he does good to all, He makes his sun to shine upon the good and evil; and sendeth his rain upon the just and unjust. Nor his love of destination towards the elect unconverted; because, whatever be his thoughts of peace, and designs of manifesting love to them, yet he can take no preasure in them, as they are in themselves, while out of Christ. But I understand his love of complacency and delight. Now, I say, his people's sinning and suffering circumstances here, are not inconsistent with his complacential love to them.

For the further clearing of this inference, I would 1. Show that the sinning circumstances of his people here, are not inconsistent with his love. 2. Give a discovery of these persons whose sinning circumstances are indeed inconsistent with his love. 3. Show that the suffering and afflicted circumstances of God's people are not inconsistent with his love to them. 4. Give a discovery of these whose carriage in their afflicted circumstances is indeed inconsistent with this complacential love of God.

[1.] We are to show that the sinning circumstances of God's people here, are not inconsistent with his love. This may be cleared in the four following remarks.

Remark 1. "That none of God's children in "this world, are free of sin:" they have a body of death in them; the company of two armies; two nations struggling. See Rom. vii. 15,—25.

Remark

Remark 2. "That they not only have sin, but "it may be powerful and prevalent:" POWERFUL, so as to carry them captive; I see a law in my members warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity unto the law of sin, which is in my members, Rom. vii. 23. PREVALENT, as David says, Iniquities prevail against me.

Remark 3. "That God observes and regards "the truth of grace in his people, though the "measure may be small; and he loves all his "children, though some of them are babes, "1 John ii. 12, 13, 14." Hence they are ready sometimes to speak thus, "I pray indeed; but, "alas! I do not wrestle, like Jacob; nor water "my couch, like David: I believe; but I have not "joy and peace in believing: I fear; but I am not "in the fear of God all the day long: I love Christ; "but, O my love goes out after other things." Thus it is the weakness, not the want of grace, that troubles and perplexes them: yet God loves his children though weak.

Remark 4. "That the life of the believer is "hid with Christ in God." It is not so much in himself as it is in Christ; and hence they are ready to conclude their sinful circumstances such, as are not consistent with divine love; but their life is most in their head. Four things the saints complain of, and they get ease only in Christ.—Alas! I am guilty; well, where get you ease but in Christ, as made of God your righteousness?—Oh! I have much pollution; well, where is your relief but in Christ, as made of God to you sanctification, the fountain of holiness!—Alas! there is much folly about me; where is your relief but in Christ, as made of God unto you wisdom?—Oh! I have no strength for duty or difficulties; well, where lies your strength but in Christ? In the Lord have I righteousness and strength; he is the glory of their strength. Hence the greatest part of the believer's inherent righteousness, in this world, lies in his faith, going out of himself to Christ for all. This shows, that however sinful his circumstances are, yet he is a favourite of heaven.

[2.] We are next to give a discovery of these persons whose sinning circumstances are indeed inconsistent with his love. There are six sorts of sinners, whose sinful case is indeed inconsistent with God's complacential love.

1. These whose religion lies all in externals; and whose hearts were never exercised before God about sin and wrath; This people draw nigh unto me with their mouths, and honour me with their lips; but their hearts are far removed from me, Mat. xv. 18. Their hearts were never engaged to approach to God.

2. These who never knew the power of the gospel, but are only taken up with the outward pomp of it; pompuous words, the excellency of speech, the flourishes of eloquence, that tickle their fancies: they never got good of the word who never had better to say than this, O! there was a neat sermon; it was gilded with all the flowers of rhetoric, and embellished and set off with all the graces of oratory; an handsome and eloquent discourse; but never could say of any sermon, Did not our hearts burn within us? We were touched and conquered thereby. They know nothing that know not the power of the word; The kingdom of God is not in word, but in power: See Thess. i. 4. The gospel came not in word, but in power.

3. These who persecute the people of God, and have no favour for them, no complacency in them; though they can be civil to them as to others, yet they are far from preferring them to others, in esteeming them, or delighting in them. This is the brand of a natural man, for it is otherwise with God's children, To the saints that are in the earth, and to the excellent in whom is all my delight, Psal. xvi. 3.

4. These that can live peaceably in any one sin, without remorse, without repentance, or reluctance; or by bribing their judgment to defend it, or offering to God a satisfaction, like the whore in the seventh of the Proverbs, I have a peace-offering, this day have I performed my vows; come let us take our fill of love, ver. 14, 18. God's children may have sin prevailing, but never have it peaceably reigning in them.

5. These that were never brought off from the pollutions of the world, such as drunkenness, whoredom, swearing, lying, cheating, stealing, Sabbath-breaking, &c. Some may escape these, through the knowledge of Christ, and yet be apostates, the latter-end worse than the beginning, 2 Pet. ii. 20. Sure then, they are in a sad state that never escaped sin at all: they are not the spots of God's children.

6. These that being strangers to a working faith, are never brought beyond the legal or gospel-hypocrite.—By the legal hypocrite, I understand, the man that is full of good works, yet they have not faith for their root: these are cast; for, Without faith it is impossible to please God.—By a *gospel-*hypocrite, I understand, these that profess faith in Christ, yet their faith has no good works, as the fruits thereof: these are cast; because, As the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works, is dead also.

[3.] We come to show, that the suffering and afflicted circumstances of God's people are not inconsistent with his love to them. This may be clear from the following remarks.

Remark 1. "That God has connected sin and "suffering:" By his DECREE; Though hand join in hand, sin shall not go unpunished: by the LAW; The soul that sinneth shall die, or suffer: by the GOSPEL; If his children break his law, and keep not his commandments; he will visit their iniquity with the rod: by his PROVIDENCE, wherein he declares himself a God that will by no means clear the guilty. What God has joined, we naturally separate, saying, We shall have peace, though we walk after the imagination of our hearts. This was the first heresy the devil bred in the world, You shall not surely die, though you sin; but God has connected sin and suffering.

Remark 2. "God's own people may lay their "account with suffering, while they have sin." Though, through Christ, in a way of faith and repentance, they are freed from hell, and eternal damnation, yet they are not always freed from temporal punishments and chastisements; nay, You only have I known of all the nations of the earth; therefore will I punish you. Though he pardons their sins, yet he may take vengeance on their inventions. Therefore, Remark 3. "There are many rods they are "visited with." Sometimes desertion, sometimes affliction, sometimes temptation, sickness, death of friends and children; Many are the afflictions of the righteous; but the Lord delivereth them out of them all, Psal. xxxiv. 19.

Remark 4. "God has glorious and merciful de- "signs in afflicting them." Glorious with reference to himself; and merciful with reference unto them.—As to himself, it is to clear his justice, ſtice, and manifeſt his equity in the adminiſtration of his government, and that the world may not think he bears with ſin in his own, or indulges them in their rebellion; therefore, though David repented of his adultery and murder, and get a pardon; yet becauſe his ſin was ſcandalous and offenſive, and made the enemies of the Lord to blaſpheme; therefore he muſt be puniſhed with the ſword of a bloody enemy, and a bloody ſword muſt not depart from his houſe.—As to them, it is to do them good, to humble and prove them, to imbitter ſin to them, to make them forſake ſin and flee to Chriſt, and that in their affliction they may ſeek him early, ſaying, Come, let us return to the Lord, for he hath broken, and he will heal us; he hath ſmitten and he will bind us up, Hoſ. v. 15. and vi. 1. compared.

[4.] We now proceed to give a diſcovery of theſe whoſe carriage in afflicted circumſtances is, indeed, inconſiſtent with this complacential love of God.

1. Such as grow worſe by their afflictions, and, inſtead of turning unto God, turn from him; that gnaw their tongues and blaſpheme, like theſe, Rev. xvi. 10. Is it not with many, as with Ahaz, 2 Chron. xxviii. 20, 22. In his diſtreſs he ſinned yet more? It is to be feared, many are worſe inſtead of being better by the rod.

2. Such as are neither better nor worſe, but rather ſtupid and ſottiſh, never affected though afflicted. A child of God may become, in ſome reſpects, ſenſeleſs for a little, with the acuteneſs and ſeverity of his affliction; but he comes to his ſenſes again, and is ſtirred up to a ſuitable affectedneſs before the Lord: but it is ſad when people are no way touched and moved with the hand of God upon them. It is a ſtubborn child that will not weep when the father chaſtiſes; Thou haſt ſmitten them, but they have not grieved, Jer. v. 3. Some are paſt feeling, they are, as it were, threſhed on, and yet they feel it not.

3. Such as feel their miſery and trouble, but do not ſee the cauſe of it; and therefore never take the right way to be rid of it; but, being ſenſible of external trouble, look out for external help, as Ephraim ſaw his wound, and went to king Jarib; but none ſays, Where is God my Maker? Job xxxv. 9, 10. Though they cry, by reaſon of the arm of the mighty, yet none ſaith, where is God my Maker, who giveth ſongs in the night? Few prayers to God, little amendment.

4. Such as in their affliction turn to God, but it is not with their whole heart, but feignedly, Jer. iii. 10. They pray and cry fervently for eaſe and relief, yet hold faſt iniquity; or, if they forſake ſome ſins, yet not all; their main buſineſs is to get eaſe from trouble: thus Pharaoh cried, turned, confeſſed; Pray for me that this death may be removed. Some never deſire a prayer to be made for them till they fear they are on their death-bed: they go to God in affliction, like one that goes to a great man about buſineſs, not about a loving viſit; and if the buſineſs be done, they part and leave him, and perhaps never wait upon him again; they have got their buſineſs done, and they ſeek no more: ſuch are ſelfiſh ſeekers; that ſeek Chriſt only for the loaves.

5. Such as ſeem to turn cordially, and to return, but it is not to the Moſt High: they not only pray that God would remove the outward trouble, but they acknowledge ſin, and reſolve never to be ſo bad again; but it is merely a moral turning, whereby many deceive themſelves: they think their forſaking of ſome ſins, and reforming of ſome things, and performing of ſome duties, wherein they may be wonderfully affected, that this is true grace, but it is not ſo; it is a turning, indeed; but not to the Moſt High. Diſtance from God is the great evil; and nearneſs to him, through Chriſt, is that wherein our great happineſs lies. Now, though men ſhould go never ſuch a length in reformation, if they live at a diſtance from God, it will be of little ſtead to them; the great deſign of the rod is not obtained: our righteouſneſs muſt proceed from the influence of another covenant. People may turn to duty, and not to God, and they may turn to God, and yet not to Chriſt; or to God in Chriſt; as Chriſt ſaid to the diſciples, Ye believe in God, believe alſo in me. If we believe in God, and yet not believe in Chriſt, we believe not in the Moſt High; for God is moſt highly exalted only in Chriſt; He that honours not the Son, honours not the Father. He that turns not to Chriſt by faith, never turns rightly to God by repentance.

6. Such as ſeem to turn to God and Chriſt, but turn away from him again, 2 Pet. ii. 20,—23. And like theſe Pſal. lxxviii. 34, 37. When he ſlew them, they ſought him; yet their heart was not right with God, neither were they ſtedfaſt in his covenant. If any man draw back, my ſoul ſhall have no pleaſure in him. It is true, God's children may have many changes in their frames, and back-drawings in their hearts; but ſtill they have a fixed purpoſe of heart to follow the Lord: like the mariner, that ſets out for ſuch a port, though he may be toſſed at ſea, and carried backward with contrary winds, yet his fixed purpoſe leads him to make for the deſigned haven, at which he at laſt arrives. God's children may draw back, but they are not as theſe that draw back to perdition; The backſlider in heart ſhall be filled with his own way.

SERMON LXVI.

EZEK. xvi. 8.

Now, when I paſſed by thee and looked upon thee; behold, thy time was a time of love.—

[The third Sermon on this text.]

AS a throne of grace is erected for a time of need, Heb. iv. 16. let us come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need: So a time of love is ordered for a time of need, and a time of trouble: and, indeed, as none will apply to a throne of grace, but theſe that are poor and needy, and are really ſenſible of their poverty, and need, and neceſſity; ſo none will duly value and reliſh a time of love, but theſe that are brought to diſtreſs and trouble, eſpecially under apprehenſions of divine anger, wrath, and diſpleaſure: hence our time of miſery, and his time of mercy, are here joined together; Behold, thy time was a time of love.

We have already improven the ſubject in ſeveral uſes: We ſhall now proceed to another uſe of the doctrine, and that is of examination. Try then, if your time of trouble and diſtreſs has been a time of love: for I cannot well ſeparate theſe which the text and context join ſo cloſely.

Firſt, We may view this negatively. There are are ſome whoſe time of trouble is evidently no time of love; as,

1. Theſe whoſe trouble and diſtreſs never make them find more of the vanity of the world diſcovered to them; nor their hearts ever more ſeparate therefrom than formerly. If your farms and merchandiſe, your worldly concerns, (Mat. xxii. 5.) keep your hearts as much away from the goſpel-feaſt, or from Chriſt, as ever, thou haſt got little good of thy trouble. If trouble in a world was bleſt to thee, the world would become more taſteleſs to thee; Jer. iii. 22, 23. Behold, we come unto thee; for thou art the Lord our God: Behold, in vain is ſalvation looked for from the hills and multitude of mountains. Intimating, that as the Lord draws to himſelf, he looſes from the world.

2. Such as were never more awakened by their trouble to a ſerious concern about ſpiritual and eternal matters, ſurely they cannot read a time of love in their trouble; they continue aſleep, ſtill ſecure and careleſs; they are ſo far from being turned to God, that they are not riſen to their feet. See how David in his trouble is awakened to a concern about death and eternity, Pſal. xxxix. He ſees his age as nothing, and every man vanity; then he ſaid, Lord, what wait I for? my hope is in thee.

3. Such whoſe trouble never put them to pray more frequently and fervently than they were accuſtomed to do, and in another manner; when there is no change in their prayers. It is true, ſome in trouble may turn from ſottiſhneſs to ſerioufneſs; natural ſerioufneſs for help and deliverance; but never from natural to ſpiritual ſerioufneſs, ſo as to pray in a ſpiritual manner, for ſpiritual bleſſings, and wreſtle with God for the bleſſing: it is ſaid of the hypocrite, that he doth not cry when God injoins him. See Dan. ix. 13. All this evil is come upon us, yet made not we our prayer before the Lord our God, that we might turn from our iniquity, and underſtand the truth. And Hoſ. vii. 7. All their kings are fallen; yet there is none among them that calleth unto me. When God makes our chief enjoyments fail, and yet we turn not to him by faith and prayer, is it a time of love? Nay, rather of wrath and anger. You may pray indeed, and yet be guilty of this here challanged, becauſe you pray not better than you did. If the Spirit of prayer was poured out upon us in affliction, it would be a ſign of love.

4. Such as under trouble have no more hatred of ſin, nor heart-parting with it, and heart-exerciſe about it, cannot ſay their time of trouble is a time of love. Love to God grows with hatred of ſin; but if you are no more burdened with ſin than ever, your time of trouble hath not been a time of love. The troubles of God's people are to purge away the droſs of ſin, Iſa. xxvii. 9. But if the bellows are burnt, and the metal conſumed, and your iniquities not taken away farther from the heart, it is ſad.

4. Such as under their trouble are brought to no more love to God and duty, ſo as to ſerve him better and more cordially in theſe duties, which before they either omitted, or ſlightly performed; if your ſervice be as faulty as formerly, you come under that charge, I have ſo and ſo ſmitten thee, but thou haſt not returned unto me.

6. Such as find not Chriſt more ſweet and precious to them, by the means of their affliction: the bitterneſs of trouble never made Chriſt ſweet to them, the grievouſneſs of their trouble never made Chriſt precious to them. Is there the ſame ſtrangeneſs between Chriſt and you that ever there was? No fellowſhip with him as your only help, and he in whom only God is well pleaſed and reconciled? Then your time of trouble has not been a time of love. Alas! many wear off the ſorrow of their affliction, partly by length of time, and partly by mirth and diverſion, as Saul called for muſic to drive away the evil ſpirit; partly, by ſupply of comforts, yet remaining, and this lulls them aſleep; but they know not what it is, like Hannah, to come to the Lord with a burdened ſpirit, and get eaſe from him; They looked to him, and were lightened, and their faces were not aſhamed, Pſal. lxxxiv. 5.

Secondly, Let us conſider this poſitively; the time of trouble and diſtreſs may be known to be a time of love. 1. More generally, by the gracious effects of a ſanctified trouble. 2. More particularly, by conſidering the particular troubles we have been under, and their particular uſefulneſs, through grace, to us.

1ſt, More generally. Try it by the gracious effects of a ſanctified trouble. I ſhall mention ſome of theſe by which you may try yourſelves.

1. If your time of trouble and diſtreſs has been a time of love, then your trouble has humbled you. God's deſign, by all the troubles in the wilderneſs, was to humble them, as well as to prove them, and do them good in the latter end; Who fed thee in the wilderneſs with manna, which thy fathers knew not, that he might humble thee, and that he might prove thee, to do thee good at thy latter-end, Deut. viii. 16. Pride and folly is bound up in the hearts of the children of men, but the rod of correction drives it from them, Prov. xxii. 15. He deſigns to hide pride from man, that he may keep his ſoul from the pit, Job xxxiii. 17, 18. We would be apt to ſay proudly with Pharaoh, Who is the Lord that I ſhould obey him? if he did not humble and lay us low. But happy is the man whom affliction humbles to the duſt for the pride of his heart; humbles him to a meekneſs of ſpirit, and ſubmiſſion to his ſovereign will; humbles him to a ſight and acknowledgement of his ſin and wickedneſs, and of unknown corruption, to make him know what was in his heart, Deut. viii. 2. See 2 Chron. xxxii. 32. Humbles him to a renouncing all confidence in himſelf, in his own righteouſneſs, ſtrength, and wiſdom.

2. If your time of trouble and diſtreſs has been a time of love, then your trouble has taught and inſtructed you; Bleſſed is the man whom thou chaſteneſt, and teacheſt out of thy law, Pſal. xciv. 12. Many a good leſſon he teaches his own at that ſchool; Whom he loves, he chaſtens; and whom he chaſtens in love, he teaches. He gives them many ſweet diſcoveries of himſelf; he ſhows them their weakneſs, and his power; their guiltineſs, and his righteouſneſs; their emptineſs, and his fulneſs; their baſeneſs, and his highneſs; their blackneſs, and his beauty; their folly, and his wiſdom; their treachery, and his faithfulneſs; their ſinfulneſs, and his holineſs; their miſery, and his mercy; their inſufficiency, and his all-ſufficiency, &c. What has he taught you by your trouble and affliction? Has he taught you the ſinfulneſs of ſin, that not only it brings evil, but is evil, an evil againſt God? Jer. ii. 19. Thine own wickedneſs ſhall correct thee, and thy backſliding reprove thee: know therefore, and ſee, that it is an evil and a bitter thing, thing, that thou haſt forſaken the Lord thy God, and that my fear is not in thee, ſaith the Lord God of hoſts. —Has he taught you the emptineſs of the creature, and the vanity thereof, that all fleſh is graſs? Iſa. xl. 6. You may have a ſtrong imagination of this in your head, that all fleſh is graſs, but, have you ſo learned it as to have a deep impreſſion of it on your heart?—Has he taught you the abſolute uſefulneſs of Chriſt, his fulneſs, worthineſs, and ſuitableneſs? When the apoſtle is brought, Rom. vii. 24, 25. to an O wretched man that I am! who ſhall deliver me? then follows, I thank God, through Jeſus Chriſt: here is my up-making; here is my help and deliverance; has the God of heaven famiſhed all your gods of earth, and ſtarved you as to creature-comforts, ſo as to make you hunger and thirſt after the fulneſs, ſweetneſs, and righteouſneſs of Chriſt? Then your time of trouble has been a time of love.—Has he, by your trouble, taught you to pray, to weary of the earth, and to long for heaven, and to ſeek him early, and to ſeek him diligently, to ſeek him humbly, and to pour out your heart before him?—Has your trouble taught you what is the one thing neceſſary, and ſet you in queſt of that, with David, Pſal. xxvii. 4. One thing have I deſired of the Lord, that will I ſeek after, that I may dwell in the houſe of the Lord all the days of my life?—Has your trouble taught you the redemption of time? In tranquillity, many golden hours are loſt; but has your trouble taught you to redeem your time, becauſe the days are evil?—Has your time of trouble taught you to improve your Bible, as well as your time; to ſearch it more diligently, to underſtand it more clearly, and to reliſh it more ſweetly? This is my comfort in my affliction, thy word has quickened me.—Has your trouble taught you to prepare for death and eternity, by drawing out your ſoul toward an eternal God? You have heard of God before, but do you now ſee him? Moſes never ſaw God ſo clearly as when he deſcended in a cloud; ſome never ſee God ſo clearly as when he deſcends in a black cloud of affliction: therein we may ſee his holineſs, in hating ſin; his juſtice, in correcting for ſin; his faithfulneſs to his covenant, Pſal. lxxxix. 30,—33.; his power in ſupporting; his mercy in comforting.

3. If your time of trouble and diſtreſs has been a time of love, then it has taught you to forſake ſin, ſaying, What have I any more to do with idols? This is all the fruit to take away ſin.—Has he taught you to turn to himſelf, and his way, (by hedging up your way with thorns, Hoſ. ii. 6, 7.) ſaying, I will go and return to my firſt huſband, for then it was better with me than now. It is good for me to draw near to God.—Has he taught you to turn to yourſelf, and to your right ſenſes? Indeed, true converſion brings a man to his wits; it makes a change in the underſtanding, making him know, believe, and apprehend otherwiſe than he did: you before thought ſin but a ſport; but do you now underſtand it is the greateſt of evils? You imagined a glory in a preſent world; but do you now apprehend the emptineſs of it, and where true ſubſtantial comfort lies?—Has affliction awakened you out of your dream, ſo as you apprehend things to be quite otherwiſe than you took them to be in your ſleep? Converſion is a bringing a madman to himſelf, Luke xv. 17. The prodigal is ſaid to come to himſelf: true grace makes as great a change upon a man, as the reſtoring of a man to his wits does, Mark v. 15. It is like the man called LEGION, clothed, and ſitting at Chriſt's feet, and in his right mind. And, indeed, when a man comes to his right mind, he comes to a right carriage and countenance: we read of ſome, that the very ſhew of their countenances witneſſed againſt them: you will know ſome wicked men by their very outward countenance; for, ordinarily a proud, haughty, and unhumbled air is about them; whereas the grave, heavenly, gentle, and ſweet behaviour and countenance of God's people does ſometimes ſpeak out the habitation of the Spirit of Chriſt in their hearts, and will diſtinguiſh them from the hypocrite, that but affects outward gravity. When a man comes to his right mind, then he comes to a right language, the language of heaven, inſtead of the language of Aſhdod; the earthly mind ſpeaks earthly things natively; but the heavenly-minded man ſpeaks heavenly things as natively; for, Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth ſpeaketh. A new heart gives a man a new tongue; a new heart brings him to new company, and makes him give up with his old, idle, graceleſs companions, and affect fellowſhip with them who fear God. A new heart brings him to a new walk, and converſation in heaven. It is true, the external change is leſs diſcernable in theſe who have been civilly and religiouſly educated; yet there is even as great a difference between that man before and after converſion, though he was never ſo civil before, as there is between art and nature, or between ſome old art, he learned at the ſchools, and a new nature, he has got from God.

4. If your time of trouble has been a time of love, then your trouble brought you to ſubmit to trouble, and chearfully to welcome it as God's ſend; eſpecially if it ſhall accompliſh God's gracious deſign, to welcome it kindly as coming from his hand, eſpecially if he himſelf come along with it: this is called a receiving it at the hand of God; Job ii. 10. Shall we receive good at the hand of God? and ſhall we not receive evil? We kindly receive good at his hand, and every good thing we received, we ought to have acknowledged the hand of God in giving it, and ſo ought we to receive evil: for example, affliction and trouble is God's thunder to awaken ſecure ſinners; now, do you welcome it with this view, and for this end? "Lord, let "me, by this means, be awakened out of ſe- "curity, and quickened to call upon thee?—Affliction is God's forge and furnace to ſoften hard hearts, and to refine baſe metal: do you welcome affliction coming on this errand? Saying, "Now, Lord, let my hard heart be bro- "ken; let me be purged and purified, and come "forth as gold."—Affliction is God's pruning-knife, for lopping off luxuriant branches; do you welcome affliction, providing it has this errand? Saying, "Lord, let me be pruned "and purged; if by this means I may bring "forth more fruit."—Affliction is God's ſchool, where he diſciplines his children, that they may learn obedience by the things they ſuffer: do you welcome affliction on this errand? Saying, "May I receive correction, and be made an "obedient child to my heavenly Father, and "have evidence of my being not a baſtard, but "a true child of God. No matter what be the "affliction thou orders, if thereby I be a par- "taker of thy holineſs."—Affliction is God's winnowing wind, or fan, to unchaff his corn, that it may be fit for his garner: do you welcome it as coming on this errand? saying, "Lord, "let my chaff be blown away, even all the "chaff of my pride, unbelief, worldlineſs, and "carnality, &c."—Affliction is God's eye-ſalve for clearing the ſight of his people, that they may ſee things to be what they are: now, do you welcome affliction, if it may accompliſh this end? Saying, with Job, in his affliction, chap. xxxiv. 32. "That which I know not teach "thou me; ſhow me wherefore thou contendeſt; tell "me what is the quarrel and ground of con-"troverſy; and if I have done iniquity, let me do "ſo no more. What I know not of God, O teach "thou me! What I know not about myſelf; "what I know not about Chriſt, and the myſ-"teries of the kingdom of grace, or about the "myſteries of the kingdom of providence, teach "me; make me know thy way that is in the "ſanctuary, and thy way that is in the ſea."

winnowing

2*dly*, We now proceed more particularly, to conſider the particular times of trouble we have met with in our life-time, and whether or not theſe have been times of trouble to us. The text leads me to obſerve our particular times, Thy time was a time of love; thy time, who art the favoured and beloved of God. What time of theirs? The text allows me to ſpeak of any time that has paſt over thy head, and enquire if it has been a time of love, of ſpecial love. I ſhall therefore ſpeak a little, 1. Of ſome particular periods of your time. 2. Of ſome particular trials and troubles of your time, and enquire if they have been a time of love. As to the

[1.] The particular periods of your time; ſuch as you are, or ſhall be capable to diſcern, are, the times of youth, the time of middle-age, the time of old age, and the time of death; and I would offer you a word of trial concerning each of theſe. By theſe we may be led to reflect upon the time of love either paſt, preſent, or to come in this world.

(1.) There is the time of YOUTH, that is over with ſome, and preſent with others; and would you know if your time of youth has been a time of love? Here let young perſons conſider what is preſent, and older perſons conſider what is paſt; and both try if their time of youth is, or has been, a time of love. Alas! I fear few have it to ſay; becauſe the moſt part ſpend their youth in childiſh trifles and vanities, little better than catching buterflies. But if there be any here, whoſe time of youth has been a time of love, it may be known by theſe four ſcriptural marks.

1. Have you been made to remember your Creator in the days of your youth, according to the commandment of God, Eccleſ. xii. 1.? Have you been brought to a ſerious rememberance of God your Creator, God your Redeemer; and to remember him ſo as to love him above all things? For God has a kindly rememberance of young kindneſs; Thus ſaith the Lord, I remember thee, the kindneſs of thy youth, and the love of thine eſpouſals, Jer. ii. 2. To remember him ſo as to ſeek him above all things; for God ſays, I love them that love me; and they that ſeek me early ſhall find me.

2. Have you been made to remember the day of judgment in the day of your youth? according to that advertiſement, Eccleſ. xi. 9. Rejoice, O young man in thy youth, and let thy heart chear thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thy heart, and in the ſight of thine eyes; but know thou, that for all theſe things God will bring thee into judgment. Have you been brought to know, that for all the ſins of your youth, God will call you to judgment? Have you got the humbling knowledge of it ſo as you have born the yoke of humiliation in your youth? Lam. iii. 27. It is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth. Have you got the upſtirring knowledge of it, ſo as to make you reſtleſs till you was reconciled with the judge, and got your judge to be your friend; God himſelf to be your God in Chriſt?

3. Have you been at the ſchool with young Timothy, of whom it is ſaid, 2 Tim. iii. 15. That from a child he knew the holy ſcriptures, which are able to make you wiſe unto ſalvation, through faith which is in Chriſt Jeſus? Theſe whoſe time of youth has been a time of love, are verily the ſtudents of the ſcriptures, and of the mind of God therein.

4. Have you been affected with the word, as young Joſiah was? of whom it is ſaid, 2 Kings xxii. 19. That his heart was tender, and he humbled himſelf before the Lord, when he heard the word of threatening read againſt Jeruſalem? To this man will I look, young or old, even to him that is poor, and of a contrite ſpirit, and that trembleth at my word. Did the word of threatening touch your heart with fear; and the word of promiſe touch your heart with love, delight, and deſire? And does this work of God upon your heart continue, though not always at the ſame height, and exerciſe, yet through all the ſtages of your after-life, and perſevere to a progreſs in the way of the Lord, and acquaintance with him? For ſome begin with the Spirit and end with the fleſh; they ſeem to begin their days in heaven, and end them in hell: but where it is a ſound work of God, it is durable; The path of the juſt is as the ſhining light, that ſhineth more and more unto the perfect day.—By theſe things you may try if your time of youth is, or has been, a time of love.

(2.) There is a time of MIDDLE-AGE, that is preſent with ſome of you, and over with others; will you try if that is, or has been, a time of love. Indeed, if your time of youth has been a time of love, then your time, or riper years, will be ſo too; for, Whom the Lord loves he loves to the end. But more particularly,

1. If your time of riper years be, or has been a time of love, then you have got grace to lament the folly of your youth, ſaying, with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. lxxix. 8. O remember not againſt us former iniquities. As you have been convinced of the ſin of your nature, heart, and way, ſo you have been particularly challenged for, and made to go heavily under the burden of the ſins of your youth. Job was brought to ſay, chap. xiii. 26. Thou writeſt bitter things againſt me, makeſt me to poſſeſs the ſins of my youth. Was never the ſin of your youth bitter to you before the Lord, and made you cry, with David, Pſal. xxv. 7. Remember not the ſin of my youth? If you can look back upon the follies of your youth with pleaſure, and are never humbled before God for them, know that a ſin never imbittered, is a ſin never pardoned; ſin never hated, is ſin never purged: but if thy time of riper years, be a time of love, it will be a time of hating ſin, and of hating thyſelf for all ſin, and even the follies of thy youth, which others make a ſport of, as being nothing but the tricks of youth. God will not be mocked.

2. If

2. If thy time of riper years be a time of love, it will be a time of ripening for eternity, by redeeming the time that is paſt in idleneſs, wickedneſs, and folly; acccording to the call of God, Eph. v. 16. See then that you walk circumſpectly, not as fools, but as wiſe, redeeming the time. If you never began to redeem time, you never yet have had a time of love. O ſlighter and contemner of time, that knows not what to do with thy time, that idles and trifles it away, and has little or no remorſe what time thou miſpendeſt in idle work, idle talk, idle converſation, idle company; thou knoweſt nothing of a time of love; for time's redemption begins with it. And now, that thou are come to thy middle-age, it is full time to redeem time, as thou wouldſt not be plunged unawares into eternity.

3. If thy time of riper years be, or has been a time of love, then it will be your deſire and endeavour to give that ſtrength of time and days to God, and his ſervice, that others give to the devil, and their luſts. The time of middle-age is a time of ſervice amongſt men, then they are moſt fit for temporal ſervice in their day and generation: even ſo, if we be ſervants to God at all, that time of life is moſt fit and proper for glorifying, and honouring, and doing ſomething for his glory, and the good of our own ſouls, and the ſouls of others, and accordingly will be thus occupied, if our time in that period be a time of love: for, as his time of love begets love, ſince we loved him, becauſe he firſt loved us; ſo, accordingly to the meaſure of our love, ſuch will be the meaſure of our ſervice with delight, from a principle of love. There may be a variety of changes in the meaſure and manner of this loving ſervice; but this will be the habitual buſineſs of the man's life, whoſe time is a time of love, it will be a time of ſervice; and, as Jacob's love for Rachel made his ſervice pleaſant, much more will the love of Chriſt conſtrain to ſerve him.

4. If thy time of riper years be a time of love, then it will be a growing time; as you grow in years ſo will you grow in grace, and in the knowledge of the Lord, and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, 2 Pet. iii. 18. This will hold true of all the children of grace, notwithſtanding of all their winter decayings, yet they have alſo their ſpring-times of reviving and reſtoration, vaſtly different from all the changes of frames and moods that may be among hypocrites; for, when the Lord reſtores his children's frame, he together with it, reſtores their ſoul, and leads them in the paths of righteouſneſs, for his name's ſake, Pſal. xxiii. 3. And there they walk and go on in the ſtrength of the Lord, and from ſtrength to ſtrength, preſſing towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God.— Thus you may try if the time of your middle-age be a time of love.

(3.) There is the time of OLD-AGE that ſome are brought to. You that are come to it will you try if your time of old-age be a time of love? In order to your trial, you may tell me,

1. What is the ſorrow of your old-age? Is the ſin of your youth, and of your riper age, the ſorrow and grief of your age? Is it your ſorrow and grief before God that ſo much time has been loſt, ſo many opportunities miſimproven, and ſo little good has been got and done by you? May you not ſay, with Jacob to Pharaoh, Gen. xlvii. 9. Few and evil have the days of the years of my life been? Do you reckon you have lived no longer than ſince you began to live unto God? Is it your grief that you have lived ſo little from him as your principle, and to him as your end, and that you lived ſo long without him?

2. What is the joy of your old-age? If it be a time of love, then as ſin will be the grief, ſo Chriſt will be the joy of your old-age: when your joy and comfort in the world is withering and dying. Is your joy in the Lord Jeſus beginning to live? They are the true circumciſion, that rejoice in Chriſt Jeſus. Sorrow for ſin, and joy in Chriſt the Saviour, are very conſiſtent; yea, true ſorrow for ſin, cannot be without joy in the Lord; and true joy in the Lord, cannot be without ſorrow for ſin: and if this be your ſorrow and your joy in old-age, it is a time of love.

3. What is the crown of your old-age? Solomon ſays, Prov. xvi. 31. The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteouſneſs. Is the righteouſneſs of Chriſt your crown? Is his righteouſneſs imputed for your juſtification, your crown to cover you before God? Is his righteouſneſs of grace imputed for your ſanctification, your crown for adorning you, and making you all glorious within, and being the principle of holineſs and righteouſneſs of life and converſation before men? Is this the crown of your old-age? And is Chriſt himſelf your crown, as the Lord your righteouſneſs and ſtrength.

4. What is the ſtaff of your old-age? Is the word of grace and promiſe the ſtaff you lean upon for ſupport and comfort in all your tribulations and difficulties? Do you walk and worſhip with this ſtaff: as Jacob worſhipped, leaning upon the top of his ſtaff, in a common ſenſe, Heb. xi. 21.; ſo do you worſhip, leaning on the ſtaff of the divine promiſe. And are you reſolved to walk through death, with this ſtaff, ſaying, Though I walk through the valley and ſhadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me, thy rod and ſtaff they comfort me? Pſal. xxiii. 4. Has God put this ſtaff in your hand, and you reſolve never to quit with it, but ſtill to lean upon his word, and hope in his word? If ſo, it is a time of love.

(4.) There is the time of DEATH a-coming; and would you know whether that will be a time of love? Some go to the devil, or his inſtruments, to know what death they will die; but if you go to God, and his word, you may know indeed what death you will die; I mean, whether you will die in the favour of God, or if your time of death ſhall be a time of love. Would you know what will come of you at death, and how it will fare with you? Whether you will fall in the lap of God's everlaſting love, or fall into the fire of his everlaſting wrath, when death comes, which may be nigh at hand? Why,

1. A time of love in life will certainly end in a time of love at death; for death cannot ſeparate from the love of God, once manifeſted, Rom. viii. 38. If you be ſure then of a time of love now, whether in youth, or riper age, or old age, you may be ſure that the time of death will be a time of love alſo; for, He reſts in his love.

2. And more particularly, if Chriſt be your life now, Col. iii. 3, 4. Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Chriſt in God. If to you to live in Chriſt, then then to die will be gain, Phil. i. 21. Is Chriſt the hope of your life, the joy of your life, the ſtrength of your life, the glory of your life, the Alpha and Omega of your life? Have you come to him for life? And do you live on him as your life? And do you reckon your life without him, to be but death? Then your time of death will be a time of love.

3. If Chriſt be in you by his Spirit, then the time of death will be a time of love: for this is the well of water ſpringing up to everlaſting life, John iv. 14. If any man hath not the Spirit of Chriſt, he is none of his. But if you have the Spirit of Chriſt, he will abide with you for ever, John xiv. 16. This is the earneſt of the inheritance, as he is a ſanctifying and comforting Spirit; a Spirit of prayer and praiſe; a Spirit of grace and love, a Spirit of faith and of a ſound mind.

4. Your time of death will be a time of love, if the ſting of death be taken away by the Lamb of God, who takes away the ſin of the world. Now, is ſin taken away in the guilt and rule of it? How ſhall I know that, ſay you? Why, do you flee to Chriſt for pardon of ſin, as he is the Lord your righteouſneſs? And do you flee to Chriſt for victory over ſin as he is the Lord your ſtrength? And do you ever win to rejoice in his pardoning grace, having ſome peace of conſcience in the faith of his atoning blood? And do you ever win to rejoice in his victorious grace, having ſome begun victory, and ſome hope of full victory over ſin? Why then, according to the meaſure of this freedom from ſin, which is the ſting of death, ſuch may be the meaſure of your aſſurance, that the time of death will be a time of love; and you may ſing in the view of it with Paul, O death! where is thy ſting? O grave! where is thy victory? Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, 1 Cor. xv. 55. If you know none of theſe things in any meaſure, you then have no ground, as yet, to conclude but that your time of death will be a time of wrath, and a porch to eternal death.

[2.] As to the next thing, viz. the particular troubles and trials of your time, by which you may try the time of love: I cannot now inſiſt upon them; I only mention theſe two at the time.

1. Perhaps your time, at preſent, is a time of fear and perplexity about your STATE, not knowing if it be a ſtate of grace; fearing you know nothing of communion with God, or of the power of religion; and you would underſtand, if it is poſſible that ſuch a time may be a time of love, and how it may be known? Why,

(1.) Some of the Lord's people may have communion with God, and experience of the power of godlineſs, and yet not be aſſured of it, becauſe they have not that meaſure of it they would deſire to have.—It is communion with God, when you have a dealing with God, and God with you; when you aſk, and he gives; you knock, and he ſometimes opens a door of liberty unto you.—There is ſomewhat of the power of religion, when at times you find your indiſpoſition for duty, and that you can no more pray than remove a mountain; yet, behold quickly the Lord looſes your bonds, turns your darkneſs to light, your hard heart to a ſoft heart; and you pour it out like water: here is the finger of God; and theſe things demonſtrate a time of love, an intereſt in God, acquaintance with him, fellowſhip with him, and the power of his way, though you diſcern it not.

(2.) Is thy fear in this matter not a lazy, idle fear, but an active, diligent fear, ſtirring thee up to be about the Lord's hand, and in his way? Some have an idle concern; they are eaſy tho' they know not their ſtate; they reckon it only the privilege of ſome, and attainable by few; and therefore no matter though they have it not. This looks like a total want of the knowledge of God and his way. But does your concern make you diligent? and are you as humble, holy, and circumſpect in your darkneſs, as others are in their light of aſſurance? There is hope in Iſrael concerning thee, that thy time is a time of love, notwithſtanding thy darkneſs.

2. Perhaps your time of particular trouble is a time of heavineſs, with reſpect to temporal calamities. I ſhall ſay no more of this at the time, but to refer you to Pſal. lvii. 1. What is your refuge in a day of calamity? If your time of calamity be a time of love, then ſuch will be your exerciſe. Two things take place in all God's children in times of calamity, if faith be any way exerciſed; and in none elſe but them.

(1.) They have a refuge, and God only is their refuge: they are obliged to abandon all other refuges; and tho' they may uſe means, as well as others, yet they have no other refuge but God, that they run to, as Pſal cxliii. 9. I flee to thee to hide me; or, as it is in the Hebrew, I HIDE ME WITH THEE. They have no other refuge but the ſecret of God's preſence, and the ſhadow of his wings: they are brought off from all confidence in themſelves, and in the creatures.

(2.) They are humbled to be content with a refuge without a delivery; even though the day of calamity be not over, yet they can rejoice in their refuge, till the day of calamity overpaſs. They can rejoice in God, as a promiſer, even when he is not yet a performer; and reſt on a promiſe, without the performance; in a refuge, without a delivery. — Try if you know any thing of this, and if your time of trouble has been a time of love.

SERMON LXVII.

EZEK. xvi. 8.

Now, when I paſſed by thee and looked upon thee; behold, thy time was a time of love. —

[The fourth Sermon on this text.]

BETWEEN the time of life, and the time of death, our concern ſhould be, that a time of love interveen. Solomon ſpeaks of a time to be born, and a time to die; intimating, that there is no time to live, that we can promiſe upon; and therefore, between our birth and our death, our main care ſhould be to have a time of love; for, if death prevent us before we know that, wo will be to us that ever we were born. As fire kindles fire, and one flame lightens another; ſo, nothing more reaſonably demands love, than love; and no love ſo powerfully commands love again, as the love of God: our love cannot but be beſt laid out upon one who is ſo far before hand with us, that even, before time, prevented us: he provided for our cure, before ever we had received our wounds; for our healing, before we had contracted tracted our diſeaſes; for our deliverance, before, we had been ruined; for our redemption, before we were in thraldom; for our recovery, before we were loſt; for our riſing, before we were fallen; and for our advancement to heaven, before we were become heirs of hell. Thus was our kind Redeemer rejoicing in the habitable parts of the earth, and his delights were with the ſons of men. The time wherein he vents his love is ſtrange, even the time when we are moſt worthy of his wrath, and unworthy of his love.

In the preceding diſcourſe, we mentioned two evidences, to know if the particular troubles and trials of our time were times of love. We intend at preſent to inlarge a little further upon this point. Try then if your time of need be his time of love, ſince infinite wiſdom uſes to make theſe two meet in the experiences of his own people, whoſe time in this world is a time of tribulation, wherein yet he has ſaid, In me ye ſhall have peace. What time of need is it with you? Why, ſay you,

1. "My time is a time of want, even of outward want and poverty. I have very hard "living in the world; and can ſuch a time be "a time of love?

ANSW. Yea, it may be a time of love, if your want and poverty be weaning you from the world, and wining you to Chriſt, in whom is all ſtore of proviſion; and if you be living upon his promiſe and providence. Know you what it is to live upon ſuch a promiſe as that, Iſa. xxxiii. 16. Bread ſhall be given him, and his water ſhall be ſure? Have you got the faith of his providence, that he feeds the ravens and clothes the lillies; and therefore you rely upon him for proviſion, though you ſhould be kept, as it were, from hand to mouth? Chriſt ſays to the church of Smyrna, I know thy poverty; but thou art rich, Rev. ii. 9. It may be ſaid of ſome, Chriſt knows their riches, but they are poor, not having Chriſt for their ſtock and ſtore: but happy they of whom he ſays, I know thy poverty; but thou art rich; rich in faith, rich in grace: however poor in hand, yet they are rich in bond, by virtue of the bond of the covenant, wherein they have Chriſt bound for their ſupport in a preſent world.—If you know any thing of this, your time may be a time of want, and yet a time of love.

2. "But, ſays another, my time is a time of "inward want, ſpiritual want; want of faith, "and want of grace; and can ſuch a time be "a time of love?"

ANSW. It may be ſo, if you are humbled under a ſenſe of your want, and really ſee your want and poverty in ſpiritual things, you may reckon the Lord thinks upon you with thoughts of peace and not of evil, to give you an expected end. I am poor and needy, but the Lord thinks upon me, Pſal. xl. 17. Yea, you may reckon that the Lord looks towards you with an eye of pity; To this man will I look, even to him that is poor, and of a contrite ſpirit, and trembleth at my word, Iſa. lxvi. 2. —And again, if your want and poverty commends Chriſt and his fulneſs to you; To them that believe he is precious: and even to them who believe their own want and his fulneſs; who believe their utter inſufficiency, and his infinite all-ſufficiency; who believe they are nothing, and he is all in all.—If you be kept empty, and ſenſible of your utter want, ſo as to have no confidence in yourſelves, or in the fleſh, and hence find no cauſe of rejoicing, but only in Chriſt, and his fulneſs, and dependant upon that, your time of want is a time of love. Bleſſed are the poor in ſpirit; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven, Mat. v. 3.

3. Say you, "My time is a time of guilt; I "have a ſenſe of much guilt lying upon my "conſcience; and can that be a time of love, "which is a time of the prevalency of ſin, and "the preſſure of guilt?"

ANSW. It may be a time of love in the following caſes.—If the prevalency of ſin be humbling you to the duſt, ſaying, O wretched man that I am! who ſhall deliver me from this body of ſin and death?—If the preſſure of guilt be leading you to the fountain of Chriſt's blood for cleanſing.—If the pardon of ſin be highly valued by you, above all things in this world, ſaying, Bleſſed is the man whoſe tranſgreſſion is forgiven, and to whom the Lord imputeth not iniquity.—And if at any time the ſenſe of pardon, or the hope of pardon, melt your heart, and make you fear to offend any more, and afraid of falling into ſin, and lead you to ſay, Henceforth we will not go back; quicken us, and we will call upon thy name, Pſal. lxxx. 18.—Do you get any grace to hate ſin, and to reſolve a war againſt it? grace to hope for victory at laſt, though you ſhould fight all your life? And are you made ſometimes to fight in hope of full victory through Chriſt, ſaying, I thank God, through Jeſus Chriſt.——In this caſe, thy time of ſenſible guilt, and of the prevalency of ſin, may notwithſtanding be a time of love.

4. Say you, "My time is a time of weakneſs; "I find no ſtrength for duty, no ability for "work or worſhip that God calls me to; and "can that be a time of love?"

ANSW. Why, even that time may be proven to be a time of love.—If the ſenſe of thy weakneſs drives thee out of thyſelf to the ſtrength and ſufficiency of Chriſt, ſaying with the apoſtle, Not that we are ſufficient of ourſelves, to think any thing as of ourſelves; but our ſufficiency is of God, 2 Cor. iii. 5.—Do you know, when you are weak in yourſelves, then to be ſtrong in the Lord; ſtrong in the grace that is in Chriſt?—When you find in yourſelves no grace to pray, yet even then have you gone to prayer, and found ſtrength before you was aware, ſo as you could ſay, In the day when I cried, thou anſweredſt me; and ſtrengthenedſt me, with ſtrength in my ſoul, Pſal. cxxxviii 3. I found my ſoul weak and without ſtrength; but when I began to try in that caſe, he ſtrengthened me with his ſecret power, his inviſible hand.—Did you find, that he who brings light out of darkneſs, brought ſtrength out of weakneſs? And is your weakneſs ſometimes the occaſion of magnifying and ſetting off the ſtrength of Chriſt? according to 2 Cor. xii. 9. My grace ſhall be ſufficient for you, and my ſtrength ſhall be perfect in thy weakneſs.—And are you thence ſometimes made to glory in your infirmities, that the power of Chriſt may reſt upon you? and content that your ſtock of ſtrength is not in your own hand, but in Chriſt's? Bleſſed is the man whoſe ſtrength is in thee.——In this caſe, your time of weakneſs may be a time of love.

5. "Perhaps your time is a time of difficulty, "about ſome piece of work, ſome ſtep of your "pilgrimage, wherein you know not what to "do; can ſuch a time be a time of love?"

ANSW. Yea, it may, in the following caſes. Are you getting grace to ſpread the caſe before the

the Lord, to acquaint him with your case, according to that call, In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy steps?—Do you commit the guiding of your ways to him, according to that, Psal. xxxvii. 5. Commit thy ways to the Lord; trust also in him, and he will bring it to pass? Though you see no light, nothing but darkness, it is a sign he will direct according to his promise; I will lead the blind in ways they know not; and in paths which they have not trode.—Are you waiting on him for his promised conduct, according to that promise, They shall hear a voice behind them, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it? Thy time of difficulty is a time of love; He will guide thee with his eye.

6. Say you, "My time is a time of great affliction; affliction on my body, affliction on "my soul, affliction in my family; how shall "I know if this time of affliction be a time of "love?"

ANSW. It is so, in the following cases. Are you helped to cast your burden on the Lord, to roll this case upon him?—Do you see the wisdom of God in afflicting you, the holiness of God, the faithfulness of God, the mercy and love of God in your affliction? Do you see his name?—Are you brought to submit to God, and put yourself in his hand, to lay the rod on your back as he pleases, if it be needful? And especially to look to him for sanctifying the rod, and concerned rather to have affliction sanctified, than removed, saying, O let the wind blow, till my chaff be blown away; let the fire burn, till my dross be purged out, &c.—Thy time of affliction is a time of love.

7. "Oh! but my time, say you, is a time "of rebellion and incorrigibleness; though I have "been afflicted, yet I am not the better; I find "my heart rebelling against his chastisements; "and that though he hides himself, and smites, yet "I go on frowardly in the way of my heart, as it is "said, Isa. lvii. 17. I find corruption irritated "by the cross, and enmity strong; can such a "time be a time of love?"

ANSW. It may be terrible, indeed, to think of thy rebellion against word and rod; yet thy time may notwithstanding all this be a time of love; if thy enmity be afflicting to thee, and thou heavily lamentest it before the Lord, saying, Lord, thou seest nothing will do with "me; no word, no rod; such is the power of "sin and enmity: nothing but a sovereign step "of grace will overcome me; therefore, See my "ways, and heal me, in a way of sovereign grace:" And dost thou therefore cast thyself down at the throne of sovereign grace, that thou mayst be conquered, pitied, and saved in this way? Art thou complaining of thy enmity before God, and of thy incorrigibleness, and waiting upon God for more and more of his power to be exerted for destroying it, and delivering thee? There is hope in Israel concerning thee, that thy time is a time of love: He will see thy ways, and heal thee.

But, say you, "My time is a time of divine "absence and anger; I think the Lord has cast me "off; and can such a time be a time of love?"

ANSW. Yea, it may be a time of love notwithstanding these apprehensions of thine: if in this case thou art endeavouring, through grace, to look to the temple of God, saying, with Jonah, chap. iii. 4. I said, I am cast out of thy sight; yet will I look again to thy holy temple.—Art thou out of the belly of hell crying to God; and against hope believing in hope, looking and longing for the rising of the Sun of righteousness, and a reviving in thy bondage?—And while he is absent and angry, can you say, The desire of your soul is to his name? A believer, at his lowest, may be known by his hidden and holy desire.

QUEST. When is the desire holy?

ANSW. 1. When you desire to be justified, that you may be sanctified; or to be pardoned, that you may be purified. 2. When you desire to be saved, that God may be glorified; or to have happiness, that God may have honour.

Again, try the time of love by the REMARKABLENESS of that time. And here I would offer two things, for helping your trial. 1. The remarkable parts. 2. The remarkable attendants or properties of the time of love.

1st, Try the remarkable PARTS of it; I mean, 1. The commencement, or morning of it. 2. The progress, or mid-day, of the time of love; for it never has an evening.

1. One of the remarkable parts of it is the commencement thereof; preparatively, by the law; effectively, by the gospel.

(1.) Preparatively, by the law; giving a view of sin, and the wrath of God for sin; for people never value the revelation of the love of God in the gospel, unless they have got a revelation of the wrath of God in the law: has ever the commandment come? Was you ever brought to the foot of Sinai, and there got you a discovery of your sin and guilt, and of the wrath of God you deserve, making you tremble, and fear hell and damnation, saying, Oh! what shall I do? I cannot live, and I dare not die; what shall I do to be saved? Have you come under the spirit of bondage and conviction?

(2.) Effectively, by the gospel; the law breaks the hard heart, but the gospel melts it. A stone only broken, may be still a hard stone: but the gospel melts, the Sun of righteousness dissolves, and that partly, by the revelation of mercy to the sinful, guilty creature; partly, by the particular offer of mercy: here is mercy for you, a Christ for you, salvation for you, that deserved damnation; O this melts! And partly, by the Spirit of faith, given to fall in with the gospel, and receive Christ for wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption, and to inlist with Jesus Christ.—Then the time of love is commenced in the soul.

2. The other remarkable part of the time of love is the progress thereof. The time of love is continued, and the design of love carried on more and more. And that,

(1.) By teaching ordinances; as faith comes by hearing; so the increase of faith by hearing more and more.

(2.) By sealing ordinances, and solemn occasions; they see his power and glory in the sanctuary; get here a little and there a little. And,

(3.) By crosses and judgments; for, By this shall the iniquity of Jacob be purged; and this is the fruit of all, to take away sin. It was good for me that I was afflicted, for now have I learned thy law.

(4.) By mercies outward and inward; they are brought to fear the Lord and his goodness; get new discoveries of his glory from time to time; new communications of his grace, new restorations after decays; He restoreth my soul; and new conversions, as it is said to Peter, When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren; and David, Restore to me the joy of thy salvation; then will I teach transgressors thy way. They get new excitations and upstirrings; upſtirrings; new drawings, new quickenings; new gales of the Sprit. By theſe means the time of love is continued, even to the believer's ſenſe now and then; and the deſign of love carried on.——This is the progreſs thereof.

2*dly*, Try the time of love by the remarkable attendants and properties thereof.

[1.] Try it by the remarkable ATTENDANTS of it. I only mention two of them.

1. It is attended with remarkable power, Pſal. cx. 3. The time of love is called a day of power; but how can this power be remarked? Why, how do we remark the power of God in the works of creation, but by the effects thereof in the viſible heavens, ſun, moon, and ſtars? ſo, how do we remark the power of God in the work of grace, but by this effect thereof, our being made willing? The inviſible power of God may be known by this effect. But many ſay, they are willing, who are not truly ſo.

QUEST. When is one made truly willing?

ANSW. There are four properties of true willingneſs. (1.) It is a pleaſant willingneſs, not conſtrained by terror or dread only; but made freely willing, pleaſantly willing. And this pleaſant willingneſs hath two things in it, joy and generoſity. It has joy in it; the man is glad to ſell all, that he may buy the pearl. It has generoſity in it; he would give a world for Chriſt; nay, a thouſand worlds for him, had he them at his command.

(2.) It is a preſent willingneſs; the man goes in preſently to the call, according to that, Now is the accepted time, now is the day of ſalvation. Many are content of Chriſt for the future, and they delay till ſome other time; but they are not for Chriſt's being a preſent portion: it is otherwiſe with ſuch who are made willing.

(3.) It is a peremptory willingneſs; the ſoul ſays, O! I muſt have Chriſt; I cannot want him; I cannot live without him; I cannot die without him; I periſh without him: give me Chriſt, or elſe I die.

(4.) It is an univerſal willingneſs; the ſoul is made willing to have Chriſt for ſanctification, as well as righteouſneſs; to be ſaved from ſin, as well as from wrath; to have Chriſt and his croſs, as well as Chriſt and his crown.

2. It is attended with remarkable light and knowledge, 2 Cor. iv. 6. Try then your time of love by its being a time of light, and ſaving knowledge. And this knowledge is remarkable for theſe four properties.

(1.) It is a down caſting knowledge and light; The loftineſs of man is brought low, and the Lord alone exalted, Iſa. ii. 11. Other knowledge and learning puffeth up; the more a man has of it, he is the more proud: but this knowledge caſts him down to the duſt, down to the ground; it caſts down ſelf, and ſelf-righteouſneſs, ſelf-wiſdom, ſelf-love, and ſelf-ſeeking.

(2.) It is an uplifting knowledge; it exalts Chriſt in the heart, and lifts up the heart in the ways of the Lord, in reſpect of ſatisfaction; it brings in ſatisfaction to the heart and conſcience: this water being given, the man thirſts no more, in reſpect of abſolute want, John iv. 14. Nothing ſatisfies him but this knowledge of Chriſt, or, rather this Chriſt made known.

(3.) It is a ſingular knowledge; ſingular in reſpect of the object, author, and ſubject.—The object is a God in Chriſt; whatever men know, if they know not God, in Chriſt, they are miſerable; though they had all ſcriptural knowledge, if they want the knowledge of Chriſt, It may be ſaid of them, they know nothing as they ought to know. In paradiſe, there were many trees, and every one good; but only one tree of life: in the ſcriptures, many truths, and all good; but there is only one tree of life there; and we periſh, if we eat not that.—The Author of this knowledge is God; Fleſh and blood has not revealed theſe things to thee, but my Father who is in heaven.—The ſubjects are ordinarily poor babes, who have neither wiſdom nor prudence, in reſpect of others in the world; I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt revealed them to babes, Matth. xi. 25. Some are capable of this knowledge of Chriſt, that are not capable of other learning. A wooden candleſtick can hold a candle as well as a ſilver one; ſo are theſe capable of the knowledge of Chriſt, that are deſtitute of outward ornaments and literature.

(4.) It is a warming and working light and knowledge. We know ſo much of God and Chriſt, as we are affected, touched, and wrought upon. It is ſaid, Jer. ii. 8. They that handle the law, know not God. Some may handle the law, and yet not know God; they may handle the goſpel, and yet not know Chriſt, by this ſpecial, ſingular, and ſaving knowledge: they may have a vaſt deal of head knowledge; but a ſpark in the heart is worth a torch in the brain. The knowledge of Chriſt feeds all graces. It feeds faith; They that know his name will put their truſt in him. It feeds repentance; They ſhall look on him whom they have pierced, and mourn. It feeds love; they only who know him to be altogether lovely, do truly love him. It feeds all grace; ſtrengthening all grace. Examine this knowledge, and be ſure you find the difference between it and the form of knowledge, which never warms the heart, or works any change in you: it is but like the ſun painted upon a board for a ſign; you call it a ſun, but it has no ſun-light, no ſun-influence, no ſun-warmth; ſo you may call that the knowledge of Chriſt which hypocrites and profane graceleſs men may have; you may call it knowledge, but it is but a form, a ſhadow, a picture: there is nothing of the light, heat, and influence that will take place when you come to the true light.—Examine yourſelf by theſe things.

[2.] There are ſome remarkable PROPERTIES of the time of love, by which you may try.

1. It is a time of remarkable joy and ſorrow; ſorrowing for ſin, and yet rejoicing in the Lord; They ſhall come with weeping, and with ſupplications I will lead them; or with FAVOUR, Jer. xxxi. 9. He leads them with weeping, and with ſinging; weeping, for their ſins; and ſinging, for his favours. The time of love is called, Song ii. 11. a time of the ſinging of birds, and the voice of the turtle; which, applied to the believer, is his mournful notes. It is remarkable, that the book of Lamentations is all poetical: every chapter, except the third, has twenty-two verſes; and every verſe begins with a letter of the Hebrew alphabet; the firſt verſe with the firſt letter, Alef; the ſecond verſe, with the ſecond letter, Beth; and ſo on to the cloſe: and the third chapter has ſixty-ſix verſes, and every three verſes begins with a letter thereof, three times over; the firſt three verſes begin with the firſt letter, three times over; the ſecond three verſes, beginning with the ſecond letter, three times times over, and so on. What is the meaning of all this, but to show, that a time of mourning and lamentation may be to the Lord's people a time of mirth and holy music? And ordinarly it is so: and when hath the believer more joy than when in a flood of tears before the Lord?

2. It is a time of prayer; and very remarkable for it.

QUEST. What is there remarkable in the prayers of these, whose time is a time of love.

ANSW. There are two remarkable outpourings, viz. the outpouring of the Spirit, mentioned Zech. xii. 10.; and the outpouring of the heart, mentioned Psal. lxii. 8. When these two concur, then it discovers a time of love. At other times prayer comes drop by drop, as water out of a still; but then it comes plentifully as water out of a fountain. See Isa. xxvi. 16.

3. It is a time of praise; the heart is filled with the high praises of God. And this heart-exercise takes in both admiration and invitation: admiration; O wonder! says the soul, that ever God manifested his love to the like of me, What am I, or my father's house? Invitation, to all the creatures to help them to praise; O let sun, moon, and stars praise him. This seems to be the temper of the heavenly harpers in their halelujahs, Praise ye the Lord; importing, that they cannot praise him; therefore let all the creation help us to praise; Praise ye the Lord.

4. It is a time of love, a loving time; for love manifested begets love; the love of God kindles love in us in the time of love: and it is remarkable in two things. The love that results from the manifesting of divine love, gives, first the HEART; and secondly the HAND to the Son of God.—The HEART; My son, give me thy heart. Many say they love Christ, and yet give their heart to the world, and to their lusts; but as Delilah said to Samson, Judges xvi. 15. How canst thou say, that thou lovest me, when thy heart is not toward me? So, how can you say, that you love Christ, when your heart is not toward him, but given away to other lovers? If Christ be your treasure, your heart will be set upon him.—Again, the HAND is given to him, to serve and work for him: we read of the labour of love. As Jacob served for love to Rachel, so the love of Christ constrains to his service; If ye love me, keep my commandments. It is true, the believer's heart may frequently misgive him, and then he draws away his hand too: but this is not acted like a believer; this is his burden and disease; and he is never himself till his heart and hand be both given to the Son of God.——Try yourself by these things.

We shall now shut up our present exercise, with a short address to you whose time, either formerly has been, or at present is, a time of love. And our advice to you is, O render unto the Lord love for love. And to induce you hereunto.

1. Consider, how absolutely free, unmerited, and undeserved his love was to you. There was nothing that could induce him to love you: every thing about you was wretchedness and misery, as we endeavoured to shew in tracing the connexion where our text lies. You was lying in your blood, no eye to pity you; and yet, in these deplorable circumstances, in his passing by, Behold, your time was a time of love. It was said of Mary, that she loved much, because much was forgiven her. Well, see that you love the Lord more than ever, because much iniquity hath been forgiven you, and much love conferred upon. Thy time was a time of love.

2. Consider, in order to persuade you to render him love for love, that he was before-hand in his love towards you; his love prevented yours: and if it had not been so, your time could never have been a time of love. Therefore, says the apostle, We love him, because he first loved us, 1 John iv. 19. Let the priority of his love to you, influence you to love him. Behold, thy time was a time of love!

3. Consider, what an agreeable and comfortable time your time of love was, when he brought you into the banquetting house, and displayed his banner of love over you. When you was enjoying these love-calls, love-visits, love-tokens, love-looks, and feasting upon the loving kindness of God; how was your soul ravished with his love! Were you not made to cry out, O the height, the breadth, the depth, and the length of the love of God! Should not this then be a powerful motive to engage you to render him love for love? And, is it not the best way to have his love-interviews continued with you? O love the Lord, all ye his saints. Keep yourselves in the love of God. ——We might adduce many other considerations to persuade you to this, but we defer them at present; we may, perhaps, have an opportunity afterwards.

SERMON LXVIII.

EZEK. xvi. 8.

Now, when I passed by thee, and looked upon thee; behold, thy time was a time of love.—

[The fifth Sermon on this text.]

THERE are two words that should take up most of our thoughts and cares, namely, TIME and ETERNITY; time, because it will soon be at an end; and eternity, because it will never come to an end. The candle of time is fast burning, and if we play the fool, and be idle about eternal work, till the candle be burnt out, we will have ourselves to thank, if we go to bed in the dark: I mean, if we go to the grave and eternity, under the dark cloud of God's wrath, we cannot expect, unless we are madly deceiving ourselves, an eternity of happiness in the other world, if we are strangers to a time of love in this world: for, whom God loved, with an everlasting love from eternity, he draws them with loving-kindness in time, that he may crown them with loving-kindness to eternity. His everlasting love, in point of manifestation, hath its beginning in time, upon all the objects thereof; and these in whom it has no beginning in time will be the objects and vassals of wrath for ever. It is therefore a matter of the highest moment to know what takes place in time now; and if your time be a time of love.

We have not only finished the doctrinal part of this subject; but also insisted at considerable length, on the application, in the prosecution of several uses. It now remains that we conclude the subject with an use of exhortation. And our exhortation shall be tendered to two sorts of persons. 1. To these whose time NEVER was a time of love. 2. To these whose time HAS BEEN such a time of love as I have spoken of.

First, We tender our exhortation, to you whose whose time NEVER was a time of love; I mean, you, who notwithstanding of your living under a loving dispensation of divine grace, by the gospel, yet have never seen or believed, the love and grace of God in Christ, so far as to draw out your heart-love to Christ. I would say to you, 1st, O consider what a miserable state you are in, and like to be into, to all eternity. In time you are miserable; for, you are empty of all good, and full of all evil.—How empty are you of all good, while you are without Christ, and love to him, having nothing of the love of Christ? you have no good in you: you would think it a bad house to dwell in where there is neither meat, nor drink, nor clothes: but a worse house is your heart, while you have neither God, nor Christ, nor the Spirit.—How full are you of evil, while destitute of the love of Christ? Full of enmity against God, full of sin, full of hell, full of the devil, full of the wrath of God, it abideth upon you; and you are exposed to the utmost measure of it. You are miserable through, all eternity, if you live and die in that state; If any man love not our Lord Jesus Christ, let him be ANATHEMA MARAN-ATHA; [that is, accursed until Christ come,] 1 Cor. xvi. 22. Let him come under the sentence of the greater excommunication, of being for ever banished from the presence of God.

2dly, Consider how it comes about, that your love goes not out after Christ, when you live in a time wherein his love and loveliness are manifested. Surely, it must be from desperate enmity. Have you not heard of his fame? Is there any thing in all the world, challenges your love so much? If you have heard and forgotten, I will just now lay before you so much of the loveliness of Christ as may for ever render you inexcusable, if you henceforth fall not in love with him above all things else. Consider what he is in himself, what he is to God, what he is to you, sinner.

[1.] Consider what he is in himself. Is he not altogether lovely, considered either in his natures, or person?

1. View him in his natures, divine and human.—In his divine nature, he is God's Equal; Who thinks it no robbery to be equal with God: he is the true God, and eternal life; and has in him all the fulness of the Godhead bodily, that is, personally; The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.—In his human nature: view his human body and soul. His human body now glorified in heaven, what a glorious body is it! The apostle speaks of the glory of bodies terrestrial and celestial; how much more glorious are celestial above terrestial? And, how glorious above all celestial bodies is that of the Lord Jesus Christ! When Paul, at his conversion, got a view of it in a vision, it exceeded the sky in its meridian brightness. His human soul, how much more lovely is that! By how much the soul is beyond the body, by so much the soul is more glorious than the body. All the excellent qualities that ever adorned a soul are in him to perfection: and besides these, a supereminent unction of the Holy Ghost, the Spirit above measure, whereby he is immensely full of grace and truth.——He is thus the most amiable object, viewed in both his natures, human and divine distinctly. But beside this,

2. View him in the union of both these natures, as different, as finite and infinite, in one person: this brings God down to man as near as he can come, and raises man up to God as high as he can ascend. What a terror might unvailed Deity be to guilty sinners, were it not allayed with the vail of humanity? But, O! how fit a Mediator is he, being IMMANUEL, God-man? Thus he has a divine fulness and sufficiency to save us, together with a human meetness and congruity for applying it in a manner most suitable and proper to our condition. Now, may not that question be for ever silenced with contempt, What is the Christian's Beloved more than another's beloved, that he should be so mightily extolled? Is there one in the world so lovely and glorious? Is he not white and ruddy, the chiefest among ten thousand?

[2.] Consider what he is to God; particularly in these two respects.

1. Is he not God's darling? Has not the Father testified his love to Christ above all things else? Isa. xlii. 1. Behold my Servant, whom I uphold; mine Elect, in whom my soul delighteth. Mark i. 11. This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. What honour consequently has he put upon him, in raising him from the dead, and setting him at his own right-hand, and giving him a name above every name, committing all judgment, yea all things into his hand. He is the Son of his love. We are then to love Christ for his own sake and his Father's sake: and ought we not to love him as the Father's favourite? Is it not a sufficient incentive to our love, that, beside his own personal amiable qualities, he is so much the object of the Father's love.

2. Is he not the Father's representative? God's greatest representative, in whom he displays all his perfections? 2 Cor. vi. 6. John xiv. 9. John i. 18. The representation of the divine glory in Christ exceeds all other representations in these particulars.

(1.) It is the brightest: the glory of God shines no where so brightly as in his infinitely fair face, who is therefore called the brightness of his Father's glory, and the express image, [or, REPRESENTATION] of his person, Heb. i. 3.

(2.) It is the fullest: the representation of God's glory, in the work of creation and providence, set forth, in a most illustrious manner, some of his perfections; but here all his glory shines with inconceivable brightness; all his attributes, even his mercy and truth meet together, righteousness and peace kiss each other. Here they all shine with a peculiar lustre, and harmoniously conspire and centre.

(2.) It is the most intimate and propitious: how could God reveal himself more nearly, than through the flesh of his Son? How more graciously, than by giving him to us, and for us? How more kindly could he represent his infinite justice and holiness, than as vindicated, satisfied, and glorified in Christ, by whom grace reigns, through righteousness unto eternal life.

(4.) It is the most safe representation of the divine glory, and secure from being perverted to an undue exaltation of the medium: for, the glory of God, represented by the heavens, has been abused to idolatry, men worshipping the means by which God manifests himself: but here there is a safe representation; the mean and end meet in one: we cannot put too much honour upon Christ; He that honours him honours the Father.

(5.) It the most mysterious: here is the wisdom of God in a mystery; the manifold wisdom of God: such ſuch a large compaſs, both in contrivance and execution, that none can penetrate into the depth.

(6.) It is the moſt durable and permanent: ſee Iſa. li. 6. The earth ſhall wax old as a garment; but my ſalvation, through Chriſt, ſhall be for ever; and my righteouſneſs ſhall not be aboliſhed. God will never ceaſe to manifeſt his glory through Chriſt: though there may be different ways of that manifeſtation, yet it will be to eternity; Rev. xxi. 23. The Lord God, and the Lamb, is the light of the place. Rev. xxii. 3. The throne of God is the throne of the Lamb; and his throne is for ever and ever.

Now, conſider what a ſacred and precious thing the divine glory is above all other concerns; and that a proportionable love and eſteem is due to things according to the impreſſions of God upon them, and their reference to God's glory. Doth not Chriſt then challenge our higheſt love and eſteem on this account, beſides what he merits from us by his original intrinſic excellency.

[3.] Conſider, what he is to us, or what relation he ſtands in to ſinners; and what he has done, or is doing, by virtue of that relation.

1. What relation he ſtands in to us, ſinners, as a Saviour of Gods appointing and anointing; We teſtify that God ſent his Son to be the Saviour of the world, 1 John iv. 14. He is a Saviour of ſinners by office; and ſhould not ſinners love their Saviour, and employ him? Should we not love him with a love of deſire, to cloſe with him as our Saviour; and then with a love of delight in him? The general relation to us ariſing from his partaking of the ſame nature, is the foundation of a particular relation, and ſhould be improven to the neareſt relation of being myſtically one.

2. What he has done, and is doing. He came from heaven to earth to ſeek and to ſave loſt ſinners; he made himſelf in all things like unto us, ſin only excepted; excepted as to the inheſion of it, which was abſolutely remote from him: but not excepted as to the imputation of it; for, He bore our ſins in his own body, and ſubmitted to have the iniquities of us all laid upon him; that he, as our Surety, might become accountable and anſwerable for them; and as the Lamb of God ſacrificed for us, might take them away: finding us obliged to the perfect obedience the law required, but utterly unable to perform it, and ſo cut off from the remoteſt poſſibility of ever obtaining that life it was ordained to convey: he yielded, in our place, an obedience to it abſolutely perfect, and meritorious of eternal life, and gives this his righteouſneſs to us, to become our title to heaven and eternal happineſs: finding us preſſed down under an immenſe debt to divine juſtice, and the penalty of the law, he took it on himſelf, paid it off, and diſcharges us by ſuffering for us; thus he is the end of the law, and perfection of it, for righteouſneſs, which we could never attain ourſelves, but do now in him, the end and determination of its penal ſanction: finding us in priſon, bound with the fetters of our own iniquities, held in the cords of ſin and miſery, and reſerved to the day of wrath and vengeance, he comes and viſits us in our priſon, and is content to be kept there for a time, in our room, till he ſhould ſatisfy for our crimes, that we might be ſet at liberty: finding us under the curſe, he is made a curſe for us, that we might be redeemed from it: finding us doomed to death, he died for us, that we might live: finding us lying under the edge of the flaming ſword of vindictive juſtice, he put his own neck upon the block, and made his ſoul an offering for ſin: finding a cup of heavy wrath and indignation prepared for us, he took it out of our hands, into his own, and drank it off, in our ſtead, that we might not have the leaſt drop to our own ſhare, but in lieu of it a cup of ſalvation for us to drink.

Was there ever love like Chriſt's, which ſuch floods of tribulation could not quench or drown! Though he was God, yet he became man; yea, His viſage was more marred than any man, and his form more than the ſons of men, Iſa. lii. 14. So that he was ſo far from appearing like a God, that he ſcarce looked like a man, but rather as a worm, Pſal. xxii. 7. A worm trampled on by all; a reproach of men, and deſpiſed of the people. Why all this, but that his love might ſhine the brighter through the dark ſhades that eclipſed his glory? The more he leſſened his perſon, the higher he raiſed his love, which appeared in all its fulneſs, while the other diſappeared, as it were, for a ſeaſon, and ſeemed to fade away. Thus he is amiable in his poverty; for, He was made poor, that we through his poverty might be made rich: amiable in his ſtripes, whereby we are healed: amiable in all the amazing inſtances of ſelf-abaſement, providing for the greateſt happineſs to us, at the greateſt expence to himſelf.

Ought he not to be loved, who thus has loved us unto death? Who muſt be loved if not he? And how ſweetly may the love of a believer entertain itſelf at the very croſs of Chriſt, which is a tree of life; of life to us, though it was a tree of death to him; a tree of bleſſedneſs to us, though a tree of bitterneſs to him? We may gaze at the croſs, and Chriſt hanging upon it, and have loving, raviſhing proſpects here, without the leaſt partaking of the diſtreſs and bitter anguiſh of ſpirit Chriſt endured upon it; for the croſs of Chriſt being the greateſt proof and pledge of his love, ought to be the joy, crown, and glory of every beholder; and viewed, not with a ſad, heavy, and fearful, but with a glad, chearful, and joyful heart; at which we are to dry up every tear of heart-breaking grief, and vent none but tears of joy, mixt only with theſe of ſweet relenting ſorrow; mourning over ſin, which by no means marrs, but friendly accords with this joy. We may ſit under the ſhadow of his croſs with great delight, with a rejoicing heart, and find all the fruits of it, being fruits of love, grace, favour, and happineſs to us, inexpreſſibly ſweet to our taſte. Here the horror of his curſed, painful, ſhameful death can by no means damp the joy and ſatisfaction; Weep not for me, ſaid Chriſt. Why? his ſufferings were voluntarily neceſſary, deſigned for an happy iſſue; and it was not poſſible he could be ſwallowed up, or conſumed by them: and they are now long ſince paſt and gone, as to the ſmart he felt below, though abiding ſtill in their virtue, uſe, and excellent fruits, and are now ſo many trophies of honour; beauties inſtead of blemiſhes, and higheſt matter of glory and triumph: hence he appears in heaven with the marks of his bleeding wounds, A Lamb as it had been ſlain in the midſt of the throne. The ſhame and pain of his croſs redounds to him for an enſign of honour and eternal glory; a perpetual memorial of his love, merit, and victory.

3. What

3. What is he ſtill doing? Still purſuing the ſame kind deſign, though in a new manner. As his love was proved here by poverty and tribulation, it is now proved by a fulneſs of glory and power: his love was here in labour and diſtreſs for us; now it is inthroned and triumphing, yet ſtill for us alſo. He remembers us ſo as to think himſelf imperfect and incomplete, and as only half glorified till we come to be glorified together with him. As he laid down one life for us on earth, ſo he employs another for our uſe in heaven; living there to intercede in the virtue of the obligation he made, Heb. vii. 25.: living there to ſend down his Spirit, as a Spirit of wiſdom and revelation, of grace, ſupplication, ſanctification, and conſolation; and to lead, guide, direct, begin, and carry on his good work; make application of his redemption; living to execute his offices fully, which he happily began on earth; and to perform his promiſes, that are Yea and Amen in him.—Is there no lovelineſs here? Is this love and lovelineſs of Chriſt diſcovered to you, and yet no time of love with you? No love of deſire after him wrought in you? How inexcuſeable art thou, and wilt thou be, that loves vanity inſtead of him!

Secondly, We next direct our exhortation in a word to theſe whoſe time HAS BEEN a time of love. And theſe are of two ſorts; either ſuch as doubt if their time has been a time of love, or ſuch as are aſſured their time has been a time of love.

1ſt, Such as DOUBT of it, and yet their time has really been a time of love. Theſe doubters are of two ſorts: ſome are waking and mourning doubters; others are ſleeping and ſlumbering doubters.

[1.] Some are waking and mourning in their doubts, and apprehenſive that they NEVER HAD a time of love. "Alas! ſay ſuch, many a ſer-"mon and ſacrament have I attended; but, to "this day, I never met with a time of love: "wo is me that I cannot get a diſcovery of the "glory and lovelineſs of Chriſt, nor my heart "engaged to love him!" If this be thy caſe and exerciſe, mourning and crying, O for a time of love! There are two ſcriptures I would direct you to for relief.

1. If you are mourning and in heavineſs becauſe you reckon your time has not been a time of love, or of power, read Iſa. lxi. 1, 2, 3. He is anointed to give to theſe that mourn in Zion, beauty for aſhes; the oil of joy, for mourning, and the garment of praiſe, for the ſpirit of heavineſs.

2. If you are crying for a time of love, read Iſa. xxx. 18, 19. He is a God of judgment; and bleſſed are all theſe that wait for him. He will be very gracious to thee at the voice of thy cry; when he ſhall hear it, he will anſwer thee. He will turn at a cry, as that word need ſignifies, Heb. iv. 16. Let us come boldly to the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of NEED. Preſſing need, that makes you cry: he turns, as it were, at the cry, according to the promiſe here, He will be very gracious to thee at the voice of thy cry. Therefore wait patiently, hopefully, and carefully for him, who has either begun, or is beginning the good work.

[2.] Some are ſleeping and ſlumbering doubters, that HAVE HAD a time of love, but now it is out of ſight, by reaſon of their backſliding, and leaving their firſt love. To you I would ſay.

1. O remember whence thou haſt fallen, and repent, and do thy firſt works! Conſider what anſwer you would have to theſe queſtions: What INIQUITY have you found in him, that you have gone far from him? Have you ſeen any thing in Chriſt to alienate your affections from him? Was he ever worſe than his word? Or is there any uncomelineſs in his way?—What comelineſs have you ſeen in other lovers? Have you found any other object like him? Is there any amongſt the creatures that can do for you what he has done? Can the world give you that which he has to give you? Do you find reſt and ſatisfaction to your heart and conſcience elſe-where?—What ſweet days had you once when your heart went out after him? Could you not then have ſaid, My Beloved is mine, and his deſire is towards me, and the deſire of my ſoul is towards him, when he brought you to the banqueting-houſe, and diſplayed his banner of love over you, making you to drink of the ſpiced wines? May not a reflection upon theſe ſweet days you had, when his candle ſhined upon you, break your heart, that now you are ſet to the back of the door, and ſay, O that it were with me as in months paſt?—What ſad days have you had ſince you departed from him, and was ſhut out of doors, and had a ſcreen drawn between him and you?—What a ſad change is there when you want that ſweet communion with him that once you had? O then! remember whence you have fallen.

2. Return to him, ſaying, I will go and return to my firſt husband. Return, ye backſliding children, though you have played the harlot with many lovers, for I am married unto you, ſaith the Lord. I hate putting away. I am God, and change not; therefore you are not conſumed. Return, for he ſtands ready to heal your backſlidings.

To both ſorts, whether you be waking or ſleeping Chriſtians, to whom a time of love is dubious, I would exhort you to hear his loving cries after you, and let it be followed with your cries after him.

(1.) Hear HIS loving cries after you.—One cry he ſends after you, is that of the angels, Luke ii. 10. Behold! I bring you good tidings of great joy; for to you is born a Saviour, which is Chriſt the Lord. To you a child is born, to you a ſon is given.—Another cry after you is that, Rev. iii. 20. Behold! I ſtand at the door, and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in, and will ſup with him, and he with me. He is ſeeking to ſup with you, to have communion with you, and you with him. I am knocking at the door of your underſtandings, at the door of your wills, at the door of your hearts and affections: do you not hear me knocking?—Another call is that, Song v. 2. Open to me, my ſiſter, my ſpouſe, my love, my dove; for my head is filled with dew, and my locks with the drops of the night. I have ſuffered the midnight ſhower and ſtorm of divine wrath for you, it fell on my head; I have ſuffered for you, and now I am here ready to apply the bleſſing of my blood; open to me: I own you for my love, and my dove, my undefiled, having no ſpot but what my grace ſhall cover.—Another cry is that, Song iii. 11. Go forth, O ye daughters of Zion, and behold king Solomon with the crown wherewith his mother crowned him. He is holding forth the ſceptre; to thee go forth by faith and take a view of him till your heart be fully ſatisfied? O come, taſte and ſee; come and ſee him; ſee what he has done for you, what he is doing for you, and what he will do for you.—Another cry is that, John i. 29. Behold the Lamb of God,

God, that taketh away the sin of the world! Are your sins great and many, yet, O let no sin keep you away! The blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin: there is infinite virtue in that blood for making you perfectly clean. — Another cry is that, Matth. xxii. 4. All things are ready, come to the marriage. O was you never married to the Son of God? Come, and be the bride the Lamb's wife; give your heart and hand to him, and take hold of him for your Head, Husband, wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption. Or, have you been already married to Christ? O come and get confirmation; get a new token of his love; come to the marriage-supper of the Lamb. — Another cry is, in case you think it is not a free wedding, Isa. lv. 1. Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters; and he that hath no money, come ye; buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk, without money, and without price. The poorer you are the welcomer to the market: no money here is good price: here is grace and glory freely; Whosoever will, let him come and take of the water of life freely. — But, are you yet sighing under the burden of sin and guilt? Then another cry is, Matth. xi. 28. Come to me, all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest to your souls: come, and get rest to your minds in him, who, as a Prophet, is the wisdom of God; come, and get rest to your conscience in him, who, as a Priest, is the righteousness of God; come, and get rest to your hearts in him, who, as a King, is the power of God, and has all the riches of divine fulness in him. — Another cry that he is sending after you is, Jer. iii. 14, 22. Return, O backsliding children; for I am married unto you, and I will heal your backslidings. As if he had said, "However grievously you "have revolted and rebelled from the womb "unto this moment, all bygones shall be by-"gones; only henceforth let it be a bargain "between you and me, an everlasting bargain "never to be forgotten. — Another cry after you is, Song ii. 14. O my dove, that art in the clifts of the rocks, and in the secret places of the stairs, let me hear thy voice, let me see thy countenance; for sweet is thy voice, and thy countenance is comely. "Do not hide your face from me for shame, "might he say; do not blush to look to me, "nor afraid to speak to me; come boldly to "my throne of grace, for I delight to hear thy "voice of prayer and praise, though it be but "a mourning like a dove; and I delight to see "you coming boldly and confidently, depend-"ing upon me: you need not fear to face me, "for I am your kindly suitor; come, trembling "dove, and flee in to my bosom." —— Hear HIS loving cries after you.

(2.) Let it be followed with an echo from you, even with a loud cry after him. I will tell you some of the cries you may send after him. — One is, Psal. xxv. 11. O Lord, for thy name's sake, pardon mine iniquity; for it is great. Let not your great sin hinder your crying after him, but be made an argument, inducing you to cry after him more ardently and fervently. — Another cry is, Psal. cxliv. 5. O bow thy heavens, O Lord, and come down; touch the mountains, and they shall melt. Mountains are in the way, but let them skip like lambs, and the little hills like rams, at the presence of the Lord. — Another cry you may send after him is, Song i. 4. Draw me, we will run after thee. "Put forth thy drawing power; "for I cannot come, I cannot move, I cannot "stir without thee; but I promise to run if thou "draw." — Another cry you may send after him is that of blind Bartimeus, Mark x. 51. Lord, that I may receive my sight. "O enlighten "my eyes, that I may know the mysteries of "the gospel, that I may see the glory, grace, "and love of Christ." — Another cry is, Psal. xc. 13, 14. Return, O Lord, how long? O satisfy us early with thy mercy, that we may be glad and rejoice all our days." "Thou hast an infinite ocean of "mercy, O let the waves of the ocean reach "my soul! pardoning mercy, purifying mer-"cy." — Another cry is, Song ii. 17. Till the day break, and the shadows flee away; turn, my Beloved, and be thou like a roe, or a young hart upon the mountains of Bether. "I want ability to mount "up the hills of sin, guilt, and difficulty be-"tween thee and me; but it is the glory of the "roe to ascend the rocks and mountains: O "get glory this way!" — Another cry is, Song iv. 16. Awake, O north-wind, come thou south, blow upon my garden, that the spices thereof may flow out. Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain that they may live. "O send the pro-"mised Spirit like water upon the thirsty, and floods "upon the dry ground." — Another cry you should give after him, that is thus crying on you, is, Jer. iii. 22. Behold, we come unto thee, for thou art the Lord our God; and with the poor man in the gospel, Lord, I believe; help my unbelief. O send forth thy light and thy truth to lead me.

2*dly*, We come next to address ourselves to these who are more ASSURED their time has been a time of love. I offer these four advices following.

[1.] Do not deny or disown the time of love; beware of questioning if ever such a time went over you. — Do not deny it to your fellow Christians, that you may have it to say, Come hither all ye that fear the Lord, and I will tell you what he has done to my soul. — Do not deny it to God, that you may have it to say, O my soul, thou hast said unto the Lord, Thou art my Lord. And that you may maintain your confidence before him.

[2.] In all time coming remember the time of love; for it may be very serviceable to you. — In the time of temptation, remember the time of love; wherein God becomes forth-coming, that, with the temptation, he would give a way of escape. — In the time of tribulation, remember the time of love; when it was secured that he would be with you in trouble. — In time of desertion, remember the time of love; wherein it was promised, He would never leave you, nor forsake you. — In time of defection and backsliding, remember the time of love; wherein it was secured, that he would heal your backslidings, and love you freely, and restore your soul. — In time of want and poverty, remember the time of love; when you was made to believe that your God should supply all your needs, according to his riches in glory, by Christ Jesus. — In the time of reproach for his sake, remember the time of love; wherein it was insured, that, If you be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the Spirit of God, and of glory resteth upon you. — In time of man's wrath, rage, and persecuting fury, remember the time of love; wherein it was secured, that the wrath of man should praise him, and that the remainder of his wrath he would restrain. — In the time of divine wrath, heavy judgments, and gloomy terrible dispensations, remember the time of love; wherein it was promised, that, though in a little wrath he should hide himself for a moment, yet with everlasting mercy he would gather thee. See Isa. liv. 7, 8. —

In a time of ſin and corruption prevailing, remember the time of love; wherein you was made to ſay, Though iniquities prevail; yet, as for our tranſgreſſions thou wilt purge them away.—In a time of ſorrow and heavineſs, remember the time of love; and then you may be led to ſay, Why art thou caſt down, O my ſoul? Hope in God, for I ſhall yet praiſe him.—In a time of danger, remember the time of love, as did the apoſtle, 2 Cor. i. 10. We had the ſentence of death in ourſelves, that we ſhould not truſt in ourſelves, but in God which raiſeth the dead, who delivered us from ſo great a death, and doth deliver; in whom we truſt that he will yet deliver us. He delivered me from the paw of the lion, and mouth of the bear, and will he not deliver me from the hand of this uncircumciſed Philiſtine?—In a time of diffidence and diſtruſt, remember the time of love, as a notable means and motive to faith, Lam. iii. 21, 22, 23. This I recal to mind, therefore have I hope: THIS, what is it he recals to mind? even the time of love and mercy that follows; It is of the Lord's mercy we are not conſumed, and becauſe his compaſſions fail not: they are new every morning; great is his faithfulneſs.—In a time of darkneſs, remember the time of love; and then you may ſay, Though I ſit in darkneſs, the Lord will be a light to me; the Lord my God will enlighten my darkneſs.—In a time of deadneſs, remember the time of love, and ſay, Quicken thou me, according to thy word.—In a time of weakneſs, remember the time of love, and the words of love; My grace ſhall be ſufficient for you, and my ſtrength ſhall be perfected in your weakneſs.—In a time of death, remember the time of love; and in the believing rememberance thereof, you may ſay, Though I walk through the valley of the ſhadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me, and thy rod and ſtaff they comfort me. O death, where is thy ſting? O grave, where is thy victory?

[3.] Has ever your time of need been his time of love, then in all future times of need come boldly to the throne of grace, that you may find grace to help in time of need: for, the time of love, in times of need formerly, ſecures his loving help in all time of need to come: only obſerve theſe rules about help in time of need.

1. "That your expectation of things not neceſſary, or abſolutely needful, may fail you." You may be in a deluſion in your expectation of certain outgates you would have, and of ſenſible comforts at all times; but you ſhall never be in a deluſion in your expectation of needful help from the throne of grace; for, the matchleſs God of Jeſhurun rides in heaven, for the help of his people, and in his excellency on the ſky, Deut. xxxiii. 26.

2. "That needful help and ſupport comes from "the ſame throne from which ſenſible comforts "come." It is remarkable, you are called to come boldly to that throne, for theſe things you may be always ſure to find there, namely, MERCY and GRACE to help in time of need: you are not aſſured always of ſenſible comforts there; be content of ſupport promiſed in time of need: and remember, it is no little mercy to get a little help; that the ſame love may be read in the meaneſt, loweſt meaſure of grace and mercy that is to be read in the greateſt; they come from the ſame fountain, the ſame throne of grace.

3. "That they that get this help may lay "their account, notwithſtanding, to be kept "weak and infirm." Look not for ſuch help in this world as ſhall make you no more poor and needy beggars at the throne of grace: help and aſſiſtance, you know, is for weak and infirm people. Look not for help that will make you better ſtored in yourſelves than you were before; you muſt be kept poor and needy that the Lord may think upon you, as the pſalmiſt ſays, Pſal. xl. 17.; and as it is, Dan. xi. 34. you muſt be content to be holpen with a little help, and kept from cruſhing, though you be holden in the duſt: Troubled on every ſide, yet not diſtreſſed; perplexed, but not in deſpair; perſecuted, but not forſaken; caſt down, but not deſtroyed, 2 Cor. iv. 8, 9. Lay your account, though you get help, that, as it finds you weak, ſo it will keep you weak in yourſelves, and yet do your turn.

4. "Help is given to them who have their "hand at a turn." We do not ſpeak of helping or aſſiſting ſuch as deſire and endeavour to do nothing themſelves; ſo here, expect not help but in God's way, and about his hand, and his throne; aiming at duty, though you are not able to go thorough it: when thy heart is overwhelmed, and yet thou art crying, when thou art ſinking, it is in that poſture needful help uſes to be given, Pſal. lxi. 1, 2.

5. "That help comes not, and is not to be "expected, till a time of need, and preſſing need; "ſuch as puts you to cry under the preſſure of "the need; as I ſaid before, the word in the "original ſignifies, to turn at a cry, as God pro-"miſes to do, Iſa. xxx. 19." People would be content of help if they could get it beſide them, always at hand; but, ſays the apoſtle, a time of need ſhall come, and help in a time of need; In due time you ſhall reap if you faint not. This may be a cure to all anxiety about what ſhall happen hereafter, or what may be before us. We have no ſtrength to grapple with ſuch unforeſeen difficulties; why, but let us remember we are to be buſy at the preſent work of the day, and leave the next day to God, who gives help in time of need; as Chriſt ſays in another caſe, Matth. vi. 34. Take no thought for to-morrow, for the morrow ſhall take thought for the things of itſelf; ſufficient for the day, is the evil thereof. What have we to do with help till it be needed? To what purpoſe is it to have Jordan running dry, till the prieſts feet be ſet in the water? To what purpoſe is it to know wherewith we ſhall ſerve the Lord, till we come thither? And then it ſhall be given in the hour it is needed, as Chriſt ſays, of ſpeaking to enemies, much more in ſpeaking to our beſt friend. This may aſſure us alſo that we cannot expect help till we cry, as David, Out of the depths have I cried to thee. We are many times in diſtreſs murmuring and not crying; we need help, but are not ſeeking help: God is an obſerving God as well as a hearing God; he would have us cry when he requires us.

6. "Though ſecret ſupport may be given to "them that cry under their need, yet ſatisfying "help may be delayed for a time." And there are ſeveral cauſes of this delay; ſome relative to ourſelves, and ſome relative to the church, or the public.

(1.) Some cauſes relative to ourſelves. The Lord will not always help when we are preſſed under the need of help, that puts us to cry, until the trial comes to the utmoſt extremity; Deut. xxxii. 26. He will judge his people, and he will repent himſelf for his ſervants, when he ſees that their power is gone, and that there is none ſhut up or left. As long as we have any thing that looks like doing our own turn without him, he will ly by, Pſal. xciv. 16. It is not till the pſalmiſt ſaid, My foot ſlippeth, and I am juſt falling over, that needful help comes; but then, thy mercy, O Lord, held me up. Thus with Abraham in the matter of offering up his ſon Iſaac, Gen. xxii. 10, 11. The Lord is not ſeen in the mount, till the knife is at the throat of Iſaac. This is the Lord's way not to come juſt when we are really preſſed, and hard put to it; as long as there is a ſtep further for the difficulty to go; he may let the trial go on before he comes with help, that we may be humbled under the preſſures, under the guilt that drew them on; and that we may be put in a capacity of eſteeming it a great mercy when we are thus helped with a little help.

doing

(2.) Relative to the public. The Lord ſuſpends many a time, at leaſt, the comfortable help of particular ſaints, till he bring up the public intereſt with it: and it is not unſuitable to ſee the children in diſtreſs while the mother is wearing a mourning weed. Deſertions are not readily the leſs frequent among ſaints, that God covers himſelf with a cloud in his anger from Zion: but there is a bleſſed time of relief coming, as you may read, Pſal. cii. 20, 21, 22. and ver. 16, 17. When the Lord appears in his glory to build up Zion, then he will hear the prayer of the deſtitute, and the groaning of the priſoners. As we uſe to ſay, when a thaw comes after a great froſt, or rain after a great drought, it looſes many priſoners: ſo, when a ſhower of the divine influences come from above upon the church, and an outpouring of the Spirit, then many priſoners ſhall be ſet at liberty, many bonds ſhall be looſed, many a cord broken, that is fettering the people of God: therefore we are to wait the Lord's time of giving needful help, and be thankful for needful ſupports, though we yet want ſenſible comforts: needful waterings ſhall not be withholden in the mean time, unleſs we in our petted humour will not be content with ſupport and help, nor will bleſs him for it, and ſo provoke God to let us feel our own weight, that we may be humbled, and learn to gather our comforts among the midſt of our croſſes, and our mercies among our miſeries, and pleaſures among our preſſures.

[4.] Has your time been a time of love, of God's love to you? Then, let all your time be a time of love to him. O love the Lord all ye his ſaints, and let his love conſtrain you to his ſervice: and for this end, maintain a deep ſenſe and impreſſion of his love to you.—Mind how antient his love to you was, even prior to your being, from eternity; on the mere foreſight of your ſin and miſery, his eyes affected his heart, and provided a cure before you got the wound.—Remember how free and generous his love is; how he loved you, not only when you was a ſtranger to him, a mean perſon, infinitely below him, a worthleſs perſon, having no good quality to recommend you, and indued with many odious qualities, but an enemy, a deſperate rebel, mere grace only could draw out this love.—Recollect how unchangeable and everlaſting it is, ſo as he will never caſt you out of his affections, however deſerving to be rejected; He is God, and changes not, therefore the ſons of Jacob are not conſumed. He is ſtill overcoming evil with good; as he injoins us to do it, ſo he is always doing it himſelf.—Call to mind how diſtinguiſhing it is, not only when he paſſed by angels that ſinned, but many of your fellow creatures.—Remember how very ſympathizing it is, cauſing him who ſuffered for you on earth to ſuffer with you in heaven; for, In all your afflictions, he is afflicted.—Mind how manifold it is: it is a love of deſire after you; he deſires fellowſhip with you, and will never reſt nor reckon himſelf a complete Chriſt, as to his myſtical body, till you be with him together with the reſt of his members myſtical.—It is a love of delight, he takes pleaſure in your company; O my dove, that art in the clifts of the rock, and in the ſecret places of the ſtairs, let me hear thy voice, let me ſee thy countenance; for ſweet is thy voice, and thy countenance is comely. The Lord takes pleaſure in his people.—It is a love of beneficence always doing good; and ſhall not love work love. O let your time be a time of love to him. You that expect an eternity of love, let it be evident to the world, that your time is a time of love.

SERMON LXIX.

Senſible PRESENCE, Sudden ABSENCE; or, the Believer's moſt comfortable Interviews, but of ſhort Duration *.

GEN. XXXV. 13. And God went up from him, in the place where he talked with him.

I HOPE ſome, at this occaſion (however few they may be) have had ſome acceſs to God, and fellowſhip with Chriſt Jeſus; yet ſuch are to remember, and conſider that it needs not be thought ſtrange, though they ſhould ſenſibly enjoy him, and loſe him in a moment, as Jacob here; He went up from him, in the place where he talked with him. What intercourſe was between God and Jacob, you have an account of, from the 9th ver. And God appeared unto Jacob again, when he came out of Padan-aram; and bleſſed him. God had met with him in this place, viz. BETHEL, and bleſſed him, and he appears again to him. Thoſe to whom God has once

* This ſermon was preached at Orwell, on Monday, Auguſt 5th, 1734. after the celebration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper there. — In the firſt edition of this ſermon, we are told, it was printed, not from the Author's manuſcript, but from the ſhort hand notes of one who wrote it down in the time of the delivery. On this account, probably, it is neither ſo complete in itſelf, nor yet, perhaps, appears with ſuch advantage as it would have done, had it been copied from the original.

manifeſted

manifested himself, may expect a new visit of him. At this time there are two notable effects of the appearance God made unto him.

1*st*, God confirms the name he had formerly given unto him, calling him ISRAEL. As God gives to all his people, to whom he savingly manifests himself, a new name; so he loves to call them by that new name.

2*dly*, He confirms the promise he had made unto him of his own name EL-SHADDAI, the Almighty God; the God that, when he pleases, can give a being to his word, and will make his promise effectual in his own time and way. There are two things God promises unto Jacob.

1. That he should be a father of many nations, and great kings; and a nation and company of nations should be of him, and kings should come out of his loins.

2. That he should be the possessor of a good land, viz. the land of Caanan. These two things had a spiritual signification; and we now, who live under the gospel-dispensation, if our eyes be open, may see the meaning of them, perhaps, better than Jacob could, under this typical representation: the promised seed, pointed at, was CHRIST himself, the Great King of Zion, who was to come of Jacob: and the promised land pointed at was HEAVEN itself, the heavenly kingdom. The former was the foundation, and this the top-stone of the building of mercy * that we were hearing of. Here then is the promise that God makes unto him. God, when he savingly manifests himself to his people, he comes to them as a promising God in Christ Jesus.

But then, in the words of the text, you have an account how this intercourse is interrupted, and marred at present, God went up from him, in the place where he talked with him. Where we may observe two things. 1. How he left him; and, 2. Where he left him.

1. How he left him, God went up from him. It was by some visible appearance, that had hovered over him, while God talked with him. God may go up from his people in sovereignty, when he does not go away from them in anger. However, we are carefully to observe, that it is not visible appearances of God that now we are to expect, God is a Spirit, and invisible; and as we are to worship him spiritually, so we are to see and enjoy him spiritually.

2. Observe where he left him; it was in the place where he talked with him. The name of the place is BETHEL; and you see that Jacob here sets up a pillar, as a memorial of the communion he had with God there, and calls the name of the place BETHEL; he confirms the name formerly given to the place, when he had met with God there, he calls it BETHEL, the house of God: it was even here, in this very place, the house of God, that he went up from him, where he talked with him.

The doctrine, that I propose to speak a little unto, is the following.

> DOCT. That they who have had communion and converse with God, may miss him in the very spot where they enjoyed him. God went up from him, in the very place where he talked with him.

Thus it was with the disciples at Emmaus, Luke xxiv. 31. their eyes were opened, so as they knew him, And he vanished out of their sight; or, as it is in the margin of some of your Bibles, HE CEASED TO BE SEEN OF THEM; they enjoyed his presence, and yet instantly he ceased to be seen of them. Again, you may observe, the passage in the mount of transfiguration, where Peter says, unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here; and then it follows in the next verse, While he yet spake, behold a bright cloud overshadowed them, Matth. xvii. 4, 5. A cloud may quickly intervene between God and the soul that has communion and fellowship with him.

In handling this subject, I propose, as the Lord shall be pleased to assist, to observe the following method.

I. To touch a little at the communion his people may have with him, which is here called a talking with him.
II. Offer a few remarks concerning their missing and finding the Lord.
III. Enquire in what respects they may miss him where they enjoyed him.
IV. I would give some reasons of this dispensation.
V. Make application of the whole.

I. As to the first of these, To speak a little of this communion that God's people may have with him, which is here called a talking with him; God went up from him, in the very place where he talked with him.

This communion and converse with God may import these five things.

1. It imports the presence of God, and his perfections round about them; for, As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about them that fear him, and so his perfections do surround and environ them. Indeed, we are to distinguish between sensible presence and real presence: God is always really present with his people; for he has said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee; but he is not always sensibly present. He may be present at their hand, when they do not see him, as in the case of Mary, when she was talking with Christ, and yet asked where she might find him. We are to distinguish also between his quickening presence and his comforting presence: the Lord may be present with his people quickening them to duty, and yet they may want sensible comfort in duty. To this purpose says the spouse, I sought him, but I found him not. I sought him; there is his quickening presence exciting her to duty; But I found him not, I wanted his sensible comforting presence.

2. It imports vicinity and nearness: the Lord is graciously near to them; he is graciously near to all that call upon him in truth, a present help, especially in the time of trouble, as here he was to Jacob in his trouble. Again,

3. This converse they have with the Lord, not only imports vicinity and nearness, but amity and friendship, as says the prophet Amos, iii. 3. Can two walk together except they be agreed? So I may say, Can two talk together unless thy be agreed? There is no sweet converse with God, but what imports agreement. It takes in, then, their friendship with him; their being reconciled to him in the blood of Jesus.

4. It imports communion with him, such as that, Truly our fellowship is with the Father, and his Son Jesus Christ. They have fellowship with God

* Alluding to the action-sermon, preached on these words, Psal. lxxxix. 2. Mercy shall be built up for ever.

in

in Chriſt: fellowſhip with him in his LIFE; Becauſe I live, ye ſhall live alſo: fellowſhip with him in his LOVE, while he ſheds abroad his love in their hearts. Again,

5. It imports communication; and this communication, or God's talking with his people, it has many things in it.

(1.) There is therein, ſometimes, a mutual intimation of love; the Lord ſometimes intimates his love unto the ſoul, ſaying, I have loved thee with an everlaſting love: the ſoul ſometimes intimates its love to him again, Thou that knoweſt all things, knoweſt that I love thee.

(2.) It takes in ſometimes a mutual commendation of one another; I ſay, mutual commendation; the Lord, when he is talking with them, he ſometimes commends them forſooth, Behold, thou art fair; thou are all far, my Love, there is no ſpot in thee: and indeed they cannot but bluſh, when he commends them after this manner. Again, they commend him, (as it well becomes them,) My Beloved is white and ruddy, the chief among ten thouſand: his mouth is moſt ſweet; yea, he is altogether lovely, infinitely lovely. Again,

(3.) This communication has in it, ſometimes, mutual counſels imparted, their minds imparted. The Lord imparts his mind to the ſoul, The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will ſhew them his covenant: and the ſoul imparts its mind again to God, and pours out its heart unto him, telling him all his mind, that he cannot tell the world. Again,

(4.) This communication takes in the mutual confidence they expreſs in one another. It is wonderful that the Lord has a kind confidence and truſt he puts in them: there are ſome believers he will not truſt, knowing what is in their hearts; but there are others to whom he commits a truſt, he commits his name and truth to them, Rev. ii. 13. knowing that, through his grace, they will be faithful. They put their truſt in him: Lord, all my confidence is in thee; I have no hope but in thyſelf: and they expreſs their truſt in him, as Job does, chapter xiii. 15. Though he ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him. Again.

(5.) This communication, it takes in the mutual care they expreſs to one another: O the wonderful care that Chriſt expreſſes of his people! That is obſerved by the church, when ſhe ſays, His left hand is under my head, and his right-hand doth embrace me, Song ii. 6. O the tender care of the Lord Jeſus towards them! And then they ſometimes expreſs a care with reference to him and his intereſt, and his concerns; their great concern is, to have his honour and glory advanced in the world.

(6.) This communication takes in mutual aſſurances of love: he aſſures them of his love unto them, and relation unto them; I am thy God, I will be thy God. Well, they acknowledge ſometimes this relation, and therefore cry out, My Lord, and my God: and ſometimes, when they are under the influence of the Spirit of God, the Spirit of adoption, they acknowledge their relation, crying out, ABBA, Father.

In a word, this communication ſometimes takes in a mutual dedication of themſelves to one another: the Lord gives himſelf unto them; he gives himſelf, he gives his Chriſt, he gives his Spirit, he gives his bleſſing unto them; and they ſurrender all that they have, and are, unto him: they give up themſelves, their name, their children, their ſoul and body, and all their concerns unto him; they put all into his hand. This is a part of their communication, their mutual talk with him.—So much ſhall ſuffice for a touch at this firſt head. I go on

II. To the ſecond thing propoſed, viz. To offer a remark or two concerning the finding and miſſing the preſence of God. O Sirs, what know we, or do we know any thing of that preſence and fellowſhip with God, that I have been mentioning? That the Lord's people may have ſome further view of this matter, there are thoſe few remarks I would offer, concerning their meeting with him, and their miſſing of him.

The firſt remark I offer is this, "That theſe "who are acquainted with his coming, and "going, they are the ſeed of Jacob, praying Ja"cob, to whom God has ſaid, They ſhall not "ſeek him in vain." And ſometimes they have it to ſay, I ſought him, and I found him; but many times they have it to ſay, We ſought him, but we miſt him; we ſought him, but we found him not. There is a generation that ſeek the face of Jacob's God.

But, ſecondly, I would here remark, "That "ſuch an enjoyment of God's preſence, as his "people deſire, and would be at, is denied them "while they are in the world." And this he is pleaſed to do for many wiſe and good reaſons: partly, to draw out their deſires more after him; partly, to quicken their endeavours in ſeeking after him; partly, to prove and humble them, and to do them good in the latter end.

But then, thirdly, another remark, I would offer is, "That the Lord's communicating "himſelf unto his people, is in a way that is "very variable." He many times ſurpriſes them with his viſits.—Sometimes he comes when they are in their worſt caſe. He ſometimes talks with them when they are napping, as it were; he takes them when they are dead, and like beaſts before him.—Sometimes when they are in their worſt frames; For the iniquity of his covetouſneſs was I wroth, and ſmote him; I hid me and was wroth; and he went on frowardly in the way of his heart. Well, ſaith the Lord, I have ſeen his ways and will heal him; I will lead him alſo, and reſtore comforts to him, and to his mourners, Iſa. lvii. 17, 18.—Sometimes he comes to them, when they are juſt at the giving over; I ſaid I am caſt out of thy ſight, ſaid Jonah, yet will I look again towards thy holy temple, Jonah ii. 4.—Sometimes their ordinary attainments do exceed their communion-attainments; and hence they have it many times to ſay, O that it were with me at a communion-table, as in ſuch a time, and ſuch a time.——The Lord's way is variable.

But again, in the fourth place, I would here remark, "That the Lord's hiding himſelf, and "the ſoul's miſſing of his preſence, when ei"ther they are ſeeking after him, and are diſ"appointed; or, when they have found him, "and do immediately miſs him, I ſay, it is "very heavy unto them." Alas! it is a great burden to them! Uſually, when they thus miſs him, they are compaſſed with clouds of darkneſs. It may be they are in darkneſs about duty, not knowing what to do. Perhaps, they are in darkneſs about their graces, not knowing whether they are gold or counterfeits. It may happen, they are in the dark about the promiſes, not knowing whether they belong to them or not. It is poſſible, they are in darkneſs neſs about their experiences, whether they be deluſions or not.—They are oft-times filled with amazement, when they miſs their Beloved. When their love is away, they think ſuch a diſpenſation is contrary to his merciful nature; they are apt to think ſometimes, that it is contrary to his gracious promiſe, and that it is contrary to the experiences of his people; and, perhaps, contrary to their own experiences; and contrary to the hopes they have had.—They are, I ſay, in great heavineſs, for ordinary, when they miſs him.

But again, a fifth remark I offer here, is, "That when the Lord has been long away "from his people, and, at laſt, returns to "them, readily the meeting is very remarkable." —Their meeting with him then is readily remarkable for its fulneſs: it is like a great ſhower after a long drought; or, they get the more full meal, that they have been long faſting; and the longer they have wanted acceſs, the acceſs is the nearer.—Readily ſuch a meeting is remarkable for the ſweetneſs of it. O! how ſweet is it when the Lord's people meet with him, when he hath been long abſent! It is like the loſt piece of ſilver, Luke xv. 8, 9. Here is a loſt privilege I have found again; I thought the Lord would never have returned to me again; but now I have got him again.—Such a meeting is remarkable for the melting quality of it: it is like the meeting of two dear friends, that have been long aſunder, that fall a weeping for joy in one another's arms. O the joy that a meeting between Chriſt and his people cauſes, after they have been long aſunder.—It readily alſo is remarkable for the power and efficacy of it. It has a powerful and ſtrong impreſſion on them, when they meet with him, after he has been long away. It is a Bethel that they will not eaſily forget; I will remember thee, ſays the Pſalmiſt, from the land of Jordan, and of the Hermonites, and from the hill Mizar, Pſal. xlii. 6.

But again, in the ſixth place, I would here alſo remark, "That theſe meetings with the "Lord are very rare." They are not to be expected from the Lord often: they are feaſt-days; and every day is not a feaſt-day. They muſt come down from the mount; We muſt live here by faith, not by ſight. The Lord's people, many times, cannot bear a full cup, far leſs carry with it for a long time.

But again, ſeventhly, I would here remark, "That the Lord's coming and going, his peo- "ples meeting with him, and their miſſing of "him, are remarkable and diſcernable, accord- "ing to the degree of his coming and going." Sometimes his coming unto them is more ſudden and ſurpriſing; and then they readily know his coming. Sometimes it is more gradual, and leſs diſcernable; ſo it is alſo with his going. Sometimes he goes away more ſuddenly, and they miſs him immediately; and ſometimes he goes away gradually, and then they may not ſo eaſily know that he is gone; as it is ſaid of Samſon, The Lord departed from him, and he wiſt it not.

But then I would remark, in the eight and laſt place, "That this diſpenſation of divine "grace, his manifeſting himſelf, and allow- "ing his people acceſs to him, and ſuch com- "munication with him, as it is a rare thing, "ſo it is a great myſtery." It is even a myſtery to them who know it; for they know but darkly: Now, we ſee through a glaſs darkly, but then face to face. It is a hidden myſtery to the moſt part of profeſſors: it is like the holy of holies, that none but the prieſts entered into; ſo none but theſe that are kings and prieſts unto their God know any thing of it.

Having offered theſe remarks concerning this his coming, and going from his people. I go on

III. To the third thing propoſed, which was, To enquire in what reſpects they may miſs him, where they enjoyed him; God went up from him in the place where he talked with him. On this head, there are theſe eight particulars I would ſhortly touch at.

1. They may miſs him in the duties wherein they have enjoyed him.—They may miſs him in the word wherein they have enjoyed him to their ſweet experience; I will remember thee, ſays the pſalmiſt, from the land of Jordan, and of the Hermonites, and from the hill Mizar, Pſal. xlii. 6. I will remember bypaſt experiences. But it ſeems, for all that, he miſſed him there; for he ſays in the next verſe, Deep calleth unto deep, at the noiſe of thy water-ſpouts; all thy waves and thy billows are gone over me.—They may miſs him in the duty of reading the ſcriptures, wherein ſometimes they have enjoyed him. It is ſometimes the food of their ſouls; at other times it may be a ſealed book to them.—They may miſs him in the duty of meditation, where ſometimes they have enjoyed him; My meditation of him ſhall be ſweet, ſays the pſalmiſt, Pſal. civ. 34. But again, they may have it to ſay, I remembered God, and was troubled.—They may miſs him in the duty of prayer, wherein they have frequently enjoyed him, and got him in their arms; they may ſo miſs him, as to be obliged to ſay, Why art thou ſo far from helping me, and from the words of my roaring? Wherefore hideſt thou thyſelf from me? But again,

2. They may not only miſs him in the duties wherein they have found him, but they may miſs him in the frames wherein they have enjoyed him.—They may miſs him ſometimes even in a mourning frame, and may go mourning without the ſun. Mary ſeeks him weeping and mourning, and ſhe miſſes her Lord, though ſhe was in that frame.—Again, they may miſs him in a melting and a loving frame; ſo it was with the church, when ſhe ſays, I ſought him, whom my ſoul loveth; but I found him not.—They may miſs him, even when in a right lively frame; I ſought him, (I was quickened to ſeek him) but I found him not.—They may miſs that preſence that ſometimes they had, and that they would gladly be at. But again, in the next place,

3. They may miſs him in the beſt caſes wherein they have enjoyed him: they may miſs him in that caſe they think to be beſt, and that caſe which is really beſt. They may miſs him when they think they are beſt, viz. in a joyful caſe; yet they may miſs him, in regard of that meaſure and degree of preſence they would be at. They may miſs him in that caſe when it is really beſt with them. When is it beſt with them? It is beſt when they are believing, and their heart is opening to the Son of God; and yet in that caſe they may miſs him; the ſpouſe ſays, Song v. 6. I opened to my Beloved; but my Beloved had withdrawn himſelf, and was gone. When they have much and ſweet enjoyment of him, they may ſuddenly miſs him, and when they are opening opening the door of their heart to him, he may disappear. But again, in the

4. Place, They may miss him not only in the best cases, wherein they have enjoyed him; but they may miss him in the worst cases, wherein they have been prevented and surprized with the communications of his favour: for instance, they may miss him in confused times, when the enemies of the Lord are making a tumult, and when all things are seeming to run to disorder and confusion, though the Lord uses sometimes to refresh them in such circumstances, according to his word; There is a river, says the psalmist, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God, Psal. xlvi. 4. I remember it is said, Psal. lxxxiii. 1. Keep not thou silence, O God; hold not thy peace, and be not still, O God; for lo, thine enemies make a tumult, and they that hate thee, have lift up the head; they have taken crafty counsel against thy people, and consulted against thy hidden ones; and at the same time it supposes, that the Lord is silent, was not taking notice as he used to do, and as they expected he would.—Again, they may miss him in the time of persecution, when he uses to stand by his people, as Paul says, The Lord stood by me; even in such a time they may miss his presence, as the church says, Song v. 7. The watchmen, that went about the city, found me, they smote me, they wounded me; the keepers of the walls took away my vail from me: there was persecution, and at the same time she is crying, and yet finds him not.—Again, they may miss him in the time of temptation, when he uses to stand up in succouring them, making a way to escape: thus it was with Paul, he was buffeted by Satan; he prays and prays again, yet the temptation continues; and he misses him, until he goes on and finds him; and the answer the Lord gives him is, My grace shall be sufficient for thee, and my strength shall be perfected in thy weakness. However, I say, in the times of temptation they may miss him.—Again, in times of tribulation and affliction, he uses to come to them, according to his word; When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burnt, neither shall the flame kindle upon thee, Isa. xliii. 2. Yet even when going through fire and water they may miss him; as it was with Job when, in great affliction, he cries unto the Lord, and he does not regard him; Behold, I go forward, but he is not there; and backward, but I cannot perceive him: on the left-hand, where he doth work, but I cannot behold him; he hideth himself on the right-hand, that I cannot see him, Job xxiii. 8, 9. Oh! say the Lord's people, I would think nothing of my affliction, if the Lord did not hide his face: this is not a strange case, you may miss him even then, as is evident from what I have said. Again,

5. In the next place, the Lord's people they may miss him, in the words of grace, wherein sometimes they have enjoyed him. The Lord manifests himself sometimes in the word, and gives them his presence by means of his word; and then they have it to say, perhaps, with the psalmist, The Lord hath spoken in his holiness, and I will rejoice, Psal. lx. 6. But at other times, they may so far miss him, that they may cry out, All men are liars. But how, Sirs, can believers make God a liar, but by making the prophets liars, and the words of the prophets lies? Will the Lord cast off for ever? And will he be favourable no more? Is his mercy clean gone for ever? Doth his promise fail for evermore? Hath God forgotten to be gracious? Hath he in anger shut up his tender mercies? Psal. lxxvii. 7, 8, 9. They may at some times meet with a promise, and rejoice therein; but at other times that promise may be tasteless to their souls; they can see nothing of God there. I say, they may miss him sometimes in the words wherein they have enjoyed him. Again,

6. In the next place, they may miss him in the instruments whereby they have enjoyed him; it may be such a minister, and such an instrument, is blasted to them. He comes to them sometimes with full breasts, and they sweetly suck out of these full breasts of consolation; but behold, at other times, he comes to them with dry breasts, as it were; they can find nothing of God in his sermon, where they have formerly met with God by him. Why, Sirs, we ministers are the savour of life, just as the Spirit of life is pleased to go along with the word: and therefore we have little need to idolize instruments.—We may miss him in the instruments whereby we have enjoyed him. Again, in the

7. Place, We may miss him in the society of the Lord's people, wherein we have enjoyed him. It is a commendable practice of some of the Lord's people, that they meet for social prayer and conference, and the Lord many times countenances them in it. It is said, Mal. iii. 16. They that feared the Lord, spake often one to another, and the Lord hearkned and heard it: and a book of remembrance was written before him, for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. They sometimes meet with the Lord there: but at other times they may miss him very suddenly, and be obliged to say with the church, Lam. iii. 8. When I cry and shout, he shutteth out my prayer. And in the 44th ver. Thou hast covered thyself with a cloud, that our prayers should not pass through. But again,

8. In the next place, to add no more, they may miss him in the very place where they have enjoyed him; God went up from him, in the very place where he talked with him. I say, they may miss him in the very times and places where they have enjoyed him; and they may enjoy him, but suddenly the Lord may withdraw from them. They may miss him in the public places, the ordinances where they have enjoyed him; they may miss him in secret places, in the chamber, in the field, in the spot where they enjoyed him; God went up from him, in the place where he talked with him.——So much shall suffice for the third head.

IV. The fourth thing I proposed was, To give the grounds and reasons of this dispensation: Whence is it that the Lord's people may enjoy God, and yet may quickly miss him, even in the very spot where they have enjoyed him? I cannot stand to enlarge upon this; I shall offer some reasons in so many words.

1. By this the Lord shews his sovereignty, that he is the sovereign dispenser of his blessings, and confers them when, upon whom, and in what manner he pleases.

2. The Lord by this would also confirm his people unto their Head, Jesus Christ, who was deserted of the Father, My God, my God, says he, why hast thou forsaken me? Alas! this was a bitter cup, yet the Lord will have his people to be be plunged in it, ſo to ſpeak, to know the bitterneſs of that cup of deſertion.

3. It is ordered alſo, to make a difference between heaven and earth. We are but ſtrangers and pilgrims here; and are not to expect an uninterrupted enjoyment of our Lord in this world. There is an eternity of the enjoyment of God a-coming, unto all the children of grace; and therefore he takes the liberty with his people now to hide himſelf from them. Again,

4. It is ordered alſo, for ſhewing unto us that the Lord may approve of his people, and accept of their ſervices and duties in Jeſus Chriſt, even when they miſs that in duty which they would be at, namely, his bleſſing of them with his comfortable preſence: this is what he will give unto them as he pleaſes.

5. He would have them to know they are not to reſt on the means; that they are not to be depended upon, but that they are to uſe the means, with a reſpect to his command, and a regard to his authority, even though the Lord ſhould deny his comfortable preſence therein. The Lord orders it alſo, it may be,

6. To chaſtiſe their former miſbehaviours, either in ſeeking, or in the enjoyment of him: he will learn them to value his preſence, by abſenting himſelf from them.

7. Many times he does it, to quicken their endeavours after him, and to lead them unto the due acknowledgment of their ſins, by which they have provoked him to depart and hide his face; as the Lord ſays by his prophet, I will go and return to my place, till they acknowledge their offence, and ſeek my face: in their affliction they will ſeek me early. Many ſuch reaſons might be given, why the Lord orders matters thus.

8. I ſhall give you one reaſon more; (and, Sirs, we may tremble when we ſpeak of it) the Lord may hide his face, in many of the duties of his appointment, to ſhew his diſpleaſure againſt his church and people; and to ſhew what vengeance may be a-coming upon them, becauſe of their ſins and provocations: and the Lord may withdraw from his own people, and hide his face from them, becauſe of their ſinful acceſſion to the evils of the time and place wherein they live. Ah! what ſtroaks may be a-coming upon a ſinful generation! And alſo, for this reaſon, he may hide his face from his people, that it may not be in their power to ſtand up in the gap, to hinder the ſtroak to come on; and therefore he hides his face, and hardly allows them to pray. What is the language of it? It is to this effect, Pray not for this people, when I am peremptorily reſolved to bring down vengeance on them; therefore he with-holds the Spirit of prayer. And he ſometimes withdraws with reference to this very point, that they have not ſo much as the aſſurance of the delay of a ſtroak, becauſe he is quickly to bring it on; and, perhaps, this may be one great complaint of the Lord's people, and of ſome that go many a foot to his ordinances; Oh! the little communion they meet with in them! It may be the Lord is reſerving the comforts of a communion till the time of a wilderneſs want ſhall come; Behold, I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderneſs, ſaith the Lord, by the prophet, and ſpeak comfortably to her, Hoſ. ii. 14.

V. I come now, in the laſt place, to make application of the whole. I ſhall confine my application to theſe two uſes. 1. By way of trial and examination. And, 2. By way of exhortation.

1ſt, Is it ſo, that the Lord, when he allows communion and fellowſhip with him to his people, may ſuddenly withdraw, and they may miſs him in the ſpot where they have enjoyed him? Then, O Sirs, you ſhould try what you know of his preſence, and of communion and fellowſhip with him. It were the leſs hazard that you knew, to your experience, that of miſſing him, if ye really knew what it were to find him, and what it is to enjoy him, and to have communion with him. Why, Sirs, I would have you to put it to the trial, if God has been talking with you at this occaſion, or at any other time. Do you know what it is to have God talking with you; I mean, to have communion and fellowſhip with him? You cannot expect to have the enjoyment of glory hereafter, if it be not begun in grace here. Why, how ſhall we know, ſay you, if we have met with the Lord? Or attained any thing of the enjoyment of him? Why, in the

1. Place, you may try it by this, There are ſome things you will be hardly able to endure, if you have met with him.—The Lord's people they cannot endure that God go away from them again; or that God ſhould hide his face. Oh! it is heavy to think of the Lord's withdrawing from them: they cannot endure to think that God ſhould be angry with them: they cannot endure that any thing ſhould have Chriſt's room in their hearts: they cannot endure that any thing ſhould hinder or marr that meeting with, and enjoyment of, God they have: they ſay with the pſalmiſt, Depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity; for I will keep the commandments of my God. What will all the world be to me, ſays the ſoul, if I have not communion and fellowſhip with my God? — Again, the ſoul cannot endure any thing that tends to marr the enjoyment of God; when he has it, when he is brought into the banquetting-houſe, and has the light of God's countenance, he is ready to charge all about him, with the ſpouſe, that they do not provoke the Lord to depart; I charge you, ſays ſhe, O ye daughters of Jeruſalem, by the roes and by the hinds of the field, that ye ſtir not up, nor awake my love till he pleaſe, Song ii. 7. What know ye of this? Again,

2. If ye know his gracious preſence, you will be one that rejoices in his preſence, and laments at his abſence.—His preſence will be your chief joy; his abſence will be your chief ſorrow: his preſence will give you more joy than all the world can; his abſence will make you more ſorrowful, than any thing in time can make you joyful. This is the import of that word, Thou haſt put, ſays the pſalmiſt, gladneſs in my heart, more than in the time, that their corn and their wine increaſed, Pſal. iv. 7.—Again, if you be one that has had a meeting with the Lord, then, to be ſure, his abſence will be a diſtreſſing thing to you. As you deſire his preſence above all things, and count all things but loſs and dung, for the excellency of the knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt, and communion with God in him; ſo, when you cannot win at the enjoyment of him, when you cannot get your heart brought up to love him, when you cannot get your eyes open to ſee him, you look upon yourſelf as a diſtreſſed perſon, as a broken perſon, as a miſerable perſon, by reaſon of the abſence of God, and the preſence of ſin.

A child

A child of God looks upon himself to be, and is really, an afflicted and a broken body, by reason of the presence of sin, and the absence of the Lord; and therefore he cries out, O that I knew where I might find him! But again,

3. If you are one that have experience of this presence of God, and fellowship with him; then you will have some fellowship with the saints, the excellent ones of the earth. What know you of this? I think this is a good sign, when the heart warms towards one that is a child of grace, though he be a beggar, or in poor circumstances, or one of little wit otherwise; when your heart warms toward the picture of Christ, when your heart warms towards one, because he has the image of Christ; By this we know, says the apostle John, that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren, 1 John iii. 1, 4. The heart warming towards these that have the image of God; it has in it something of heart-warming towards Christ himself. Again,

4. We may know it by the humbling effect of it. When a person has the image of God on him he will be humbled; thus Job, when he had got a clear sight of himself, says to the Lord, I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth thee; wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes, Job xlii. 5, 6. O the presence of God makes the person hate sin; it humbles him to nothing, as the Lord says by the prophet, Isa. ii. 11. The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of man shall be bowed down, when the Lord alone is exalted in the soul, when he is present on the throne of the heart. Again,

5. We may judge of it by this, they that have met with God and have his presence, whether they have it sensibly or not, they have still an high esteem of Christ, even though he should be absent. They have also an high esteem of his ordinances, even when but dry breasts; they dare not undervalue them: nay, they have a great regard for every thing that appertains to him, and bears an impression of his image.

6. They have something also of a tenderness of heart, that they dare not allow themselves in sin; they dare not live in the omission of known duty, or in the commission of known sin: and they have something also of a tenderness of walk; though iniquities prevail against them, yet they never dare run into an excess of riot with the wicked world. They are such as fear the Lord; or have the character given them that we find recorded in the first chapter of Nehemiah, ver. 11. they desire to fear his name.——You may enquire by what I have been saying, whether you know the presence of God, and fellowship with him.

I thought to have spoke by way of address, 1. To these who have known fellowship with him, but now they have missed him. 2. To these who at present may be under the joyful impressions of their having fellowship with God, so that he is talking with them. And, 3. To these that know nothing of this intercourse with God, and as little care for it. I would say but a few words to each of these.

1st, As to these who found the Lord talking with them, and who have had some intercourse with him allowed them; but now they have missed him, and it may be have provoked him to hide his face. All I would say to you, is, to offer these two or three advices.

1. I would have you to study divine providences towards yourself, and the providence of the Lord towards others of his people, in his coming and going towards them. Eye the sovereignty of his dispensations. Why, it may be, in this study, you may meet with him; Whoso is wise, and will observe these things, even they shall understand the loving-kindness of the Lord, Psal. cvii. 43.

2. I would advise you, in these circumstances that you are in, if you would have your captivity returned, be concerned on your knees before the Lord, about your friends, and others you should be concerned for. It is remarkable, Job xlii. 10. The Lord turned the captivity of Job, when he was praying for his friends: when you are applying for your friends or others, you may find the Lord turning your captivity.

3. I would advise you to be concerned for the church of Christ. It may, perhaps, be one cause of the Lord's withdrawing from you, in your private case, on account of your having little concern about the church of Christ. You will find, that when Daniel was applying to God for his church and people, then he met with that intercourse with God, wherein he spake unto him, saying, O man greatly beloved: and, says the Lord to Baruch, Seekest thou great things for thyself? Seek them not: for behold I will bring evil upon all flesh, saith the Lord: but thy life will I give unto thee for a prey, in all places whither thou goest, Jer. xlv. 5. Well, be concerned for the public; and in this way you may come to meet with the Lord again. But, then again,

4. Another thing I would advise you to, is, endeavour, through grace, to be concerned for, and weighted with, the sins of the day and generation you live in: by this you may get a mark set upon you; for, he sets a mark upon the foreheads of them that sigh and cry, for all the abominations that be done in the midst of the city. But then, again,

5. Believer, see that he have you alone, if you be complaining that you miss him in ordinances. I remember what was said by Mark, concerning Christ and his disciples, chap. iv. 34. When they were ALONE he expounded all things to his disciples. See that he have you alone, and see that you be much in secret with him; and thus the Lord may communicate himself to you. He will not readily tell you his mind until he get a convenient time; you may get that in secret, that you have not got at a communion-table. Again,

6. I would have you beware of conformity to the generality of professors in our day. O beware of being conformed to them in their neutrality and indifferency about the work of God; and bringing their neutrality this way under the good names of moderation, good-breeding, and the like: beware of conformity to these; for it is your reproach to be conformed to them in their selfishness, while most part seek their own things, and few the things of Jesus Christ; and in this way you cannot expect to meet with Christ. — In a word, Do you yet miss him? Wait on him; The Lord is a God of judgment, and blessed are all they that wait for him.

2dly, But I would now speak a word to these who have found the Lord at this occasion, so that he is talking with them. It is possible there are some that have the joyful impressions of communion munion with God, and, with Jacob, are talking with God, and God is talking with them. Are you brought to the mount of communion and converſation with him? Then I would give you two or three advices.

1. O believer, if that be thy caſe, O be thankful; let God have the praiſe of this mercy: remember to adore, and ſtir up others to adore and magnify him. You are dignified before many others that are in many reſpects better than you: What are you that you ſhould be ſo dealt with? Again,

2. O beware of idolizing your entertainment; when you are enjoying theſe fruits of the Maſter's kindneſs, beware of reſting upon the fruits; for they will not bear you; but you muſt reſt upon the Tree of life: beware of making a Chriſt of them: beware of being ſtrong in the grace received; but be ſtrong the grace that is in Chriſt Jeſus. Again,

3. I would adviſe you to entertain Chriſt well, when he is with you; and beware of provoking him to depart from you. There are ſeveral things we ſhould beware of, that provoke him to depart. He may go away in ſovereignty, and it is beſt when he does ſo, and you have not a ſinful hand in it.—Beware of unbelief; this is readily the firſt door by which your comforts will go out from you.—Beware of doubting of his love, and diſputing of the mercy of God. Do you enjoy his love? Are you ſure concerning it, as having an infallible mark of it in his word? Then take inſtruments, that it is no deluſion; that ſo when the Lord hides his face, you may not raze the foundation, calling all in queſtion.—Again, beware of ſecurity and ſleeping after you have got a good meal. If a friend ſhould come and pay you a viſit, and you ſhould fall aſleep beſide him, he will think, that you make very little of his viſit, and he will ſoon make away from you.—And then I would have you beware of covetouſneſs and worldly-mindedneſs; For the iniquity of his covetouſneſs I was wroth, and ſmote him; I hid me and was wroth, ſays the Lord, by the prophet, Iſa. lvii. 17. There you ſee is both anger and abſence, by reaſon of a covetous heart, a worldly heart, and worldly-mindedneſs; I ſay, beware of this.—Again, I would adviſe you to beware of defiling the Lord's houſe: keep the houſe, where he is, clean, ſo as he may not be provoked to depart. Keep the houſe clean for him: endeavour, through his grace, to keep the heart clean, to keep it clean from ſecret ſin; Who can underſtand his errors? Cleanſe thou me from ſecret faults, ſays the pſalmiſt, Pſal. xix. 12. Endeavour to be clean, not only from ſecret faults, but public faults and ſins in the day and generation wherein you live. The neglect of this may greatly provoke him to withdraw his preſence from you. Endeavour to be faithful to his truths that are controverted *. Some will be ready to ſay, Why ſhould we be concerned for controverted truths? If, indeed, we do not ſtand up for any but theſe which are uncontroverted, the devil and his inſtruments will not trouble us; but if we do not ſo, we cannot be faithful to God. And we are to be faithful to the leaſt truth of Chriſt. Some may be ready to ſay, If, for the cauſe of truth, we are to ſuffer, why not? But many are contending about theſe things that are trifles. O Sirs, if they be the matters of Chriſt, beware of calling them trifles. I remember to have read of a lady in France, at the time of the maſſacre there, that was led away to be drowned for the ſake of her religion; her perſecutors promiſed her life, if ſhe would but ſay, Ave Maria, or Pater Noſter. She anſwered, "I might eaſily repeat theſe words; "but if my doing ſo be interpreted by you a "renouncing of my religion, and a yielding "up of the cauſe of Chriſt, in that ſenſe I will "not do it:" and ſo ſhe was drowned. If we come to yield in ſmaller things, we may do it in greater. We are to reckon nothing ſmall in the matters of Chriſt. Then,

4. See that you improve his preſence, if you have got it at this occaſion. How ſhall we improve it? Improve it in the behalf of Chriſt, to commend him more to you than ever: and ſure, if you have his preſence, you cannot ſay too much of it; O improve it for the commending him more and more to you.—Improve it in behalf of his ordinances, making them more precious in your view.—And improve this preſence of the Lord in behalf of your children: Have you children, man, woman? Improve it in behalf of them, and cry to God, wreſtle with him for a bleſſing to you and your ſeed, ſeeing he has brought your near.—Improve it in behalf the church of Scotland: plead that he may not take a farewel of Scotland; that he may return to his ordinances; that he may return to the judicatories.—O improve your enjoyment of the preſence of Chriſt, in behalf of the churches abroad, that are brought very low.—O improve his preſence in behalf of your friends in Chriſt, theſe that are in Chriſt, that have not win your length, that have not win half your length. Are you brought into the King's court? O ſpeak a good word for the Joſeph's that are in priſon, that are under the hatches, that the Lord may advance them as well as you.—Then improve his preſence in behalf of ſtrangers who never ſaw any thing of his glory, as we find the church in the Song does, Song viii. 8. We have a little ſiſter, ſays ſhe, and ſhe hath no breaſts: what ſhall we do for our ſiſter, in the day when ſhe ſhall be ſpoken for? If ſhe be a wall, we will build upon her a palace of ſilver; and if ſhe be a door, we will incloſe her with boards of cedar. We ſhould pray for a bleſſing upon the deſign of preaching the goſpel unto a Pagan and a Heathen world: we wiſh that you would mind them that are called to preach the goſpel to the heathens. O pray that the Lord may be with them.—Then remember the advice that Joſeph gave to Pharaoh, Lay up for the years of famine; lay up comforting promiſes and experiences: you may need all that you have got; yea, you may need much more.

3*dly*, I ſhall only ſpeak a word to you that know nothing of this preſence of God, of his coming and going; that know nothing of finding or miſſing him; and, perhaps, as little care. You never had any concern about his preſence; for you are ſtrangers to fellowſhip and communion with the Son of God. O man, woman, I would ſay a word to you; O hear what God ſays to you, before he go away from the place where he is ſpeaking to you: he is ſpeaking to you in this everlaſting goſpel. We are not to ſtay here, but we are to part: and we will probably never meet all again, until we come before

* Several of theſe controverted and oppoſed truths of God are condeſcended on above, p. 70, 149, 322, 454, 631, 648, 670, 661, 701.

before the tribunal of God, when the Lord Jeſus Chriſt ſhall be revealed from heaven, with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the goſpel of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Before God go away, who is talking to you in this goſpel, come to Chriſt, who is dealing with you, and ſpeaking to you. Conſider, that if theſe meſſages of grace, that you have got already, at this occaſion, be all ſlighted by you, there are more terrible ones abiding you than ever came to Job, and they were right fearful ones: there came one to him and told him, The oxen were plowing, and the aſſes feeding beſides them, and the Sabeans fell upon them, and took them away; yea, they have ſlain thy ſervants with the edge of the ſword, and I only am eſcaped alone to tell thee. That man is hardly done ſpeaking, when another comes and tells him, The fire of God is fallen from heaven, and hath burnt up the ſheep and ſervants, and conſumed them; and I am eſcaped alone to tell thee. While that man is ſpeaking, another meſſenger comes and tells him, The Chaldeans made out three bands, and fell upon your camels, and have carried them away; yea, and ſlain the ſervants with the edge of the ſword; and I only am eſcaped alone to tell thee. While that man is ſpeaking, another comes in and tells him, Your ſons and your daughter were eating, and drinking wine in their eldeſt brother's houſe, and behold, there came a great wind from the wilderneſs, and ſmote the four corners of the houſe, and it fell upon the young men, and they are all dead and gone; and I only am eſcaped alone to tell thee, Job i. 14, — 19. Theſe are heavy meſſages; but they are nothing in compariſon of the heavy meſſage that, a few days hence, it may be a few moments, for ought you know, at death, is abiding you. One meſſage will be, That you muſt part with all your dear and near relations you have had upon the earth, and you muſt part with them for ever. Upon the back of this meſſage another comes, Man, you muſt part with all your enjoyments of time; you muſt part with all your profits, pleaſures, or honours. Ere that meſſage is given, another comes, Man, you muſt part with your ſoul; however near the relation was between your ſoul and your body, yet your body muſt go down to the duſt, and your ſoul to God who gave it: yea, a ſadder meſſage comes yet, Man, you muſt part with the preſence of God, and you muſt be ſent to hell, and there puniſhed with everlaſting deſtruction, and be baniſhed for ever, from the preſence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power, 2 Theſ. i. 9. Why, poor Chriſtleſs man, you muſt lay your account with this meſſage; unleſs you could make yourſelf immortal: this will infallibly come upon you. This will be the meſſage of death.

And there is a four-fold wo that will come upon you, if you continue in this your natural ſtate.

1. Wo unto you, for you are certainly miſerable; The wicked ſhall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God, Pſal. ix. 17.

2. Wo unto you, for you ſhall be ſuddenly miſerable; when you are ſaying, Peace, peace, to yourſelves, then ſudden deſtruction ſhall come upon you, as travail upon a women with child, and you ſhall not eſcape, 1 Theſ. v. 3.

3. Wo unto you, for you ſhall be doubly miſerable; you are not only deſpiſers of God's law, but deſpiſers of the goſpel; therefore your damnation ſhall be double. Then,

4. Wo will be unto you, for you ſhall be eternally miſerable: as long as God lives, you ſhall live in Tophet; and when you have lived in it as many thouſands of years, as there are piles of graſs on the earth; and when theſe are expired, and you have lived as many thouſands of years in it, as there are pickles of ſand on the ſea-ſhores; and when theſe are alſo expired, and you have lived in it as many thouſands of years as there are ſtars in the firmament; and when theſe are alſo done, and you have lived in it as many thouſands of years, as there ſhall be moments from the beginning to the end of the world; and when your have counted numbers until they come to be innumerable, one of your great miſeries will be, that it is eternal; for time is gone, and there is nothing but eternity remains.

O conſider thy dreadful caſe that haſt no concern about the meſſages of the goſpel, that haſt not been affected with it to this day: I would have you to conſider this, that Chriſt is yet in your offer, before we go from the place we are in; he is yet in the place. I would give you another offer, and if you do not accept thereof, it will make you the more inexcuſable. What ſhould hinder your acceptance, but your unbelief? Has he not condeſcended to be a Saviour to you? Yea; for he is exhibited as the Saviour of the world. He is as much your Saviour, as a phyſician of an army is ſo to the whole army, whether they employ him or not. You have a right to cloſe with him; ye diſpiſe your own mercy if you reject him. O Sirs! has he come in your nature, and will you not come to him? Has he become ſin for you, and will you not come to him? Has he become a curſe for you, and will you not come to him? Has he come at this occaſion to you, and will you not come to him? Has he not ſaid, To you is the word of this ſalvation ſent. man, woman, every individual of you? Has he come and declared upon his veracity, that him that cometh unto me, I will in nowiſe caſt out? O Sirs! why then will you not come to him? If thou wilt not let him in at the door of thy heart, thou muſt anſwer for it at the great day; Behold, ye deſpiſers, and wonder; wonder and periſh: for I work a work in your days, a work which ye ſhall in nowiſe believe, though a man declare it unto you, Acts xiii. 41.

It may be you have been wondering at all theſe offers of Chriſt, and at all theſe ſermons and ſacraments; if you will not wonder and be ſaved, you muſt wonder and be damned; Behold, ye deſpiſers, wonder and periſh. What is it, man, that is the matter with you? What is thy caſe? Art thou not fully warranted to come to this Jeſus? What ſort of ſinner art thou? Art thou deſtitute of knowledge? Why, he comes to be wiſdom unto thee. Art thou guilty? He comes to be righteouſneſs unto thee. Art thou a polluted ſinner? He comes and offers himſelf to be ſanctification unto thee. Art thou a miſerable ſinner? He comes to be redemption unto thee. Art thou lying among the unclean pots of hell? He comes to thee, to make thee as the wings of a dove, covered with ſilver, and her feathers with yellow gold. Art thou a backſlider? He ſays unto thee, Come unto me, and I will heal thy backſlidings, I will love thee freely; for mine anger is turned away from thee. — What ſort of a ſinner art thou? If you be upon the face of the earth, you have a right to accept of the offer of Chriſt made to you in the goſpel; Look unto me, ſaith the Lord, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none else, Isa. xlv. 22. O that the power of divine grace may draw you! Are you destitute of all grace? Christ comes to you with the offer of his grace in his hand; who is full of all that grace and truth you stand in need of. Are you unable, and saying you cannot come to him? Why, that need be no hinderance: you cannot come to God but by Jesus Christ; and not only as he is the Way to God, but as the Leader, the Mighty God, on whom God has laid thy help; and he says, Will you be helped out of that horrible pit and miry clay you have fallen into? O! will you take the Mediator's help? Sirs, go alone when ever you have time, and plead that the Spirit of the Lord may back the word to you, for without this, it will all fall to the ground.

and

I shall only speak a word (and close with it) to the Lord's people. Perhaps your hearts have been touched, and you have seen something of the Lord's glory in his sanctuary. O improve what you have got for strengthening you; remember what is said of Jacob, after he got a view of God at Bethel, it is said, He went on his way; it is in the original, HE LIFTED UP HIS FEET. He was, as it were, dragging his feet before, but then he went on his way, and walked without wearying. O improve any thing you have got at this occasion for exciting you to run your Christian race, and for fighting your Christian battles. Go forth in the name and strength of the Lord, depending and leaning upon your Beloved. Walk in the fear of the Lord, and so you shall also walk in the comforts of the Holy Ghost, as it is said, Acts ix. 31. If you walk under the influence of the Spirit as a Sanctifier, you shall walk under his influence as a comforter.

May the Lord back his own word with his own blessing; and to his name be the praise.

SERMON LXX.

The Mounting CHRISTIAN; or, the Eagle-winged BELIEVER.*

ISAIAH xl. 31. —They shall mount up with wings as eagles.—

WE have a remarkable question of the disciples, and answer of our Lord, Luke xvii. 37. The question is, Where, Lord? The answer is, Wheresoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together. Christ had been speaking of days of great tribulation a-coming; and the meaning of the question seems to be, Lord, where shall these that fear thy name fly in these days of trouble and distress? Where shall we find peace in the midst of war? Where is he who gives peace to the world? Where is Christ to be found, to whom the believer shall fly like an eagle to his prey? Faith needs not be at a loss in this inquiry, Where, Lord? In the womb, in the rags, in the manger? thither may we go to see the Son of God in a low humbled state.—Where, Lord? Go to the garden, and see him suffering for your sins the wrath of his Father.—Where, Lord? Fly to Mount Calvary, and see him on the cross; there may the eagles gather together, and behold him bleeding, suffering, crying, dying for them.—Again, Where, Lord? From Calvary to heaven, there he is now, and there must the soul fly, and see him crowned with glory and honour.—Where, Lord? Even at a communion table, where he is spiritually present, to be fed upon like a carcase, by the poor, believing, greedy, hungry eagle.—Where, Lord? Wherever he be, the believing souls must be at him; if on earth, no corner must be unsearched; if in heaven, distance must not keep them from him; nay, though he be mounted up to glory, yet they must mount up after him, according to his promise, They shall mount up with wings as eagles.

In the four preceeding verses we have the prophet,

1. Reproving the children of Israel for their unbelief and distrust of God, their dejection and despondency of spirit; Why sayest thou, O Jacob, and speakest, O Israel; My way is hid from the Lord, and my judgment is passed over from my God, ver. 27. Why do you think and speak, as if God did not heed and observe you, and as if God could not help and save you, whatever be your afflicted miserable case?

2. He reminds them of what is able to silence all their fear and distrust, Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth fainteth not, neither is weary? There is no searching of his understanding, ver. 28. q. d. He is an eternal God; so that there is no defect, no decay in him; he is an omnipotent God, who created the ends of the earth, and doubtless is as able to save as he was at first to make the world. He is of infinite wisdom to contrive your salvation; There is no searching of his understanding: none can say so far God's wisdom can go, and no further; for when we know not what to do, he knows: and he is a God of infinite power, he faints not, nor is wearied; he upholds the pillars of heaven and earth, and is neither wearied nor toiled with it.

3. The prophet relates to them God's communicative goodness, He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might, he encreaseth strength, ver. 29. He is not only powerful himself, but he communicates power and strength to these that need the same: He gives power to the faint. Many, out of weakness, even of body, are made strong, and recovered by his providence; and many that are feeble in Spirit, unable for service and suffering, yet are strengthened by his grace, with all might in the inward man; and e-

* This sermon was preached at Kinclaven, on the Sabbath evening, immediately after the administration of the sacrament of the Lord's supper there, June 1. 1735. It hath been three times printed.

especially

ſpecially to them that are ſenſible of their weakneſs, he increaſes ſtrength: for when they are weak in themſelves, they are ſtrong in the Lord.

4. The prophet ſtates the difference betwixt them that truſt in themſelves, and them that truſt in God: as for them that truſt in themſelves, and truſt to their own ſufficiency, they ſhall find their ſtrnegth to be but weakneſs; even the youths ſhall faint and be weary, and the young men ſhall utterly fall, ver. 30.; the young men who are ſtrong, and apt to look upon themſelves as ſtronger than they are, and ſo look not unto God for his grace to be ſufficient for them, they ſhall faint and fall, and be made to ſee the folly of truſting to themſelves. But as for them that truſt in the Lord, and wait on him for ſupplies of grace, They ſhall renew their ſtrength: they ſhall mount up with wings as eagles; they ſhall run and not weary; they ſhall walk and not faint, ver. 31.

Thus you ſee the connexion of the words with the preceeding; and in them you have three things, 1. The exerciſe of God's people. 2. Their privilege, They ſhall renew their ſtrength. 3. The effect of this privilege, They ſhall mount up with wings as eagles; they ſhall run, and not be weary; they ſhall walk, and not faint.

1. The exerciſe of God's people; they are ſuch as wait upon the Lord. Now, who are theſe that wait upon God? I anſwer, in the words of the pſalmiſt David, Pſal. xxiv. 6. This is the generation of them that ſeek him, that ſeek thy face, O Jacob; that is, O God of Jacob. And hence, ſeeking and waiting are joined together; The Lord is good to them that wait for him, and to the ſoul that ſeeks him, Lam. iii. 25. The true waiter is a ſeeker, and the true ſeeker is a waiter upon God. It is a duty comprehenſive of the whole character of the religious perſon. If you be truly ſeeking God, man, woman, at this ordinance, then you are waiting upon him.

2. But what advantage have they that thus ſeek and wait upon God? This is ſhewed us in the ſecond part of the words, their privilege; They ſhall renew their ſtrength. Their ſtrength ſhall not only be increaſed, but renewed; as there is new occaſion, they ſhall have new ſupplies, and ſo they ſhall renew their ſtrength; or, as it is in the Hebrew, They ſhall CHANGE their ſtrength, as a man changes his raiment: as their work is changed, their ſtrength ſhall be changed, whether it be doing or ſuffering work; they ſhall have ſtrength to labour, ſtrength to wreſtle, ſtrength to reſiſt temptation, and ſtrength to bear burdens; They ſhall renew their ſtrength; get new ſtrength for new duty. The beſt of God's children, if continuing long in duty, their ſpirits are waſted: well, God will renew their ſtrength, eſpecially their ſpiritual ſtrength, which is from God himſelf, from whom is their new temper and diſpoſition, their new nature. But what of all this, ſay you; indeed they ſhall have much benefit, if you conſider,

3. The effect of this privilege, or how it is made evident; that is evinced in three particulars.

(1.) They ſhall mount up with wings as eagles. O it is a great privilege for a believer to be brought, through grace, to fly; yea, not only to fly like a weak bird, but to mount up like an eagle, the ſtrongeſt of flying birds: the weak believer, by waiting on God, becomes ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Grace ſtrengthens the ſoul to mount heavenward, and carries it above the world and the things of it.

(2.) They ſhall run and not be weary; that is, they ſhall run in the way of God's commandments chearfully, and with alacrity, conſtancy, and with perſeverance.

(3.) They ſhall walk and not faint; weak ſickly perſons are in danger to faint and fail when they walk, but they ſhall walk and not faint. You have a word, Gal. vi. 9. Let us not weary in well-doing; for in due ſeaſon we ſhall reap, if we faint not. O ſays a child of God, that is endeavouring, through grace, to wait upon the Lord, I fear I never reap, becauſe I will ſoon be faint and weary: but here is the promiſe you are to take hold of, You ſhall run without wearying, and walk and not faint; and in this way there is no fear but you ſhall reap: grace is promiſed, as well as the reward of grace.

We have already diſcuſſed one doctrinal obſervation from theſe words, viz. That as it is the duty and practice of God's people to wait on God; ſo it ſhall be their privilege to have their ſtrength renewed. But having finiſhed what we intended upon this doctrine, we come now to conſider the ſecond obſervation, namely, > DOCT. That believers, who, in waiting on the Lord, get their ſtrength renewed, they ſhall mount up on wings as eagles.

The ſcripture is full of parables, where ſpiritual things are repreſented by natural; ſo here, the believer is compared to the eagle: the goſpel of Chriſt is full of them; and it may be for theſe two reaſons.

1. Becauſe parables make a lively impreſſion on the minds of auditors, and convey the truth to the perſon before he be aware: ſome, who are ready to forget the truth, will mind the ſimile; and ſo it leads them back again to the truth which they had forgot.

2. To teach us a ſpiritual and ſacred uſe of the creature, like Jacob's ladder, the foot on earth, and the top in heaven; that by theſe we may aſcend to heaven, and by the creature look above the creature.

The method we would propoſe, for illuſtrating this ſubject, through divine aſſiſtance, ſhall be the following.

I. We ſhall ſpeak a little of the wings wherewith they mount up.
II. The things wherein they mount up.
III. The ſeaſons when it is eſpecially they mount up.
IV. The manner how they mount up.
V. The reaſons why they mount up. And,
VI. Make ſome application of the ſubject. And in the whole of theſe particulars ſtudy as much brevity as poſſible.

I. We are to ſpeak of the wings wherewith they mount up. And here I might tell you the wings wherewith they are mounted up, and the wings wherewith they do mount.—The wings wherewith they are mounted up are nothing elſe but the influences of the Spirit of Chriſt; the enlightening and enlivening influences thereof: they are, indeed, more paſſive than active at firſt; When I am lifted up, I will draw all men after me. Chriſt being mounted up, he makes all his remnant to mount up after him: and herein they are acted, before they act; for, he works in them both to will and to do.

do. They are carried up, as it were, on the wings of the wind; for these influences of the Spirit, wherewith they are mounted up, are compared to the wind, Song iv. 16. Awake, O north wind; come thou south; blow upon my garden, that the spices thereof may flow out. Believers know well enough what it is to be mounted up on the wings of the Spirit.—But more particularly, as to the wings wherewith they do mount up, they are especially these two, viz. the wing of faith, and the wing of love.

1. The wing of faith they have, and must have, who would mount up heaven-ward. Now, there is not a feather in this wing, but is made in heaven; By grace ye are saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God, Eph. ii. 8. Yea, after the believer hath got faith, he cannot spread out his wing without God; To you it is given, not only to believe but to suffer for his sake, Phil. i. 29. To you, believers, it is given to believe; not only the habit of faith, is the gift of God, but the exercise of faith is his gift also. Now, this is one wing, and none can mount up to heaven without it; for it is a grace that looks not at things that are seen in this world, but at things that are not seen; it is the evidence of things not seen: it mounts the soul to heaven and heavenly things, and makes them evident.

2. There is the wing of love, by which the believer mounts up to heaven: and this is a wing made also by God; The love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, Rom. v. 5. This is a wing then framed in heaven, a grace that comes from the God of love; and therefore it flies up to heaven again: the holy spark of this fire flies upward. This grace is of such a mounting quality, that it unites the soul of the believer to Christ, as well as faith. As Jonathan's soul was knit or joined to the soul of David by love; so is the soul of the believer knit and glued to Christ by love: and, O this wing of love is a strong wing! Song viii. 6. Love is strong as death; yea, stronger than death and life, and principalities, and powers: I am persuaded, says the apostle, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord, Rom. viii. 38, 39. This is such a strong wing that the fire cannot burn it: martyrs have found that it would abide the fire, when they glorified God in the fires; the fire did not burn their love, no; it mounted up to heaven with the flame.

II. The second thing was, To shew the things wherein they mount up. Here we shall give you both a negative and a positive account of them.

1st, We propose to give you a negative account of these things.

1. They do not mount up in airy speculations: some mount up only in airy motions; they have a great deal of head-knowledge, but no heart-love to the truth: They receive not the love of the truth, that they might be saved; for which cause, God sends them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie, 2 Thess. ii. 10, 11. The devil himself knows God and Christ; but hath no love to God or Christ in his heart: there may be much speculative knowledge, where there is no saving grace.

2. They do not mount up in sinful curiosity, to pry into the secrets of God; For secret things belong to God, to us the things that are revealed, Deut. xxix. 29. Many mount up too far into the decrees of election and reprobation. Oh! I fear I am a reprobate, say some. Alas! Sirs, beware of such blasphemy; as if, forsooth, you were omniscient, like God; and as if you had been upon the privy council of God from eternity, when he marked down the names of elect and reprobate: this is a thing cannot be known. In this side of time you cannot be sure you are a reprobate, as long as you are out of hell; but I can give you assurance, better than the stability of heaven and earth, that if you truly repent of your sin, and flee to Christ, the only Saviour, you are no reprobate; Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon, Isa. lv. 7. But if you will not part with sin, nor flee to Christ, you subscribe your own reprobation. Now, I say, the believer doth not mount up in sinful curiosity, concerning the decree of election and reprobation; but in so far as it is revealed to him, to give all diligence to make his calling and election sure: neither doth he pry curiously into the secrets of God's providence; It is not for you to know the times and the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power. Some have been very rash in telling when the day of judgment would be: we should not meddle with such secrets; For of that day and that hour knoweth no man, Matth. xxv. 13.

3. They do not mount up in self-conceit and self-estimation, as some do, who mount up in the pride of their hearts; God abhors the proud, and he will cast them down, let them mount up never so far: He resists the proud, and gives grace to the humble, James iv. 6. Pride was the sin of fallen angels; they would be as high as God, viz. self-dependent: and therefore God casts them down. This was the ill lesson that the devil taught our first parents, You shall be as Gods; and they were taken with this bait to their overthrow and ruin; and ever since, pride and self-conceit hath been natural to their posterity; and hence it is, so much self is mixed with all our preaching, praying, communicating. But when the believer mounts, he mounts in some measure above self, and gets it trode under his feet in self-abasing, self-abhorring thoughts.

4. They do not mount up in fits and starts of devotion, in modes and pangs of affection in a transient way. Many professors, when they hear the word, they seem to be mounted up in joy; but what comes of it? It is but a flash, and like a land-flood. The stony-ground hearers may receive the word with joy; but having no root, they wither and dwindle to nothing, Luke viii. 6, 13. Some, when they hear of Christ's sufferings, and see him sacramentally crucified, it draws tears from their eyes, and they never mount further.

2dly, We come now to give a positive account of these things wherein the believer mounts up. Believers mount up with wings as eagles, in these following things, or the like.

1. They mount up in spiritual-mindedness, contemplation, and holy meditation: Hence says David, My meditation of him shall be sweet, Psal. civ. 34. Having got the Spirit, they mind the things of the Spirit; They that are after the flesh, do mind the things things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit, mind the things of the Spirit: that which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit, Rom. viii. 5. Their heart is set and bent to mind the great mystery of godliness, God made manifest in the flesh, 1 Tim. iii. 16. And to know the height, and depth, and length, and breadth of the love of Christ. They do not suffer their thoughts to wander on the mountains of vanity.

2. They mount up in high designs and intentions: their ultimate design is the glory of God, and the enjoyment of him, which, you know, is man's chief end. This is the winged Christian's end: he mounts up in this high and holy end, and that in all his actions; in his civil actions, as in his buying and selling, travelling, labouring; and in his sacred actions; as his praying, reading, hearing, communicating; or in his relative actions, what he doth as a father, master, servant, or child; and in his natural actions, Whether he eat or drink, or whatever he doth, he doth all to the glory of God, 1 Cor. x. 31. At least his short-coming herein is matter of sorrow and shame to him.

3. They mount up in holy desires, saying with Job, O that I knew where I might find him! that I might come even to his seat! And their desires are not like the faint, languishing wish of the wicked, such as Balaam had; no, no: their desires are spiritual and sincere, such as these spoke of, Isa. xxvi. 9. With my soul have I desired thee in the night; and with my spirit within me will I seek thee early. — Their desires are strong and fervent, none but Christ will satisfy them; What wilt thou give me, seeing I go childless? said Abraham, Gen. xv. 2. So says the soul, mounting up towards God, O what wilt thou give me, seeing I go Christless? It pants after God, the living God. — Their desires are restricted to God and Christ alone; One thing have I desired of the Lord, and that will I seek after, that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in his temple. Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire besides thee, Psal. lxxiii. 25. — Their desires are dilated on a whole God, and a whole Christ; O my soul, thou hast said unto the Lord, Thou art my Lord, my God, my King, Psal. xvi. 2. They will have a whole God in all his essential perfections, and in all the relations he stands in to his people. They will have this God for their God for ever and ever, and for their guide even unto death. And they will have a whole Christ; Christ for sanctification, as well as for salvation; yea, Christ for their all in all.

4. They mount up in pious inclinations; they have an aversion at sin, at the sinful pleasures of this life; yea, they abhor them, with Ephraim, What have I to do any more with idols? That is the language of the eagle-like believer; he hath a great inclination, a strong bent of spirit after a God in Christ, as the top of his perfection, as the very spring of all his pleasure, and as the magazine of all his treasure, as the rest of his soul: if the devil and his evil heart hath set him at any distance from God, his mind is restless till he return to him again; Return to thy rest, O my soul; for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee, Psal. cxvi. 7. The top-swarm, as it were, of his inclination mounts up this way.

5. He mounts up in heavenly affections: hence is that injunction, Set your affections on things above, and not on things on the earth, Col. iii. 2. He endeavours, through grace, to have his affection some way corresponding with God's affection, so as to love what God loves, and hate what God hates; yea, to love as God loves, and to hate as God hates. God loves holiness with a strong and great love; so doth the believer. God hates sin with a perfect hatred; and so doth the believer, I hate every false way. See also, Psal. cxxxix. 21, 22.

6. They mount up in a gospel-conversation; so saith the apostle, Our conversation is in heaven, from whence we look for our Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, Phil. iii. 20.

7. The winged saint mounts up in a heavenly walk: as Enoch and Noah walked with God; so doth the winged soul, whose strength is renewed; he runs without wearying, and walks without fainting in the Lord's way. His heavenly walk discovers itself, 1. In his heavenly words, they are seasoned with salt, and edifying. And, 2. In his actions, wherein he studies sobriety, righteousness, and godliness in all the duties of religion, prayer, and praise. And, 3. In his company, for he can say with David, I am a companion of all them that fear thee, Psal. cxix. 63.

III. The next thing was, The seasons when it is that the believer, whose strength is renewed, doth mount up.

1. Whenever he gets the new nature, and the disposition; whenever he is converted, he mounts up on wings as an eagle. It is said of Paul, Acts ix. 11. whenever he was converted, Behold, he prayeth: think you Paul never prayed any before that time? Yea, many a prayer had he uttered, no doubt; for he profited in the Jewish religion, above many of his equals in his own nation: he had learned to say his prayers as well as the best of them; but he never prayed spiritually and acceptably before; he had never mounted up to heaven in his prayer before: but now, behold he prays; behold he mounts up, whenever he is converted.

2. He mounts up to heaven, all the days of his life, after his conversion; he is still making some progress heaven-ward: whatever backsets he may get by sin and Satan, now and then, yet he gets up again, and still ascends nearer and nearer heaven; Nevertheless, I am continually with thee, Psal. lxxiii. 23. Whatever I do, I endeavour still to be up on the mount with God. David would have both day and night spent with God; The Lord will command his loving-kindness in the day-time, and in the night his song shall be with me, and my prayer unto the God of my life, Psal. xlii. 8. He went to bed, as it were, with God in his arms; For he remembered him upon his bed, and meditated on him in the night-watches; and his soul was satisfied as with marrow and fatness: and when wakened out of his sleep he found him in his arms; When I awake, I am still with thee.

3. He mounts up, when he gets a fresh gale and new influences of the Spirit. The believer, at his lowest, is like a ship wind-bound, lying at anchor, but ready to set sail whenever the wind is fair; he can but make small progress with the oars of diligence, when the wind and tide is against him. O Sirs, if there be any gale of the Spirit blowing among you this day, then mount, mount, mount; you may make more progress then in an hour, than you will do without it in many a year, yea, in a whole life-time.

4. The believer uses to mount up with wings about a communion-time; nothing less will serve him than to come to BETHEL, the house of God; he he will go in to the chambers of presence, and never rest till he be at the end of his flight. Where is that, say you? Doth he mount to a communion-table; nay, he must be farther: doth he mount to the top of duties and ordinances; nay, he must be farther: doth he mount to heaven; nay, he must be farther yet. Strange! Where would he flee next? Indeed, he would flee into the heart of Christ; Set me as a seal upon thine heart: yea, and which is more yet, he would not only have himself in Christ's heart, but he would have Christ in his heart; Christ in him the hope of glory. And what would he do with him when he hath got him there? O then, saith he, He shall ly all night between my breasts; if I can, I will keep him all the night-time of this life, which is but a night, Till the day of eternity break, and the shadows fly away.

5. The believer mounts up on wings as an eagle at the day of death; then he soars aloft; This night thou shalt be with me in paradise. It is said of the adder, that when she is old, she goes through some strait passage, and leaves her old skin in the passage, and thereby renews her vigour and life. This passage of death is strait, and uneasy to the body, which, like the adder's skin is left in the way; and not without much pain and difficulty to it: but the soul passeth through without any harm; and the next moment mounts up to her state of immortality and happiness: then the believer mounts up indeed to the general assembly and church of the first-born, to the innumerable company of angels, to God the judge of all, and to Jesus the Mediator of the new covenant; yea, then he is mounted up a pillar in the temple of his God.

6. The believer will mount up at the day of judgment as with eagle's wings; then will he flee up to meet Christ in the air; Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord, 1 Thes. iv. 17.— You see then when the believer mounts up.

IV. The fourth thing is, To speak to the manner how the believer mounts up, He mounts up with wings as an eagle. In whatever respects the eagle mounts up, the same way doth the believer.

1. The eagle mounts up freely and naturally; God gives it a mounting nature: Doth the eagle mount up at thy command? says the Lord to Job, chap. xxxix. 27.; nay, it is by the instinct which the Lord hath given it; so that it is natural to it. Thus the believer mounts up naturally after God hath given him the new heart; it is natural to him to be mounting towards God: when the hypocrite mounts, he is forced up contrary to his natural tendency, as it were, like a stone, cast up into the air; it is not natural to it to fly up, but rather to fall down: but the believer mounts up naturally and freely.

2. The eagle mounts up highly; she flies higher than other birds: she makes her nest on high, on some inaccessible rock; not like the ostrich, that leaves her eggs in the sand, as some leave their souls here on earth: but these spiritual eagle believers, these heavenly birds, they fly high, even to the Rock of ages; and hence their daily desire is, Lead me to the Rock that is higher than I.

3. The eagle mounts up strongly, vehemently, and violently; it is a strong bird, and when it hath got the prey, it flies with violence. Thus doth the believer mount up; For the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. With such earnestness and intentness doth he mount up towards heaven, that no difficulty in the way shall hinder him.

4. The eagle mounts up swiftly and suddenly: this follows upon the other; for its strength and violence in flying, infers celerity: so doth the believer, under the lively influences of the Spirit. O how quick is his motion! Or ever he is aware, his soul makes him like the chariots of Amminadab. It is a speedy flight, that the believer makes towards Christ; he mounts swiftly.

5. The eagle mounts up gradually: though its flight be strong and swift, yet it is gradual; it comes not to the utmost extent of its motion, but by degrees: so the believer mounts gradually; he goes from strength to strength, till he appear before God in Zion, Psal. lxxxiv. 7. He flies still higher and higher; and so the object of his aim draws nearer and nearer to him, while he comes to more and more knowledge of God, and more and more communion with him, till faith and hope land in vision and fruition.

6. The eagle mounts up frequently and daily; and, in respect of its mounting disposition, constantly: so it is with the believer, he is always mounting; he hath still a mounting disposition, and he is constantly endeavouring to be actually mounting. The carnal professor never mounts up, but about the time of a communion, or the time of some sore affliction or conviction; and whenever these seasons are over, he goes as fast down as he went up: but it is the believer's trade of life to be mounting on week-days, as well as on Sabbath-days; and on ordinary Sabbaths, as well as communion Sabbaths.

V. The next thing is, To shew the reasons why the believer, who hath his strength renewed, mounts up on wings like an eagle.

1. Because he hath an eagle's nature. I said before, that the believer mounts up naturally; why, because he hath an eagle's nature. It is the natural disposition of the eagle to fly upward: so the believer hath a disposition to mount up to God, he being a new creature; If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature, 2 Cor. v. 17. This new nature ascends to heaven from whence it descended; the old nature goes always downward, but the new nature mounts upwards. If you want the new nature, you want the mounting disposition.

2. He mounts up on wings like an eagle; because he hath an eagle's eye: so the believer, he can see that invisible Sun, which no natural eye can attain to: The poor in spirit, and pure in heart, shall see God, Matth. v. 3, 8. The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him, 1 Cor. ii. 14.: but the believer knowing the mind of Christ, sees farer than the world; he sees the King in his beauty, and the land afar off. When he sees these things, he cannot but mount up to them; He endures, as seeing him who is invisible, Heb. ii. 27. He is far sighted; Abraham rejoiced to see Christ's day afar off, and he saw it, and was glad. This is that blessed object, which every believing soul doth see, even when he is in this world.

3. He mounts up on wings like an eagle; because he hath his nest on high, like an eagle: no wonder then he flies up, for his nest; I mean, his seat, his food, his treasure, his heart, his his head, his all is above.—His ſeat is above; the believing eagle cannot find himſelf ſafe while here below; therefore he flies to the Rock of ages, and there he ſits.—His food is above: Chriſt is his food; My fleſh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed. Now, his food being above; Where the carcaſe is, thither will the eagles be gathered together.—His treaſure is above: he hath an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, that is reſerved in heaven for him; and up he muſt to viſit his inheritance.—His heart is above, where his treaſure is; yea, Chriſt hath gotten his heart a-keeping; and he muſt be where his heart is.—And, in a word, his head is above: and muſt not the members be where the head is? And muſt not the ſtones of the building be where the foundation is? Chriſt is the head corner-ſtone.—His all is above: Chriſt is all in all to him; and therefore, mount he muſt; for this eagle hath a rich neſt above.

4. He mounts up with wings as an eagle, becauſe his ſtrength is renewed like the eagle's; Who ſatisfies thy ſoul with good things; ſo that thy ſtrength is renewed like the eagle, Pſal. ciii. 5. Therefore, having renewed his ſtrength, he mounts up on wings like the eagle. Some ſay the eagle is renewed, when it caſts its old feathers, and gets new ones; ſo the believer gets the old feathers of corruption removed, and puts on the new man, Eph. iv. 24. Others ſay the eagle's youth is renewed, when, its ſtomach being thirſty, it drinks the blood of the prey; and ſo the believer gets his ſtrength renewed, by drinking the blood of Chriſt by faith. Eph. iv. 13. It is in the unity of the faith, that he comes to the perfect man, to the meaſure of the ſtature of the fulneſs of Chriſt. If you have got a drink of the blood of Chriſt this day, to be ſure your ſtrength will be renewed; and if your ſtrength be renewed, you cannot but be mounting up on wings as an eagle. Here we might ſhew the influence between the renewing of the believer's ſtrength, and his mounting up; but this is eaſily perceived, eſpecially by theſe that know it experimentally.

VI. The ſixth thing in the general method, is the application. Is it ſo, That believers, who, in waiting on the Lord, have their ſtrength renewed, do mount up on wings as eagels? Waving ſeveral uſes that might be made, hence, 1ſt, May we not ſee ground to lament, that ſo few are mounting up as on eagle's wings at this day. Many peoples mind are noways with God; God is not in all their thoughts. Some mount up only in vain thoughts; and, oh! How long ſhall vain thoughts lodge within you? Jer. iv. 14. Some ſpends their thoughts on worldly affairs, the profits, pleaſures, riches, and honours of it; they mind earthly things. Some ſeem to mount, and they mount a little, but they come down again; like Herod, who heard John gladly, but ſoon did he fall. Some, when they are young, they are very religious, but their religion is eaſily rubbed off again; They begin in the Spirit and end in the fleſh. Some mount no farther than reſtraining grace, while the Lord withholds them, as he did Abimelech from ſinning againſt him: but they want reſtraining grace; they know not what it is to have the love of God conſtraining them. Many, inſtead of mounting in time of ordinances, the devil and the world run away with their hearts; or if they get any kindly frame about a ſacrament, whenever they go home, they forget all, and give looſe reins again to their thoughts and words, to their affections and actions.

2dly, We may apply it for examination and trial. Try whether you be mounting Chriſtians or not: to be ſure, you are either mounting or ſinking. You need to try after as well as before you go to the Lord's table. How ſhall I know, ſay you, whether or not I be mounting up as on eagle's wings? I ſhall keep by the ſimile, and give you the following marks.

1. If you be mounting up on wings like an eagle, then God hath opened the iron cage, and ſet you at liberty. While a man is in a ſtate of nature, or in legal bondage, he is like a bird in an iron cage; he cannot mount, till God come and knock off his fetters, and looſe his bonds, and proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the priſon to them that are bound, and ſo lets them out to the free air, that they may fly. If you be a mounting ſoul, you will know ſomething more or leſs of this; you have found yourſelf in the iron cage, in the devil's claws; and you have found the Lord turning you from darkneſs to light, and from the power of Satan unto God; at leaſt, you can ſay, in ſome meaſure, Once I was blind, now I ſee; once I was bound, and now I am ſet at liberty.

2. If you be mounting up on eagle's wings, then you will have ſomething of an eagle's appetite; Where the carcaſe is, thither will the eagles be gathered together. The eagle, it is ſaid, doth very greedily devour her prey; and if you be a true eagle, you will eat greedily of the fleſh and blood of the Son of God. It is not a little of this heavenly carcaſe that ſatisfies the believing eagle; he muſt feed upon it greedily, and daily; yea, and live upon it conſtantly: The life that he lives, is by faith on the Son of God.

3. If you be mounting up on eagles wings, then you have got ſomething of an eagle's heart: the eagle is a noble kind of creature, diſdaining to prey upon mean birds. We have a common Latin proverb, Aquila non captat muſcas; [that is, The eagle doth not catch flies.] It preys only upon creatures worthy of it: ſo, the noble generous ſoul of the mounting believer will not ſtoop to theſe things that are inferior to him, or unworthy of him; no kingdom will pleaſe him, but the kingdom of heaven; no heritage, but the heritage of Jacob; no rock, but the Rock of ages; no portion, but a portion in the Son of Jeſſe.

4. If you be mounting up on eagles wings, then you will be daily caſting off your old feathers; ſuch as, the old feather of ſelf-righteouſneſs: you will never allow yourſelf to mount up with the wing of your own righteouſneſs. You will know that the devil clipt old Adam's wings; yea, that by the fall he brake his wings, and that never one ſince the fall could mount up to heaven on the wing of this old covenant-righteouſneſs, unleſs it was the double eagle, if I may ſo expreſs it, the God-man in two natures, and one perſon, who came to bring in everlaſting righteouſneſs: under this great wing, do all the little eagles flock, as the hen's chickens do under her wings, deſiring to be found in Chriſt, Not having their own righteouſneſs, which is after the law, but that which is through the faith of Chriſt, the righteouſneſs which is of God by faith, Phil. iii. 9.—And as they will be caſting the old old feather of their own ſelf-righteouſneſs, ſo the old feather of ſelf-conceit. O the mounting believer thinks little of himſelf; ſo little, that he thinks nothing of himſelf. If nothing could be divided, he is LESS than nothing in his own ſight; and if nothing could be diſparaged, he is WORSE than nothing; he is the leaſt of ſaints, and the chief of ſinners, as Paul was in his own eyes: he caſts down all his attainments, all his enjoyments, all his qualifications, all duties at Chriſt's feet as nothing; that ſo he may have nothing to be a weight to keep him from mounting up.—In a word, he caſts off the old feathers of ſin and corruption daily; alſo enmity, unbelief, hypocriſy, carnality; he ſeeks to have theſe works of the devil deſtroyed wholly. It is ſaid, that there is an antipathy between eagles and ſerpents; ſo there is a continual antipathy between the believing eagle and the old ſerpent; and all the ſerpent's brood are abominable to him.

5. If you be mounting up on eagles wings, then you will be clothed with the ſun; the ſun will be big in your eye. The mounting eagle gets a view of the ſun; and the higher it mounts, the bigger doth the ſun appear. If you be a mounting Chriſtian, you have got above the clouds of darkneſs and unbelief now and then, and got a view of the Sun of righteouſneſs; and he hath been ſo big in your eye, as to darken the glory of all created objects; yea, ſo big in your eye, that you have ſeen him to be all in all; to be the all of the covenant, the all of the ſacraments, the all of the goſpel: you have ſeen him to be all things, and above all things, and better than all things: you have ſeen him to be heaven itſelf, yea, more than heaven, yea, more than ten thouſand heavens: you have ſeen all things to be in him; election, redemption, juſtification, ſanctification, grace, glory, and all. O Sirs, to you that believe, he is precious, and a pearl of great price.

6. If you be mounting up on wings as eagles, you will be clothed with the ſun, and you will have the moon of this world under your feet, Rev. xii. 1. The mounting eagle being above the clouds, ſees the ſun big above, and the earth little below; and the higher it mounts, the leſs will the earth appear. O the mounting believer thinks little of the world; if we were as high as the ſtars, we would not ſee the earth; the higher we fly to heaven, the more doth the nothingneſs of the earth appear to us. The believer ſometimes mounts up ſo high, that he flies out of ſight; the world is out of ſight of him, and out of his ſight and mind alſo; when he is on the mount of communion with God, glad would he be that he might never come down to the world again, as Peter on the mount of tranſfiguration, It is good for us to be here.

3*dly*, This doctrine may be applied for exhortation, which I ſhall form in a ſhort addreſs. 1. In a word of terror to the ſoul that never mounted. 2. A word of comfort to the mounting ſoul. 3. A word of counſel to the hovering ſoul.

[1.] A word of terror to you that never mounted up to heaven towards Chriſt. Alas! what ſhall we ſay to you? You are not like eagles, but like filthy black ravens, that do not mount heaven-ward, nor look upon the ſun, but wander to and fro upon the earth, as Noah's raven did, and feed upon dung hills and forbid things; you cannot fly to heaven, but flutter upon the earth: but if you do not mount up to heaven, the curſe of God will come upon you; all the curſes mentioned, Deut. xxvi. 15,—20. You will be curſed in your baſket, and in your ſtore; curſed in your outgoings and incomings. The curſe of God will be in your houſe, Prov. iii. 33. The curſe of the Lord is in the houſe of the wicked; that is, the man that doth not mount up to Chriſt by faith, nor mount up in the ways of God. The curſe of God will be in your prayers and duties; The ſacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to God: your ſacrifice will be curſed to you: the word you hear will be a curſe to you, it will be a ſavour and ſeal of death, and not of life to you, 2 Cor. ii. 16. The ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper will be curſed to you; for there you eat and drink damnation to yourſelf. If you never mounted by faith, and yet went to a communion-table, you have been eating and drinking God's curſe, which you will never vomit up again, unleſs you mount up to Chriſt with the wing of faith. What ſhall I ſay? If you do not mount, Chriſt himſelf will be curſed to you; We preach Chriſt crucified, to the Jews a ſtumbling-block, and to the Greeks fooliſhneſs. If you do not mount, you will ſtumble into hell; and Chriſt himſelf will be a ſtumbling-block over which you will fall and break your neck, and periſh for ever. O then, do not tempt Chriſt by lying ſtill in your ſin and unbelief, when you ſhould be mounting. See a remarkable word, 1 Cor. x. 9. Neither let us tempt Chriſt, as ſome of them alſo tempted, and were deſtroyed of ſerpents. If you do not mount, with the eye of faith, towards Chriſt, the myſtical brazen ſerpent, you will be deſtroyed with worſe ſerpents than the Iſraelites were: he will let looſe the old ſerpent the devil; he will let looſe the young ſerpent, your conſcience, upon you, and both theſe will tear you to pieces to all eternity; beſides, the fiery ſerpent of God's everlaſting vengeance: if you do not mount, God will caſt you down into the dungeon of hell, to live among all theſe ſerpents, as long as God lives. Think not theſe to be words of courſe, man, woman; I am not jeſting with you; nay, I declare to you in the name of the everlaſting God, that if you do not mount up to Chriſt, you ſhall go down to hell with the devil; Matth. xxv. 30 The unprofitable ſervant ſhall be caſt into utter darkneſs, there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth. Rev. xiv. 10. They ſhall have no reſt. Conſider this, all ye that forget God, and forget to mount up to him.

[2.] A word of comfort to the mounting ſoul.—Are you a mounting eagle? Then you ſhall be bleſſed in your outgoing and incoming: God's bleſſing will be in your houſe; For he bleſſeth the habitation of the juſt: you will be bleſſed in your prayers and duties; For the prayer of the upright is his delight: the word will be bleſſed to you; it will be a river of life to comfort you, poor believing eagle, when you droop your wings: the ſacraments are bleſſed to you; the communion-table is a foretaſte of the fruit of the vine, which you ſhall drink for ever new in your Father's kingdom, where you ſhall be for ever with the Lord: you are happier than the tongues of men and angels can tell.—And as the mounting ſoul is bleſſed, ſo he is ſafe: as long as he is mounting, he is out of the reach of this world's miſery; ſafe againſt death itſelf; yea, ſafe againſt the wrath of God; you are above all this, for you are mounted up to the love of God,

God, and that is above his wrath. O believer, if you be mounting, keep up your head, and be always mounting, till you come to the throne of God, and of the Lamb. O mount, mount, mount, till you come to heaven, to the top of the tree of life, where the birds of paradise shall sing, Hallelujah, to him that sits upon the throne, and to the Lamb for ever and ever. The eagle is never in danger, but when she is on earth: we are never in danger when we are in Christ, but till we fly down to the earth; therefore, seeing God hath renewed your strength to mount up as on eagles wings, O soar aloft; look down with a generous disdain upon the world, and the vanities thereof, and keep your heart up in heaven.

[3.] A word of counsel to the hovering soul. Perhaps there are some hovering sinners, and some hovering saints here.

(1.) As for hovering sinners that never yet mounted, they have some thoughts of mounting; but some objections come in their way, and they are in a hover.

OBJECT. Oh! say you, you are desiring us to go about a duty we are not able to do; alas! I am a poor thing, not able to fly up to heaven; how is that possible to me that want the wing of faith and love?

ANSW. 1. Up, you must go, or else go down to the bottomless pit: God commands you to mount, and if you be not able, consider whence your inability flows; the fall brake your wings; For God made man upright, but he found out many inventions: thou hast disabled thyself in Adam, therefore God may condemn thee.

2. The reason why you do not mount up, is, because you are wilful; You will not come to me that you might have life, John v. 40. Your weakness flows from your wilfulness: if the weakness of your will were taken away, then you would mount up with ease.

3. Do what you can to fly up; if you cannot fly, endeavour to run without wearying: if you cannot run, endeavour to walk without fainting: if you cannot walk because of your broken leg, then will you creep to the physician with it, and hold out the broken leg, the withered arm to him; if you cannot creep, will you cry to him; He hath not said to the seed of Jacob, seek ye me in vain: if you cannot cry, will you look to him; Look to me and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: if you cannot look to him, will you long for him; for, He satisfies the longing soul: sigh, and sob, and groan after him. And, if after all, you think you can do nothing, because of your absolute weakness; then, O will you wait on the Lord, and you shall renew your strength; wait on him in the use of means; ly at the pool, and you cannot tell how soon you shall get strength to mount: Wait, I say, on the Lord.

OBJECT. Alas! say some, my mounting time is gone; my day of grace is past; I have been a long hearer of the gospel, and many a call have I slighted; I fear Christ will never take pains on me, to make me mount up to heaven.

ANSW. To you I would say, 1. O how dare you meddle with God's decree? I said something to this already; mind this is a stratagem of Satan, to keep you from coming to Christ. I have read that the devil said once to a man, "You need not serve God any more, for you "will not win to heaven." The man was troubled at this: But what was his answer? "If I cannot win to God in heaven, I shall have "as much of God as I can on earth." O man, you will cheat the devil effectually, if you tell him in earnest, I will take all of God that I can now, though I should never get any more of him.

2. Are you not waiting on God in ordinances; and sorrowing at your heart, that you have sinned so much, and slighted Christ so long? Then your day of grace is not past, it is yet time to mount. Now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation; and it is, perhaps, now or never. O young sinner, old sinner, your mounting time may be gone before you get another call. Death will dismount you from these high privileges in a little, and then you shall never mount again; but sink, sink, sink for ever in fire and brimstone.

(2.) There may be some hovering saints here, who know what it is to have mounted some time a day, but now they are fallen down again; gladly would they mount, but many things hinder them from mounting.

OBJECT. 1. Alas! say some, the woful WORLD keeps me from mounting; the losses, and crosses, and temptations of the world are a clog; whenever I go home, I will meet with something that will draw me down by the heels again, as it were.

ANSW. O believer, be not discouraged, but set a stout heart to a steep mountain: oppose the love of the world as much as you can; and see vanity written on its forehead: you know that communion with God is better than all the enjoyments of this life; cast off these things that trouble and afford vexation to you. O let not the world get in to your heart; if the world mount up in your heart, it will indeed draw you down, that you shall not mount up to heaven. Beware of your graceless friends, their carnal walk and conversation may rob you of all your spirituality in half an hour, and spoil a good communion in two minutes. O Sirs, be as little in their company as you can; and when you are obliged to be with them, yet let your heart be always mounting, and giving a stolen look to Christ.—But, perhaps, there are other things in the world also that keep you from mounting, and keep you down with discouragement: you see things going all wrong in the church, grievances lying heavy upon us; zeal decaying, and iniquity abounding; and the like. O how can I get mounted up under such discouragements. As to all which, I shall only say, you have the more need to mount up to heaven, that you see things so far wrong here below.

OBJECT. 2. But, Oh! say you, there is another thing that hinders me from mounting; I have a STONE in my heart that bears me down; the dead weight of corruption that draws me downward; how can I mount with such a rock on my back, such a heavy stony heart in my breast?

ANSW. O believer, that art groaning under the sense of your heart-evils, will you go to God with your stony heart; none can cure the spiritual gravel but God himself; he can cut the stone out of the hard-hearted sinner, and he hath promised to do it, Ezek. xxxvi. 26. I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh. O Sirs, go and tell him, that it bears you down when you would mount up to heaven, and seek to have the stony heart softened in the blood of Christ; for Christ's blood is a heart-softening blood; Look to him whom you have pierced and mourn: if you but mount up with your eye to him, it will melt your stony heart; and then the melted heart will be a mounting heart. Alas! say you, I have a worm at my heart, Iniquity quity prevails againſt me, and this is a heavy thing that bears me down, ſorely, down; and, I think, it will wear me down to hell: mine iniquities are a burden; they ſink me down, terribly, down into the mire. But what ſhall I do, I will never win up, I think, from under this burden? Poor ſoul, caſt your burden upon Chriſt; God laid on him the iniquity of us all. Caſt thy burden on the Lord, and he will ſuſtain thee. Doth the guilt of ſin burden you? Look to him who is made of God to you righteouſneſs. Doth the power of ſin burden you? Look to him who is made of God to you ſanctification. Come unto me all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you reſt.

OBJECT. 3. Oh! ſay ſome, there is another thing that hinders me from mounting up; the DEVIL ſteps in between me and heaven, between Chriſt and me, and ſo I cannot get mounted; he aſſaults me ſore with many ſad temptations, he ſcars me from duty, and tempts me to ſin.

ANSW. Poor believer, be comforted; it ſeems you are not on Satan's ſide; it ſeems you are come out of his camp; and therefore he aſſaults you ſo ſore: mean time, O endeavour to mount up notwithſtanding of all temptations; for, within a little, God ſhall bruiſe Satan under your feet, Rom. xvi. 20. The believing eagle ſhall get day about with the devil, and tread upon this old ſerpent. Again, tell me, haſt thou not wings to fight againſt the devil, as they ſay the eagle doth? when any come to take her young, then ſhe fights with her wings. So do you fight with the wing of faith, that is the ſhield that quenches the fiery darts of the devil. The devil's darts cannot pierce the believer's wing of faith. Fight with the wing of love; love is a ſtrong wing, like coals of fire, it hath a moſt vehement flame; this fire of love will burn the devil's darts that he throws at you; the love of Chriſt will conſtrain you to reſiſt him boldly. But, alas! ſay you, for all that, I cannot fight; my faith is feeble, and my love is faint. Then, I only ſay to you, O poor ſoul, go to Chriſt; Chriſt is like the old eagle that helps the young ones; yea, Chriſt takes the young eagles on his wings, Deut. xxxii. 11, 12. As an eagle ſtirreth up her neſt, fluttereth over her young, ſpreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings: ſo the Lord alone did lead him; and there was no ſtrange god with him. Exod. xix. 4. I bare you on eagles wings, and brought you to myſelf. Chriſt will carry you on his wings; and for your encouragement, know that he hath fought with the devil already, and overcome him, he hath overcome principalities and powers; yea, by death he hath deſtroyed him that had the power of death, that is, the devil.

OBJECT. 4. And laſtly, Alas! ſay you, there is another thing yet that hinders me from mounting; I would not think much of the common enemies of my ſalvation, ſin, Satan, and the world; I know they will do their utmoſt to keep me out of heaven: but, oh! GOD himſelf is preſſing me down, and that is ſaddeſt of all, he doth not give the wonted communication of his grace, nor ſtrength to mount: though I had habitual grace that will not do, I muſt have auxiliary grace.

ANSW. It may be, when you got additional grace at the laſt communion, you have ſinned it away; and no wonder, when you turn the grace of God into wantonneſs, that the Lord make you go empty-handed.—But again, he may do this to let you ſee, that habitual grace is not ſufficient, in order to your mounting up to heaven, without actual grace; It is not in him that willeth, nor in him that runneth, but in God that ſheweth mercy.—However, know that God is a ſovereign God, and he will let you know that he is ſo, by giving you new ſupplies of grace, and withdrawing them again as he pleaſes; but wait on him, and you ſhall renew your ſtrength.

OBJECT. "But, oh! how can I mount, when "he not only denies his grace, but HIDES his "face from me? The eagle mounts towards "the body of the ſun, but my ſun is covered "with a cloud, and I go mourning without "the Sun. A day-bird cannot fly in the night; "and, alas! how ſhould I mount in the dark "night of deſertion?"

ANSW. It may be you have hid your face from God, and that makes him hide his face from you: you have ſinned away his preſence, by turning away from his preſence; or, perhaps, God doth this for the trial of your faith, love, and patience. However it be, you muſt exerciſe your wings of faith and love, and mount up notwithſtanding that you be in the dark; Who is among you that feareth the Lord, and obeyeth the voice of his ſervant, that walketh in darkneſs, and hath no light? Let him truſt in the name of the Lord, and ſtay himſelf upon his God, Iſa. l. 10. The ſpouſe was buſy even when Chriſt was gone, Saw ye him whom my ſoul loveth?

OBJECT. "Oh! but how can I mount, when "he is not only an abſent, but an angry God; "I ſee nothing but ſurly looks in his counte"nance; and he is ſhooting arrows againſt me; "yea, His arrows ſtick faſt in me, and his hand preſſes "me ſore; when I mount up he ſhoots me down "with his arrows; For the arrows of the Almigh"ty are within me: and when my wings are "wounded, down I fall."

ANSW. God may do ſo to humble you; you muſt be humbled; and the more humble and low you are, the higher you ſhall be advanced, and mount up the higher after your humiliation: never was the believer higheſt than after he was loweſt, James iv. 10. Humble yourſelves in the ſight of the Lord, and he ſhall lift you up; and remember how you may meet with barbed arrows, poiſoned arrows of God's anger, and yet all in love: In a little wrath have I hid myſelf from thee for a moment; but with everlaſting kindneſs will I have mercy upon thee. Iſa. liv. 10. For the mountains ſhall depart, and the hills be removed, but my kindneſs ſhall not depart from thee. You ſhall at laſt find all theſe things well ordered. What think you, when you ſhall come to heaven, and Chriſt ſay to you, Welcome, believer, when I hid my face, did I not deal kindly with you? When I ſhot the arrows into your heart, did I not deal kindly with you? And the believer will then ſay, Indeed, Lord, thou haſt done all things well: all is well that ends well.

OBJECT. "Alas! but I think the Lord will "kill me with his arrows; and will I fly to "heaven, if he kill me?"

ANSW. There is no fear that your kind Lord will kill you; but though he ſhould, yet make uſe of your wings, and fly to him, as Job, Though he ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him. I read of a ſparrow, that when purſued by a hawk, flew into Xenocrates's boſom; his words were, Non oportet ſupplicem prodere; "It were barbarous to "betray a poor ſupplicant." If you fly to God's boſom, no fear that he kill you; when his wrath purſues you, he is but chaſing you into his boſom: therefore let nothing hinder you from mounting.

The Lord himſelf engage you to wait on him, that you may renew your ſtrength, and mount up on wings as eagles.

SERMON

SERMON LXXI.

The River of Life, proceeding out of the Throne of God, and of the Lamb. *

Rev. xxii. 1.

And he ſhewed me a pure river of water clear as cryſtal, proceeding out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb.

At the laſt ſacramental action, that fell to my ſhare here, I took occaſion to ſpeak of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt as the Lamb in the midſt of throne, Rev. vii. 17 †. And now I would ſpeak a little, as the Lord may aſſiſt, of the great bleſſings that proceed from that throne, to the everlaſting ſalvation and conſolation of all the redeemed.

Some underſtand all that is ſaid in the two laſt chapters of this book, of the ſtate of the church even here on earth, in the glory of the latter days. Others view it as a repreſentation of the perfect and triumphant ſtate of the church in heaven. I reckon it ſafeſt to exclude neither of theſe; and apprehend it takes in the heavenly ſtate of the church, and the happineſs thereof, commenced in time here, and conſummate through eternity hereafter. That glorious ſtate begins here, ſince grace is the beginning of glory, and glory the perfection of grace. Now, this happy ſtate is deſcribed here, in alluſion to the earthly paradiſe, that was loſt by the ſin of the firſt Adam, as another, a better paradiſe, reſtored by the righteouſneſs of the ſecond Adam.

In this verſe you ſee a revelation made to John of the river of paradiſe; and by this river I underſtand the Spirit, and all ſpiritual bleſſings: for ſo I find the Spirit frequently in ſcripture repreſented, as a river, or a flood of water; Iſa. xliv. 3. I will pour water on him that is thirſty, and floods upon the dry ground. What is that? Even my Spirit, and my bleſſing; as it is explained in the words immediately following.—But then, you have the quality of this river; it is a PURE river of water of life, CLEAR as cryſtal. All the ſtreams of earthly comforts are muddy and polluted, and polluting; but theſe are pure, clear, healing, and refreſhing; giving life, and preſerving life for ever to them that drink thereof.—You have the riſe of this river, or whence it flows and proceeds, namely, Out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb. The Spirit, and all the bleſſings and comforts of grace and glory, proceed from a God in Chriſt. As the Spirit, with reference to his perſonal property, proceeds from the Father and the Son; ſo, with reference to his office in the œconomy of redemption, he, as a Spirit of all grace and comfort, proceeds like a pure cryſtal river out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb; the Spirit, and all ſpiritual bleſſings, being from God, through the mediation of the Lamb. But I ſhall further explain the words upon the proſecution of the following doctrine.

OBSERV. That the living Spirit of God, communicating all the bleſſings of everlaſting life, graciouſly here, and glorioufly hereafter, proceeds, like a pure cryſtal river, out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb.

And here I ſhall, as the Lord may pleaſe to aſſiſt, eſſay to do the following things.

I. Offer ſome remarks for clearing and confirming the doctrine.
II. Obſerve the property and quality of the water of this river.
III. Shew what may be imported in its being ſaid to proceed out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb.
IV. Enquire whence it is, or aſſign the reaſons why this river of life is ſaid to proceed out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb.
V. Deduce ſome inference for the application.

I. We are to offer ſome remarks for clearing, confirming, and illuſtrating the doctrine.

Remark 1. "That communion with God in Chriſt, "in his bleſſings and comforts at his table, "whether above or below, is by his Spirit." For, as through Chriſt we have acceſs to the Father by one Spirit, Eph. ii. 18.; ſo all the bleſſings and comforts of the new covenant are communicated from the Father, through the Son, by the Holy Ghoſt: and hence we enjoy the grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the love of God, through him, in the communion of the Holy Ghoſt, 2 Cor. xiii. 14.

Remark 2. "That all ſpiritual bleſſings, thus "communicated, are everlaſting." They are the bleſſings of everlaſting life, begun in grace here, and conſummate in glory hereafter. God himſelf, the prime and principal bleſſing, is the everlaſting God; and the everlaſting light, the everlaſting life, the everlaſting heaven and happineſs of his people. And all the ſtreams of bleſſings that flow from this fountain of living waters are everlaſting. For example, Is peace a ſtream of this river? Rom. v. 1. Being juſtified by faith, we have peace with God. This peace is everlaſting: and hence departed ſaints are ſaid to enter into peace whenever they die, Iſa. lvii. 2. Peace here enters into them, and there they enter into peace.—Is pardon of ſin a ſtream of this river? Yea, We have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveneſs of ſin, Eph. i. 7.; and this pardon is everlaſting: and hence it is ſaid of the inhabitants of heaven, The people that dwell there, ſhall be forgiven their iniquity, Iſa. xxxiii. 24. Here they are pardoned, and there the pardon is lengthened out to eternity. —Is sanctification and holiness a stream? Yea, Beholding his glory, we are changed into the same image. Well, it is an everlasting blessing, for in heaven it is perfected; We shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is, 1 John iii. 2.—Again, Is the life of comfort here a stream? Yea, we joy in God through Christ. This blessing is everlasting, and therefore called everlasting consolation, 2 Thess ii. 16. And hence the Comforter is said to abide in us for ever, John xiv. 16. Even when the sensible comfort is withdrawn, yet the Comforter abideth for ever.—Again, Is the begun life of communion with God a stream of this river of the water of life? What is this fellowship with the Father and the Son, but the beginning of everlasting communion?—In a word, Is grace a stream of this river of the water of life? What is the life of grace here, but the beginning of the life of glory, which is everlasting, and commenced whenever the soul believes in Christ? He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life. This is life eternal, to know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent.——Thus you may see what I mean by the blessings of everlasting life, to be enjoyed graciously here, and gloriously hereafter, called the water of life in the text. And so far I have here designedly prevented myself the necessity of explaining much further this water of life, or the streams of this river.

* This ſermon was preached immediately before the celebration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, at Dunfermline, July 6th, 1735. It hath undergone four impreſſions.

† See this Sermon, printed above, p. 651.

Remark 3. "That the Spirit of God, as the "great blessing of the covenant, and all the "other spiritual blessings of everlasting life, "are compared frequently to water in scrip-"ture, John iv. 14. and 10. ver. compared." There Christ is said to give us living water: and again, The water that I shall give him that drinketh it, shall be in him a well of water springing up to everlasting life. And John vii. 37. If any man thirst, let him come to me and drink. He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly, out of his very heart and soul, shall flow rivers of living water. This he speaks of the Spirit. But I insist not on all the instances I might offer; only the Spirit and his influences, graces, comforts, and blessings, may be on many accounts compared to water. I insist not upon the parallel; only, as water is for quenching of thirst, washing off stains, cooling of heats, healing of wounds, softening of hard earth, and fructifying of barren earth; so the Spirit, in his various influences and operations, is of manifold such like use to the souls of all his people.

Remark 4. "That this river of water of life, "that waters the church, militant and triumphant, with all spiritual and everlasting bles-"sings, proceeds out of the throne of God, and of "the Lamb: I mean, the Spirit proceeds from "the Father and the Son." Not only doth he so, as he is the third Person of the glorious Trinity, and that by an eternal and ineffable procession; but also, as he is clothed with the peculiar and glorious office of applying the purchased redemption. He comes forth from the Father and the Son by a voluntary subordination. This is plain from several scriptures, particularly, John xiv. 16. I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever, even the Spirit of truth. John xv. 26. When the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me. John xiv. 26. But the Comforter, which the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things. And again, John xvi. 7,—14. If I go not away, the Comforter will not come; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when he is come, he will convince the world of sin, righteousness, and judgment. He will guide you into all truth. He shall glorify me, for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you. Whence then shall we have a good communion this day? Whence shall we have the Spirit, or any spiritual blessing and comfort? It is from the throne of God and of the Lamb: it is from the Father and the Son. This water is from God, through the mediation of the Lamb.

II. The second thing proposed was, To point out some of the qualities of this great blessing, comprehending all other blessings of everlasting life. The text calls it a pure river of the water of life, clear as crystal: where the water is described four ways, namely, from the plenty, the purity, the virtue, and the splendor of it.

1. It is described from the plenty, or great store of it, and therefore called a RIVER. This is that river, the streams whereof make glad the city of God, Psal. xlvi. 4. No pleasures are like these that flow from the Spirit of God. The fruit of the Spirit is peace and joy: but here it is only the streams of this river that we enjoy; but in heaven the river itself will be enjoyed. The holy Spirit is a river, not a cistern, to shew his infinite plenitude and fulness, and the great abundance of heavenly blessings that flow from him. Our Lord Jesus hath received of this river above measure, and yet the river is as full as ever. All believers, in all ages, from the beginning of the world, thousands and ten thousands, have drawn out of it; yet it is still an overflowing river. O let us bring all our empty pitchers here! For there is enough here for every son of Adam, if he would come; enough for time, and enough for eternity: the river is flowing by our door; O may we draw water out of this well of salvation!

2. It is described from its purity, it is a PURE river. The Spirit of God is a pure and holy Spirit; and all his blessings and comforts are pure and holy, purifying and sanctifying blessings. A pool or a standing water may be impure; but a river, though it should run through a loathsome ditch, will carry away the pollution of it: no man's heart, be it never so polluted, like a stinking ditch, but if a stream of this river be let into it, and have a free passage, it will carry away all the filth and pollution thereof. And why is it said of heaven, Rev. xxii. 27. that there shall in nowise enter into it any thing that defileth? Because there is the river ever running. Here we have only the streams running some times, but there is the river itself; the pure river, continually running. O let impure polluted souls come now to the streams of this pure and purifying river, as they are running from Christ in a gospel-dispensation; and never rest till they win to the river of perfect purity.

3. It is described from the quickening virtue of it: it is a pure river of water of LIFE. This river of water is the living Spirit of God; the Spirit of life, that quickens whom he will: he hath life in himself, and by him dead souls are quickened, and made to live for ever. All earthly elementary waters have a beginning; but this river, the Spirit of God, is from everlasting to everlasting, without beginning, and without without end. Other rivers are fed by ſprings and fountains; but this river of the Spirit is himſelf the fountain of living waters, as well as a river. This river proceeds from God, and yet the river is God himſelf; For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Spirit, and theſe three are One. Though God hath provided a channel of ordinances to convey ſome of the water of this river to us, for quickening and refreſhing us; yet the river cannot be circumſcribed or limited as it is in itſelf. O let dead ſouls conceive hope of life! here is the living and life-giving Spirit of God, to give the life of grace, the life of peace and pardon, the life of holineſs and ſanctification, the life of joy and conſolation, the life of communion and fellowſhip with God, which are all the beginning and commencement of everlaſting life, as I have already ſhewed.

4. This river of water is deſcribed from the brightneſs, ſplendor, and glory of it: it is CLEAR as cryſtal. This, I think, may point out both the pleaſure and perſpicuity of the river. What a pleaſant river is the Spirit, in the everlaſting emanation and flow of his influences and comforts! How ſweetly do the redeemed drink of this river of pleaſure! Pſal. xxxvi. 8. In the preſence of God there is fulneſs of joy, and pleaſures for evermore, Pſal. xvi. 11. And what a perſpicuous river is that of the Spirit, clear as cryſtal? The Spirit, as a Spirit of wiſdom and revelation, in the knowledge of Chriſt, makes clear diſcoveries as a cryſtal glaſs, or a cryſtaline tranſparent river. It is by the Spirit we behold, as in a glaſs, the glory of the Lord, 2 Cor. iii. 18. It is the Spirit that glorifieth Chriſt, by ſhewing the things of Chriſt: he giveth clear diſcoveries of the glory of Chriſt, and the glory of God's perfections in him. The Spirit of life is the Spirit of light, that giveth the fiducial viſion here, and the beatifical viſion hereafter.

III. The next thing propoſed was, To ſhew what may be imported in this river being ſaid to proceed out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.

1. It imports, that God and the Lamb have but one and the ſame throne, from whence the river of the Spirit, and all ſpiritual bleſſings do proceed. Here are good news to us this day, when we are to commemorate the ſufferings of the Lamb of God; that, as the Lamb that was ſlain upon the croſs is now ſitting upon the throne, ſo that God and the Lamb have not two thrones, but one and the ſame throne. The throne of God is the throne of the Lamb, and the throne of the Lamb is the throne of God, Rev. iii. 21. I am ſet down with my Father in his throne. He is the Lamb in the midſt of the throne of God: but of this I have formerly treated.

2. It imports, that God and the Lamb have but one and the ſame Spirit. The river proceeds from the throne of God and of the Lamb. The Spirit of God is the Spirit of the Lamb; and the Spirit of the Lamb is the Spirit of God. Happy they that have the Spirit of Chriſt in them, for the Spirit of Chriſt is the Spirit of God. He is the Spirit both of the Father and of the Son: All things that the Father hath are mine, ſays Chriſt, John xvi. 15. And particularly, the Father's Spirit is the Son's; hence it is ſaid, Gal. iv. 6. Becauſe ye are ſons, God hath ſent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, ABBA, Father. This river proceeds not out of the throne of God, or the Father's throne only; but out of the throne of the Lamb alſo, the Son's throne. The Spirit of life, for quickening dead ſouls into everlaſting life, proceeds not out of the throne of God as an abſolute God, but as a God in Chriſt; and therefore is ſaid to proceed out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.

3. It imports, that the fulneſs of the Godhead, that is in Chriſt, is a communicative fulneſs; and hence the river is ſaid to iſſue from the throne of God and of the Lamb. The everlaſting ſpring of the river is within the throne of God, where the Lamb ſits: and the Lamb is anointed with the Spirit above meaſure; for the Father giveth not the Spirit by meaſure unto him, John iii. 34. And this ocean of divine fulneſs that is in him is not ſhut up within the throne, but proceeds like a river out of it, that we, out of his fulneſs, may receive, and grace for grace, John i. 16. This communication is free, as free as the run of a ſtream out of a ſpring. And as the river proceeds freely out of the throne, ſo we may as freely come and drink of the water of life that runs out toward us. But again it imports,

4. That the giving out of the Spirit, and of all ſpiritual bleſſings, is a part of the royalty of Chriſt, and the fruit of his mounting the throne of heaven after he had finiſhed his work upon earth: and hence, When he aſcended up on high, leading captivity captive, he received gifts for men, even for the rebellious, Pſal. lxviii. 18. The giving out of the Spirit in the moſt plentiful manner was deferred till the Lamb that was ſlain ſhould be in the midſt of the throne. It is ſaid, John vii. 39. The Holy Ghoſt was not yet given, becauſe that Jeſus was not yet glorified: but, whenever he is glorified, then the river, in a plentiful manner, was to proceed out of the throne of God and of the Lamb: If I go not away, the Comforter will not come; but if I depart, I will ſend him unto you. Whenever I am glorified upon the throne, then I will ſhew the river of the water of life proceeding out of the throne. The giving then of the Spirit of life is a part of the Mediator's royalty. Chriſt, as a King, hath the giving of the Spirit; this belongs to his adminiſtration, as the Lamb now upon the throne: hence ſays Chriſt, John xiv. 26. The Father will ſend him in my name, even in my name and authority, as the crowned King of Zion; and, John xvi. 7. I will ſend him. Thus God and the Lamb agree from the imperial throne, to ſend from thence the river, the Spirit of life, as an evidence of the Mediator's exaltation, and of his glorious kingdom and royalty. Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt ſways his ſceptre of grace, and erects and maintains his kingdom, by ſending his Spirit. The Lamb was ſacrificed to purchaſe eternal redemption, and is enthroned to give the Spirit; and, O but the Spirit is a royal bleſſing! As Chriſt is a Prieſt upon the throne, ſo theſe that ſhare of his Spirit are a royal prieſthood; and, having the Spirit, they are kings and prieſts to their God. Let us wait this day about the throne for this glorious fruit and effect of his royal bounty.

IV. The fourth thing propoſed was, To enquire into the reaſons, or whence it is that this river of life, for quickening dead ſouls to everlaſting life, Proceeds out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.

1. It is to ſhew, that as the grace of God towards ſinners is reigning grace, enthroned grace; ſo ſo it reigns through the righteouſneſs of Chriſt to eternal life, Rom. v. 21. And that no life, no ſpiritual life, by the word and Spirit of God, is to be expected, but as it runs in this channel. No life by the law or covenant of works is now to be expected. God and Adam are now ſeparate; and the channel of the communication of life, or of living waters, by his covenant with the firſt Adam, is quite cut off: but, behold, God and the Lamb are joined together in an everlaſting covenant, and ſit together on an everlaſting throne. The fulneſs of the Godhead is gone in to the ſecond Adam, the fulneſs of the Spirit of life is given to the Lamb above meaſure, John iii. 34. And now the Lamb, being the Lord our righteouſneſs, is exalted to the Father's throne; a throne enriched with the river of life. Grace reigns on that throne, through the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, to the communication of all the bleſſings of everlaſting life. Mercy vents through the blood of Chriſt, through the blood of the Lamb, once hanging upon the croſs, and now reigning upon the throne.

2. This river of life is diſcovered as proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb, to ſhew the diſtinct œconomy of the glorious Trinity in this buſineſs of our redemption, and of the eternal ſalvation of loſt ſinners. God the Father, the firſt perſon in the order of ſubſiſtence, ſits upon the throne of his ſovereign grace; God the Son, the Lamb that was the purchaſer of life on the croſs, is made the adminiſtrator thereof upon the throne; God the Holy Ghoſt, proceeding from the Father and the Son, is the great Applier, bringing home the bleſſings purchaſed to all the redeemed in a perpetual egreſs and flow of divine communications: and hence all the ſtore of divine things and bleſſings, that the Spirit communicates, are ſaid to be the things of God the Father, and Chriſt the Son, diſcovered and diſpenſed by the Holy Ghoſt; He ſhall glorify me, for he ſhall receive of mine and ſhew it unto you. All things that the Father hath are mine; therefore ſaid I, He ſhall take of mine and ſhew it unto you, John xvi. 14, 15. And hence alſo believers are ſaid to receive the Spirit which is of God, that they may know the things that are freely given them of God, 1 Cor. ii. 21.—Thus we ſee the diſtinct œconomy of each perſon of the glorious Trinity in this matter, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, one God in three perſons; and how we are equally indebted to each of them for the benefit of redemption.

3. This river of life is diſcovered as proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb, to ſhew the eſſential unity and glorious harmony of the ever-bleſſed Trinity, notwithſtanding of their perſonal diſtinction; according to 1 John v. 7. There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghoſt; and theſe three are one. And this eſſential unity or natural oneneſs is, I think, pointed out in our text, where the throne being called the throne of God and of the Lamb, declares what Chriſt himſelf declared, John x. 30. I and my Father are one. And if the Spirit were not the fountain of living water, equally and eſſentially one with the Father and the Son, how could he proceed like a river out of the throne of God and of the Lamb? So that, as in this clear glaſs of the goſpel we ſee the diſtinct œconomy of the glorious Trinity, in the work of redemption, and their perſonal diſtinction, ſo we may ſee their eſſential unity or natural oneneſs: Theſe three are one God, the ſame in ſubſtance, equal in power and glory. And in the ſame light we ſee their glorious harmony in our redemption-work. As it is ſaid of the three that bear witneſs on earth, the Spirit, the water, and the blood, that, as theſe three are one, one in nature; ſo they agree in one, in one great and glorious work and deſign towards the ſalvation of poor ſinners. There is a perfect harmony and agreement between God and the Lamb upon the ſame throne: and how doth the Spirit agree with the Father and the Son proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb like a pure cryſtalline river? And thus ſhewing, that everlaſting life is from God in Chriſt, by the Spirit. Again, another reaſon is,

4. To ſhew the excellent firmneſs and ſtability of the new-covenant bleſſings, and on what a ſure ground and bottom the eternal life and happineſs of the church militant and triumphant is built. Theſe bleſſings are equally ſecured with the throne of God and of the Lamb, and the perpetual flow of the river or the water of life that proceeds therefrom. The everlaſting life of the redeemed is ſomeway interwoven with the perſonal properties of the glorious Trinity: for, as the Spirit, perſonally conſidered, proceeds from the Father and the Son; ſo he proceeds communicatively out of the throne of God and of the Lamb, to water all the redeemed, as an everflowing and overflowing river of everlaſting life. A glorious Trinity may be ſeen in every ſpiritual bleſſing: hence may a believer ſay, This pardon, for example, is a divine bleſſing, it is from the throne of God; it is a purchaſed bleſſing, it is from the throne of the Lamb; it is a ſealed bleſſing, by the Spirit, as a river running from the throne of God and of the Lamb, ſo as the happineſs of the redeemed cannot fail, nor the river ceaſe to run out to their everlaſting life, no more than God can ceaſe to be God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, one everlaſting God, in three perſons. The ſtream of grace here, and glory hereafter, proceeds from a fountain that can never be drained; here they will drink, and bathe, and ſwim for ever, if we may be allowed the expreſſion. The throne of God will ſtill be the throne of the Lamb; he will ſtill be a God in Chriſt: and the throne of the Lamb will ſtill be the throne of God; for to him the Father ſays, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever. And the throne of God and of the Lamb will ſtill be a throne whence the everlaſting Spirit will proceed like a pure cryſtal river; for he will never ceaſe to be a free Spirit, a free fountain of living waters. O glorious and bleſſed ſecurity!

V. The fifth thing propoſed was, To deduce ſome inferences for the application. Is it ſo, That the living Spirit of God, communicating all the bleſſings of everlaſting life graciouſly here, and glorioufly hereafter, proceeds like a pure cryſtal river out of the throne of God and of the Lamb? Then,

1. Hence ſee the harmony between the church militant and triumphant; they drink of the ſame river: only here we have but drops, but there they have the ocean, and drink at the fountain-head: the utmoſt here is a ſtaying us with flaggons, but there the redeemed ſwim in the river of life. The ſaints in glory, as well as

as believers on earth, hold their title unto everlasting life of Christ: their everlasting happiness is grounded upon the blood of the Lamb, and flows from the throne of God and of the Lamb. Christ will be the glass, even in heaven, wherein the glory of God will be seen through the pure river of the water of life clear as crystal.

2. Hence see the happiness of every believer who have got but one saving drop of this river poured out upon his heart; for this Spirit of God and of the Lamb will be in him a well of water springing up to everlasting life, John iv. 14.; and that because this water proceeds from the throne of God and of the Lamb. It is a royal blessing from the divine throne; and the blessings of the throne are the best blessings. Many are content with the blessings of the footstool, and hunt only after these, saying, Who will shew us any earthly good? But, blessed are these that cannot be satisfied with any thing less than throne-blessings; Lord, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon me: then shall I have more gladness than the wicked world, in the time that their corn and wine increase, Psal. iv. 6. O see what a royal gift it is to get the Spirit; Christ ascended up on high, and led captivity captive, and received gifts for men, Psal. lxviii. 18.

3. Hence see the glory of God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, shining in the work of redemption through Jesus, and in the way of our salvation through his blood and righteousness. Here, as in a glass, we may see the glory of God the Father sitting on the same throne with Christ, that is, appearing as a God in Christ; the glory of Christ the Son, our Redeemer, exalted to the Father's throne, after he had finished his work; and the glory of the Holy Ghost in his breathings and blessings, graces and comforts, proceeding like a pure crystal river out of the throne of God and of the Lamb: and also the glory of all the divine attributes; their honour is secured in this throne of grace, from whence grace and mercy vents, to the credit and honour of justice and truth, through the justice-satisfying blood of the Lamb; therefore it is said, Justice and judgment are the habitation of his throne.

4. Hence see how glorious the gospel is, and how powerful, while it is the channel wherein the Spirit of life, the river of the water of life runs from the throne of God and of the Lamb; Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith? Gal. iii. 2. It is by the hearing of faith; and hence the Spirit and the word are put together in a promise to Christ, and in him to all his seed; This is my covenant with them, saith the Lord, My Spirit which is upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth and for ever, Isa. lix. 21. This river of life, for quickening dead souls, runs always in the channel of the word of grace and promise; and the gospel is the ministration of the Spirit in the hands of his sent servants: and this ought to be highly prized by all that are followers of the Lamb, and would enjoy the witness of his Spirit from the throne. There are, indeed, in our day, many that are but ministers of the letter; these ought to be discouraged and discountenanced: but there are some evidently ministers of the New Testament, not of the letter, but of the Spirit; these ought to be highly encouraged and countenanced; for, though the letter kills, the Spirit gives life, 2 Cor. iii. 6. It is dangerous to desert a ministry wherein the Spirit of life runs; this were to run away from the river that proceeds out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.

This, by the bye, may shew us a rule for our conduct in this day of division, when many of the Lord's own children are ready to run to some dangerous extremes with reference to their countenancing this or the other minister. Why, if they are ministers of the letter, that have nothing of a gospel-spirit, or of the Spirit of faith or faithfulness in preaching or managing; and, if this be evident, why not? Let us testify duly against them: but, if we have to do with ministers of the Spirit, let us remember, that some of these are appointed of God for such a work; and some for another work; and some them have a greater measure of the Spirit of faith and zeal than others; and some of them have a lesser measure given them of God, according to the work he hath for them: but, if they have any measure of a gospel-spirit, and of the Spirit of faith and faithfulness in their station, though they come not up to the same measure and degree with others, nor be set upon the very same ground, beware of slighting and despising them; for the great river of the city of God runs out in many streams, some greater and some lesser, and to despise the least stream is to despise the river; He that despiseth you despiseth me.

5. Hence see what it is that would make good and happy days in the church militant; namely, the running out of this river more plentifully: Until the Spirit be poured upon us from on high, and the wilderness be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be counted for a forest. Then judgment shall dwell in the wilderness, and righteousness remain in the fruitful field. And the work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance for ever, Isa. xxxii. 15,—17. O when may we expect such a day! Indeed, such is the universal corruption of church and state, and such hath been our perjury, covenant-breaking and blood-shed, unrepented of; and such is the profanity, error, and blasphemy of the day we live in, that in all appearance, before the happy day of the outpouring of the Spirit, we may expect a terrible day of the outpouring of blood. Our national bloody sins are crying for bloody vengeance; and many see it hastening on. But, Sirs, what is it that will wash away Scotland's bloody guilt and bloody gore at once? What but a flood from heaven; even a flow of the pure river, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb! Whatever sad days may come before it, yet this is the happy day you ought to seek, for Zion's sake, and for the sake the of rising generations in Scotland, and of future ages.

6. Hence see what would make a heartsome communion-solemnity among us this day, amidst all the sad signs of the times, namely, the running down of this river. And see, at the same time, what ground we have to expect this river of life to run out; the ground of hope is, because the Lamb is enthroned. The time was that the Spirit, the Holy Ghost, was not given plentifully, Because Jesus was not yet glorified, John vii. 39. But now Jesus was glorified, the Lamb is sitting on his Father's throne; therefore we may ſeek and expect that the Spirit may be poured out. Let faith act, for ſupplies of this water, upon Chriſt's exaltation to the Father's right-hand to give repentance and remiſſion of ſins; exalted to give the Spirit of faith and repentance, to give the Spirit of holineſs and comfort; exalted to the well-watered throne, to let out the river plentifully. Again,

7. To raiſe our hope and experience, let us from this doctrine ſee, that the throne of God and of the Lamb is no penurious throne, that hath little to ſpare: as in our Father's houſe there is bread enough and to ſpare, ſo about our Father's throne, the throne of God and of the Lamb, there is water enough and to ſpare, the pure river of the water of life fully and freely proceeding out of it. The ſeven Spirits are ſaid to be before the throne, Rev. i. 4.; that is, the one eternal Spirit of God, as a river flowing out in all his various ſtreams of gifts, influences, operations, breathings, bleſſings, and comforts: this river is before the throne. Which ſays, by the bye, that it is good to go boldly and frequently to the throne of grace; for this quickening river of the water of life being before it, whenever we begin to go to the throne, the quickening river will meet us by the way; and whenever our feet touch the river, then, like a flood, it will carry us off our own feet, and bear us up towards the throne, as the water did the ark to the top of Ararat.

8. Hence ſee how we may attain communion with God at a communion-table, and how we are to go there: you ought to go with as great awe and reverence as if you were going to the throne of God, for his throne is at the head of the table. But then, how ſhall we go to the throne of God, who is an infinitely holy and juſt God, whereas we are guilty, guilty ſinners? Why, we cannot go to the throne of God but through Jeſus Chriſt; and through him we ought to go boldly, becauſe it is not only the throne of God, but of the Lamb, by whoſe blood we have boldneſs to enter into the holieſt. But again, if you think, how ſhall we go thus to the throne of God and of the Lamb, having no life or power to do any thing? Why, indeed, we cannot win to it but, as it were, ſwimming in the river that is before the throne, the river of the Spirit's influences and graces, that proceeds out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. That which brings us to the throne muſt proceed out of the throne; therefore we are to go believingly and dependently, being ſtrong only in the grace that is in Chriſt Jeſus, the grace that is in the throne of grace to be freely communicate from it.

9. Hence we may ſee the marks and characters of right and worthy communicants. They are ſuch as have got a diſcovery of what is here ſhewed unto John: He ſhewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as cryſtal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. I do not mean, that every true believer gets ſuch an extraordinary diſcovery as John here got the revelation of; but there is ſomething of the myſtery thereof in ſome degree that, I think, every believer gets ſome view of, particularly in theſe three things, by which you may examine yourſelf.

(1.) Have you got a view of the throne of God; I mean, of God himſelf, in his infinite holineſs and juſtice? For God ſits upon the throne of his holineſs, juſtice, and other glorious attributes; and to ſee the throne of God, is to ſee and know him to be Majeſty itſelf; for a throne points out majeſty. Have you ever apprehended the majeſty of his holineſs and juſtice, and that the throne of iniquity cannot have fellowſhip with him; that he is of purer eyes than to behold iniquity; that he is a God that will by no means clear the guilty? And hath ever the view of this made you tremble and quake, and fear, leſt you ſhould never have fellowſhip with him, becauſe you are nothing but a maſs of ſin and guilt?

(2.) Have you ever, upon the back of this, got a view of the throne of God as the throne of the Lamb, ſo as the terrible majeſty of the throne hath been allayed by the apprehenſion of divine mercy, venting through the blood of the Lamb that was ſlain; ſlain virtually from the foundation of the world; ſlain actually on the croſs at Jeruſalem, and now ſitting glorioufly upon his Father's throne? In this light have you ſeen infinite holineſs honoured and vindicated by the obedience of the Lamb, and infinite juſtice pleaſed and ſatisfied by the death and blood of the Lamb? And hath the view of this turned the throne of God from a terrible to an amiable throne in your eye? The throne of God and of the Lamb is nothing elſe but a God in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelf; a God declaring himſelf well-pleaſed in Jeſus Chriſt. Hath the view of this turned your fear to hope, and your terror to triumph?

3. Have you ever hereupon ſeen and felt, to your experience, living waters proceeding from the throne of God and of the Lamb? Have you ſeen the fulneſs of the Spirit to be in Chriſt, as anointed therewith above meaſure? And have you ever found this living water guſhing from the throne, as it were, in a ſweet flood of influences? When you was pouring out your heart before the Lord, he was pouring out this flood upon you, and making you, as it were, ſwim in this river. Believer, know you not ſomething leſs or more about this? Well, what was the quality of the water which you was then baptized with? Perhaps you came to the throne empty and deſtitute, and like dry ground; but, before you went away, you was filled as with the fulneſs of a river guſhing out upon you.—Poſſibly you came to the throne very dead and lifeleſs, ſaying, Oh! is it poſſible that theſe dry bones can live? But your ſoul was quickened, and brought to life and livelineſs, ſo as you found the river to be indeed a river of the water of life; of life to your dead ſoul.—May be you came polluted and unclean, crying out, Behold, I am vile! Will ever ſuch a vile beaſt have acceſs to God, or be waſhed from ſuch ſtains? Yet, behold, you found your ſoul ſurrounded with purifying waters, with the pure river of the water of life, inſomuch that, perhaps, at that time, though it was a miſtake, yet you joyfully imagined, that all pollution, corruption, and impurity, was waſhed away with the happy flood that ſweetly overwhelmed you, and drowned all your luſts? Was not the river then in your view as a pure and purifying river?—Again, perhaps, you came to the throne under many doubts and fears, and dark clouds; but, ſay you, before I went away, I got a clear view of the mercy of God in Chriſt, a clear view of his everlaſting love, a clear view of the door of hope open to me; or, at leaſt, that there was hope in Iſrael even for me. You thus thus found the pure river of the water of life to be clear as cryſtal, when a guſh of that water was able to clear your eye, when it was dim; to clear your mind, when it was dark and confuſed; to clear your conſcience, when it was black with guilt: the ſtreams of the river, clear as cryſtal, running through your heart, made all clear before it.

Have you ever got any view and experience of theſe things in ſome meaſure, however ſmall the degree be? Then you have the mark and character of ſuch as have a right to the communion-table: but, if you never got a view of the throne of God, or of the majeſty of God, ſo as to fear his wrath becauſe of your ſinfulneſs; and if you never got a view of the throne of the Lamb, or of the mercy of God in Chriſt, ſo as to hope in his mercy, as venting through the blood of the Lamb; and if you never felt any drop of this pure river of the water of life, clear as cryſtal, proceeding out of that throne; if you never found one guſh of that river of the Spirit's influences, either filling your empty ſoul, quickening your dead ſoul, purifying your polluted ſoul, or clearing your dark mind; then ſurely you have no right to the communion-table, as being a ſtranger to communion and fellowſhip with a God in Chriſt, by the Spirit.

It may be ſome poor weak believer will tell me, "Sir, I think, indeed, I am no utter ſtranger to what you have been ſaying: there was ſuch a time, and ſuch a time, wherein I thought I got a view of theſe things; but, alas! all is now gone! the throne of God and of the Lamb is out of view, and the guſh of influences from the throne, that I was watered with, is all dried up, and I am nothing but like a piece of parched ground." Well, it may be ſo; but here is good news; the throne of God and of the Lamb ſtill remains; the pure river of the water of life is ſtill ſubſiſting; and the throne of God and of the Lamb, is ſtill the fountain of living waters, that can never be dried up or drained, but is as full as ever. Therefore, wait about the throne for the pouring out of the Spirit, as waters upon the thirſty, and floods upon the dry ground.

10. Hence ſee the duty of all that hear this goſpel, namely, to come and take of the water of life freely; to come to Chriſt, and drink of the river that proceeds out of the throne. This inference is drawn from this doctrine, in the 17th verſe of the ſame chapter; The Spirit and the bride ſay, Come; and let him that is athirſt come; and whoſoever will, let him take of the water of life freely. Iſa. lv. 1. Ho, every one that thirſteth, come to the waters. John vii. 37, 38, 39. On the great day of the feaſt, Jeſus ſtood and cried, If any man thirſt, let him come unto me and drink: for he that believeth on me, out of his belly, out of his heart and bowels, ſhall flow rivers of living water. This he ſpeaks of the Spirit, which they that believe on him ſhould receive.

He who then ſtood and cried in this manner before he aſcended to the throne, he appointed us to be criers in his name, with this encouragement, Lo, I am with you always, to the end of the world. Indeed, if it were not for this encouragement, in vain would we cry to you, but, O regard the cry of the Son of God, ſaying, If any man thirſt, let him come to me and drink of this pure river of living water. I cannot offer you the ſacrament ſafely, till I offer Chriſt to you, the ſubſtance of it; and you cannot take the ſacrament honeſtly, till you accept of the offer, otherwiſe you will eat and drink unworthily. Let me therefore preſs this exhortation on you, before I cloſe, with a few conſiderations; and, O look up for power to accompany them. I ſhall go no further than my text and context.

(1.) Conſider the authority by which you are called to come to Chriſt, and drink of theſe living waters. It is a divine authority; the orders are iſſued from the throne of God; This is his commandment, that ye ſhould believe on the name of his Son Jeſus Chriſt, 1 John iii. 23. Are orders from an earthly throne to be regarded, coming in the name and authority of the prince? O what infinitely more regard is to be had to the throne of God! to the divine authority! If a poor man only were calling you to come to Chriſt, you might ſafely ſit the call, and ſay, By what authority do you theſe things? But all the authority of the throne of God and of the Lamb is here interpoſed; and you cannot ſit the call, without trampling on the authority of God.

(2.) Conſider the glory of that Jeſus, who invites you to come to him and ſhare of this living water, and drink of this pure cryſtal river. O that, in this clear ſtream of the Spirit's illumination, you could ſee the glory of Chriſt, who ſays, He ſhall glorify me! There is a twofold glory of Chriſt here: he preſents, 1. His imperial throne; 2. His glorious mediatorial fulneſs.—His glorious throne: how glorious ſoever the throne of God is, ſo glorious is the throne of the Lamb; for here you ſee the throne of the Lamb is the throne of God: and though he be the Lamb that was ſlain, yet he is God equal with the Father, and thinks it no robbery to be equal with God; and the Father thinks it no diſparagement to him to ſet the Lamb in the midſt of his throne. O glorious Jeſus! His blood was the blood of God; his righteouſneſs the righteouſneſs of God; his wiſdom is the wiſdom of God; his power is the power of God; and his throne is the throne of God. Angels and archangels worſhip with reverence before his throne.—His glorious fulneſs is here alſo preſented, all the fulneſs of the Godhead is in him; all the Father's fulneſs is in him, and all the Spirit's fulneſs is in him. The fulneſs of the Spirit, that ever any mere creature had, is but like the fulneſs of a veſſel; but the fulneſs of the Spirit that is in Chriſt, the Lamb of God, is the fulneſs of a fountain: and hence it is that the Spirit, and all ſpiritual bleſſings, proceed like a pure river of water of life out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb.

(3.) Conſider the qualities of theſe waters which Jeſus calls you to come to him for. They are ſuch as, whatever be your ſad natural ſtate, or your miſerable preſent caſe, there is ſuitable relief preſented therein.

[1.] Are you deſtitute and empty of all good, empty of all grace? O let that be no hinderance, but a reaſon to move you to come to Chriſt, and look to the Lamb that is on the Father's throne; for here is a full fountain, a flowing river: he calls you not to come and give, but to come and take what you need. O bring all your empty veſſels here; this river comprehends no leſs than God himſelf, and all his perfections; Chriſt himſelf, and all his fulneſs; the Spirit himſelf, and all his graces, bleſſings, and comforts.

[2.] Are you dead in law, and dead in ſin, dead in ſtate, and heart, and frame? Let that be no hinderance, hinderance, but a reaſon to move you to come to Jeſus for a drink of this river; becauſe it is the river of the water of life. Chriſt's great complaint is, You will not come to me, that you might have life; the life of abſolution from the ſentence of the law condemning you to eternal death; together with the life of grace here, and glory hereafter: life to your dead ſouls; preſent life, future life, everlaſting life.

[3.] Are you polluted with the naſtineſs of hell about you, and altogether filthy and unclean? This is another reaſon why you muſt come to Jeſus, and ſhare of this pure river, and purifying water. This is the quality of the river to which you are invited to come: the ſtreams of this pure river will waſh and cleanſe your impure heart, and waſh you from all filthineſs of the fleſh and of the ſpirit.

[4.] In a word, Are you dark and ignorant, and unclear in your mind about the knowledge of God, and the things of God; and in your conſcience about peace with God? Why, here is no bar, but a motive to come to Chriſt and take of the water of life freely; for another quality of the waters is, that they are clear as cryſtal. And how ſhall you get either the mind cleared from darkneſs, or the conſcience cleared of guilt, but by looking, as it were, through this cryſtal flood that proceeds out of the throne; I mean, the clear glaſs of the Spirit's illumination, to ſee by this means that the throne of God is the throne of the Lamb; that is, that God is a God in Chriſt, whom, to ſee and know, is life eternal; there is clearing to the mind. And to ſee alſo, that the Lamb upon the throne of God now, is the Lamb that was ſlain to be a ſacrifice to ſatisfy juſtice and expiate guilt; there is clearing for the conſcience, when diſcerned, that, being juſtified by faith, you may have peace with God. Conſider then the quality of theſe waters which the Lord Jeſus calls you to come and take, to come and drink; they can anſwer every caſe.

(4.) Conſider what is the quality of thoſe that are invited to come to theſe waters, and upon what terms you may have a drink here, and live for ever: why, the exhortation here ſays, Let him that is athirſt come; and whoſoever will, let him take of the water of life freely, ver. 17. Here is the quality, Let him that is athirſt come. Who is the thirſty perſon? I anſwer, It is the man that ſtands in need of a drink. If you need a drink of this water; if you need Chriſt; then you are invited to come and drink. Why, ſay you, we all need Chriſt; then ſay I, you are all welcome to come to Chriſt; and I dare ſeek no other qualification of you.

"But pray, Sir, ſay you, tell us plainly what you mean by this thirſt; for I thought I would have been excluded by this qualification, becauſe perhaps I have not a right thirſt?" Why, man, I dare not, upon my peril, add any thing to this word, only, Let him that is athirſt come; becauſe of the word that follows that text, ver. 18. If any man ſhall add unto theſe things, God ſhall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book. Now, if I ſhould add any thing to this word, Let him that is athirſt come, by ſaying, The call is only to you that thirſt rightly, to you that thirſt greatly, to you that thirſt vehemently, to you that thirſt ſpiritually, to you that thirſt after nothing elſe but this water of life, then I would run the terrible hazard of adding to God's word, and alſo the hazard of ſcarring you from coming to Chriſt, ſaying, I fear I want this and that qualification. God hath ſet down the word univerſally, without qualifying what kind of a thirſt it is, that ſo the call may be widely extended to all that thirſt under heaven: therefore ſays Chriſt again, John vii. 37. If any man thirſt, let him come to me and drink. If any man, that is, any man or woman under heaven; for God created man male and female: if any man, any perſon of Adam's race, needs a drink of theſe waters of life, let him come. But ſome are thirſting after the world, and after their vile luſts; are not theſe excluded? No, no; the Spirit of God comments upon this thirſt, and invites even theſe by name, as perſons that ſtand much in need of Chriſt, Iſa. lv. 1, 2. Ho, every one that thirſteth, come to the waters, &c. Wherefore do ye ſpend your money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which ſatisfieth not? That is, All ye that are ſeeking and thirſting after ſatisfaction in the muddy waters of the world, and in the filthy water of your luſts, come to me, and you will get better water for nothing, even the pure river of the water of life; and ſo it is all thirſters under heaven that hear this goſpel, even all that need a drink of this water. And why doth Chriſt, think you, offer himſelf to you all, and every one of you? Not only becauſe you all need him, but becauſe his Father gives him to you, as he ſays, John vi. 32. My Father gives you the true bread from heaven: Even ſo, which is the ſame thing, his Father gives you the true water of life, everlaſting life is given in the word; This is his record, that God hath given you eternal life, and this life is in his Son. You have a right to it, and a right to take what God gives. Say not, If he be given to me, there needs no more, I am happy: Why, man, you might die of thirſt, though one gave you a cup of water, if you would not take and drink what is given you; ſo you may die and periſh for ever, though Chriſt, and the water of everlaſting life be given you, in this word, if you do not take and welcome the gift of God to your heart; and you periſh fearfully if you reject and neglect what was thus given you. If you aſk, What is the leaſt qualification required, in order to come to the throne of God and of the Lamb for this river of the water of life? Indeed, I cannot tell you what is the leaſt: for, let us ſeek from you never ſo little a qualification, Chriſt will ſeek leſs; let us go never ſo low, Chriſt will go lower. He that came down as low as hell to make the purchaſe, will come down as low as hell to make the application. Therefore, ſinner, though you be in a deep hell of ſin and miſery, out of the belly of hell look to him and be ſaved. If you need Chriſt, and think he can do you any good, it is qualification enough. For God's ſake, ſhut not the door of hope againſt yourſelf, when God is opening it to you. Though your thirſt be no other than like that of the dry ground, that needs a ſhower, O come to him that ſays, Iſa. xliv. 3. I will pour water on the thirſty, and floods upon the dry ground. God is at pains to find out words to fit your condition, and to ſhut all back-doors, that your unbelief may have no excuſe, and that none here may have it to ſay, The offer was not made to me.

If theſe conſiderations and arguments were duly pondered, they might have weight; but, alas! no argument will do but an argument of power: no motive will do, if God be not the mover.

mover. You remain dead carcaſſes, dead ſouls, notwithſtanding all the words that can be ſaid concerning theſe living waters that iſſue from the throne of God and of the Lamb. But, O! ſince it is life eternal to know God and the Lamb, I muſt tell you, that this moment, that ſpiritual life, which is and will be eternal, will begin to ſtir in your heart and ſoul, be it never ſo dead; if this moment you begin to know, that this God that ſits upon the throne with the Lamb, is the living God; and that this Lamb that ſits upon the throne of God, is the Lamb that was dead and is alive, and lives for evermore; and that this river, that proceeds out of the throne of God and of the Lamb, is the river of the water of life, the living Spirit of God and of the Lamb: They that know his name, will put their truſt in him. If you know the name of this living God, though you were never ſo dead, the life of faith, and hope, and truſt in him, will begin. And there are two parts of his name, that, I think, I am commiſſioned to declare among a company of dead ſouls here, which you ſhall no ſooner ſavingly know, but you ſhall inſtantly live.

One part of his name is, Exod. iii. 14. I AM THAT I AM. And, I think, he, whoſe name is, I am, hath ſent me to tell you, that this is his name; the God of beings, who hath life and being in himſelf: He is being itſelf, and none can ſay, I am, but himſelf. All the creatures in heaven and earth are nothing before him. He brought them out of nothing, and they are reducible to nothing if he pleaſes.

Another part of his name is, Rom. iv. 17. The God that quickens the dead, and calls things that are not, as though they were. Now, O dead and lifeleſs ſoul! if you have but ears to hear this goſpel, do you know that this is the name of God? I aſk not, if you think and fancy ſo; but, do you know and believe that he is the God that quickens the dead, and quickens whom he will, and is able to quicken you? Do you know and believe that he is the God that calls things that are not, as though they were; who with his bare word can give a being to that which is nothing, and create light and life where there was nothing but darkneſs and death, ſaying, Let there be light; let there be life? Now, if you know your own name to be darkneſs and death; and if you know this name of the Lord to be, The Lord of light and life; the God that quickens the dead, then I know there will be ſome ſtirring among the dead and dry bones and hearts here: Ye ſhall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, and ſhall put my Spirit in you, and ye ſhall live, Ezek. xxxvii. 13, 14.

There is no room then for any to object, Why is the miniſter calling us all to come to Chriſt, and take of this water of life? How can one come to Chriſt for life, that hath no life enabling him to come? Indeed, I could not well anſwer that, if it were only the word of the miniſter that was calling: but he calls you who hath the words of eternal life, and whoſe word creates life, whoſe word recovers life, whoſe word maintains life, whoſe word perfects life, quickening whom he will to everlaſting life, and whoſe words are Spirit and life; inſomuch, that one drop of this river of the water of life, mixed with this word, will make it a life-giving word: Therefore, in his great name, who ſays, I am the reſurrection and the life, he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet ſhall he live; in his name and authority, we ſay, O dead and dry bones, riſe and live; for, the God that quickens the dead calls you. O lame and diſeaſed ſouls that cannot ſtir, riſe and come, for the Lord of life calls you. O dead ſinner, dead Lazarus, that hath been ſo long rotting in the grave of ſin and ſloth, come forth, come forth; for he that is the reſurrection and the life calls you. However long or ſhort time you have been dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, and ſtinking in that filthy ſepulchre, yet if there be any ſtream of the water of life running from the throne this moment, any motion of the living Spirit about your heart, then a quickening voice from the throne of God and of the Lamb is calling you. Words without power will not do with you; the words of men and angels cannot give you the leaſt degree of life, nor quicken that dead heart of yours; but, where the word of a king is, there is power. Riſe then, dying, drooping ſoul, the Maſter calls you. The King of glory that ſits upon the Father's throne is ſpeaking to you, and ſaying, "Riſe up, my love, my fair one, and come away; however foul and filthy, black and ugly in thyſelf. Lo! The winter is paſt, and the rain is over and gone; the ſtorm of divine wrath, that ſhould have fallen on thee for ever, is over thy head, and hath fallen on my head, when I ſwate in the garden, and hang upon the croſs; and now I have mounted my Father's throne, to draw thee up to me, and to ſend down my Spirit as the river of life, to run in to thy heart, and quicken thee to hear my voice, and anſwer my call. Come then, though you ſee yourſelf black like hell, and like a devil; Riſe my love, my fair one, and come away. Come with me from Lebanon; from the lions dens, and mountains of leopards. Come away from this vain world, this vile world, this venomous and viperous world; come and ſhare of my grace in time, and my glory for ever after time." Bleſſed are they that hear his voice, and open to him. If the river of life that proceeds out of the throne of God and of the Lamb be running through any heart here, the work is done, life is begun, and open doors are made for the King of glory: if it be otherwiſe, I have no more to ſay, but, glory to God and the Lamb, that as many as were ordained to eternal life ſhall believe, and live for ever.

SERMON LXXII.

The COMER'S CONFLICT; or, the Beginner's Battle with the Devil, when eſſaying to come to CHRIST by Faith. *

LUKE ix. 42.

And as he was yet a coming, the Devil threw him down and tare him.—

HERE is the hiſtory of Chriſt's healing a lunatic child, whoſe father came to the diſciples, and they could not cure him; and now he cometh to Chriſt. As we ought to come to Chriſt ourſelves for healing, ſo we ought to bring our children to him; and when ſervants and other means can do us no good, we ought to go to the maſter, and look over the head of all miniſters and ſervants. After Chriſt had reproached the diſciples for their unbelief, he gives the poor man an encouraging word concerning his ſon; Bring thy ſon hither, ver. 41. Bring him to me. We ought to bring our ſons and our daughters to Chriſt; to bring our diſeaſes and all our various caſes to Chriſt. But after this encouragement, follows a trial in the text: As he was yet coming, the devil threw him down and tare him.

In which words we have three things obſervable, namely,

1. An excellent duty; that is, coming to Chriſt.

2. An eminent trial and heavy diſpenſation that befel the comer; The devil threw him down and tare him.

3. The time and juncture when this heavy trial and great affliction befel him, namely, As he was yet a coming.

Hence we may obſerve the three following particulars.

(1.) The beſt courſe that any can take for relief from whatever afflicts them, is to come to Jeſus the Saviour.

(2.) They who come to Chriſt for help will be an eye-ſore to hell and the devil; he will be ſure to fly upon them.

(3.) They who come to Chriſt for help and healing, though they may be ſure he will help and heal them, yet they may find their caſe worſe before the relief come; they may be thrown down, and torn, as it were, to pieces by the way. Or thus, Chriſt may undertake to deliver people, and yet their diſtreſs may grow upon their hand before their deliverance come. Here is Chriſt's undertaking, Bring him hither to me. Here is the perſon coming with hope of deliverance, he is on his way coming to Jeſus; and yet, behold, here is a dreadful daſh, a mighty trial to faith and hope, both in the father and ſon: yea, after he was come to the phyſician, and the healing word ſpoken, as you ſee, Mark ix. 25, 26. where this ſame hiſtory is recorded, with other circumſtances, The ſpirit cried, and rent him ſore before he came out of him, and ſo he was as one dead, inſomuch, that many ſaid, He is dead.

Well then, the doctrinal obſervation, we would incline briefly to proſecute from theſe words, may be framed as follows.

DOCT. That people, who come to Chriſt, and whom he undertakes to heal and help, may have their diſtreſs growing on their hand, before the deliverance come, which yet will certainly come.

It is in this caſe, as it was with Iſrael in Egypt, God ſaw their affliction, and undertook to come and ſave them; and yet, behold, before their deliverance comes, their bondage becomes heavier than before. The darkeſt time of the night may be before day break. Thus it was with Iſrael, in returning from Babylon, to rebuild the temple in the days of Ezra and Nehemiah. The king gives commandment to go and build; God ſtirs up the civil authority to give encouragement to them: but quickly the haters of Zion, miſrepreſenting the work, procure an order to cauſe them deſiſt from it. This doctrine then is verified both with relation to God's public work towards a church, and his particular work on the ſouls of his people, as you ſee it was with the ruler of the ſynagogue, Mark v. 23. that applied to Chriſt in behalf of his daughter at the point of death, that he might come and heal her. Chriſt went with him; but ſee what ſad news he gets from his houſe, Trouble not the Maſter, for your daughter is dead, ver. 35.: And now they looked upon the matter as hopeleſs, though yet Chriſt was on his way to ſave her.

The method we would lay down, for the farther proſecuting this ſubject, through ſupernatural aid, ſhall be the following.

I. We will ſpeak a little of coming to Chriſt.

II. Enquire in what reſpects matters may grow worſe with people, even when they are thus coming to Chriſt.

III. Enquire into the reaſons whence it is that people who come to Chriſt for help, and whom he undertakes to help, may find their diſtreſs grow before their deliverance come.

IV. Make ſome application of the whole.

I. We are to ſpeak a little of coming to Chriſt. There are only two things I would obſerve here.

1. Coming to Chriſt imports a view that vain is the help of man; vain is the help of the creatures; vain is the help of miniſters, means, and ordinances of themſelves. Thus it was here with the father of the child; I beſought thy diſciples to caſt him out, but they could not, ver. 40. So they who come to Chriſt find all other refuges

* This Subject was handled in two Diſcourſes. The firſt was delivered at an evening exerciſe, on Saturday, July 19. 1735. before the celebration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, at Kinglaſſie on the 20th. The ſecond was preached on the Monday, after the adminiſtration of that ordinance. It hath undergone three impreſſions.

fail

fail them, Pſal. cxlii. 4.; other phyſicians were of no value. None come to Chriſt till they can do no better; yet he is content with ſuch comers that ſee there is no other ſhift for them.

2. This coming to Chriſt imports a putting the work in his hand; Maſter, I beſeech thee look upon my ſon: he prays, and he brings him to Chriſt at the Lord's call. They that truly come to Chriſt for help, they put the work in his hand, and give him employment in his ſaving offices; looking on him as able, and willing, and ready to ſave: the diſeaſe is half cured when it is laid at Chriſt's feet. Happy they that come thus to him, and intruſt him with their ſouls, and truſt with their caſes; Commit thy way unto the Lord; truſt alſo in him, and he will bring it to paſs, Pſalm xxxvii. 5.

II. The ſecond head propoſed was, to enquire, in what reſpects may matters grow worſe with people, even when they are thus coming to Chriſt. Here two things are recorded; 1. Satan's aſſault, The devil threw him down. 2. How he uſed him, And he tare him.

1. They who come to Chriſt, before they get the deliverance which is inſured to them, they may meet with down-caſting providences; The devil threw him down. They may be caſt down with diſcouragement and deſpondency for a while; caſt down with fears and doubts; caſt down with jealous apprehenſions and unbelieving thoughts. Believing ſouls, after their coming to Chriſt, much more as they are coming at firſt, may be greatly caſt down; O my God, my ſoul is caſt down within me, Pſalm xlii. 6. They may be caſt down with a multitude of perplexing thoughts, deſpairing thoughts, and manifold objections and ſcruples, their mind raiſes, or rather unbelief frames within them.

2. They may not only be thrown down, but torn by the way; The devil threw him down and TARE him. Whenever a man begins to come to Chriſt, and the devil fears he ſhall loſe his poſſeſſion, then he rages againſt that man, and would tear him to pieces. Therefore, think not ſtrange that beginners in religion, and ſuch as are coming, or but lately come to Chriſt, or even theſe who have come formerly, and are coming again to him, may be mightily aſſaulted and attacked by all the powers of hell. So long as people remain at a diſtance from Chriſt, the devil does not meddle with him; He keeps the houſe, and the goods are at peace: but in coming to Chriſt they may lay their account to be torn by torments, torn by terrors, and blaſphemous ſuggeſtions: they may lay their account with fiery darts. When we expect the Lord is about to remove one burden, he may lay on another, that he may have the more mercy on us.

III. The next thing propoſed was, to enquire into the reaſons whence it is that people, who come to Chriſt for help, and whom he undertakes to help, may find their diſtreſs grow before their deliverance come. Whatever malicious hand the devil hath in this matter, God hath a holy hand in permitting it.

1. God's deſign in it is to ſhew his wiſdom and power.

(1.) It is to manifeſt his wiſdom: how he can advance his work, by the ſtops in the way of it; and enrich his people, by impoveriſhing them; enlarge them, by impriſoning them; and give them meat out of the eater, and ſweet out of the ſtrong.

(2.) It is to evince his power; how he can ſupport them under, and deliver them from their diſtreſſes, which would not appear ſo much, if their diſtreſs came not to a height.—He ſuffers them to be dejected and torn, that his wiſdom and power may appear the more evidently in lifting them up and healing them.

2. It is to check the unbelief that attends our faith in coming to Chriſt. Sometimes when we commit our caſe to him by faith, we do not exerciſe this faith to a patient waiting for the Lord. Chriſt's firſt word to his people is, Come to me, Mat. xi. 28.; and his laſt word is, Abide in me, John xv. 4. It is well done to come, but, alas! we do not abide; and therefore, to check our unbelief in coming, as it were, but one ſtep, and going back the next ſtep, he ſhews the need of going forward, by letting looſe the enemy, and ſuffering matters to grow worſe with us.

3. It is to raiſe the worth and eſteem of his mercies in the hearts of theſe who come to him. We uſually do not know the worth of a mercy, till we be deprived of it; nor the worth of deliverance, till the diſtreſs be extremely great: help is then highly eſteemed, when we can ſay, I was brought low, and he helped me.

4. It is to try our faith, whether or not it be ſuch as will not only come to Chriſt, but alſo abide with him till he work the deliverance; and if we can keep our eye upon the deliverer, when the deliverance is delayed; our eye upon the promiſe, when croſs providences appear; and can hope againſt hope. He deſigns the trial of faith for the preſent, and a more glorious iſſue thereafter.

IV. The laſt general head propoſed was, to make ſome application. Is it ſo, That people who come to Chriſt, and whom he undertakes to heal and help, may have their diſtreſs growing on their hand, before the deliverance come, which yet will certainly come? Hence we may ſee,

1. What a cruel enemy the devil is to immortal ſouls, and their eternal ſalvation: for, whenever a ſoul begins to mind religion in earneſt, and to come to Chriſt for help and deliverance, then that ſoul becomes the object of the devil's ſpite and malice. As long as people remain graceleſs, and Chriſtleſs, and formal, the devil will let them enjoy themſelves, and hugs them aſleep in their ſecurity; but as ſoon as they begin to come to Chriſt, then he will attempt to caſt them down and tear them, and ſtirs up all his wicked inſtruments, either to diſcourage and ridicule them, or to tear their name and reputation to pieces, and to perſecute them with tongue or hand, or to raiſe a hue and cry againſt them, as if they were turned diſtracted, and out of their wits. As they are coming, the devil throws them down and tears them.

2. Hence ſee the reaſon of all the melancholy moods, heavy damps, and great diſcouragements of many beginners, that are ſetting on in the Lord's way; though wiſdom's ways be ways of pleaſantneſs, yet Satan, who is a liar from the beginning, would make the world believe, that it is a bitter and unpleaſant way; and that the beginning of religion is but the beginning of ſorrows.

3. Hence ſee the difference between the conviction of the Spirit and the temptation of Satan; and and the difference between the distress of soul, that arises from a law-work before conversion, and that which arises from the assault of the enemy of our salvation; whenever conviction begins, and the soul comes to be troubled for sin, and under fear of hell and wrath, Satan indeed fishes in the muddy water, and mixes his temptations with the Spirit's convictions; and if he can bring all conviction to nothing, either by force or fraud, he will do it, that the convinced soul may never come to Christ for a cure: Satan will stand at his right-hand to resist him. But the difference between them is;

(1.) The conviction of the Spirit are BEFORE a man come to Christ, and tend as a severe schoolmaster to lead him to Christ, Gal. iii. 24. But the temptations of the devil are especially when a man is COMING to Christ, in order to keep him from coming. If the Spirit of God, by a law-work, seem, as it were, to cast down the man, and tear him to pieces, the design is to oblige him to go to Christ for help and healing; and to provoke him to come to the Saviour, and fly to the city of refuge. But the design of the devil's temptations, when he throws down and tears the soul, is when he is coming, or as he is coming to Christ, in order to detain him from coming, or discourage him in coming.

(2.) The convictions of the Spirit are humbling, tending to make the soul despair of help in himself, or in God out of Christ. The temptations of the enemy are terrifying, tending to make the soul despair of help in Christ, or in God through him: the former shuts the door of hope by the law; but the devil would shut the door of hope by the gospel.

4. Hence see there is no ground to blame religion and religious duties, notwithstanding discouragements and downcasting trials in the way of duty: though matters grow worse with you in the way of duty, and in the way of coming to Christ, blame not yourself for coming to Christ, because the devil attacks you by the way. You have enough to charge yourself with, though you charge not yourself foolishly. It would be far worse with you if the devil and your own wicked heart prevail to take you off from the use of promising means. When, like Peter, you cast yourself upon the water to come to Christ, be not terrified, though the devil raise a storm; the Lord Jesus sits upon the floods, and is mightier than the noise of many waters, Psal. xciii. 4. Never think the worse of Christ, though matters seem to grow worse with you, when you come to him for rest, and yet find trouble; for it is the devil and the ill heart that breeds all the trouble: keep up honourable thoughts of the Lord Jesus; believe he can do for you, and wait till you find that he will do. Bring wind from all cross providences to hasten you nearer to your resting place; for all that comes to him shall find rest in spite of the devil: some begun rest here in time, however disturbed by the devil from time to time, and by unbelief, until rest be perfected in heaven.

5. Hence see an evidence of a true believer and comer to Christ: if the devil be no enemy to your faith, you may know it is a false faith. Many have a faith that the devil is well enough pleased with; and therefore he never troubles them nor it: but if you have saving faith, it will be the eye-sore of hell; or if you be truly coming to Christ, you may expect the devil to be upon your top. No sooner doth true faith begin, but the fight of faith begins. Some may bless themselves they were never assaulted by the devil, and yet they are but sleeping, as it were, in the devil's cradle; he is rocking them. Try your faith; if it be from heaven it will meet with opposition from hell: We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places, Eph. vi. 12. Therefore we are called, as part of the Christian armour, to take the shield of Faith, whereby we shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked, ver. 16. The devil may let you peaceably go about duty; read, and pray, and communicate, because you may do these things carnally and formally, and go to hell when all is done: but if once you begin to come to Christ, or to go about any duty believingly, then you are on the way to heaven, and if the devil can, he will draw you back, and throw you down with discouragements, and tear you with temptations, either as you are coming, or after you are come. But it is always the best faith that is most opposed by the devil.

This doctrine may be applied by way of address, 1. To these who never yet came to Christ for help and salvation. 2. To these who are coming in obedience to his call.

1. To you who never yet came to Christ for help and salvation. Oh! stay not away from him for fear of the devil, lest he throw you down and tear you. Better be thrown down by the way in coming to Christ, than thrown down to hell, with the devil at last, by the hand of God, who will throw you and the devil down to hell if you do not come to Christ. Better that the devil tear you to pieces, when there is a Deliverer, even Jesus, at hand to deliver you from him, than that God himself tear you to pieces when there shall be none to deliver: Consider this, ye that forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver, Psal. l. 22. Come, otherwise you remain slaves to the devil and your lusts. O be sensible of your slavery and malady! Know none can save you but our Lord Jesus Christ; he is a mighty Saviour, and a merciful one: No name is given under heaven, whereby a sinner can be saved, but the name of Jesus. Put the work in his hand; put your soul in his hand. Bring him here to me, says Christ, to the man here. O come and bring your children with you; hear him saying, Bring your son to me, bring your daughter to me, bring your soul and your case to me; O bring your disease to me, bring your hard heart to me, and I will soften it; bring your filthy heart to me, and I will cleanse it; bring your heart possessed of the devil to me, and I will cast out the devil; bring your seven devils to me, and I will cast them out.

2. We address ourselves to you who are coming in answer to his call. O be not dismayed, though the devil throw you down and tear you as you are coming. Here is a Saviour ready to lift up, whom the devil throws down; ready to heal, whom the devil tears; ready to help all that are hurt by the old serpent. It is his trade to destroy the works of the devil. You may be always sure that it is an evil spirit that is dealing with you, that would mar and hinder you in your coming to Christ; for the voice of the Spirit of God is, Come; the Spirit and the bride say, Come. The Spirit of God, as a Spirit of bondage, bondage, may caſt down the ſoul before it come to Chriſt, and in order to its coming; but it is not the Spirit of God that caſts down the coming believer; no, We have not received the ſpirit of bondage again unto fear, Rom. viii. 15. After coming to Chriſt, and believing in him, it is only the devil that caſts down and tears you. Fear not the lion of hell; here is the Lion of the tribe of Judah to defend you: it is unbelief, and departing from Chriſt, that may bring you to the greateſt danger; therefore, *Fear not, only believe.

SERMON LXXIII.

LUKE ix. 42.

And as he was yet a coming, the devil threw him down and tare him.

[The ſecond Sermon on this text.]

THIS doctrine may be applied, at the time, in an exhortation or advice, particularly to theſe that are tempted and torn of the devil, when they eſſay to come to the Lord Jeſus. In order to your being fortified, through grace, againſt his aſſaults and fiery darts, there are only ſix ſorts of temptations, I would, at preſent, endeavour to fortify you againſt. 1. With reference to heart-blaſphemy. 2. With reference to heart-wandering. 3. With reference to the commiſſion of ſin. 4. With reference to the omiſſion of duty. 5. With reference to unworthy apprehenſions of God. 6. With reference to ſelf-murder. There are temptations with reference to all theſe that you need to be fortified againſt; while you are coming to Chriſt, Satan may attempt to throw you down, and tear you in all theſe, and many other reſpects: but I ſhall touch a little at each of theſe.

1ſt, There are temptations of Satan with reference to blaſphemy, whereby he would throw down and tear in pieces, as it were, the ſouls of theſe that would come to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. They may be tempted to dreadful blaſphemous thoughts, which are not to be named, they are ſo deteſtable and abominable; they are fearful injections upon the mind, and very terrifying to a weak believer that is coming to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. In order to your being fortified againſt theſe, I would offer you the following advices.

1. Be not terrified with them, ſince they harm you more by their horror, than by their guilt. It is true, the guilt of them is ſo great, that it is unpardonable to him to whom it belongs. Theſe are Satan's ſins, and not thine; and he ſhall anſwer for them, and not thou. Though he lay theſe blaſphemous thoughts at your door, he is the father of them. Such thoughts are like lightenings caſt into a room, they have a great deal of horror; but as the lightening ſprings not from any cauſe in the room, ſo theſe thoughts proceed not from any thing in thee; not properly from thy corruptions, for unregenerate men themſelves abhor them: and though the ſeed of all ſin be in our nature, yet ſcare, if ever, doth this ſin ſpring up even in reprobates: nay, the devil himſelf doth not think of God that which theſe thoughts ſignify. Since thou doſt not actually, nor did originally in Adam, give conſent to theſe thoughts, they are not thy ſins. Suppoſe ſome villain ſhould meet a chaſte virgin in a field and raviſh her, if ſhe ſtruggles and cries, ſhe is innocent by the law of God: this is her affliction, not her ſin. She may mourn for her ſuffering, not her guilt; eſpecially ſhe doing nothing to provoke him. It may be the villain finds her at prayer, as the devil doth find thee, when he injects theſe thoughts. Therefore, be of good comfort, thou art more afraid than hurt: for a careleſs wandering thought in prayer, hath more guilt in it than theſe have. If one attempt ſuddenly to ſtrike our eye, though we know he doth not intend to ſtrike it, yet it cannot but wink: ſo we can ſcare chooſe but be terrified with theſe thoughts; but we muſt reſiſt and conquer ſuch fears. I ſay not, we ſhould not abhor ſuch thoughts, for then we ſhould be worſe than heathens; but we ſhould not be terrified out of our faith, or duties, or comforts thereby.

2. Do not give over your duties for theſe blaſphemous thoughts and injections; for, though theſe thoughts are not thy ſin, yet they may be the cauſe of thy ſinning, if they cauſe thee to abſtain from prayer, reading the word, attending upon the ordinances, and the like duties. You may, perhaps, think it better not to pray than to have theſe thoughts: but thy prayers may do thee more good than theſe can do thee harm; and how wilt thou conquer if thou caſt away thy weapons? Neither haſten from your duty; for thus you do the devil too much homage: his temptations ſhould make you pray the more, not ſeldomer, or ſhorter.

3. Think not over theſe thoughts again, even when thou goeſt to God to complain of Satan and his dreadful aſſaults; for, if thou yield not to the tempter, theſe blaſphemies are not the matter of confeſſion, but rather of complaint; as a woman that is raviſhed doth not confeſs, but lament her affliction. Neither ſpeak them over, when you go to a miniſter or Chriſtian friend for advice or comfort; but only mention in general, that horrid thoughts and blaſphemies trouble you: they will underſtand what you mean; but, perhaps they had as good Satan ſhould inject ſuch thoughts, as to hear you name them.

4. Pray much againſt theſe blaſphemies, and thus ſtudy to be gainers by them, and to be avenged upon Satan, which you may, if you do as they did, Acts xix. when they heard that ſome would ſpeak againſt their goddeſs Diana, they cried out for the ſpace of two hours, Great is Diana of the Epheſians, ver. 28, 34.; ſo that whoſoever ſhould go about to ſpeak againſt Diana could not be heard. Do thou likewiſe; when Satan throws in blaſphemous thoughts, break thou forth into bleſſing and praiſing of God; and if thou canſt not do ſo, try to read or ſing ſome pſalm full of praiſes, as Pſal. ciii. cv. cxvi. cxlv, &c.: and if thou art private enough, read or ſing them with a loud voice, and when Satan ſhall ſee that thou art the gainer by his temptations, he will be weary of tempting thee. Theſe blaſphemies are Satan's railings and revilings againſt the God of heaven; therefore you are to do with them as Hezekiah did with Rabſhakeh's railing let-

* This ends what was delivered on the Sabbath-evening. In the firſt edition of this diſcourſe, we are acquainted, that the Author enlarged the application, in ſome other inferences, upon the Sabbath-day; but the notes of that diſcourſe were not written. What follows, we are told, was delivered upon the Monday, after the ſacrament.

ter, Isa. xxxvi. 21. he went and spread the blasphemy before the Lord. He did not so much as read over the letter, but spread it before the Lord: so, without naming over that blasphemy, you should pray against it, that God would suppress this smoak that ascends out of the bottomless pit.

You may lawfully dispute and argue with Satan against some of his blasphemies; as when he tempts you to question the being of a God, and the truth of divine revelation, as the archangel disputed with the devil about the body of Moses; so when you are tempted, for example, to doubt if the scripture be the word of God, you may consider the plain arguments that prove it, and ask Satan, Why dost thou fly before it? If the ark were not the ark of God, why doth Dagon fall before it? If it were not the word of God, why doth Satan tempt me not to believe it? But do not depend upon thy arguing; Satan is too strong for reasoning; betake thyself to the Lord Jesus by prayer. Though Satan may stand out against thy arguments, he will not be able to stand against the prayer of faith. The archangel said, The Lord rebuke thee. Though he will not fly at thy rebuke, yet he will, and must, at the rebuke of God. And, by the way, see the excellency of Christ above the archangel: Christ rebukes Satan by his own power and authority; for he said not, The Lord rebuke thee; but, Get thee behind me, Satan.

2*dly*, There are temptations of Satan with reference to heart-wanderings in duty. Satan knows, that if he can get these flies to come and rest in this precious ointment, they will putrify it. He knows, if the thoughts wander, God regards not what the tongue says; and if he can spoil your prayers, he fears not any ordinance what good it can do thee. If your thoughts be earthly, he cares not how heavenly your words are.—Herein Satan gets assistance from the evil heart; Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, Mat. xv. 19. They arise out of the heart as sparks out of a furnace; they stay not in the heart, but are active, and ascend up to the head: and they come out of the heart, not as sparks out of a flint, by concussion and violence, forced out; but they proceed out of it, says Christ; they come out of themselves, and they proceed always in a continued act.—Satan's temptations to heart-wandering in duty, are also furthered by a multitude of business, and that two ways.

(1.) If we come from a multitude of business; for our hearts are like the troubled sea, it must have some considerable time before it be composed, though the winds that raised the storms cease; so when we come from business, there must be some time after our business is ended before our hearts can be sedate and quiet, and fit for prayer; nay, in this our hearts are worse than the sea, because,

(2.) Future business will distract us before it come. The sea is not tumultuous before the wind blow, but the business we have to do will trouble us before it comes to be done. It is a hard thing to keep business out of our thoughts when we pray, and make it stay till our prayer be ended.

Now, to fortify against these, I offer the following four advices shortly.

1. O study to mortify the love of the world: where our love is, there will our thoughts be. To set your love on the world, and your thoughts on God, you will find altogether impossible; He that loveth the world, the love of the Father is not in him. O seek to mortify this.

2. Lay up your treasure in heaven; For, where your treasure is, there will your heart be also, Matth. vi. 21. The heart of the Jews went after their covetousness, Ezek. xxxiii. 31.; when they were hearing the word they could not keep their hearts where their bodies were, but they would be where their love was, and where their treasure was.

3. Let not the world be your familiar friend, for familiar friends come in without knocking or asking leave; therefore be thou a stranger in this present world, Heb. xi. 13. They were not strangers in this or that part of the earth, but in the whole earth: be a stranger to the world, and the world will not visit you in prayer.

4. Make prayer your delight, not your task. Children are subject to look off their books, because they delight not in them; but when they are playing, they are eager and earnest. The bird flutters in the cage; but sits quietly on the tree, and sings there: I will go to God, says David, to God my exceeding joy, Psal. xliii. 4. When our thoughts find satisfaction, they set up their habitation and wander not.

3*dly*, There are temptations of Satan with reference to omission of duty: as for example, he represents to them the difficulty that there is therein. O I cannot pray nor hear aright; I cannot meditate nor mortify aright; therefore I may let it alone. Now, in order to fortify against these temptations, consider,

1. That this is necessary; you must be exercised unto godliness; exercised in keeping a conscience void of offence towards God and man; and be stedfast and immoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, knowing that your labour shall not be in vain in the Lord, 1 Cor. xv. 58. As for the wicked, who are otherwise disposed, having no heart nor will to the Lord's service at all, what can they expect at his hand, but this, Take these mine enemies, that would not that I should reign over them, bring them hither, and slay them before me? Yea, he will come in flaming fire to take vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel. It is therefore absoultely necessary.

2. Consider, that it is possible to serve the Lord acceptably by his grace. Though duty be difficult to nature; yet, if you get the Spirit of God to help you, you will do well enough; and God hath promised his help, Isa. xl. 29,—31. He giveth power to the faint, and to them that have no might, he encreaseth strength, &c. They that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength. Hence all the saints of old, and of late too, have tried the Lord's way, and found that the way of the Lord was strength to them; yea, that wisdom's ways are pleasantness: their delight was in the law of the Lord; in keeping of his commands there is a great reward. One smile of God's countenance is worth all your pains, though you were at a hundred times more. There is always some thing savoury and sweet in religion that accompany the sedulous exercise thereof. Though the soul hath nothing to claim on the account of its own works or duties; yet the Lord is graciously pleased to own and countenance his own way, when the soul is found in it, beside the glorious and gracious reward that abides it in heaven.

Therefore, let faith batter down this temptation

tation of Satan, saying, What though Satan present difficulties in the way, Christ underwent greater difficulties: He hath borne the burden and the heat of the day. I am not called to go and satisfy justice; Christ hath done that to my hand: I am not called to go and fulfil the law as a covenant of works; Christ hath done that to my hand: I am not called to work for life, but to work for love to him that worketh all my works in me, and for me; and who, as he calleth me to this work of love, so promiseth to work in me both to will and to do: and therefore, in his name and strength, I will go forward, making mention of his righteousness, and his only; and, in his name, I will encounter and grapple with the devil himself, for Christ hath conquered him to my hand.

4thly, There are temptations of Satan with reference to the commission of sin: he will suggest to them that it is but a little sin, and God will not be angry for a little sin; such as a lye in droll, an idle word, &c. Can such a little sin endanger the soul? Now, to guard you against this temptation, consider,

1, That the first sin which brought all mankind into a miserable state, was, in appearance, but a small and little sin: it was but eating a little forbidden fruit, the tasting of an apple; yet, had it not been for Christ's satisfaction, it would have destroyed irrecoverably all the posterity of Adam. There was a man, Sirs, that gathered a few sticks upon the Sabbath-day; you would have thought that was but a little sin, yet God's thoughts are not your thoughts, for God thought that sin worthy of death, Num. xv. 32, 33. Uzziah's putting his hand to the ark, and touching it when it tottered, seemed to be but a small sin, and yet you know he was smitten instantly with death for it, 2 Sam. vi. 7. It is dangerous to give even a little wrong touch to a tottering ark.

2. Consider the nature of every sin; though some are comparatively small, and others greater; that is, by reason of several aggravations, more hainous in the sight of God than others; yet, in themselves, none are small. The least sin is against an infinite God, and infinite authority; and so, objectively considered, an infinite evil; and therefore cannot be expiated without infinite satisfaction: and it is not little promises, or little threatenings that your little sins do slight; yea, there is no little ingratitude towards God in little sins: there is great unkindness to God in little sins. To displease God, your best friend, for a little sin; O ungrateful thing! Is this your kindness to your friend? The wages of every sin is death eternal. It is not little misery that every sin doth expose you to. Will you make light of the wrath of the infinite God? Then do not make light of little sins. In a word, remember that boldness in little sins will be an encouragement to greater. Sin is of an encroaching and bewitching nature: a little theft may open the way to a greater. The devil tempts people to go from one degree to another; he tempts them to the reverse of the blessed man, mentioned Psal. i. 1. He tempts them to walk in the council of the ungodly; having taken a walk with them, he tempts them next to stand in the way of sinners, which is more; and then having stood a while with them, he tempts them last of all to sit in the seat of the scornful, even to the height of wickedness. The devil first makes you sit down with the drunkard, then to drink with him, and at last to be drunk. Thus he leads people from unclean thoughts to unclean looks, words, and actions: therefore, let faith resist this temptation, and set you upon your watch against that which you call a little sin. No man that ever saw sin truly can call any sin little or small, nor can it ever be, till there be a little law to break, a little God to offend, a little guilt to contract, a little wrath to incur; all which are impossible to be, blasphemy to wish, and madness to expect.

5thly, There are temptations of Satan with reference to unworthy apprehensions of God. Satan may suggest very strange thoughts of God, very base thoughts of God, most unsuitable apprehensions of him, such as are not to be spoken of; and the prince of this world hath much in us, who are so ignorant of God, to further these mishapen thoughts of God. And to fortify you against these assaults, there are these two directions I would offer concerning the way how we are to conceive of God.

(1.) We are to conceive of him as inconceivable: for the thoughts we are to have of him are overwhelming thoughts. As long as we are merely active, and are able to master our thoughts of God, they are utterly unworthy of him. Whatsoever we know, comprehensively, I mean, except we see it to be infinitely beyond us, that is not God, nor to be adored. I have read a dialogue between a Christian and a Gentile: the Gentile seeing the Christian very fervent in prayer, and seeing no image before him, asked him, "whom he worshipped:" he answered, I know not. "Why then do you wor-"ship him?" I therefore worship him, says he, because I cannot know him. "It seems strange, said "the Gentile, to see one so seriously worship "that he knoweth not." More strange it is for one, said the Christian, to worship that which we can comprehend. If we are not lost in our thoughts of God, our thoughts of God are lost. When we throw a stone into a pond, it makes circles larger and larger, and quickly they come to the shore: but if one should throw a millstone into the midst of the calm ocean, though it would make larger and larger circles, yet it would not reach the shore, because the strength would be spent long before it come the length: So, when we think on the creature, we easily enlarge our thoughts so as to see an end of their perfection, and to be more than comprehensive of their excellency; but when we think of God, we can never know him to perfection, Psal. cxix. 96. Here our knowledge must end in admiration, and our love in extasy. Nay, we must conceive of God as above all words, above all knowledge, and above all admiration; above all love, and above all extasy. But let us go to scripture, God knows best how to speak of himself, and we may safely acquiesce in scripture expressions, Neh. ix. 5. Thy name is exalted above all praise, above the praise of men and angels; this is a very high expression; but doth this reach him? Nay, if it did, God should not be exalted above all praise, since this would reach him.

(2.) We are to conceive of God in Christ: Christ must be eyed in our addresses and acts of worship. All the former considerations set us but at a greater distance from God, and make us afraid of God, and fly from him, if we go no further; and, indeed, human reason can go no further. The utmost it can do, is but to think of mercy without a promiſe, which is a very arbitrary thing: and we ſee that God hath not ſhown mercy to fallen angels; for never was any devil converted; therefore we muſt neceſſarily have thoughts of Chriſt: We are to honour the Son as we honour the Father; and to honour him,

but

1. As a King. God hath exalted Chriſt far above all heavens; and hath commanded us to do all in his name; And whatſoever you do in word, or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jeſus, Col. iii. 17. He orders that all men ſhould honour the Son, even as they honour the Father, John v. 23. I ſhall relate a hiſtory to this purpoſe; it is this, Theodoſius the emperor having made an edict for the giving liberty for the Arians to preach; Amphilochius took this courſe for prevailing with the emperor to recal that edict. Theodoſius having made Arcadius co-emperor and Cæſar with him, ſeveral biſhops came to ſalute the emperor, to congratulate Arcadius, and to ſignify their conſent to Theodoſius his act, and by their reſpect and honour done to Arcadius, to ſhew that they took him for the ſucceſſor of Theodoſius in the empire; among others came this Amphilochius, biſhop of Iconium, who, after he had done obeiſance very ſubmiſſively to Theodoſius, was going away without ſhewing any reſpect to Arcadius, though he ſat by Theodoſius in all his royal robes; Theodoſius therefore called to Amphilochius, ſaying, "Know you not that I have made Arcadius, "my ſon, emperor with me?" Upon which Amphilochius went to Arcadius, and ſtriking him on the head, ſaid, He was a very hopeful boy. Theodoſius being very angry at this indignity done his ſon, commanded him to priſon. Amphilochius, after he had gone a little way, turned back, ſaying, "O Theodoſius, "you are angry that I give not your ſon the "ſame honour I give you, ſince you have made "him equal in majeſty to yourſelf; and think "you God will be well-pleaſed that you ſuffer "the Arians to abuſe Chriſt, whom he hath "ſet at his right-hand in glory, and will have all "men honour the Son, as they honour the Father." Upon which the edict was reverſed. I may ſay, Can you think that God will accept your worſhip to him, be it never ſo great; if you take no notice of Chriſt; be ſure God will reject you and your ſervices. But then again,

2. As God will have Chriſt to have the glory of his kingly office, ſo alſo of his prieſtly. Thus, ſuppoſe ſome great monarch, his ſon conſenting, ſhould lay upon his ſon the puniſhment due to ſome rebellious ſubjects, intending the ſon's honour as well as their pardon; the king ſends forth a proclamation to them, to let them know that his ſon had ſatisfied juſtice, and procured a pardon: but many of them not truſting to this, would not come in, but would ſend the king gifts and preſents to gain his favour: the emperor ſcorns their gifts upon that account; eſpecially they thus robbing his ſon of the honour of making their peace, and thereby alſo plainly ſhewing, that they thought their crime was not ſo great, but a ſmall matter would make it up, ſuch as their gifts. Surely, if gifts would have done the buſineſs, his ſon had greater gifts than theirs; ſo that he needed not have died or ſuffered. The reddition of this ſimile may be eaſily made: God abhors our prayers, alms, and all our ſervices, if we bring them as ſatisfactory to his juſtice, and ſprinkle our puddly waters, our tears, upon the mercy-ſeat, and fill the holy place with the ſtinking ſavour, the ſtinking vapours of our prayers, which are unperfumed with the incenſe of Chriſt's righteouſneſs, or that are no better than the reeking ſteams of a dunghill, the noxious vapours of an hollow cavern, or the ſmoke of ſome ſulphruous vulcano; I ſay, to go to the holy place with theſe, inſtead of the incenſe of Chriſt's merit and interceſſion, is not to make atonement, but provocation. This makes popiſh auſterities to be acts of pride, inſtead of being acts of mortification.

3. God will have him get the honour alſo of his prophetical office; for it is by his Spirit that he inſtructs and teaches us how to pray as well as perform. By his merit we have acceptance, and by his Spirit aſſiſtance. If a child ſhould write ſome excellent tract in the mathematics in Greek, we would infallibly conclude ſome did learn him, or dictate to him; ſo when you pray in the Spirit, and ſpiritually, for ſuch or ſuch ſpiritual bleſſings, who do you think dictates to you? This is not your mother-tongue; doubtleſs it is the Spirit of Chriſt that helps your infirmities. In a word, Chriſt by his active and paſſive obedience, whereby he hath ſatisfied juſtice, hath a wonderful intereſt with God, more than all the angels of heaven, inſomuch, that God delights to pardon the greateſt of ſinners for Chriſt's ſake: therefore, in prayer, conceive of God as a great, an infinitely great God, and as a God in Chriſt. Look on God through Chriſt, keeping the humbling ſenſe of your own diſtance and provocation; look upon God as through Chriſt the moſt compaſſionate fondeſt Father in the world; if he give thee not every thing thou thus aſkeſt, it proceeds not from his unwillingneſs to give, but thine unfitneſs to receive.

6thly, There are temptations with reference to ſelf-murder: Satan many times tempts people, particularly theſe that are coming to Chriſt, he throws them down and tears them, urging them to tear themſelves to pieces, to make away themſelves, and cut off the thread of their own life. This is a ſubject I ſeldom or never took occaſion to ſpeak in this manner upon; but now, I think it the more neceſſary that we are living in a time, wherein we are compaſſed about with awful inſtances of profeſſors being left under the power, and ſwallowed up with the violence of this temptation; yea, ſuch inſtances thereof, as have perhaps made the hearts of many here preſent to tremble. And ſince what hath been, may be, and not knowing but in ſuch a great company as is here, ſome one or other may be under ſuch temptations, I would offer theſe following advices ſhortly, to fortify you againſt theſe aſſaults.

1. Conſider that ſelf-murder is a ſin againſt the very light of nature, and the very letter of the law of God, Exod. xx. 13. Thou ſhalt not kill. And you may be ſure, that no thought of this ſort that enters into your heart, can be from God; for it hath the very image of the devil upon it; He was a murderer from the beginning.

2. Yield not to the tempter; for, though this is a temptation incident to God's people, inſomuch that, perhaps, there are few of them that have not been thus tempted, as our Lord Jeſus Chriſt himſelf was, to whom the devil ſaid, Caſt thyſelf down from the pinacle of the temple; yet we read of no ſaint in ſcripture that yielded to the tempter. We are therein told of none but wicked wretches that deſtroyed themſelves, ſuch as Saul, Achitophel, and Judas; and ſure you would not deſire to be like them.

ed

3. Conſider the contrary practice of the ſaints in ſcripture, both in their beſt and worſt time.—Old Simeon got an armful of Chriſt, and did he now attempt to cut off his own life, that he might win away to heaven? No; he wiſhes to be away, but he puts himſelf in God's will; Now letteſt thou thy ſervant depart in peace. Paul is wrapt up to the third heaven, and his deſire of death must have been very great; yet he is content to ſtay till he was diſſolved.—Again, on the other hand, if pains of body, and terrors of mind, might contribute to ſtrengthen ſuch a temptation, Job did not want his ſhare of both; yet, inſtead of putting a period to his own days, though indeed he curſed the day of his birth, and wiſhed for the day of his death, yet he ſays, All the days of my appointed time, will I wait till my change come, Job xiv. 14.

4. Conſider, that by ſuch horrid ſuggeſtions as theſe, you are tempted to aſſume to yourſelf a prerogative that belongs to God only. It is he that lives for ever and ever that ſays, I kill, and I make alive; I wound, and I heal, Deut. xxxii. 39. Your life is not your own to diſpoſe of; and as you cannot lengthen your life, ſo you may not ſhorten it. Therefore,

5. When you are thus tempted, keep not the devil's counſels, nor be thou his ſecretary: go to ſome faithful miniſter, or experienced Chriſtian, and tell them how you are tempted; for this temptation is partly conquered, when it is revealed.

6. Theſe who think they ſhall be damned, and go to hell when they die, it is the greateſt madneſs in the world for them to haſten their death. That the fear of hell ſhould make them leap into hell, is ſo contrary to all common ſenſe, that it is a wonder that any one ſhould ſo much ceaſe to be a man, not to ſay a Chriſtian, as to do a thing ſo contrary to nature, let be to grace. Let me aſk you, Can you endure to be among blaſphemers? Can you endure to blaſpheme God yourſelf for a year together, or an hour, and to ſpend it all in curſing and blaſpheming? If your ſoul abhor this, why will you leap into hell, a place of everlaſting blaſphemy? I read of one, who having been a long time tempted to make away herſelf, at laſt reſolved to do it, for the thoughts of the torments of hell were not prevalent enough to deter her; but as ſhe was going to deſtroy herſelf, it was brought to her mind, that in hell ſhe ſhould blaſpheme God for ever; which ſhe abhorring to do, upon that very account forbore the wicked action. If you were to be only in a ſtate of horror and torment, it were ſad enough; but for thee to put thyſelf into a ſtate of blaſphemy, how canſt thou endure to think of it?

7. Take heed of fighting againſt Satan with human reaſon, for this Leviathan laughs at the ſhaking of this ſpear; his ſcales are too cloſe to be pierced by it: but take the ſword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, which divides between the joints and the marrow; ſay to Satan, It is written, Thou ſhalt not kill.

8. Pray, pray much; for the ſword of the Spirit muſt be wielded by the ſkilful arm of the Spirit. If thou goeſt out in confidence of thy being able to manage ſcripture by thy own ſtrength and ſkill, it will fare with thee, as it did with theſe, Acts xix. 15, 16. They thought to caſt out devils by the name of Jeſus, but the devil rent and wounded them, and made them to fly, ſaying, Paul I know, and Jeſus I know; but who are ye?

The great argument that the devil uſes to perſuade thee to ſelf-murder, is by perſuading thee that thou art a reprobate; but thou mayeſt conſider that Satan cannot know that thou art a reprobate: Was Satan, think you, on God's council, when he made his eternal decrees? Satan, who is not ſo much as one of God's hired ſervants, but a ſlave and a malefactor kept in chains, he is ſo far from being of God's council, that he is not ſo much as one of his family. If thou ſayſt thy conſcience tells thee that thou art a reprobate; know, that no man living can tell who are reprobates; nor can any man know himſelf to be a reprobate, except he hath committed the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, which no man hath committed, that is ſorry to think he hath committed it; For it is impoſſible that ſuch a man ſhould be renewed, either by or to repentance, Heb. vi. 6.

Ye that walk in darkneſs and ſee no light, that are haunted with theſe temptations, conſider what a God we have to do with; we ſerve ſuch a great Lord, that all the monarchs of the world are beggars to him; and ſuch a gracious Father is our God, that the tendereſt parents in the world, and your deareſt friends, are tyrants, yea, wolves and tygers compared to him. And if we ſhould provoke them, as we provoke him, and they could as eaſily cruſh us as God can, we would quickly find that their tendereſt mercies are cruelty; whereas the ſeveral providences of God will be to thee, not like the gall of aſps, bitter and deadly, but like God's rubarb and aloes, by which thine iniquity ſhall be purged, and all the fruit of it ſhall be to take away thy ſin; and though for the preſent the afflicting hand of God upon thee, is not joyous, but grievous, yet if thou art exerciſed thereby, it will bring forth in thee the quiet fruit of righteouſneſs. Lay aſide therefore your fears of hell, and hard thoughts of God.

But now, to add no more particulars, let me exhort you and all that hear me, to come to our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, whatever oppoſition from hell ſtands in your way; and though the devil ſhould throw you down and tear you as you are coming; yet Chriſt will lift you up, and heal you. Oh! what offends the world at our Lord Jeſus? Will you tell me, ſinner, what ails you at Chriſt? What diſobliges you at his perſon? Is he not the brightneſs of the Father's glory, and the chief among ten thouſand? Is he not the roſe of paradiſe, the heart of heaven?—What ails you at his offices? Is he not a Prophet, that can teach you; a prieſt, that can atone for you; a King, that can conquer for you?—What ails you at his relations? Is he not a Shepherd, to feed you; a Phyſician, to heal you; a Father, to pity you; a Huſband, to cheriſh you?—What ails you at his doing, to fulfil the law for you; or his dying, to ſatisfy juſtice for you?—What ails you at his yoke? Is not his yoke eaſy and his burden light? his ways pleaſantneſs and his paths peace?—What ails you at his grace and glory?

What ails you at him, Sirs? O! is he not worth your while, though you ſhould run through hell to come to him? Is there not a heart in all this company that would fain be at him? Alas! would you rather go to the devil than than come to Christ? That a comely Jesus cannot get two or three hearts in all this company, O pity, pity! and a thousand pities that the beauty of the Godhead cannot get a lover! Will you all be so mad as to run by Christ to other lovers, while he begs your love, as if he were upon his knees, and sends us to pray you in his stead to be reconciled with him, and come to him?

And, therefore, Sirs, in his blessed name I pray you, go not by him. I beg it as the best favour you can do to my Master and me, that you come to him; I beseech you, by the mercies of God, and by the bowels of Christ, that you come to him. He will welcome the worst of you that will come to him; and if you but endeavour to stretch out the withered hand, or put out the withered heart toward him, he will help you to it, and embrace you with hand and heart both. He is content to come to you on any terms; and, will you not come to him? He stands at the door of your heart, and waits that you will but allow him to come in, and let him have access. Have you a hard heart? He would be in to soften it: Are you pleased? Have you a filthy heart? He would be in to wash it: Are you content? Have you a wicked heart? He would be in to renew it: Are you satisfied?

If you will not come to him, will you let him come to you, that he may make you willing? Consider what is a-coming. O Sirs, is not a day of calamity coming? And why will you not come to Christ? Is not a day of death coming? And why will you not come to him? Is not a day of judgment coming? And why will you not come to him? Or, why come you to any thing else? Why come you to ordinances, if you will not come to Christ, [illegible] he is the life of ordinances? Why come you [illegible]rmons, if you come not to Christ, who is the substance of all sermons? Why come you to a communion-table, if you will not come to Christ; for he is the heart of the communion? Why do you hope for heaven, if you will not come to Christ, for he is the all of heaven, the heaven of heavens? A thousand heavens are lighter than a feather when laid in the balance with him. Had I the tongue of a seraphim, I could not commend him enough to you; but, O may he commend himself to your heart, and cause you to throw your immortal soul into his saving arms, notwithstanding all the down-casting temptations of Satan, and whatever objections and oppositions stand in the way of your coming to him.

SERMON LXXIV.

DARK PROVIDENCES cleared in due Time.*

JOHN xiii. 7. —What I do, thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.

MY friends, the invisible God acts like himself, even amidst all the visible and sensible tokens he gives of his presence; such as he hath been giving you at this occasion: for, amidst all his ways and workings that are seen and felt, yet still his way is invisible, unsearchable, and mysterious. How small a portion do we know of him! What is said of his presence and absence, or of his coming and going sometimes, may be said also of his doing: his coming near once to Jacob was dark to him; therefore he said, Surely the Lord was in this place, and I knew it not. His going away from Samson was dark to him; therefore it is said, He wist not that the Lord was departed from him. And what is thus said of his coming and going, may be said of his doing, and perhaps of his doings among us at this occasion; What I do, thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.

We have here, in this chapter, the remarkable history of our Lord Jesus, his washing his disciples feet while he was at supper with them. It was great condescension to sup with them; and yet greater to wash their feet. How far Christ will stoop down to the necessities of his people, is amazing! It is observed, ver. 3. that Jesus knowing that the Father had committed all things into his hands, and that he was come from God, and went to God: he rises from supper, and laid aside his garments, and took a towel and girded himself, and poured water into a bason, and began to wash the disciples feet, ver. 4, 5. All power and sovereignty was committed to him, yet the knowledge of his excellency did not hinder his condescension; in the view he had of his greatest glory, he evidenced the greatest humility. Neither the greatest sufferings he was just now to endure, nor the greatest honour he was advanced unto, could make him forget his poor people; his heart was set upon them as much as either upon his sufferings or his glory: why? for them he suffered, and for them he was to be glorified. And as the thoughts of his glory formerly did not hinder his condescension; so the possession of his glory now doth not hinder his stooping down to serve, yea, to wash, and save them. And the higher the Father hath exalted him, the more hath he fitted him for doing service to us in our low case and condition.

Now, we have here Peter's amazement, Lord, dost thou wash my feet? ver. 6. What! might he say, Thou, the Lord and Ruler of the world, dost thou stoop to do this for me, a worthless worm, a sinful man? Here is a paradox I cannot understand. O! but Christ's condescensions, wherein we find ourselves taken notice of by his grace, are justly matter of admiration. Is this the manner of man? What are we, and what is our Father's house? It well becomes us, and the best of the sons and daughters of Adam to fit down at his feet and wash them with tears, and wipe them with the hairs of his head. But, O! what is this! dost thou wash my feet, Lord; O King of kings, and Lord of lords? Christ's abasing himself, and stooping so low to us, ought not to obscure his majesty, or make us think the less of him, as if he did what was too mean and unbecoming his grandeur; nay, if we have faith as a grain of mustard seed, the lower that he stoops towards us, the more will we honour him, and the higher thoughts will we have of him.

* This sermon was preached at Dunfermline, on Monday, July 2. 1736. after the celebration of the sacrament of the Lord's supper there. It hath undergone three impressions.

to

The text is an answer to Peter's amazement, What I do, says Christ, thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter. Where he tells him two things. 1. That the design of this work was at present hid from him. 2. That it should be afterwards revealed to him. So ignorant was Peter of this work, which was afterwards explained to him, as signifying another inward washing, and giving to us a copy of humility, and of humble service one towards another; so ignorant was he hereof, that his sinful modesty makes him refuse this act of kindness and condescension; as you see in the following verse. Though it be commendable to fear the Lord and his goodness, and to be amazed at his condescending grace and mercy; yet it is sinful to run to that extreme of fear and trembling, as to shun, decline, and refuse it: and though our Lord's stooping down be a great abasement; yet it is the great error of the saints to think he will not reckon it his glory and honour to serve them. It is a part of their ignorance and error, when he stoops down to them with his blessing, to think that he hath forgot himself in his condescension, and that it is not possible he means such favour to them.

In the general, we may learn from the words in their connexion with the text,

1. That when we refuse any favour at Christ's hand, or shun any act of his condescending grace, as if unbecoming his greatness to grant it, or our meanness to receive it; we but discover our great ignorance and error.

2. Christ may be very near to his people, and doing great things to them in steps of gracious condescension; and yet they may be very ignorant of him, and of his acting: What I do, thou knowest not.

3. Every work of Christ towards his people carries something more great and precious in the bosom of it, than we are capable, at the time, to understand; it is more loaden with wisdom, power, goodness, grace, and faithfulness, than for the present we can apprehend: What I do, thou knowest not now.

4. Though we cannot dive into the depths of Christ's counsel in his doing towards us; yet we ought to reverence and adore him therein, and to yield implicite obedience to his will, without quarreling his way, or censuring his proceeding, while through darkness and ignorance we are such incompetent judges thereof; thus did Abraham, Heb. xi. 8. By faith, when he was called to go out into a place which he should afterwards receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went.

5. Our Lord Jesus doth not explain all his mind to his people at the first; what he intends by such a work, and such a promise, and such a providence, until afterwards, that subsequent works explain preceeding works, and subsequent providences explain preceeding ones.

6. Learn that we are therefore to wait upon him till he see fit to explain what may now be dark and hidden unto us; and we shall afterwards know and see what was the tendency of events that seemed most cross and strange. We must let Christ take his own way both in ordinances and providences; and we will find, in the issue, that it is the best way. What I do, thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.

But passing all these, the point of doctrine I would speak to is this.

OBSER. That the works of Christ towards his people may be very dark and mysterious, hidden and unknown to them, till afterwards he make them manifest.

What I do, thou knowest not now, Peter; but thou shalt know hereafter: what need thou hast of being washed, when thou shalt be guilty of the hainous crime of denying me thrice: or, when thou shalt, in the discharge of thy office, be employed as an instrument to wash away the sinful defilements of others.

But this doctrine may be verified from many instances.—Joseph's dreams, as well as Jacob's being bereft of him, was dark and mysterious, till afterwards it was manifested in the course of providence.—Abraham's call to go and offer up his son, as well as his being ordered to go, not knowing whither he went, was very dark and mysterious till afterwards.—Esther's marriage with Ahasuerus was a kindly providence, but the design of it was not manifested till afterwards, to break Haman's cruel project.—Christ manifested his glory to Peter, James, and John, upon the mount; but what he did they knew not the design of, till afterwards it appeared what eminent duties and trials he was preparing them for.—Moses little knew what was the mystery of the manifestation he got of God, when he saw him in a flame of fire out of the midst of the bush, and the bush burned and was not consumed; and when God spake to him, saying, I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; Moses hid his face, and was afraid to look upon God, till the Lord thereafter shewed what was the design of this appearance, and what service he was calling him to.—Little did Israel know, when brought through the Red-sea, and singing triumphantly at the shore over all their drowned enemies, that this glorious appearance of God was to usher in a forty years weary travel through the wilderness; and that what the Lord did then, by the hand of Moses, was but typical of the great salvation through Jesus Christ.—Little did Paul, our apostle, while he was yet Saul the persecutor, know what the Lord did when he appeared to him in his road to Damascus, till afterwards that the Lord shewed him what he was to do and suffer for the name of Jesus.——His ways, even of grace and mercy, are dark and unknown; therefore says the psalmist, Psal. lxxvii. 18, 19. Thy way, O God, is in the sanctuary; thy way is in the seas, thy paths in the great waters, and thy footsteps are not known. Psal. xxxvi. 6. Thy righteousness is like the great mountains; thy judgments are a great deep. Psal cxi. 2. The works of the Lord are great; sought out of all them that have pleasure therein.

The Lord works and carries on his gracious work, according to his rule of divine policy, that every one cannot penetrate thereinto. As great great politicians carry on their designs in a way that ordinary onlookers cannot understand; so, much more doth infinite wisdom work, as it were, by a holy and majestic stratagem, and carries on his work in the dark, and in a way much hidden and unknown to us; for, clouds and darkness are round about him: and hence says the apostle, Rom. xi. 23. O the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! Whatever then God hath been doing or saying to you at this occasion, think not that you are wise enough now, or that you know all that he hath been doing or designing by this work. What I do, thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.

Having thus confirmed the doctrine, the method, for the farther prosecution of the subject, may be the following.

I. To speak to some things the Lord doth towards his church and people, that are dark and mysterious, hidden and unknown.
II. To shew in what respects these things that he is doing for them may be hid and unknown to them.
III. Shew for what reason the Lord takes this way of doing, so hid, dark, and mysterious, that what he doth they know not.
IV. Observe some of the seasons when it is that he makes them know what now they are in the dark about, according to his word here, Thou shalt know hereafter.
V. Deduce some inferences for the application of the whole.

I. We are to speak of some of these things the Lord doth towards his people that are dark, mysterious, hidden, and unknown.

Here we might, to view it more distinctly, mention some common steps of his dealing with his people, that, for a long time, may be dark and unknown to them; such as, what he doth with respect to their outward state in the world: what he doth by ordering such and such circumstances of prosperity or adversity in the world: what he doth with respect to their birth and education; his design in their being born of gracious, or of graceless parents; his design in ordering the bounds of their habitation, in such a spot of the world; his design in bringing them under such and such a ministry; to such a sermon, and such a sacrament, and such a table; why he cast such a book in their way: all may be hid and unknown to them till afterwards, that the Lord discovers what good and great designs he had thereby; what he doth by such a mercy, and such a judgment; such a word, and such a rod.

Again, we might condescend on what he doth with respect to their inward spiritual state: they may be greatly in the dark, as to what he is doing, when, on the one hand, he is convincing and awakening them; when he is humbling and breaking them; when he is deserting and forsaking them to their sense; when he suffers them to be tempted of Satan, and conquered by their lusts; and leaves them under the power of their enemies; denying their requests; refusing to help them in prayer, and to hear them; and seeming to reject and cast them off: what he thus doth, they know not till afterwards that he return.

And then, on the other hand, his way and work may be hid and unknown, even when he returns, so as they know not what he is doing: when he washes their feet, or condescends to give them some tokens of his pardoning and purifying grace; they may expect fair weather and clean way, or a prosperous journey, all their life-time afterwards; while yet he may be preparing them for a new storm. They may little know what he doth when he is manifesting himself anew to them; they may reckon it is a preparatory for more glorious displays immediately: but they may be mistaken, and may find themselves tumbling down the hill into a mire, or ever they are aware. They may little know what he doth, when, at a communion solemnity, he comes to loose their bonds; and when he is comforting, strengthening, or sealing them, and speaking in to their hearts, they may be thinking now that their mountain stands strong, they shall never be moved, never be what they have been, nor doubt as they have done; yet quickly they may be at that with it, Thou didst hide thy face and I was troubled. They may little know, when he brings them to the banquetting house, and makes them sit down under his shadow with great delight, and his fruit was sweet to their taste, what is he doing and designing; they may think now this is for my present comfort, now my cup runs over, and I hope it will continue running; while yet he may be feeding them for the hunger to come, victualling them for a voyage, laying in provision for a siege, preparing them for a battle, or perhaps anointing them for a burial. What I do, thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.

But here I shall mention some of the special works of God, that are covered with a cloud of majesty, that his people seldom know what he is doing with them. As,

1. When his word and his work, his promise and his providence seem to clash and contradict one another; this is a dark and hidden rod. What he doth, we know not then, when his dispensations seem, to human reason, to be driving on a design to defeat the promise; we cannot see through the cloud without an eagle-eye of faith, nor pry into the depths of his infinite wisdom. Thus Moses was sent to deliver Israel out of Egypt, and to tell them the good news, that now the Lord was to deliver them from their bondage; but behold their bondage is increased, their slavery is doubled, they are filled with anguish, Exod. v. 21. Moses himself could not well see through this dark cloud; and therefore complains to God of it, ver. 22, 23. When things like this fall out to the church of God, or a child of God, that here is a promise, but where is the accomplishment, when the quite contrary appears? Then we are to think on his word, What I do, thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter.

2. When his dealings and dispensations are so dark and unintelligible, that his people know not whether they speak mercy or wrath; thus it was with Job, when he said, Shew me wherefore thou contendest with me? Job x. 2.; intimating, how utterly ignorant he was, as to what the Lord was intending by that strange dispensation: in such a case he is saying, What I do, thou knowest not now.

3. When the Lord comes with salvation in a surprising way; or, while his people are quite out of frame and fitness for it; as when it is said, Isa. lvii. 17. For the iniquity of his covetousness was

I wroth

I wroth, and ſmote him; I hid me, and was wroth, and he went on frowardly in the way of his heart; and yet it follows, I have ſeen his ways, and will heal him: I will lead him alſo, and reſtore comforts to him, and to his mourners. O what is this! will he ſhew himſelf a God of love to me, when I have been ſhewing my ſelf a devil of enmity againſt him! Or, while he ſurpriſes them with a mercy that they were never hoping nor waiting for; as Iſrael, when the Lord returned their captivity, were like them that dream. His ſtately march this way is ſo hid from their eyes, that what he doth they know not; it is above their capacity to underſtand his ſovereign way.

4. When ſalvation comes, not only in a way of merciful ſurprize, but notwithſtanding all appearance to the contrary; when enemies are ſtrong and invincible, by them prevalent, and victorious over them; and when his peoples ſtrength is quite gone, Deut. xxxii. 36. And when their hope is gone, and they are cut off for their parts, Ezek. xxxvii. 11. When in ſuch a point of extremity he ſteps in and ſaves; and ſaves, perha ps,by very unlikely means; as by the blowing of rams horns he throws down the walls of Jericho; or, by the ſtripling David, he kills the great Goliath, and defeats the army of the Philiſtines; in theſe ways there is much hidden majeſty. What I do, thou knoweſt not.

4. When hopeful beginnings of relief and ſalvation meet with unexpected ſtops and hindrances; and when the building of the ſpiritual temple, after the foundation is laid, comes to be retarded, and the work ſeems to go back rather than forward, as in the building of the material temple in the days of Ezra. How little do we underſtand what that means, when the Lord ſays, by Jeremiah to Baruch, Jer. xlv. 4. Behold, that which I have built, will I break down? When he ſuffers enemies to prevail, and break down his carved work, as with axes and hammers, who can ſee through ſuch a diſpenſation, when it befals a church in general, as to the work of reformation; or a child of God in particular, as to the work of grace in the ſoul? What he doth, we know not now.

6. When the Lord's way towards the godly and the ungodly ſeems unſuitable to their different ſtate, as if he frowned on his friends and favoured his enemies; how dark and hidden is his work herein? The proſperity of the wicked, and adverſity of the godly was for a time a great myſtery to Aſaph, Pſal. lxxiii. Yea more, ſometimes the godly are left to be a great ſtumbling block to others; as when the Lord left Aaron to make the golden calf in the wilderneſs, that brought ſo much ſin and wrath upon the people. I might inſtance David, Solomon, Peter, and others: how dark is this, and the like diſpenſations! And when, on the other hand, he imploys the wicked themſelves to carry on his work, and makes their wicked deſigns contribute to advance his holy end and glorious deſign; as he did make the treaſon of Judas, the ſentence of Pilate, the malice of the Jews to contribute for the work of our redemption. Surely, what he doth, we know not; his glorious works are hidden and unknown. He can neceſſitate enemies, contrary to their will, to do that which is a manifeſt forwarding of his work, as when the Philiſtines were conſtrained to ſend home the ark of Iſrael, 1 Sam. vi.

7. In a word, how dark and hid is his work, when he cuts off inſtruments that ſeem to be moſt fitted for it; and that either before their work be begun, as David, that prepared materials for building of the temple, but was not employed therein; or before their work be ended, as Moſes that brought Iſrael through the wilderneſs, but is taken away then, and not employed to end the work of bringing them in to the promiſed land, which he would gladly have done!—How dark and unknown is his work, when he calls them to believe what ſeems contradictory to carnal ſenſe and reaſon; as that Abraham ſhould have a ſon, when his body and Sarah's womb were both dead, who yet believed in God, who quickens the dead, and calls things that are not, as though they were? Or when he calls them to do that which ſeems expreſly againſt his own revealed will; as when Abraham was called to go and ſacrifice his ſon; this was a command of trial, and by faith, Abraham went all the length therein that was deſigned!—How dark is the providence and trial, when duty is ſeemingly ſet againſt duty, as when churchmen and prophets ſet upon Nehemiah, and preſs him to that as duty which was no duty; as you ſee the hiſtory, Neh. vi. 10,—14.? And when prophets are ſet againſt prophets, not only Baal's prophets againſt the prophets of God, but prophets of the Lord againſt prophets of the Lord; as in the caſe of the old prophet pretending angelical information, and deceiving the man of God, 1 Kings xiii.?—Finally, how dark and unintelligible is his work, when he lifts up with the one hand, and caſts down with the other; when he heals with the one, and wounds with the other. Thus the child, Mark ix. 19,—26. that Chriſt took in hand to cure, grew worſe; for, The devil threw him down and tare him. The ruler of the ſynagogue got Chriſt ingaged to go along with him, and heal his daughter; but, behold, what a wound is given, one coming from his houſe, ſaying, Thy daughter is dead, trouble not the maſter! —In theſe and the like works he ſays, What I do, thou knoweſt not now; but thou ſhalt know hereafter.

II. The ſecond thing propoſed was, To ſhew in what reſpects we may be ignorant, and in the dark about the Lord's doing towards us. And,

1. What he doth, as to the very matter of his work, may be hid and unknown, whether it be a common or a ſaving work; whether it be a merciful or a wrathful work, ſuch as what Manoah and his wife met with, Judges xiii. 22, 23. He and ſhe differed in their judgment about what they ſaw; Manoah ſaid, Surely we ſhall die, becauſe we have ſeen God. But his wife, on the contrary, ſaid, If the Lord were pleaſed to kill us, would he have received a burnt-offering and a meat-offering at our hand? Or would he have ſhewed us all theſe things?

2. What he doth may be hid and unknown to them, as to the manner and method of his doing. His way of bringing about his purpoſe is very ſtrange and unperceivable; for he is the God that quickens the dead, and calls things that are not as though they were, Rom. iv. 17. He brings things of nothing, and one contrary out of another, 2 Cor. iv. 6. Light out of darkneſs, life out of death, ſtrength out of weakneſs, Meat out of the eater, and ſweet out of the ſtrong. How unknowable then to us is his work, who makes death the way of life, and wounding the way to healing, breaking down down the way to building up, and losing the way to gain?

3. What he doth may be hid and unknown, as to the causes of his working. There may be reasons of state that we are ignorant of: the reason why he doth so and so now; and why he desists at another time; why Zion is filled with judgment; why he shines on the counsel of the wicked, that pray not to him; and why the just and upright man is laughed to scorn. Surely touching the Almighty we cannot find him out: for who hath known the mind of the Lord? Or who hath been his counseller? Rom. xi. 34.

4. What he doth may be hid and unknown, as to the beauty of his work; Lord, dost thou wash my feet? Where is the beauty and glory of this work? Is it becoming for thee to do so? We may be ignorant of the glory of divine wisdom that shines in his dealings; the glory of his holiness, grace, love, and mercy that shines therein, till afterward he make his work appear. There is a beautiful connexion between what he hath done, what he is doing, and what he will do afterwards, that may be greatly hid, and the beautiful season of his doing; he hath made every thing beautiful in his time. O! there is a lustre in the very time of his coming, when he makes our time of need his time of love, our extremity his opportunity; yet for a time this beauty may be hid.

5. What he doth may be hid and unknown, as to the excellency and greatness of his work; it may appear little, and low, and mean, as Peter thought when he said, Lord, dost thou wash my feet? Yet, in due time, it may appear to be a very great and excellent work. His greatness and grandeur is not hereby diminished, but more and more displayed. When the Lord turned back the captivity of Zion, they were like them that dreamed, did not see or consider the greatness of the work, till afterwards they see and say, The Lord hath done great things for us, Psalm cxxvi. 1, 3.

6. What he doth may be hid and unknown for a time, as to the necessity of the work, and the usefulness of it; part of Peter's meaning here, when he said, Lord, dost thou wash my feet? was, Lord, what is the need of thy washing my feet? And therefore he ignorantly says in the following verse, Thou shalt never wash my feet; whereupon Christ opens up to him the absolute necessity of what he now did, and designed by this work: If I wash thee not, thou hast no part in me. There is a great need for all that Christ doth to us, though we be in the dark about it; and we ought to see a need be in every thing he doth; If need be, you are in heaviness through manifold temptations for a season; and if need be he will give a more joyful and heartsom season; he knows best what you need, though you do not know.

7. What he doth may be hid as to the variety of his work, and the changes that befal us through the various changes and turns of his hand in working; though his heart and mind, his love and covenant, be unchangeable. Sometimes he will let his people ask what they will, and he will give them to the half, yea, to the whole of his kingdom; and at other times they may cry and shout, and he shut out their prayers. Sometimes he will let them hold him, and not let him go, yea, and command him, as it were, Concerning my sons and my daughters, command ye me: thus he let Moses ask, and he said, Shew me thy glory; and God says, I will make all my goodness pass before thee: and yet behold, at other times, he will condescend to nothing, and seem inexorable; Though Moses, Daniel, and Job, were to make intercession in the matter. Who can understand this variety of his doing, and the secret reasons of the vicissitudes and changes, that hereupon befal his people in their inward frame and outward lot?

8. What he doth may be hid and unknown, as to the end and design of his doing, and as to the upshot and issue thereof; and what he is to bring out of that which now he doth. What he did in washing the disciples feet, was not known in the design of it till afterwards. Many things he hath done, the meaning whereof was not known till afterwards. What he did, when he became man, when he became a worm, and no man; what he did, when he lived our life; what he did, when he laid down his life, and hang upon the cross between two thieves, were not understood till afterwards; and then it appeared that it behoved him, Heb. ii. 17. And what he doth at this communion, we know not now. The way that he takes may seem to be far about, and yet afterwards appear to be the only right way: and when he leads his people in a way they know not, and in paths they have not known, may afterwards appear to be the best way for his glory, and for their good. And no wonder that we be in the dark, if we consider that the worker of these works is wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working, Isa. xxviii. 29.; infinitely beyond worldly politicians, whose projects and purposes are often hid from us, and much more may the infinitely deep counsels of God.

III. The third thing proposed was, To offer some reasons, why the Lord takes such a hid mysterious and unknown way of doing with his people; that what he doth, they know not now. And,

1. It is to discover himself in a way suitable to himself and his own glorious perfections; and to shew that his thoughts are not our thoughts, as his ways are not our ways. If he should work according to our thoughts and imaginations, and in a way not transcending our apprehensions, how would it appear that he is JEHOVAH, a sovereign God that acts like himself, whose will is a law to us, and a rule to himself; and whose way is in the deep waters, so as his footsteps cannot be seen.—Herein he shews his wisdom to be hidden wisdom, while his own people are apt to think that he is about to destroy his work in them and in his church, when he is upon his way to raise them up, and to bring down the enemy.—Herein he shews his truth and faithfulness miraculously when he comes with salvation, after he had wrought so long under ground, and out of sight, and all hope was gone; but when it shines out from behind the dark cloud, then it appears with a more than ordinary glance and lustre. O then, they see his mercy is in the heavens, and his truth reaches to the clouds, and his faithfulness to all generations, Psal. cxix. 90. So that no changes or vicissitudes here below can alter, no length of time can change, his mind.

2. It is to discover his enemies, that they may appear to be what they are: what he doth for his people, they do not know themselves; far less do hypocrites and false-hearted professors know know what he is doing for them, and what good he is doing to them. If the Lord were appearing visibly for his children whenever they are in a strait, many false friends would take part with them, and seem to love and favour them; but that their enmity may be discovered, and they may be made manifest, he comes to his people in unknown ways, and hides his work; and then enemies shew themselves openly to be enemies to God's people, while God doth not shew himself openly to be their friend. He may hide himself and his work from his friends to discourage his enemies, and harden them in his righteous judgment; for, whom he will he hardens, Rom. ix. 18. by leaving them to themselves.

3. It is to discover the dross and corruption of his own people, that lies at the bottom of their heart unseen; for, while he keeps his work hid from them, how does then their unbelief appear, in many doubts and scruples that rise in their souls about his design? How doth their impatience appear, while he delays to clear up matters to them? Thus he shews them their sins, and humbles them under a sense of their ignorance. Such a discovery the psalmist got when he went to the sanctuary, and reflected on the mistake he was under about what the Lord was doing; So foolish was I and ignorant, I was as a beast before thee. He makes them thus to know what is in them.

4. It is to discover their graces also, and to try and exercise them: thus he tries their faith, when they are to believe, though they do not know how his word shall be accomplished, as he did the faith of Abraham, Rom. iv.—Thus he tries their patience, when they are to wait upon him, and they know not how long, Psal. xiii. 1. How long wilt thou forget me, O Lord, for ever? How long wilt thou hide thy face from me?—Thus he tries their hope, when all human appearances and probabilities fail, and they can see no ground of hope from without; for, that which is seen is no hope.—Thus he tries their submission to him, and their obedience to him, while he calls to stoop to his will, even when he hides his design, and gives not account of any of his matters; that we may be still and know that he is God.

5. In a word, he takes this hid and unknown way, that we may learn to reverence and fear him, and to wait upon him, till he teach us what we know not, and expound to us what we do not understand: He is a God of judgment, and blessed are all they that wait for him.—In this way he curbs the curiosity, and checks the pride of poor man, who, when he is done, must go to school again, and learn over what he learned before, and learn better.—In this way he stirs up to prayer, that they may take every piece of his work back again to him, that so he may make them know the secrets of his counsels, and the depth of his government; and that they may put no sense on what he doth but his own, which they are very ready to do, without waiting till he give them his own mind; that we darken not counsel without knowledge.—In this way he teaches us to be modest in our minds, and sober in our sentiments about what he doth, till once he hath done out his work, and told out all his mind; and that, in a sense of our ignorance, we may daily be learning to read and speak, to read his mind distinctly, and to speak of his actings knowingly; otherwise we cannot order our speech by reason of darkness.—In this way he not only quickens his people to prayer, but gives great matter of praise in the issue, when what we know not now, he makes known afterward, and brings light out of darkness, yea, and makes darkness light before us. How doth it accent their praise, when the dark clouds give way to the bright sun? The issue of his dealing is the more glorious, when afterwards his gracious and glorious design shall be made known.——But this leads me to the next thing proposed, namely,

IV. The fourth head, which was to point out some of the seasons when he makes them know afterwards, what now they are, or may be in the dark about: What I do, thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.

1st, In general, this hath a reference to the partial discovery he gives of his mind in this world, and the perfect and full discovery he makes of himself in the world to come. Here he sometimes discovers what was dark and mysterious formerly in his work and dealing; but still it is only a partial display; For now we know but in part, we prophesy in part: And now we see but through a glass darkly, 1 Cor. xiii. 9, 12. But in the world to come, that which is perfect shall come, and that which is in part shall be done away; and then we shall see no more through a glass, but face to face. Now I know in part, says the apostle; but then shall I know, even as also I am known. At that day ye shall know, says Christ, that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you, John xiv. 20. Here we know him but as he is NOT, but then positively; for, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is, 1 John iii. 2. Ye shall know hereafter perfectly. But then,

2dly, In particular, it hath a reference to some special seasons, wherein, even in this world, he gives his people to know afterwards what he doth, which at present they do not know or understand; and I shall touch at some of these seasons.

1. Sometimes the season of making known what he doth, is very soon, very quickly after the work is done, and so it was here; for, after Christ had washed his disciples feet, he explains what he designed by it, and that first to Peter, by shewing what washing he especially intended; so that without it, they could have no portion in the son of Jesse: If I wash thee not, thou hast no part in me. And then afterwards to all the disciples he said, Know you what I have done to you; and so explains it further to them.—And as sometimes he very quickly explains his work; so he doth his word that was dark and unknown. Christ had said, John xvi. 17. A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, A little while, and ye shall see me; because I go to the Father: They were puzzled and perplexed about it, ver. 18.; and hereupon, before Christ was done with speaking to them, he explains it to them, ver. 19,—28.; whereupon they say, ver. 29, 30. Lo now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no proverb. Now are we sure thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee: by this we believe that thou camest forth from God. Yet this knowledge that now they got was but imperfect, as Christ's following answer shews.

2. Sometimes the season of making known afterwards what he now doth, is very long after the work is done, or the word spoken, which they are in the dark about. Our Lord may do great great things, and ſpeak gracious words to his people, and yet they may be in great darkneſs as to the meaning and deſign thereof for a long time. God met with Jacob at Bethel, and gave him a glorious manifeſtation of himſelf, and a ſweet promiſe of his preſence and bleſſing, and it was to him the houſe of God, and the gate of heaven, Gen. xxviii. 17. But Jacob knew not what a feaſt this was to be unto him twenty years afterwards, when God gave him a new meal upon this old experience; ſaying, I am the God of Bethel, where thou anointedſt the pillar, and where thou vowedſt a vow unto me, Gen. xxxi. 13. He knew not that it was to be a preface to twenty years ſervitude; and that the new rememberance, and reflection upon it was to be a pledge of a new viſit of the like nature: that the recognition of an old Bethel, was to be a preface to a new Peniel. What do I know but it will take twenty or thirty years to explain what ſome have met with at this occaſion in Dunfermline. What I do, thou knoweſt not now; but thou ſhalt know hereafter. But whether it be in a ſhort time, or after a long time that he opens up the myſtery of what he does, he is ſure to chuſe the fit time, the appointed time, the beſt time; beſt for reaching the great ends of his glory and our good: The viſion is for an appointed time, at the end it will ſpeak, and not lye; though it tarry, wait for it: becauſe it will ſurely come, it will not tarry, beyond the due time, Hab. ii. 3.

Again, there are ſome circumſtances of time, wherein the Lord thinks fit to communicate the knowledge of what was dark and myſterious, hidden and unknown in his work and doing to his people. — Sometimes after he hath hid himſelf in the dark from them in private, he meets with them in public, and tells them all his mind: when David went to the ſanctuary, Pſal. lxxiii. he got a reſolution of his cloudy caſe, and found, that even at the time his feet was almoſt gone, and his ſteps had well nigh ſlipt; that even then the Lord was holding him by his right-hand. They have ſeen his power and glory in the ſanctuary. — Sometimes he hides himſelf in public, and gives them more of his mind in a ſecret corner; When the diſciples were alone, he expounded all things to them, Mark iv. 34. What they hear, and yet do not know in public, he clears it up when he and they are alone. Hence the church affects retirement, Song vii. 11, 12. Come, my beloved, let us go forth to the field; let us lodge in the villages; let us go up early to the vineyards; let us ſee if the vine flouriſh, &c.; there will I give thee my loves: ſweet and ſenſible communion is ſometimes reſerved for a corner. — Again, ſometimes what he doth, he makes them know after a black and long night of deſertion, when he ſurprizes them with a new viſit, and makes them ſay, The voice of my Beloved! behold, he cometh, leaping upon the mountains, ſkipping upon the hills. — Sometimes he explains his mind more clearly to them, after he hath tried their faith and patience for a while, and brought them into great tribulation. John, in the Revelation, never had ſo much of Chriſt's mind, even when he leaned upon Chriſt's boſom, as when he was perſecuted and baniſhed into the iſle Patmos. Thus it was with Ezekiel, when he was among the captives by the river of Chebar, then was the heavens opened, and he ſaw the viſions of God. — Sometimes it is after deep humiliation and fervent ſupplication; ſuch as that of Daniel, chap. ix. 20, 21. Then he is informed by the angel Gabriel of ſome great things he was in the dark about before. — Sometimes the Lord hath remarkably countenanced his people with great and glorious diſcoveries of his mind, when they have ſet days apart for prayer and confeſſion, afflicting themſelves before him. But, Oh! where are the Chriſtians of former generations, ſome of whom would have ſhut themſelves up in their cloſets for many days, and got their meat ſhut in to them at the window, and holes of the door! — Again, ſometimes he reſerves the diſcovery of what he is doing, till the time that he gives a more full and plentiful out-pouring of the Spirit. What I do, ſays Chriſt here to Peter, you know not now, but you ſhall know partly, juſt now after I am done with waſhing your feet; I will explain it, but you ſhall know afterwards more clearly and diſtinctly in the day of Pentecoſt, when the Spirit ſhall be poured out; and hence ſee Acts ii. how Peter then preached and publiſhed the doing, dying, and riſing of Jeſus: What he did was then no more a myſtery to him. And you ſee John xvi. 26. the Spirit, the Comforter is promiſed for this very end, to teach us all things, and to bring all things to rememberance, whatſoever Chriſt hath ſaid unto us. And when the Spirit is more plentifully afterwards communicate, then he brings Chriſt's words and works to rememberance, in ſuch a manner, as to tell us what he inended by ſuch a word and ſuch a work; what he ſaid and did at ſuch and ſuch a time.

Again, ſometimes he doth it a little before their death; he ſometimes has anointed them before their death with eye-ſalve, and let them ſee farther than ever they ſaw; as it was with old Jacob, when his natural eyes were dim, he ſaw Shiloh coming, to whom the gathering of the people ſhould be; he ſaw a little further then, I think, than he did either at Bethel or Peniel, and ſomething more concerning Chriſt was then explained to him than he knew before. Thus it was alſo with old Simeon before his death; he had got a believing ſight of Chriſt before, but now he got an arm-full of him, and a more ſenſible ſight than ever before: Now, letteſt thou thy ſervant depart in peace; for mine eyes have ſeen thy ſalvation. I have known ſome get very clear manifeſtations of Chriſt before their death.

In a word, ſometimes at death itſelf; though ſome of the Lord's ſervants and ſaints have died in much darkneſs, yet others have got Chriſt's doings explained at death, that have been hid from them all their days before. Death may make a breach among forty or fifty experiences, and bring them down to two or three perhaps. But death to ſome has multiplied their experiences, and made them go through the valley of the ſhadow of death, triumphing in God's everlaſting love. I read of Adolphus Clarebachius, who had been all his life-time kept under much bondage; when he became a martyr, and went to the ſtake to be burnt, he then ſaid, "I have "lived a moſt melancholy and dejected life till "this day; but now I believe there is not a "merrier heart in the world than mine." What the Lord did, by ordering his former dejection, he knew not, till now that it appeared the Lord's deſign, by his grievous and heavy life, was to be a lane and avenue to that glorious and joyful death. Some have gone through the dark trance between time and eternity with with more light and knowledge of the Lord's mind and works than ever they had. Jacob never had a brighter view of his old Bethel-visit than when he was upon his death-bed, and had all his children about him, and some of his childrens children: he now saw more clearly what God had done, and what he was further to bring out of the Bethel-promise, with reference to his numerous issue, and their future possession of the land of Canaan: and therefore he begins his dying words with what past between God and him at Bethel, Gen. xlviii. 3, 4. God Almighty appeared to me at Luz, in the land of Canaan, and blessed me; and said, Behold, I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee; and I will make of thee a multitude of people, and will give this land to thy seed after thee, for an everlasting possession. Then might he say, I had neither wife nor children; but now I see my children, and my childrens children; and I see what God is about to do with them: and so he propheſies of their future increase, and various circumstances and appearances they were to make in after-ages. Thus his Bethel-blessing was extended, and explained more clearly to him in his dying moments. What you met with, believer, in such a place, and what you have met with in Dunfermline, what he hath been doing at former occasions, or at this occasion, may be, you do not see through at present, perhaps the further explication of it is reserved for a death-bed feast unto you, when he shines upon his former words and works, and makes you sing of his salvation, and say, "O! I re-"member what he said to me in such a place, "and what he did to me at another. What he "designed by it was dark and unknown to "me, but now I see more of his mind; I see "he hath been as good as his word, and that "he hath done all things well." What I do, thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter, perhaps sooner or later, even before you go into eternity.

V. The fifth and last thing proposed was, To deduce some inferences for the application of the whole. Is it so, That the works of God, the doings of Christ Jesus, towards his people may be so dark and mysterious, hid and unknown, till afterwards he make them known? Hence,

1. See that we have great cause to be humble and sober: whatever the Lord hath been doing among us at this occasion, let us not think that we know all that he hath done, since he is saying, What I do, thou knowest not now. Let that great question humble us under a sense of our own ignorance, Job xi. 7. Canst thou by searching find out God? Canst thou find out the Almighty to perfection? It is higher than heaven, what canst thou do? Deeper than hell, what canst thou know? Think not you have learned your lesson perfectly; the greatest believers on earth are but scholars as long as they are in the body. Divine light shines gradually more and more to the perfect day of glory; therefore, whatever they see they need to see more clearly; whatever they are taught they need to be taught over again more perfectly: What a small portion of God do we know?

2. Hence see, what reason believers have to long for heaven, since clouds and darkness will never be altogether dispelled till the beatifical vision of God and of the Lamb. That city hath no need of the sun, nor of the moon to shine in it; for the glory of God doth enlighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. I saw no temple there; for the Lord God Almighty, and the Lamb, are the temple of it, Rev. xxi. 22, 23. It may be said of all the great works of God that at present he doth, What I do, thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter, when time shall discover it, even the Lord's time, the fit time; and even when that time hath made the discovery of what he was doing formerly, it may be also said of that discovery, What I do, thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter; when eternity shall discover it, and heaven make it manifest in another and more glorious manner; then all his dealings with his people will be conspicuous; and all his designs appear, that before were dark and mysterious.

3. Hence see, that the church and children of God, while in this world, must not think of being exempted from clouds and darkness, even when they have the Lord near to them; for, Clouds and darkness are round about him, Psal. xcvii. 2. And he makes the clouds his chariots wherein he rides towards his people. It is true, the clouds that surround him have sometimes a dark side, and sometimes a bright side; yet even at the brightest, it is but a cloud, wherein he appears, and they know not how far he is to ride upon it, how soon it will disappear, and what weather it prognosticates. The Lord designs to give his people, while here, a proof of his promised care, Isa. xlii. 16. In leading the blind in a way they know not, in paths they have not known: making darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. And hence they are mostly kept in the dark; sometimes about providences befalling the church, while heavy clouds hang over it; sometimes in the dark about duty relating to the cause of God, in the day wherein they live, and the word of his patience; sometimes in the dark about their state, and their assured interest in Christ; sometimes in the dark, as to comfort, when destitute of that necessary consolation their heavy case may require; sometimes in darkness about the word of God, when a vail is drawn over it; sometimes about the work of God, and what he is doing, when they cannot see his steps, nor hear his voice, nor read his mercy and loving kindness by reason of darkness.

4. Hence see, that the Lord's time of doing is not always his time of shewing what he doth. He takes his own time of working, and his own time of shewing his work. He may wash his disciples feet, and not let them understand what he is doing, till a more proper time, wherein he will shew the glory of his work which was hid. Hence prays the church, Psal. xc. 16. Let thy work appear unto thy servants, and thy glory unto their children. And his time of shewing himself and his work is ordinarily very surprizing and unexpected; may be, it is when their night is at the darkest, and their darkness at the blackest, then, according to his promise, To the upright there arises light in darkness, Psal. cxii. 4. He makes darkness light before them; When I sit in darkness, the Lord will be a light unto me.—Sometimes indeed he manifests his work to them, when they are longing and hoping: For he satisfies the longing soul, and fills the hungry with good things, Psal. cvii. 9.—And yet sometimes he doth it, when they have lost hope, as it were, and are least looking for it; For the needy shall not always be forgotten: the expectation of the poor poor ſhall not periſh for ever, Pſal. ix. 18. Intimating, that they may be forgotten for a long time, but they ſhall not always be forgotten; their hope and expectation may ſeem to periſh for a long time, but they ſhall not be forgotten for ever: when it is juſt at the periſhing, he pities poor periſhing hope.—Sometimes to ſhew his regard to holineſs and ſtrictneſs of walk, he makes his glory appear to them, when they are exerciſed in practical piety towards God and man. Hence, To the upright there ariſes light in darkneſs, Pſal. cxii. 4. And, He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me, ſhall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and manifeſt myſelf unto him, John xiv. 21, 22. And it is in this way we are to expect his coming to manifeſt himſelf and his work.—Yet ſometimes, to ſhew the ſovereignty of his grace, he manifeſts himſelf and his gracious work, when their religion is at a low ebb; their praying frame is gone; yea, and their backſlidings multiplied, and their rebellion increaſed; Iſa. xliii. 22. Thou haſt not called upon me, O Jacob; thou haſt been weary of me, O Iſrael; yet upon the back of the challenge, that he may melt their hearts with his ſurprizing grace, he ſays, ver. 25. I, even I am he that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſions for my name's ſake, and will not remember thy ſins. Iſa. lvii. 17, 18. For the iniquity of his covetouſneſs was I wroth, and ſmote him: I hid me, and was wroth, and he went on frowardly in the way of his heart. I have ſeen his ways, and will heal him: And I will lead him alſo, and reſtore comforts unto him, and to his mourners. Some think even this is the ſeaſon the text hath a relation to, What I am doing, by waſhing thy feet, thou knoweſt not now; but thou ſhalt know hereafter. When after thou haſt denied me thrice, I will give thee a look, and thou ſhalt go out, and weep bitterly. When, upon the crowing of the cock, thou ſhalt run away to a corner, and reflect upon thy grievous ſins, and my gracious look, then ſhalt thou, with a melting heart, ſee more into the myſtery of this waſhing. What I do, thou knoweſt not now; but thou ſhalt know hereafter. Again,

5. Hence ſee ground of enquiry, what the Lord hath been doing, and what you know thereof, and if it be hid and unknown to you or not.

[1.] Enquire what hath the Lord been doing, or what is he doing towards you at this occaſion; hath he been ſtooping down to waſh your feet?

QUEST. When may Chriſt be ſaid, in a ſpiritual ſenſe, to ſtoop down and waſh his diſciples feet?

ANSW. (1.) Then he may be ſaid to waſh their feet, when he ſhews them their foul feet. O Sirs, hath the Lord been ſhewing to you, by his convincing grace, what foul feet, what filthy affections you have, what a filthy heart, and what a filthy walk and converſation you have had? Hath he made the iniquity of your heels to compaſs you about? as it is, Pſal. xlix. 5. Hath he been making you ſay, with ſhame and ſorrow, Iniquities prevail againſt me? O wretched man that I am! How have I grieved his Spirit, and defiled my feet, by running into the mire? O was there ever ſuch foul feet as mine, that carried any to a communion-table?

(2.) Then he may be ſaid to waſh their feet, when he makes them dip their foul feet into the fountain of his blood, opened for ſin and for uncleanneſs. Hath he been ſhewing you the fountain of ſin and wickedneſs that is in you, and the fountain of cleanſing and purification that is in Jeſus; and making you, by faith, to run in to this fountain of the Lamb's blood, that cleanſeth from all ſin? If thus he hath ſprinkled his blood upon your heart and conſcience, and intimate peace and pardon in his blood, and made it precious to you, not only as pardoning, but alſo purifying blood, then he hath indeed been waſhing your feet.

(3.) Then he may be ſaid to waſh their feet, when he makes them, with the woman, Luke vii. 38. that ſtood behind him weeping, to waſh his feet with tears, and to wipe them with the hair of your head. Have you been admitted to ſuch nearneſs to him, that with humble boldneſs you have laid yourſelf down at his feet; the woman was aſhamed to look Chriſt in the face, but came behind him weeping? Have you been filled with holy humble ſhame, and confuſion of face before him becauſe of your ſinfulneſs, and in the view and apprehenſion of his being pacified towards you, Ezek. xvi. 63.

(4.) Then he may be ſaid to waſh their feet, when they are made to waſh their feet in the blood of his enemies; as it is ſaid of the righteous, He ſhall waſh his feet in the blood of the wicked, and rejoice when he ſees the vengeance, Pſal. lviii. 10.: ſo we may ſay of believers, when Chriſt is waſhing their feet, they deſire to ſee the heart-blood of their and his enemies, their unbelief, atheiſm, and all their luſts and idols: their joy would be to ſee the vengeance of God upon them; they are filled with holy revenge againſt them, 2 Cor. vii. 11. The reaſon of this being an evidence of his waſhing, is, becauſe, when he waſhes them, he doth it according to that promiſe, Ezek. xxxvi. 25. I will ſprinkle clean water on you, and you ſhall be clean: from all your filthineſs, and from all your idols will I cleanſe you. Now, hath he thus been waſhing your feet?

[2.] Inquire what you know, with reference to his work: if you know that he hath been waſhing you, this is more than ſimple waſhing; and in ſuch a caſe, he is ſaying to you in effect, What I do thou knoweſt, and thou ſhalt know more hereafter. It is one thing to be waſhen, another to be aſſured of it; and if he hath given you the aſſured knowledge of his work, ſurely ſomewhat of Peter's amazement will fill your heart, Lord, doſt thou waſh my feet? O Sirs, wonder, wonder men and angels, that the Lord of glory ſhould have ſtooped down ſo far below himſelf to ſuch a filthy worm as to waſh me in his blood! What ſhall I render to the Lord? Is this the manner of man? But this is not every one's allowance. O be thankful and humble; and whatever you know this way, remember you know but in part, and there is much more in what he doth than yet you know. There are other believers here, that perhaps know not all what Chriſt hath been doing with them; He hides his face, and they are troubled. They cannot ſay he hath been waſhing their feet, but rather wounding their hearts, and frowning upon them; ſtanding at a diſtance, and keeping them at the back of the door; the Comforter that ſhould relieve their ſouls being far away. Well, as the believer, that is clear, knows not how ſoon he may be under a cloud; ſo the believer that is under a cloud, knows not how ſoon the ſky may be cleared, and both theſe caſes may be paving the way for what is a-coming, when the Lord's deſign breaks out: therefore, whatever be the caſe, let this word be ſtill the conſideration, What I do, thou knoweſt not now; but thou ſhalt know hereafter. Therefore,

6. Hence

6. Hence let us see the duty of all, both saints and sinners in this great meeting of people. It yields special instruction to all the saints and children of God, whatever their case be, and whatever the Lord is doing, especially if his way be hid and unknown, dark and mysterious in any respect to them: and first to disciples.

(1.) It is your duty, O believer, to mark what the Lord is doing; to observe his stately steps and goings in the sanctuary, though they be very hid and unknown; yea, the rather that they are dark and mysterious, they are the more worthy to be known. It is a mark of the graceless, they consider not the operations of his hand. But whoso is wise, and will observe these things, even they shall understand the loving-kindness of the Lord. This observing comprehends a believing that the Lord is carrying on his work, though clouds hide him from our sight, and a passing a suitable judgment on what he is doing, construing all for the best; this is to consider wisely of his doing, Psal. lxiv. 9. Believing that all is good, and for the good of his people, we should consider his work, till we observe his loving-kindness therein. Therefore,

(2.) It is your duty never to judge harshly of his doings, however hid and unknown they may be; yea, however heavy and afflictive: will you measure God's love by outward dispensations, or even by inward desertion? Though, indeed, it becomes you to weep when the bridegroom is away, as well as to rejoice when he is present; yet measure not his love by his providence, but by his promise. It is the foolish child that thinks the mother hath cast him off every time she is out of sight, or has given him out of her arms; therefore, say not, when he hides himself, "Oh! his heart is "changed; his love is gone; all he did was "but a delusion; there is no hope; all is un-"done!" Whatever be his dealings, though you should not be able to give an account of them; yet what you cannot believe by knowing, you must know by believing: we must believe when we cannot know; wink at providences, and open our eyes to promises.

(3.) Do not quarrel and question what you do not know, but stoop down, and stand in awe; Be still, and know that he is God; and will act like himself; set not limits to the Holy One of Israel, by concluding that he will not come, because he comes not in the time and way that you imagine. Be afraid to think that you could manage otherwise, and do better than infinite wisdom sees fit to do. What abominable pride is that! O entertain high thoughts of him, whose ways are so high above your reach, that what he doth you know not: and if his works are so high above you, how high and unsearchable are his counsels; yet, O still remember, whatever clouds are, or may be in your sky, he hath established a firm connexion between black dispensations and fair promises.

(4.) If you would know more of what the Lord is doing, you must study to be practical Christians, and to walk in the fear of the Lord; for, The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, Psal. xxv. 14. The nearer you live to God, the more may you expect to know of his mind, and to be led by an unseen hand in a dark day; for, The meek will he guide in judgment; the meek will he teach his ways: study, therefore, to walk humbly with your God; and what he doth, though you know not now, you shall know hereafter.

(5.) Be not proud and lifted up; if you know more than others, and if he be using you as friends, according to John xv. 15. Henceforth I call you not servants, for the servant knows not what his Lord doth; but I have called you friends: for all that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you. And, lest you be exalted above measure, think not strange though he should order a thorn in the flesh for you, and a cross to keep you down; remember how formerly the cross hath born down your pride, restrained your predominant, and put you to your prayers, and sent you groaning to a God in Christ. Be not proud of what you know; for, though you be in higher favour than some of your neighbours, you know not what weather is coming, nor what storms may blow upon you, or upon the church of Christ; or whether this be your last communion.

(6.) If what he doth be dark and unknown to you now; O wait upon him who says, You shall know hereafter.—O wait upon him believingly: when his work is dark and hid to you, it is the proper season for faith to bud and bring forth; I will wait upon the Lord, that hides his face from the house of Jacob, Isa. viii. 7. Even when promised things look like improbable and impossible things; yet, having the firm word of God that cannot lye nor change, there you are to rest as anchored upon that immoveable rock, and ride out all storms of carnal reasonings and corrupt suggestions.—Wait upon him patiently; The Lord is a God of judgment, blessed are all they that wait for him. Psal. xl. 1, 2. I waited patiently upon the Lord, and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry. He brought me out of the horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings; and he put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God. Whatever be his dispensations, though he slay me, yet will I trust in him; whatever dark clouds appear, either in his work or his word. The poor woman of Canaan met with many discouraging things, even in her application to Christ: at first he answers her not a word; and when he speaks a word, the first thing he said, seemed to exclude her out of his commission; I am not sent, but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Alas! now might she say, I need pray no more, I am a cast-away! Nay, but she goes on, saying, Lord, help me: then he calls her a dog; yet still she waits, and then gets a merciful and marvellous hearing; O woman, great is thy faith, be it unto thee, even as thou wilt. Go on thus, believer: O incredulous believer, give him trust, and give him time, and he will clear all to you in the issue, though it should be through fire and water, that he brings you to the wealthy land. You have his promise sealed with his precious blood, and his solemn oath, that when you go through the fire and through the water, he will be with you, whether you discern him or not. You know not now what he doth or designs; you know not what deep steps are before you in point of trouble; but with his promise in your hand, you may say as it is, Psal. lxxi. 20. Thou which hast shewed me great and sore troubles, shalt quicken me again, and shall bring me up from the depths of the earth. Thou shalt increase my greatness, and comfort me on every side.—You know not what foul steps are before you in point of sin. Now I am washing thy feet, might Jesus say to Peter, but thou knowest not that this is but a dark specimen of another sort of washing you will very soon need;

For

For before the cock crow twice; you will deny me thrice, notwithſtanding your preſent reſolution, That though all men forſake me, yet wilt not thou. You know not now, that you will fearfully defile your feet, even after I have waſhen them. O wonderful Jeſus, that he ſhould waſh the feet he knows will be ſo ſoon in the puddle again! But whatever ſhould come about, though Satan, through his temptations, ſhould hurry you into the mire of ſin; yet beware of being hurried on the back of that into the depth of deſpair; for that is what the devil drives at, that he may make you affront both the law and the goſpel of God at once; that having tempted you to diſhonour his name, by breaking his commandments in the law, he may thereupon tempt you to diſcredit his grace, by deſpairing of any good from him by the promiſe of the goſpel: therefore, O believer, ſee the need of waiting and watching every moment, and the need of the Lord's waſhing and watering every moment, according to the promiſe, Iſa. xxvii. 3. I the Lord do keep it, I will water it every moment. Think not that one waſhing or watering now will do your buſineſs; though, through the Lord's ſhining upon you, you were in a heaven of joy and conſolation this moment, you know not but, through his hiding and withdrawing, you may be in a hell of ſin and ſorrow the next moment; and though our glorious Lord were waſhing your feet this moment, I cannot promiſe, but before the cock crow twice, your feet will be as dirty as ever they were: therefore, O wait and depend upon him for waſhing and watering you every moment.

O beware of ſecurity; for you never got ſo much of his grace and fulneſs one moment, as ſhall allow you liberty to ſlacken your dependence upon him the next. In this way of waiting upon him, though now you know not what he doth, Yet you ſhall know hereafter, and he will give you occaſion to ſee him bring his work, though it ſhould be through terrible ways, to an amiable iſſue, and give occaſion to ſay, as Pſal. lxvi. 5, 6. Come and ſee the works of the Lord; he is terrible in his doings towards the children of men; he turned the ſea into dry land, and there did we rejoice in him. He turned a ſea of tribulation into a dry land of conſolation; and ver. 16. Come and hear all ye that fear God, and I will tell what he hath done for my ſoul. What he doth now, by all the blinks and ſhowers, the viciſſitudes and changes, the ſtorms and calms of your caſe, the dark and myſterious ways he takes you through, he will come, ſoon or late, afterwards and explain to you, ſaying, as it is Pſal. lxxxi. 7. Thou calledſt in trouble, and I delivered thee; I anſwered thee in the ſecret place of thunder; I proved thee at the waters of Meribah. Iſa. xlv. 5. I girded thee, though thou didſt not know me. What I do, thou knoweſt not now; it may take ſome days or years to explain what he now doth: however little or much you know; perhaps a day of approaching trial will make you know more; a day of death may make you know it better; but the day of glory beſt of all. You ſhall know hereafter, believer, partly on earth, and perfectly in heaven; graciouſly in time, and glorioufly through eternity.

I ſhall now conclude with a word to enemies, to ſinners, that are yet utter ſtrangers to our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. O ye that are deſpiſers of the Lord of glory, though he hath been ſet forth evidently crucified before you at this occaſion, What ſhall I ſay to you? May not I tell thee, O ſinner, how this text may be applied to you? Chriſt is ſaying even to thee, What I do, thou knoweſt not now; but thou ſhalt know hereafter. He hath been doing ſomething before your eyes, at this occaſion, and you know it not; yea, he hath been doing ſomething to you that you do not know and conſider; though he hath not been waſhing your feet, yet he hath been offering to waſh you, and not your feet only, but your head and hands; for the believer that is waſhed already by regenerating grace, needeth not, ſave to waſh his feet; but you need that your head and heart be waſhen, as well as your hands and feet. You need to be waſhen from the filthineſs of your ſtate, as well as from the filthineſs of your ways: but whatever waſhing you need, he hath been offering it, and himſelf to be the doer of it, ſaying, If I waſh thee not, thou haſt no part in me. And to this moment he is offering himſelf to you, ſaying, Wilt thou be made clean? wilt thou let me waſh thy heart, and hands, and feet? No, no, ſays unbelief; thou ſhalt never waſh my feet, it is too much for Chriſt the Son of God to do; I will waſh myſelf, and repent and turn religious againſt ſome other time; for the preſent, I am otherwiſe taken up. Will you reſolve to put no employment in Chriſt's hand? Is that the way you treat his kindly offer, when he opens the door of mercy to you, and calls you by this miniſter and that miniſter, and the other miniſter, all telling you, that you ſhall be welcome for all your ſins, and ſaying, Him that cometh, I will in no wiſe caſt out? Be who you will, young or old ſinner, behold the humble Jeſus makes the moſt condeſcending offer to you, that ever men or angels heard. O filthy ſinner, will you let me waſh you; For, if I waſh you not, you have no part in me, nor ever ſhall?

If you are ſo wedded to your filthy luſts, that you are not willing to be waſhen from them, I muſt tell you, that you know not what you are doing, and know not what Chriſt is doing; but you ſhall know hereafter, either in a way of wrath, to your great confuſion; or in a way of mercy, to your deep remorſe.

1. What he doth by this offer to waſh you, you ſhall know hereafter to your confuſion. Perhaps, when you are gaſping for breath upon a death-bed, and conſcience awaking, ſhall begin to ſay, O many a ſweet offer of Chriſt and mercy did I get, and ſlighted, and this amongſt the reſt, when he offered to waſh my feet, and I refuſed and rejected his offer! You ſhall know hereafter, when you ſhall hear the awful doom paſs againſt you, Depart from me, ye curſed, into everlaſting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels; and when, with weeping and gnaſhing of teeth, you ſhall ſee Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, apoſtles, and followers of the Lamb in the kingdom of heaven, and yourſelf ſhut out; and when thou ſhalt think and ſay, "O vile wretch that I was, I "might have been yonder in glory; but I was "taken up with the vain world, and my vile "luſts, and was unwilling to be waſhen from "them, and now I muſt be lodged in hell a-"mong devils and damned reprobates for ever." Oh! think upon this before it be too late!

2. If mercy prevent you after this refuſal: What he now doth, you ſhall know hereafter to your bitter remorſe. If ever the Lord have mercy on you, you, and manifeſt himſelf to you, oh! how will it go like a ſword to your heart, and pierce you to the quick, when he ſhall ſay, I am Joſeph, your brother, whom you ſold into Egypt! I am Jeſus, your Saviour, whom you ſlighted! I am he whoſe cries you contemned, and whoſe kind offers you diſregarded: when I offered to waſh your feet, you lifted up your heel againſt me; and now, How ſhall I put thee among the children? How ſhall I deliver thee, that haſt ſo undervalued my kindneſs, and trampled on my blood, wherein I offered to waſh you? What a knell will this be to your heart, if he have mercy upon you afterwards: and, O that the bitter remorſe were begun in your boſom this moment, with a wo is me that I have ſlighted ſuch an offer ſo long. O! is he ſaying to the vileſt ſinner in this company, Come and let me waſh you! O then, were your heart ſaying, Lord, come, and welcome! O come and waſh my conſcience from the guilt, and my heart from the filth of ſin; it were good. Are you cordially willing, and preſently willing, and univerſally willing to be waſhen in his blood from all your filthineſs, and from all your idols? Why then? I hope he is doing ſomething upon your heart and will, which, though now you cannot underſtand, he will explain mercifully in due time; for it is his own promiſe: What I do, thou knoweſt not now; but thou ſhalt know hereafter.

SERMON LXXV.

The GREAT TRUMPET of the Everlaſting Goſpel. *

ISAIAH xxvii. 13.

And it ſhall come to paſs in that day, that the great trumpet ſhall be blown, and they ſhall come which were ready to periſh in the land of Aſſyria, and the outcaſts in the land of Egypt, and ſhall worſhip the Lord in the holy mount at Jeruſalem.

MY friends, it is only the trumpet of common providence that hath, perhaps, gathered you together to this place, you hearing the news go through the country, that the ſacramental feaſt was to be kept here, and ſo you have come along with the reſt; but it is the great trumpet of ſpecial powerful grace that can gather periſhing ſinners together to Chriſt, and make them come to him for life and ſalvation, liberty and redemption from their ſpiritual captivity. And, O may the ſound of this trumpet be ſo heard, as many may come to Jeſus at this occaſion, that they may worſhip the Lord ſpiritually in his holy mountain!

Theſe words are to be conſidered, firſt in their literal, and then in their typical and ſpiritual meaning, in order to deduce a ſuitable doctrine from them.

1*ſt*, As to the literal import of the words, they relate to the church of Iſrael that was ſcattered, their being gathered together and brought back to Jeruſalem. Though the body of the people was abandoned as a people of no underſtanding, ver. 11.; yet mercy was laid up in ſtore for ſome that were to be gathered as the ſheep of the flock, when the ſhepherds (the rulers in church and ſtate) that ſcattered them ſhould be reckoned with; Thus ſaith the Lord God, Behold, I am againſt the ſhepherds, and I will require my flock at their hand, and cauſe them to ceaſe from feeding the flock; neither ſhall the ſhepherds feed themſelves any more; for I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them. For thus ſaith the Lord God, Behold, I, even I, will both ſearch my ſheep, and ſeek them out. As a ſhepherd ſeeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his ſheep that are ſcattered; ſo will I ſeek out my ſheep, and will deliver them out of all places where they have been ſcattered in the cloudy and dark day, Ezek. xxxiv. 10,—12. Now, concerning theſe ſcattered Iſraelites you may obſerve theſe particulars.

1. From what place they were to be brought and gathered. We are told, the Lord ſhould beat them off; that is, as fruit from a tree, which is carefully gathered for the uſe of men; and he ſhould beat them off from the channel of the river to the ſtream of Egypt; that is, from the river Euphrates to the river Nilus, which were the two borders of the land of promiſe. All the Iſraelites left in the land are here oppoſed to theſe of them that are diſperſed into foreign parts, ſuch as Aſſyria and Egypt: he ſhall find out his ſcattered people, and ſeparate them from theſe with whom they ſeem to be incorporated; theſe that were driven to the land of Aſſyria, ready to periſh for want of neceſſaries, and ready to deſpair of deliverance; and theſe that were outcaſts in the land of Egypt, whither many of theſe that were left behind, after the captivity into Babylon, went, contrary to God's expreſs command, Jer. xliii. 6, 7. and there lived as outcaſts.

2. In what manner they were to be gathered; ver. 12. Ye ſhall be gathered one by one, O ye children of Iſrael; pointing out either the ſmalneſs of the remnant of that numerous people, or rather God's exact and ſingular care of them, that not one of them ſhould be loſt. As God had mercy in ſtore for periſhing outcaſts, and will make it appear that, though they are caſt out, they are not caſt off; ſo he takes particular care of gathering them one by one; not in multitudes, but firſt one, as it were, and then another. This, indeed, is the way of God's gathering his elect remnant: for ordinary they are but few; And of Zion it is ſaid, This man and that man is born there.

3. By what means they ſhall be gathered, The great trumpet ſhall be blown; that is, by the proclamation of liberty by king Cyrus to the captives, which awakened the Jews, that were asleep in their thraldom, to beſtir themſelves and return to Jeruſalem and their own land; of which proclamation you read, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 22, 23. Ezra i. 2, 3, 4. This was like the ſounding of the jubilee-trumpet, which publiſhed the year of releaſe: thus God was to ſummon them, as it were, by the ſound of a trumpet from the remoteſt parts of the earth, by an eminent call or act of his providence in their behalf; and particularly from Aſſyria, where the ten tribes were carried captive; and from Egypt, where many of the Jews were.

* This ſermon was preached at Abernethy, upon Saturday, July 24th, 1736. Being the preparation-day before the adminiſtration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper. It hath been three times printed.

4. For what end they ſhould be gathered, namely, To worſhip the Lord in the holy mountain at Jeruſalem. Though the holy temple was in ruins, yet they had the holy mount, the place of the altar, Gen. xiii. 4. Liberty to worſhip God in his inſtituted ordinances is a moſt valuable and deſirable liberty.

2*dly*, As to the typical and ſpiritual meaning of theſe words. That they have a further view than what I have yet mentioned, will appear, if you conſider, that as king Cyrus was an eminent type of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; ſo the deliverance of Iſrael from the Babyloniſh captivity and Egyptian thraldom, by his means, was eminently typical of the redemption to be wrought for ſinners through Jeſus Chriſt, from their ſpiritual bondage. To this purpoſe you may read, Iſa. xliv. 28. and xlv. 1,—4. In all this Cyrus was a type of Chriſt, who was made victorious over principalities and powers, and intruſted with unſearchable riches, for the uſe and benefit of God's ſervants his elect. When he aſcended on high, he led captivity captive, taking theſe captives who had taken others captive, and opened the priſon to them that were bound.

Again, Cyrus's proclamation of liberty to the captive Iſraelites, which was here propheſied of, more than a hundred years before it came to paſs, is compared to the blowing of a great trumpet, in alluſion plainly to the ſilver trumpets which the prieſts were to uſe, Num. x. 2. for aſſembling the Iſraelites: which ſignified how the miniſters of Chriſt ſhould lift up their voice like a trumpet, to ſhew people their ſins, Iſa. lviii. 1.; and to call them home to Chriſt out of their captive ſtate. To the ſame purpoſe, Lev. xxiii. 23. we read of the feaſt of trumpets; a memorial of the blowing of trumpets on the firſt day of the ſeventh month, the beginning of the year of jubilee. This was typical of the preaching of the goſpel; and, in alluſion to this, they are ſaid to be bleſſed that hear the joyful ſound, Pſal. lxxxix. 15.; that are invited to come to Chriſt, and to wait upon God in his public inſtituted ordinances. Mount Zion alſo here mentioned being an eminent type of the goſpel-church, this text is not only applicable to the preaching of the goſpel of Chriſt, for gathering ſinners to him; but the typical and ſpiritual ſenſe of it is a prophetical declaration and promiſe of the converſion of the nations to the faith of Chriſt, by the blowing of the ſilver trumpet of the everlaſting goſpel.

Here then in the words you have theſe four things repreſented to you.

1. The ſad and miſerable caſe of ſinners by nature, they are outcaſts, ready to periſh, under their ſpiritual captivity to ſin, and Satan, and the wrath of God.

2. The relief provided and proclaimed in their ears, by the great trumpet of the goſpel, which proclaims the acceptable year of the Lord, the year of liberty to periſhing captives; The great trumpet ſhall be blown.

3. The power and efficacy of this relief, thus proclaimed by ſound of trumpet, for determining all the choſen Iſrael of God, to betake themſelves to the city of refuge; They ſhall come; the goſpel of Chriſt ſhall be the power of God to their ſalvation: they ſhall come to Chriſt.

4. The end and deſign of their coming to Chriſt, namely, that they may ſerve and worſhip the Lord in his holy mount, and that they may have fellowſhip and communion with God in Chriſt; and, being accepted in the Beloved, may offer acceptable ſervice to him in his holy place.

Paſſing many doctrines that may be drawn from the words, I ſhall, as the Lord may aſſiſt, ſpeak to this only.

OBSERV. That as it is the duty of periſhing ſinners, who hear the goſpel, to come to God in Chriſt, as the only Saviour and glorious object of worſhip; ſo it is an encouraging promiſe, that when the great trumpet of the goſpel is blown, a number of outcaſt ſinners, ready to periſh, ſhall come, and ſhall worſhip and ſerve him acceptably in his holy mount.

I might, at conſiderable length, prove every branch of this doctrine.

1. That it is the duty of periſhing ſinners to come to Chriſt the Saviour: this is plain from all the calls of the goſpel; Whoſoever will, let him take the water of life freely, Rev. xxii. 17. Ho, every one that thirſteth, come ye to the waters, Iſa. lv. 1. Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you reſt, Matth. xi. 28.

2. That they ought to come to him as God the Saviour, and God the glorious object of worſhip, by whom we are to worſhip God, and whom we are to worſhip as God; Iſa. xlv. 22. Look to me, and be ſaved, all the ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none elſe. John v. 23. All men muſt honour the Son, even as they honour the Father; who therefore ſays, This is my beloved Son, hear ye him.

3. That it is the great trumpet of the goſpel that is the means for gathering ſinners to Chriſt, is plain, Rom. x. 17. Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. For this end a goſpel-miniſtry is given, Eph. iv. 12.; and therefore miniſters are called to preach the goſpel to every creature, Mark xvi. 15.

4. That a number of ſinners, ready to periſh, ſhall come at the blowing of this trumpet, and that it ſhall be powerful and effectual for bringing them, is alſo plain; for, Rom. i. 16. the goſpel is the power of God to their ſalvation: for therein is the righteouſneſs of God revealed from faith to faith. The election ſhall obtain. And as many as were ordained to eternal life ſhall believe, Rom. xi. 7. Acts xvii. 48. His people ſhall be willing in the day of his power, Pſal. cx. 3.

5. That, being thus brought back to God in Chriſt, they ſhall worſhip him acceptably in his holy mount, is alſo plain from theſe and the like promiſes, Pſal. xxii. 27. All the ends of the earth ſhall remember and turn to the Lord; and all the kindreds of the nations ſhall worſhip before thee: for the kingdom is the Lord's, and he is the governor among the nations. Pſal. lxxxvi. 9. All nations whom thou haſt made ſhall come and worſhip before thee, O Lord; and ſhall glorify thy name. They will worſhip towards his his holy temple, Pſal. cxxxviii. 2. Hence ſays David, Pſal. li. 18, 19. Do good in thy good pleaſure to Zion; build thou the walls of Jeruſalem. Then ſhalt thou be pleaſed with the ſacrifices of righteouſneſs, with burnt offerings, and whole burnt-offerings; then ſhall they offer bullocks upon thine altar. When he ſends forth his light and truth, then he brings them to his holy hill and to his tabernacle; and then do they come to the altar of God, to God their exceeding joy, Pſal. xliii. 3, 4.: then they ſhall worſhip a God in Chriſt acceptably and joyfully, Iſa. lvi. 6, 7.

Thus you may ſee the doctrine plain in every branch of it: That as it is the duty of periſhing ſinners, that hear the goſpel, to come to God in Chriſt, as the only Saviour and glorious object of worſhip; ſo it is an encouraging promiſe, that, when the great trumpet of the goſpel is blown, a number of outcaſt ſinners, ready to periſh, ſhall come, and ſhall worſhip and ſerve him acceptably in his holy mount.

The method wherein I would ſpeak to it, as the Lord may aſſiſt, is the following.

I. To conſider a little the ſtate and condition of ſinners by nature, as outcaſts, ready to periſh.

II. The duty of ſinners to come to Chriſt as the Saviour, the great Lord-deliverer, and glorious object of worſhip.

III. Speak of the means by which the Lord gathers theſe ſinners thus to him, namely, the blowing of the great goſpel-trumpet.

IV. Touch at the efficacy of theſe means, and ſhew why it is promiſed they ſhall come.

V. Speak of the end for which they ſhall come, their worſhipping him in his holy mountain.

VI. Deduce ſome inferences for the application of the whole.

I. We are to touch a little at the ſad ſtate and circumſtance of ſinners by nature. Now, there are two words here, by which, O ſinner, your natural ſad ſtate is repreſented; 1. As outcaſts, or ſinners caſt out. 2. As ſinners ready to periſh.

1. We are outcaſts, as Iſrael in Egypt were deſigned: and this is the name ſeveral times given to ſinners in ſcripture, in alluſion to the outcaſt Iſraelites; Pſal. cxlvii. 2. The Lord ſhall build up Jeruſalem, the Lord gathereth in the outcaſts of Iſrael. Iſa. xi. 12. He ſhall ſet up an enſign for the nations; he ſhall aſſemble the outcaſts of Iſrael from the four corners of the earth. The Lord ſeems to glory in this name of gathering outcaſts; for I find him again taking it to himſelf, Iſa. lvi. 8. The Lord, which gathers the outcaſts of Iſrael, ſaith, Yet will I gather others to him, beſides theſe that are gathered to him. Now, if you enquire in what reſpect ſinners are outcaſts, (the conſideration of this is neceſſary, in order to your coming to Chriſt, when the goſpel-trumpet is blown in your ears; for, you will not prize the proclamation of mercy, if you do not ſee what a miſerable outcaſt ſtate you are in,) know then, O ſinner, that by your ſin and fall in the firſt Adam, you are caſt out of God's favour and fellowſhip, being an alien from the commonwealth of Iſrael, and a ſtranger to the covenant of promiſe, having no hope, and without God in the world, Eph. ii. 12. Like the wretched infant, Ezek. xvi. 5. caſt out into the open field, to the lothing of thy perſon in the day that thou waſt born; having no eye to pity, or have compaſſion upon thee. O ſinners, you are ſuch outcaſts, that not only have you caſt out yourſelves, by ſin in Adam, and in your own perſon, by original and actual ſin, but you are caſt out by the juſtice of God, executing the law-ſentence againſt you. You are under the curſe of the law, Gal. iii. 10. Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them. You are not only under the ſentence of the law, the ſentence of condemnation, but the ſentence is partly executed; the ſentence is, Thou ſhalt die, thou ſhalt ſurely die, Gen. ii. 17. And behold, thou art dead, thou art ſurely dead in ſins and treſpaſſes. The ſentence is paſſed on thee, thou art legally dead; the ſentence is executed in thee, thou art ſpiritually dead: Being legally dead, thou art condemned already; and, being ſpiritually dead, the ſentence of condemnation is partly executed already; and there is nothing but the ſmall hair of a mortal life between thee and the full execution of that ſentence in thy eternal death.—Thus you are caſt out of God's preſence, caſt out of his vineyard; not only ſet out, or gone out, but, by virtue of the law-wrath you are under, caſt out like a dead dog caſt over the wall of a city; For without are dogs, Rev. xxii. 15.

In a word, O ſinner, you are caſt out to the devil, and led captive by him at his pleaſure. The devil hath poſſeſſion of you, he works in the heart of the children of diſobedience. The devil is your god; for he is the god of this world, that blindeth your minds that believe not, 2 Cor. iv. 4.

In theſe, and the like reſpects, you are outcaſts, caſt out of God's houſe, and caſt out to the devil; caſt out into the mire, and wallowing in the mire of ſin and luſts; poor, vile, and miſerable outcaſts.

2. You are ready to periſh in your outcaſt ſtate, on the very brink of periſhing for ever, if mercy interpoſe not; ready to die both the firſt and ſecond death. Ready to die the firſt death; for your life is but a ſpan, and the half of it is paſt already, and perhaps much more. Pray, where are your grandfather and grandmother? Yea, may we not ſay to ſome here, Where are your fathers and mothers? Is not their time paſt, and their acquaintance, whom you and your neighbours knew? Is it not juſt a dream to think on the days of old? Are they not all gone like a ſhadow, and the place where they were knows them no more? Like a bird that flies through the air, leaving no veſtige behind it; or like a ſhip that cuts out its way in the ſea, and immediately the water cloſes up behind it, and the place is not known through which it went. Is not your life periſhing in that ſame manner? And you cannot promiſe upon another year, nay, nor upon another month, nay, not upon another week, nay, not upon another day, nay, nor upon another hour, nay, not upon another minute, another moment.—You are ready to periſh in your outcaſt ſtate, ready to die; and, if you die in it, then you die for ever.

You are ready to die the ſecond death, which you have deſcribed, Rev. xxi. 8. But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and ſorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, ſhall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimſtone, which is the ſecond death. You have it deſcribed alſo, 2 Theſſ. i. 8. where it is ſaid, Chriſt will come in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the goſpel; who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting deſtruction from the preſence of the Lord, and the glory of his power; or, by his powerful and wrathful preſence, ſence, which they ſhall for ever have; and by being baniſhed from his gracious and glorious preſence which they ſhall for ever want: for, as heaven is a being for ever with the Lord; ſo hell is a being for ever without him. The wicked may think it an eaſy puniſhment to be without God now, while they know not his infinite excellency; but beſide the puniſhment of ſenſe, and ſenſible pain for ever, the puniſhment of loſs will be found to be dreadful. Hunger puts no poſitive torment or pain upon a man; yet his ſuffering, through hunger, may be very great, when he can get nothing to eaſe it: now, the nature of perfection is ſuch, that whatever rational creature apprehends it, cannot but deſire union with it, and be pained for the want of it. Now, if once God had unmaſked his infinite glory and excellency (for there is no atheiſt in hell) they will ſee what infinite excellencies they are deprived the enjoyment of. What unexpreſſible uneaſineſs and torment will it be, to be under a neceſſity of deſiring that happineſs which can never be granted! A man may be deeply in love with a mortal, a piece of clay which God hath painted amiable and lovely in his ſight, and that mortal perhaps ſlight his addreſſes, and he may ſuffer ſuch torment by his being ſlighted as may pine him away to death: and if one bit of clay deſired, and not granted, be ſo tormenting and uneaſy to bear, let none have ſlight and light thoughts of the pain of loſs that theſe will ſuſtain, who are ſecluded the preſence of the Lord, and his infinite beauty and excellency. Here then is the ſecond death; God's everlaſting wrathful preſence, and privation of his glorious preſence for ever.——Thus you are ready to periſh: O diſmal caſe! ready for hell, prepared for it, and ready every moment to be thrown into that place of perdition!

II. The ſecond thing propoſed was, To ſpeak a little of the duty of outcaſt ſinners, ready to periſh; and that is, to come to Jeſus; to come back to God, by this new and living way, that they periſh not in their outcaſt ſtate and miſerable condition. I ſhall here conſider a little what this coming imports, and in what capacity they are to come to him.

1. This coming to Chriſt, or to God in him, as it ſuppoſes that natural, outcaſt, periſhing ſtate and condition, which is a ſtate of diſtance from God; and a ſenſe or conviction of this diſtant and diſmal ſtate, ſeeing the firſt ſtep in God's way, is to ſee ourſelves intirely out of the way, and that the devil and our luſts are driving us to hell: ſo it ſuppoſes, indeed, a drawing power of divine grace, making the ſoul willing to be ſaved in a way of free grace, both from ſin and wrath, through the righteouſneſs of Jeſus Chriſt. It ſuppoſes one's hearing of the way of relief to be had in Jeſus Chriſt, and a weighty errand that brings the ſoul to Jeſus. Being ſenſible of blindneſs, he comes for light; being ſenſible of guilt, and under fear of wrath, he comes for juſtification and reconciliation with God; being ſenſible of the power of ſin, and hell of corruption within him, he comes for ſanctification and freedom from theſe maſſy chains of hell; being weak, they come for ſtrength; being weary, they come for reſt; being naked, they come for clothing; being deſtitute of all good, they come for ſupply of all in him, who is all in all. And hence,

More particularly, this coming imports a knowledge of the perſon to whom we come; for there is a ſeeing of the Son neceſſary to believing in him, John vi. 40. By the light of heaven the comer is made to ſee his abſolute need of Chriſt, and the glorious excellency and ſuitableneſs of Chriſt. A man's coming to any place, ſuppoſes his knowledge where he is going.—It imports ſpiritual life and motion, without which none can come or go any where in a ſpiritual ſenſe; no more than there can be any coming in a natural ſenſe without natural life and motion. In the day of coming to Chriſt, the ſoul is quickened by the ſpirit of life, by the ſpirit of faith; and quickened to a lively hope: for this coming imports a hope of coming ſpeed, at leaſt a may-be the merciful king of Iſrael will pity me. A poor man will not come for an alms to any perſon that he thinks hath nothing to give him: the believing comer is perſuaded there is fulneſs enough in Chriſt; fulneſs of virtue, in his blood; fulneſs of merit, in his death; fulneſs of power, in his arm.—And hereupon chiefly this coming imports a reſolute outgoing of ſoul after Chriſt, as offered in the goſpel; an actual cloſing with him, by a practical aſſent of the underſtanding, a pleaſant conſent of the will, and a vigorous egreſs of the affection towards the Son of God. Seeing an abſolute need, he ventures on an offered Chriſt for wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption, 1 Cor. i. 30.—— But this leads to the next thing here to be conſidered, for I muſt not inlarge.

2. In what capacity we are to come. We are to come to him in a twofold capacity. 1. It is to him as the Lord Redeemer. 2. As the LORD, the glorious object of worſhip: They ſhall come and worſhip.

(1.) It is to Chriſt as the Lord and Saviour, Redeemer and Deliverer. Chriſt ſtands as a Saviour upon mount Zion, inviting all ſorts of ſinners to come to him; old ſinners, young ſinners, great ſinners, groſs ſinners, the vileſt and blackeſt outcaſts, to come and get ſalvation: for it is his name to ſave; it is his nature, his delight, his office to ſave. We are to come as captives to a Redeemer, ready to deliver thoſe who are ready to periſh in their captivity to ſin, Satan, juſtice, death, and hell: and hence his voice is, Turn to your ſtrong hold, ye priſoners of hope: come to me outcaſt ſinners, ready to periſh; here am I ready to ſave.

(2.) It is to Chriſt as the LORD JEHOVAH, the glorious object of worſhip. This, I think, is alſo imported in the words, They ſhall come and worſhip in his holy mount at Jeruſalem. Before men come to Jeſus Chriſt, from their ſpiritual captivity, they are worſhipping and ſerving the devil and their luſts; but, whenever they come to Jeſus, they both worſhip him, and worſhip God in him; He is thy Lord, worſhip thou him, Pſal. xlv. 11. When they ſaw him, they worſhipped him, Mat. xxviii. 17. And then, and not till then, do they worſhip God acceptably, when they worſhip God in the Spirit, and by the Spirit of Chriſt; and worſhip the Father, in the Son, by the Spirit: for the Spirit is the way to Chriſt, He ſhall teſtify of me; and Chriſt the way to the Father, No man cometh to the Father but by me. Faith, in coming to Chriſt, takes him up both as God, the great JEHOVAH, the glorious object of worſhip; and as the CHRIST of God, the way to God: becauſe he is both God and man; IMMANUEL, God with us. Thus he is both the end and the way; and ſo both the the glorious object of worship, and the person in whom our worship is acceptable: They shall worship the Lord in the holy mount. — But of this more afterward.

III. The third thing proposed was, To speak of the means by which the Lord gathers outcast sinners, ready to perish, and makes them come to him and worship him, namely, by the blowing of the great GOSPEL-TRUMPET: The great trumpet shall be blown, and they shall come. This, as I have already shewed, is the preaching of gospel of Christ, and the proclamation of the grace of God therein to poor outcast perishing sinners.

That I may speak a little of this the more distinctly, I shall shew, 1. Why the preaching of the gospel is compared to the sounding or blowing of a trumpet. 2. Why it may be called a great trumpet. 3. What sort of a sound this great trumpet makes; or what the meaning of it is, as to the contents of the proclamation made by it. 4. The quality of the sound when blown.

1st, Why the preaching of the gospel is compared to the blowing of a trumpet. I design not to stretch the metaphor beyond the design of the thing: I shall only mention these two or three particulars.

1. A trumpet is a royal and majestic sort of an instrument, and hence usually kings of the earth are crowned and proclaimed by their heralds with sound of trumpet: so the gospel is the royal and majestic trumpet of the great King of kings, and therein he discovers his glory and his majesty, when he rides prosperously on the word of truth, meekness, and righteousness, Psal. xlv. 3, 4. Therein is Christ proclaimed king of Zion, and the royalties of his grace published.

2. A trumpet is a high and loud sounding instrument, and the sound of it heard at a considerable distance. Such a trumpet is the gospel; and therefore it is said of the heralds of the great King, that preached the gospel, Their sound went into all the earth, and their words into the ends of the world, Rom. x. 18. It is the loud voice of the Son of God by his ambassadors; and it is to be heard through all the earth before the end of time: The gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come, Mat. xxiv. 14.

3. A trumpet is a martial, warlike instrument, and usually blown to proclaim peace or war: and thus the gospel is a proclamation of peace with God, and war with the devil. The first sound that ever this trumpet made was a sound of peace and war both: war with the devil, the destroyer of mankind; The seed of the woman shall bruise the head of the serpent: and peace on earth, upon this ground, because the God of peace was, in this way, to bruise Satan under our feet. The gospel is the great instrument, many ways useful in directing in the holy war.—Sometimes it is to sound a gathering, a gathering of the people to Shiloh; the rendezvouse under the standard of the Captain of salvation, calling all to come to him, and inlist with him.—Sometimes to blow an alarm; When ye blow an alarm, the camp shall go forward, and take their journey, Numb. x. 5, 6.—Sometimes to sound a march, to go forward to the battle against the enemy, in his name and strength, of whom it is said, Psal. lxviii. 7, 11, 12. He went forth before the people; he marched through the wilderness. The Lord gave the word; great was the company of these that published it: kings of great armies did fly apace. It never sounds a retreat, nor a sist from war, except in so far as he himself sees fit to spare his enemies alive for necessary uses towards his people, saying, Slay them not, lest my people forget. But when they fight the good fight of faith, and fight lawfully and successfully, the trumpet sounds the victory and the triumph; Thanks be to God, which always causes us to triumph in Christ, 2 Cor. ii. 14. We are more than conquerors, through him that loved us, Rom. viii. 37. O death! where is thy sting? O grave! where is victory? 1 Cor. xv. 55. To him that overcometh will I give to sit with me on my throne, even as I overcame, and am set down with the Father on his throne, Rev. iii. 21.

4. The blowing of a trumpet requires life, breath, and wisdom also: even so, in order to the blowing of the gospel-trumpet, the spirit of life is necessary, and the breathing of the spirit of life. They who are not quickened by the Spirit of Christ, and do not enjoy the breathing of the Spirit of Christ, cannot blow the gospel-trumpet to any good purpose, at least, they are not God's ordinary instruments of quickening others: but, who is sufficient for these things? Not that we are sufficient of ourselves, to think any thing as of ourselves; but our sufficiency is of God, who hath made us able ministers of the new testament, not of the letter but of the spirit; for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life, 2 Cor. iii. 5, 6. The gospel-trumpet will do little service, if the Spirit of God be not the breath that blows it. A great trumpet requires great breath; and therefore, O Sirs, look to heaven for the great breathing of the Spirit to accompany the gospel. Yea, the blowing of the trumpet requires wisdom and skill; one may have both life and breath, and yet want skill to blow a trumpet: even so, much spiritual wisdom is requisite in blowing the gospel-trumpet, that we handle not the word of God deceitfully; that we blow not a false alarm or a false peace; that we give not an uncertain sound; for, as the apostle says, 1 Cor. xiv. 8. If the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle? If it be not precious truth, and pure gospel that is preached, we are not to regard it, though the trumpet were blown by the mouth of an angel; If we or an angel from heaven preach another gospel, let him be accursed, Gal. i. 6.

2dly, I am here to enquire, why the gospel may be called a great trumpet. This I shall dispatch in a few words.

1. It is a great trumpet, because it is the trumpet of the great God, and of the great King, the great Saviour; for so our Lord Jesus is called, Isa. xix. 20. They shall cry unto the Lord, because of the oppressors; and he shall send them a Saviour and a great One, and he shall deliver them. O how great is this man, this God-man! Great in his person, being the brightness of the Father's glory, and the express image of his person; the Prince of the kings of the earth: great in his offices: a great Prophet, a great High-priest, a great King: great in his relations, great in his names; great in his promises; great in his purchase; great in his victories; great in his fulness; having all the fulness of the Godhead in him.——It is the trumpet of the great King.

2. It is the trumpet of a great salvation: Heb. ii. 3. How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation, published by the gospel-trumpet? The great Saviour comes with a commission under the great seal of heaven; For him hath God the Father sealed. And he comes upon a great design, the salvation of great sinners, in such a way as the ultimate end thereof is the glory of God's great perfections, and the praise of his grace. It is salvation from the greatest moral evil, namely, sin; and salvation from the greatest penal evil, from the wrath to come, that is proclaimed by this trumpet.

3. It is a great trumpet, in opposition to all other earthly trumpets, that are but little emblems of this great one. What are the trumpets of earthly kings and conquerors, when laid in the balance with the gospel-trumpet, sounding the triumph of our glorious Conqueror, and saying, Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? This that is glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of his strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save? Isa. lxiii. 1.

4. It is a great trumpet, in respect of the great consequence of the sounding and blowing of it: for, as the gospel is called the everlasting gospel; so everlasting life, or everlasting death will be the consequence of your hearing thereof: To some we are the savour of death unto death, and to others the savour of life unto life, 2 Cor. ii. 16. Not that the gospel brings a sound of death and damnation to any of itself; no, by no means; it is a word of salvation to sinners: but when this joyful sound is slighted by final unbelief and impenitency, then it brings the greatest ruin and perdition. See and read, to this purpose, Heb. x. 28, 29. and xii. 25. To slight the sound of this great trumpet, then, brings the greatest damnation, the hottest hell; but in itself it is a merciful sound. Therefore,

3*dly*, I am here to consider what sort of a sound this great trumpet brings, and what sort of a proclamation is made by it. In general, When this great trumpet is blown, it gives a sound of grace and mercy to poor outcast sinners ready to perish. It is called, Tit. ii. 11. The grace of God, that bringeth salvation to all men, as you may read in the margin. More particularly,

1. The sound of this great trumpet is a sound of life to dead sinners; John x. 10. I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. John v. 25. The hour cometh, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live. John xi. 25. I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. This trumpet is for rouzing and awakening the dead; and blessed are they that are awakened and quickened with the sound of it; for the voice of it is, Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light, Eph. v. 4. No trumpet but that of the living and life-giving God can sound after this manner: and it is like himself; for he is the God that quickens the dead, and calls things that be not, as though they were, Rom. iv. 17.

2. The sound of this great trumpet is a sound of liberty to captive sinners; The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, for he hath anointed me to preach good tidings to the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted; to proclaim liberty to the captives; and the opening of the prison to them that are bound: to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn, Isa. lxi. 1, 2. O captive sinner, lying in the chains of sin and Satan, and in the chains of unbelief and enmity, would you have your chains loosed, and your soul set at liberty? Hear the voice of the trumpet; The Lord looseth the prisoners, Psal. cxlvi. 7. Turn ye to the strong hold, ye prisoners of hope, Zech. ix. 12. By the blood of thy covenant have I sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water, ver. 11.

3. The sound of this great trumpet is a sound of pardoning grace to the condemned sinner; it proclaims indemnity to all the guilty rebels against heaven that hear and welcome the sound of it; Be it known unto you, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins. And by him all that believe, are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses, Acts xiii. 38, 39. It is free indemnity through Christ, to the praise of his glorious grace, that is proclaimed; In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace, Eph. i. 7. O! will any condemned sinner accept of pardon and indemnity upon these gracious terms? The condition is already fulfilled; the blood of Jesus Christ hath bought remission. This blessing of his blood comes therefore to you freely, that you may accept of it freely, and you have it. Not for your sake, not for your sake doth he give it, but for his own name's sake; Isa. xliii. 25. I, even I am he that blotteth out your transgressions for mine own sake; for no other reason but that you may have the good of it, and I may have the glory of it.

4. The sound of this great trumpet is a sound of purifying grace to the filthy sinner; In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin, and for uncleanness, Zech. xiii. 1. The trumpet proclaims to you, O filthy, polluted sinner, going quick with vermine, all overspread with the ugly vermine of sin and corruption; it proclaims, saying, Behold, the God of heaven hath provided a fountain of purification, both for sin, and for uncleanness; both for taking away the guilt of sin and the filth of sin: yea, behold, he hath provided both a Red-sea, and a crystal river; a Red-sea of blood, The blood of Christ cleansing from all sin, 1 John i. 7.; and the crystal river that proceedeth out of the throne of God and of the Lamb: and this is to be in you as a well of water springing up to everlasting life, in his quickening, purifying, and sanctifying presence and operation, John iv. 14. You cannot sanctify and purify yourself, no more than you can create a world; but here am I that can create a clean heart within you: Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world; therefore, take with you words, and say, Take away all iniquity, thou whose work it is, and whose promise thus sounds in mine ears, I will sprinkle clean water on you, and you shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols will I cleanse you, Ezek. xxxvi. 25. This great trumpet then, hath a sound of life and liberty, pardon and purity; life to the dead, liberty to the bound, pardon to the guilty, and purity to the filthy. These comprehend all that you need, both in time and for eternity; for the everlasting gospel proclaims everlasting blessings, everlasting life, everlasting liberty, everlasting pardon, everlasting purity and holiness; all to be had in Christ, the everlasting Lord and Saviour, who was dead, and is alive, and lives for evermore: and all to be had, partly and graciously here; and fully, and gloriously hereafter.

5. In a word, the sound of this great trumpet is a sound of complete salvation, in all the respects ſpects wherein poor ſinners that hear the joyful ſound need to be ſaved. It is a ſound of inſtruction to the ignorant, ſaying, They ſhall be all taught of God. A ſound of direction to the bewildered, ſaying, like a voice behind them, This is the way, walk ye in it. The trumpet proclaims, ſaying, Here is reſt, for the weary ſoul; comfort, for the drooping ſoul; ſtrength, for the weak; riches, for the poor; raiment, for the naked; ſight, for the blind; ſupply, for the needy ſoul: here is ſalvation for the loſt ſoul, grace, glory, and every good thing for theſe that have nothing. Here, in ſhort then, is the matter of the proclamation by ſound of trumpet from heaven. You have a ſum of the joyful ſound of this trumpet, Iſa. xxv. 6. In this mountain ſhall the Lord of hoſts make unto all people a feaſt of fat things, a feaſt of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined. Iſa. lv. 1. Ho, every one that thirſteth, come ye to the waters; and he that hath no money, come ye, buy and eat; yea, come buy wine and milk, without money, and without price. Ho, every one that pleaſeth, come and match with the Son of God: All things are ready, come to the marriage, and ſo come to the marriage-feaſt.——So much ſhall ſuffice for this particular.

4*thly*, I propoſed here to ſpeak a little of the quality of this ſound of the great goſpel-trumpet, when it is blown in Zion. And,

1. It is a joyful and a charming ſound, Pſalm lxxxix. 15, 16. Bleſſed is the people that know the joyful ſound: they ſhall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance. In thy name ſhall they rejoice all the day long: and in thy righteouſneſs ſhall they be exalted. The voice of the trumpet is, Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which ſhall be to all people: For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Chriſt the Lord, Luke ii. 10. Some that were once delivered by a conqueror from outward bondage, made the elements ring, and the birds fall out of the air with their voice, crying out, SOTER, SOTER, a Saviour, a Saviour. O how much more ſhould the glad news of a Saviour, to ſave from ſin and everlaſting wrath, be received with joy! It is a joyful and charming ſound: ſhall the voice of the Charmer be rejected and deſpiſed by the deaf adders here?

2. It is a divine, awful ſound; it is the voice of the Son of man; yea, the voice of the Son of God: it is the voice of the great God that is to be heard through this trumpet, that voice that ſhakes the heaven and the earth, Heb. xii. 26.—It is a lofty ſound, from the high and lofty One, that inhabits eternity; a majeſtic ſound; for, The voice of the Lord is full of majeſty. Though it be a ſtill ſmall voice, like that Elijah heard, 1 Kings xix. 12.; yet the Lord is in it: and happy they that, through the voice of a man, hear the voice of God, by receiving it not as the word of man, but, as it is in truth, the word of God, which worketh effectually in you that believe, 1 Theſſ. ii. 13. Hence,

3. It is an internal and ſpiritual, as well as an external ſound; It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the fleſh profiteth nothing: the words that I ſpeak unto you, they are ſpirit, and they are life, John vi. 63. Hence it is a ſound that both wounds and heals the ſoul; that firſt kills, and then quickens the ſoul: and ſo it appears to be the voice of the living God, who ſays, I kill, and I make alive; I wound, and I heal. It is external, in the publication to the ear; and faith comes by this hearing: and then it is internal and ſpiritual, in the operation of it upon the heart: and, O may it be a living and life-giving, and ſoul-quickening ſound to many here; for, it is the voice of the Son of God that makes the dead to hear and live.

4. It is a long and laſting ſound. The ſound of common trumpets, when they are blown, is but a dying ſound; but the great trumpet of the everlaſting goſpel is not ſo: it is the word of God that lives and abides for ever, 1 Pet. i. 23. The echo of this joyful ſound will be heard for ever, both in heaven and in hell. The joyful echo among the redeemed, and the dreadful tormenting echo among the damned, will be everlaſting: it will not ſound for ever as now it doth; but the echo thereof will be heard louder and louder to all eternity, when all things elſe will wither and fade: this you ſee clear from 1 Pet. i. 24, 25. compared with Iſa. xl. 6. The voice ſaid, Cry. And I ſaid, What ſhall I cry? All fleſh is graſs, and all the glory of man as the flower of the graſs. The graſs withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away; but the word of the Lord endureth for ever: and this is the word which by the goſpel is preached unto you. And as to the preſent external diſpenſation of the goſpel, God keeps the count of the time how long the trumpet ſounds in your ears; All day long have I ſtretched out my hand to a diſobedient and gainſaying people, Rom. x. 21.

5. It is a near ſound, not at a diſtance, like news from a foreign country, but near at hand, and bringing heavenly things near to us; Hearken unto me, ye ſtout-hearted, that are far from righteouſneſs: I bring near my righteouſneſs; it ſhall not be far off; and my ſalvation ſhall not tarry. He placeth this ſalvation in Zion, for Iſrael his glory, Iſa. xl. 12,—13. The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is the word of faith which we preach, Rom. x. 8. The word is nigh to your heart; for the Lord is dealing with your heart by it: O may he not only deal, but prevail. For,

6. It is a powerful, conquering ſound: it will overcome and prevail, ſo as to reach the end of it one way or another; It ſhall not return unto me void; but it ſhall accompliſh that which I pleaſe, and it ſhall proſper in the thing whereto I ſent it, Iſa. lv. 11. God will not blow his trumpet in vain; all rejecters and diſpiſers ſhall be rendered inexcuſeable by it; and all his elect ſhall be mercifully conquered: for the trumpet hath a ſurmounting ſound; it ſounds over the top of all the hills and mountains of ſin and guilt, and of unbelief and enmity; The voice of my Beloved! behold, he cometh, leaping upon the mountains and ſkipping upon the hills, Song ii. 8. The voice of the Lord is powerful, melting down mountains in his way. The voice of the Lord breaks the cedars of Lebanon. This leads,

IV. To the fourth general head propoſed, To touch at the efficacy of this means; and why it is promiſed, that a number of outcaſt ſinners, ready to periſh, by the blowing of the great trumpet, ſhall come. Arminian doctrine, that aboundeth in our day, makes the efficacy of the goſpel depend upon man's free-will; but, we have not ſo learned Chriſt: he hath made ſurer work; and all the efficacy to depend upon his free grace: and this is ſecured by his ſhall be: The great trumpet SHALL BE blown, and they SHALL come. The Father's promiſe to the Son ſecures it; Thy people ſhall be willing in the day of thy power, Pſal. cx. 3. He ſhall ſee his ſeed. He ſhall ſee the travail travail of his ſoul, and be ſatisfied. The Father's promiſe to the Son is ſecured and confirmed by his oath upon this head, Pſal. lxxxix. 35. Once have I ſworn by my holineſs, that I will not lye unto David. His ſeed ſhall endure for ever; his ſeed among Jews and Gentiles, and among the nations afar off; I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the utmoſt ends of the earth for thy poſſeſſion. He ſhall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles, and the iſles ſhall wait for his law. Amidſt all the diſcouragements that men may give us in our preaching the goſpel, here is the encouragement that God gives us in blowing the great trumpet in the ears of outcaſts, ready to periſh. There is a number among them that ſhall come; Other ſheep I have, that are not of this fold: them alſo I muſt bring, and they ſhall hear my voice, John x. 16. I muſt bring them, and they muſt come. The ſweet neceſſity he is under of bringing them, produces, in the day of power, a ſweet neceſſity in them, ſaying, O we muſt come to Chriſt; we periſh without him: we hear the ſound of his trumpet; and therefore we muſt ſay, Behold, we come unto thee, for thou art the Lord our God.

QUEST. Why is it promiſed, that a number of outcaſts, ready to periſh ſhall come, when the goſpel-trumpet ſhall be blown?

ANSW. 1. Becauſe none would have encouragement to come, if there were not a promiſe that they ſhall come. Here is encouragement to all that hear the ſound of the trumpet. It is true, may a ſoul ſay, I know not if I be intended, but I ſee the promiſe reſpects the like of me: the promiſe of drawing grace, reſpects the like of me, that cannot come of myſelf; the promiſe of pardon, reſpects theſe that are guilty; the promiſe of cleanſing, reſpects theſe that are filthy; the promiſe of taking away the ſtony heart, reſpects theſe that have a hard, ſtupid heart. Now, this is my caſe; and therefore, here is a door of hope; here is ſome encouragement for me to come to him, and wait upon him. And as none would have encouragement if it were not ſo; ſo all may have encouragement here: the door of hope is open.

2. He hath promiſed they ſhall come, becauſe as none would have encouragement to come, ſo none would have grace to come, if it were not promiſed; and if it were not by virtue of the promiſe made in Jeſus Chriſt: for, it is grace coming out of the promiſe, that is turned to grace in the heart. Then, indeed, the ſoul comes, when the grace that lies in the promiſe is turned to grace in the heart, and wrought there by the means of the promiſe. It is by virtue of the great and precious promiſe we are made partakers of the divine nature, and of the Spirit of faith; the promiſes being pleas and arguments for faith, and for the prayer of faith, ſaying, Lord, haſt thou not ſo and ſo ſaid to ſuch as I am; and wilt thou not do as thou haſt ſaid? Haſt thou not ſaid, That Solomon ſhall reign, that grace ſhall reign? and wilt thou ſuffer ſin to reign? And the promiſe being thus the pipe and channel for the communication of grace, the conduit from Chriſt to us, All the promiſes being Yea and Amen in Chriſt, and the conduit-pipe reaching from the heart of Chriſt to the mouth of faith, we ſuck in his fulneſs. As the law begets terror, ſo the promiſe begets faith; both by the freeneſs of it to the moſt unworthy, and the fulneſs of it, being a plaiſter as big as the ſore, and exactly anſwering to its want; and by the efficacy of it, through the ſecret working of the Spirit, diſcovering this fulneſs and freeneſs of divine grace, and drawing the heart towards this promiſing God.

3. He hath promiſed they ſhall come, that thus he may ſecure his own glory, which he deſigns to ſhew forth in his way. His great deſign, in ſaving any poor periſhing ſinner, is the glory of his name, and the honour of all his perfections: Sing, O heavens; for the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified himſelf in Iſrael, Iſa. xliv. 23. He deſigns, by redeming them, to glorify himſelf; and that he may ſhew forth his perfections, and they may ſhew forth his praiſe: This people have I formed for myſelf, they ſhall ſhew forth my praiſe, Iſa. xlii. 21. He thus ſhews forth the glory of his wiſdom, power, holineſs, juſtice, mercy, and truth; and therefore he hath promiſed they ſhall come: and this, with all the other promiſes of God, are Yea and Amen in Chriſt, to the glory of God, 2 Cor. i. 20.

4. He hath promiſed they ſhall come by faith to him, that their ſalvation may be ſure; Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace: to the end the promiſe might be ſure to all the ſeed, Rom. iv. 16. As God's word, Let it be, brought the world into a being; ſo his ſhall be, is the cauſe of what comes to paſs in the new creation. His ſaying, They ſhall come, is the cauſe of their coming, otherwiſe they would never come. He hath declared his will in this world, concerning their coming to him for life and ſalvation; and by his will they are ſanctified, and ſaved through the offering of the body of Jeſus Chriſt once for all, Heb. x. 10. And what can be ſurer than the will of God, and that God will have his will? He worketh all things after the counſel of his own will, Eph. i. 11.

V. The fifth head I propoſed was, To ſpeak a little of the end for which they ſhall come, namely, To worſhip the Lord in the Holy mount at Jeruſalem. To ſpeak now of divine worſhip at any length, is what I cannot propoſe; there are only four things concerning it, that, I think, the words here lead me to, namly, here is the nature, the object, the manner, and the ſpring of worſhip.

1. The nature of it, imported in the name worſhip. "To worſhip, is to give to any one "the honour due unto him; ſo to worſhip God, "is to render that honour and homage that "is due to him, Pſal. xxix. 2." Now, the worſhip of God is twofold, internal and external. — Internal worſhip, is to love God, to fear him, to believe and truſt in him; theſe are acts of inward worſhip, and the ſum of that honour we are required to give to God in the firſt command. — External worſhip, is the ſerving of God according to his own ordinances and inſtitutions, which is the ſum of the ſecond command, comprehending all the ſeveral ways wherein he will be honoured and ſerved, ſuch as, prayer, praiſe, &c. Both theſe muſt go together: internal worſhip, pleaſeth God beſt; external worſhip, honoureth him moſt, and ſetteth forth his glory in the world. Hence the temple was called, The place where God put his name, i. e. his worſhip; by which God is known, as a man is by his name. They that worſhip God, muſt worſhip him in Spirit and in truth: in Spirit, that is, with inward love, fear, reverence, and uprightneſs; in truth, that is, according to the true rule of his word. The former reſpects the inward power, and the latter the outward rule; rule; the former ſtrikes at hypocriſy, and the latter at idolatry; the one oppoſes looſneſs of our hearts in worſhip, and the other oppoſes the inventions of our heads.

2. The object of worſhip is the LORD; They ſhall worſhip the Lord. Hence we read, Matth. iv. 10. Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him only ſhalt thou ſerve. To me it would ſeem, that by the Lord here, in the text, we are to underſtand the Lord and Saviour CHRIST, becauſe I ſee no difference made between the object of faith here expreſſed by coming, and the object of homage here expreſſed by worſhip; They ſhall come and worſhip the Lord. However this be, it is God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, that is the object of religious worſhip; and the Unity muſt be worſhipped in Trinity, and the Trinity in Unity: and, when we direct our worſhip to any one perſon, we muſt include the reſt in the ſame worſhip; and we are to conceive of him as he hath manifeſted himſelf to us in his word. If we worſhip God out of a Trinity, as the Turks; or God out of Chriſt, as the Jews; we worſhip not the true God, but an idol.

3. The manner of worſhip, and the acceptable way thereof, is here pointed out: They ſhall worſhip the Lord in the holy mount at Jeruſalem; that is, to worſhip him in the beauty of holineſs, Pſal. xxix. 2.; i. e. In his holy temple, or, in his beautiful ſanctuary; in a way honourable to him, which can only be in and through Jeſus Chriſt.

Now, for the further underſtanding of this, you would conſider, that Jeruſalem of old was the place of worſhip, Whither the tribes went up, the tribes of the Lord to the teſtimony of Iſrael, Pſal. cxxii. 3, 4. But now, under the New-teſtament diſpenſation, ſuch is the great goodneſs of God to us, he doth not now tye us to any place. See and read John iv. 20, 21. He doth not tye us to go to the father part of the nation to worſhip: no; the land is every where holy: wherever his name is recorded, there is a Jeruſalem, there is a Zion.

Again, conſider, that the holy mount at Jeruſalem, mount Zion largely taken, including mount Moriah, was the place of the temple, which was eminently typical of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. And as all the true worſhippers of God then were to worſhip at or toward them aterial temple (hence the expreſſion of worſhipping at his holy hill, Pſal. xcix. 9.; and worſhiping toward his holy temple, Pſal. v. 7. In thy fear will I worſhip toward thy holy temple: and thus, Pſal cxxxviii. 2.); ſo, to worſhip the Lord now, in the holy mount, is to worſhip God in Chriſt. And as to aſcend into the hill of the Lord, and to ſtand in his holy place, Pſal. xxiv. 3. thus to worſhip God in the holy mount at Jeruſalem, is, in the language of the New-teſtament, to worſhip God in Chriſt; in the Spirit of Chriſt, for aſſiſtance; and in the faith of the merit and righteouſneſs of Chriſt, for acceptance: for, We are accepted in the Beloved, Eph. i. 6. It is an entrance with boldneſs into the holieſt by the blood of Jeſus, Heb. x. 19. It is to have acceſs to God in our prayers and praiſes, and in the ordinances of the word and ſacrament of his own appointment and inſtitution; and acceſs with boldneſs and confidence by the faith of him, Eph. iii. 12. This is the ſame with that of David, Bring me to thy holy hill, and to thy tabernacle: then will I go to the altar of God, to God my exceeding joy, Pſal. xliii. 3, 4.

4. Here alſo is the root and ſpring, or the cauſe of this worſhip, implied in theſe words, They ſhall come, and they ſhall worſhip; importing, that faith is the internal principle that leads on the ſoul to religious duties and worſhip: for firſt they ſhall come, namely, by faith; and then they ſhall worſhip. Without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God, and to worſhip him acceptably. And importing alſo, that the power of the Spirit is the internal efficient cauſe of ſpiritual worſhip, ſtirring up and exciting the ſoul to it: for here is a double promiſe; firſt, They ſhall come; and then, They ſhall worſhip; which ſays, that not only, muſt the Spirit give us faith to come, but alſo grace to worſhip when we have come. One may be a believer in Chriſt that hath come to him, and yet out of caſe to worſhip the Lord in his holy mount, till the Spirit by his new breathing and influence raiſe up the dormant ſeed of grace; and, by his blowing upon our garden, make the ſpices thereof flow out. The ſame power that is firſt put forth in the mighty ſound of the great goſpel-trumpet, by virtue of that promiſe, They ſhall come, is neceſſary alſo to be put forth by virtue of that promiſe, They ſhall worſhip. Our coming to Chriſt believingly this day needs a powerful ſhall be, for that, They ſhall come; our communicating worthily to-morrow needs another powerful ſhall be, for that, They ſhall worſhip.—So much for this head, They ſhall worſhip in his holy mount at Jeruſalem. I come now,

VI. To the ſixth and laſt thing propoſed, which was, To draw ſome inferences for the application. And,

1*ſt*, By way of information. If it be ſo, as has been ſaid, hence,

1. We may ſee the infinite mercy of God toward poor periſhing ſinners, eſpecially theſe within the pale of the viſible chruch. Though they be outcaſts, by caſting out themſelves; yet he ſends the great trumpet of the goſpel to call them in. They are ready to periſh in their ſin and miſery; and behold, he here ſhews himſelf ready to pity, and ready to ſave them, ſaying, To you, O men, do I call; and my voice is to the ſons of men. Incline your ear unto me; hear, and your ſoul ſhall live.

2. Hence we may ſee what is the work of miſters, whom the Lord ſends forth, namely, to blow the trumpet in Zion, Joel ii. 1. There is a twofold trumpet they are to blow; the trumpet of the law, and the trumpet of the goſpel.

(1.) Sometimes they are called to put the terrible trumpet of the law to their mouth, to tell Jacob their ſins, and Iſrael their tranſgreſſions; to cry aloud, and not ſpare, Iſa. lviii. 1. They are neither to ſpare their pains, nor to ſpare their breath in blowing from Sinai, to ſhew ſinners both their ſinful and miſerable ſtate, and how they are upon the very brink of ruin, and ready to periſh. But then ſtill they are to preach the law with a view to the goſpel, and as a ſchoolmaſter to lead them to Chriſt.

(2.) Again they are called to blow the great goſpel-trumpet to theſe periſhing ſinners, proclaiming life, liberty, and ſalvation to them in a way of coming to Jeſus, as the end of the law for righteouſneſs, that the curſe of the law may be put to an end with reſpect to them; not that from henceforth they may be lawleſs, but that they may be conform to the law, as a rule: for, in coming to him, they come to worſhip the Lord in his holy mount. Thus, indeed, the true goſpel-miniſter preaches always Chriſt, whether it be the law or the goſpel that is in his his mouth; and he brings in more honour to the law than all the legal preachers in the world with their moral harangues, and high encomiums upon moral virtue: for the gospel-minister preaches the law and its curse, to bring the soul to Christ, in whom the law gets full satisfaction and complete payment, as it is a covenant of works; and the sinner coming to him gets redemption from all the curses of it: and then he preaches the gospel of the grace of God in Christ, so as the sinner, being come to Christ, may come to his duty of right worship toward God, according to the direction of the law as a rule. He shews their perishing state, that they may come to Christ, and he calls them to come to Christ, that they may come to God in him, and worship the Lord in his holy mount.

Great skill then is requisite in blowing this great trumpet. It is true, some are qualified of the Lord for blowing more loud and awfully, like Boanerges, as sons of thunder; others for blowing more softly and sweetly, like Barnabas, as sons of consolation; and, indeed, There are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit, 1 Cor. xii. 4. Some are qualified and set apart for one piece of the tabernacle-work, and some for another; some to be founders, and some to be, as it were, barrow-men in the work of the spiritual temple: some for this post and station, and some for the other. Let the great God be reverenced in all this; for it is he that qualifies and separates every one for his own proper work. If he call one and the same person, at different times, to different work; or, if he call out one to go forth and blow an alarm, with a terrible sound, and another to trumpet forth grace, and make the people know the joyful sound; there is need for each of them: let infinite wisdom be adored.

3. Hence we may see the duty of people, with reference to ministers and their message, when blowing the great gospel-trumpet; it is surely peoples duty, both to pray for them, and to receive their message, by hearkening to the sound of the trumpet.

On the one hand, it is their duty to pray for poor ministers, that they may blow the great trumpet with the breath of the Spirit; and preach the gospel in the demonstration of the Spirit, and with power, 1 Cor. ii. 4. Brethren, pray for us, says the apostle; pray that a door of utterance may be given us. Never was there a time wherein God's people had more need to pray for ministers: it is a day wherein it is much for them to hold their feet. There are grievous defections among the most part in Scotland, and these breaking out in judicatories, which we should lament over, and give our testimony against, as sometimes we essay to do: yea, there are sinful defects in testifying among these that desire to do so; and yet sin in not doing so much as they ought. But I say again, ministers had much need to be prayed for; and I have a word to say to you upon this head, not to offend you, but to deal plainly with you in the sight of the great God, whose trumpet I am honoured to put in my mouth. I see some offence is taken at some worthy ministers, whom you and I both, perhaps, reckon so; I mean, these that, upon the main, are known to be faithful, so far as their light and ability goes, and that have the seal of their ministry upon many souls, and whose ministry the Lord is still owning and blessing; when these do any thing that is amiss in your eyes, whether it be seemingly or really, I ask you, Whether you be more taken up in judging them, or in praying for them? As to rash judgment, there is nothing you are more cautioned against in God's word; and as to praying for ministers particularly, there is nothing more expressly commanded. Now, I ask you again, before God and conscience, Whether you are more taken up in judging them, or in praying for them? I shall suppose they are really left to some wrong step; but, if you have been neglecting to pray for them, perhaps that is the cause why God hath left them, and thereupon you turn your back upon them also and revile them; and so the poor men suffer both the rebukes of God, and the reproaches of men, for your sin in neglecting to pray for them: and therefore, hereupon I ask you again, Whether or not, before ever you be offended with them before the world, you are first displeased with yourself before God, and humble yourself before him, for your sinful neglect in praying and wrestling with God for them? If this be not your way, but, on the contrary, you be rashly disobliged at the poor honest ministers for the evil which your sin hath brought upon them; then I must tell you, in God's name, though you were as the signet on his right-hand, God will take his own time and way of restoring them, and rebuking you.

But again, as it is your duty to pray for ministers, so also to receive their message, and hearken to the sound of the trumpet in their mouth; and, indeed, if it be God's great trumpet that they blow, then surely not to listen to it, is to stop your ears at the voice of the charmer, like the deaf adder, and to refuse him that speaketh from heaven, which is a sin; how deep it runs, you may see, Heb. xii. 25. See that ye refuse not him that speaketh: for if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven.

4. Hence we may see, from this doctrine, what it is that makes the preaching of the gospel effectual to the salvation of perishing sinners, when the great gospel-trumpet is blown. It is not any virtue of this or that preacher; no; it is the power of God exerted according to the promise, that then they shall come and they shall worship. What is it that will make the dead sinner to believe savingly? It is the efficacy of this word, They shall come. What is it that will make the believer a worthy receiver at the Lord's table? It is the efficacy of this word, They shall worship the Lord in his holy mount. It is a day of power that is here promised to accompany the blowing of the great trumpet, which he makes the rod of his strength, and sends it out of Zion. The gospel is the ministration of the Spirit, which is received by the hearing of faith. This leads me to the next use we intend from the doctrine.

The second use, we make is for examination. You may try both your state and frame from this doctrine, in these following particulars, whether or not you be of these who, by the blowing of the great trumpet, have been made to come to Christ, and to worship the Lord in his holy mount. Examine by these two particulars, 1. If you have been made to hear the voice of God in the great trumpet of the gospel. 2. If thereupon thereupon you have been made to live, ſo as to come and worſhip. Theſe two are the ſum of God's ſaving work comprehending all; The hour cometh, when the dead ſhall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear ſhall live, John v. 25.

1. Have you heard the voice of God in this great goſpel-trumpet? I aſk not if you have heard this or that man ſpeaking to you; but if you have heard God ſpeaking by the word to you, and heard it, not as the word of man, but as the word of God. More particularly, have you heard,

(1.) So as to be convinced of your Egyptian thraldom and Aſſyrian bondage; and found yourſelf to be an outcaſt wretch, a ſinner ready to periſh, whereas before you was ſleeping in your chains? Hath God's trumpet alarmed you, ſo as you have ſeen yourſelf lying under the curſe of the law, and put you in fear of everlaſting wrath and damnation, as one lying on the very brink of hell, and made you to cry, Oh! What ſhall I do to be ſaved?

(2.) Have you heard ſo as to be awakened, as it were, from among the dead, to ſee that life and ſalvation is to be had in the glorious IMMANUEL, Jeſus Chriſt, who is proclaimed a Saviour and Redeemer by the ſound of the goſpel-trumpet? There is a ſeeing of the Son, by a ſpiritual diſcerning, before there can be a believing in him, John vi. 40. Hath the great trumpet then ſo far rouzed and wakened you up, that you have got your eyes opened, not only to ſee the maſſy chain of ſpiritual captivity you were under unto ſin, Satan, and wrath; but alſo to ſee the Redeemer and Deliverer that is come out of Zion, to turn away ungodlineſs from Jacob, and that there is ſalvation in none other? Hath Chriſt, revealed to you, by the word, been thus revealed in you, ſo as you have ſeen and perceived him to be the glorious and only Saviour?

2. Have you not only been made to hear the ſound of the trumpet, thus wakening you out of your dead ſleep, to a ſenſe of ſin and ſight of the remedy; but, have you thereupon been made to live? The dead ſhall hear his voice, and they that hear ſhall live. Now, how may this life be tried? Why, the text mentions alſo two parts of this life; firſt, they ſhall come; and next, they ſhall worſhip in his holy mount.

(1.) Then, have you been made to come; that is, to believe in Jeſus, to fly for refuge to him, and to fly out of yourſelf, as having nothing but ſin and guilt, hell and miſery about you; to him, as having all for wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption? Have you been brought under a ſweet neceſſity of coming to Chriſt, and reſolutely to throw yourſelf into his ſaving arms, ſaying, If I periſh, let me periſh there, where never one did? Have you found ſome ſecret drawing cord about your heart, making you reſtleſs till you came to Chriſt for reſt to your heart and conſcience? Faith is an entering into this reſt, Heb. iv. 3.

(2.) Have you hereupon been made to come and worſhip in the holy mount; to worſhip God in Chriſt with holy fear and reverence, coming with humble boldneſs to the throne of grace? Hath your faith wrought by love, and the love of Chriſt conſtrained you to ſeek and ſerve him in his temple, and ordinances of his appointment? And, is this holy place the place of your abode, deſiring ſtill to aſcend to the hill of the Lord, and to ſtand in his holy place? The ſum of this mark is, Are you brought to David's one thing? One thing have I deſired of the Lord, and that will I ſeek after, that I may dwell in the houſe of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to enquire into his temple, Pſal. xxvii. 4.

Now, examine yourſelf by theſe plain marks; for if you know nothing leſs or more thereof, whatever be your good diſpoſition at the time, you are a ſtranger in Iſrael, and have no right to a communion-table; but, if you have the experience of theſe marks, then, whatever be the alterations of your frame, you may conclude you are in a ſafe ſtate, as well as ſometimes in a ſpiritual frame; and ſo have a right to the great goſpel-feaſt of the Lord's ſupper in the holy mount, and may venture to it in his name and ſtrength.

The third uſe, with which I ſhall cloſe, may be in a word of exhortation, eſpecially to all the ſinners here that are yet in a loſt ſtate and condition, ready to periſh, and like outcaſts in the land of Egypt: and we would blow the great trumpet in your hearing, and he that hath ears to hear, let him hear. Our preaching the goſpel to you, is the accompliſhment of one promiſe; It ſhall come to paſs in that day, that the great trumpet ſhall be blown: and we are encouraged to this work by the promiſes annexed to it, concerning outcaſt ſinners, ready to periſh, They ſhall come, and they ſhall worſhip. Why then, in the name of the great King, whoſe unworthy herald I am, I do, as it were, by ſound of trumpet, proclaim life, to dead ſinners here; and liberty, to you captive ſinners; pardon and indemnity, to guilty rebellious ſinners; and purifying grace, to filthy polluted ſinners; and all to be had freely: Whoſoever will, let him come and take of theſe waters of life freely. Will you give a hearing to our great Lord, whoſe treaſure is put into earthen veſſels, and whoſe voice ſounds through earthen trumpets: for God's ſake, look over the poor unworthy inſtrument; little matter who blow the trumpet, if the breath of the Spirit convey the ſound into your heart. Look over the head of the poor ſervant; The Maſter calls you, even you that are afar off, and farer from God than Egypt and Aſſyria are from you; yet the ſound of the trumpet reaches to you.

What is your name, man, woman? Surely your name is in this text, if you be a ſinner, ready to periſh. "Alas! may ſome ſay, I am ſo ready to periſh, that I am ready to give over all duties of religion, and ready to doubt of all revealed religion, and of the very being of God, and truth of the ſcriptures; I am ready to blaſpheme, and to ſay, God is a liar. Oh! ſays another, I am ready to raze the foundation of all that ever was done in me, and ready to conclude, that now it is impoſſible I can be ſaved." Say on, ſoul; and tell me more in what reſpects you are ready to periſh. "Oh! ſay you, I am ready to pine away in my iniquity, and live in rebellion all my days, ſuch is the power of my corruption; yea, I am ready through fear and dread, and terrible temptations, to kill, deſtroy, and put away myſelf; and, While I ſuffer the terrors of God, I am diſtracted: I am ready to think, that the day of grace is paſt, and that I am a caſt-away." Are you an outcaſt, ready to periſh in the wilderneſs of darkneſs, ignorance, and confuſion? Are you an outcaſt, outcaſt, ready to periſh in a priſon of unbelief, atheiſm, enmity, and hard bound with all the chains of hell about you? Well, whatever priſon you be into, whatever outcaſt ſtate you be into, and in whatever reſpect you are ready to periſh, yet, O hear the ſound of the great trumpet, ſaying, Come, ye that are outcaſt ſinners; come all ye that are ready to periſh; come to the great King, whoſe heralds we are; come to the great Saviour and Redeemer: you will never worſhip acceptably in his holy mount, till firſt you come; you will never communicate worthily, till firſt you come to Chriſt. O come while the trumpet ſounds, come and take his helping hand, who comes to ſeek and ſave you that are loſt. He offers to ſave you fully, to ſave you freely, to ſave you everlaſtingly. Since you cannot ſave yourſelf, will you welcome a Saviour? O what diſobliges you at him, who is as ready to ſave, as you are ready to periſh; and who ſays, Welcome to the worſt of you all? Young ſinner, old ſinner, great ſinner, chief of ſinners, come while the trumpet ſounds.

The ſecond coming of Chriſt to judgment is haſting on, and then the trumpet ſhall ſound, and the dead ſhall ariſe; dead bodies will then riſe and come to the Judge at the ſound of the laſt trumpet. But now the great goſpel-trumpet calls dead ſouls to riſe and come to the Saviour; The dead ſhall hear the voice of the Son of man, and they that hear ſhall live. Whenever dead bodies hear the laſt trumpet, they ſhall live; and whenever dead ſouls now hear the voice of the Son of God, in the great goſpel-trumpet, they ſhall live alſo.

"Alas! ſay you, I do not find a quickening power accompanying the word, and raiſing my ſoul to life." Why, what is the reaſon of that? Surely, where the voice of a king is, there is power, Eccleſ. viii. 4. And where the word, the voice of King Jeſus is heard, there is power. Perhaps, you are hearing the word delivered by us as the word of a man, and not as it is indeed the word of God, which would work effectually. As long as you hear but the voice of a man ſpeaking to you, there is no power, virtue, or efficacy: but, O tell me, do you hear the voice of the Son of God through this trumpet of man's voice? For we ſpeak to you in his name, whoſe name is the God that quickens the dead, and calls things that be not, as though they were. O then tell me, do you hear his voice, a voice that goes not into your ear only, but into your heart? Is the ſound of God's trumpet going in-through and out-through your heart? Then, hope, there is ſome power; and if you be hearing his powerful voice, then riſe, the Maſter calls you. Riſe, dead Lazarus; riſe, ſtupid ſoul, ye that are as ſtupid as the earth beneath your feet. O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the Lord. The laſt trumpet will not be more powerful, to make the earth and ſea give up their dead bodies, than this great goſpel-trumpet is powerful to raiſe dead ſouls, if the Lord by the breathing of his Spirit be blowing it, and if you be hearing his voice; They that hear ſhall live. I have no more to ſay; and I have ſaid nothing that will be heard, unleſs he ſay the word. Riſe and live; riſe and come to Jeſus, and in this way come and worſhip in his holy mount.——May the Lord himſelf ſpeak powerfully to you.

END OF THE FIRST VOLUME.

THE

THE INDEX for the First VOLUME.

A

ABRAHAM, saw Christ's day afar off, page 276. his difficulties in crediting the promise of his having a son in his old-age, 383. his trials in being ordered to sacrifice his son, 386. his faith delineated, 410.

Absence, sensible presence, sudden absence, 739. remarks concerning the finding and missing the presence of God, 741. in what respects he may absent from his people, 742. he may absent from them in duties, frames, and their best cases, ibid. they may miss him in their worst cases, viz. the time of confusion, persecution, temptation, and affliction, 743. they may lose him in the ordinances, instruments, societies, and places where they have formerly found him, ibid. eight reasons assigned of this dispensation, 743. the duty of such pointed out, 745.

Access to the holy of holies, how obtained, 8, 12. who are intitled to this privilege, 632. what obligations it lays them under, 633. what they are admitted to see there, ibid. who have been admitted, 636. what effect this access has upon those who are admitted, ibid.

Act, the various acts of faith as it is a receiving Christ, 193. See Faith, Receiving Christ, Walking in Christ.

Acts of the church, some of them unscriptural and unwarrantable, 70, 149, 322, 454, 631, 648, 661, 701. See Assembly.

Adam, the covenant of works made with him and his seed, 49. stood as a public and federal head to all his posterity, 50.

Addresses, to the enemies and lovers of the Lamb, 660, 661. to these who doubt if their time has been a time of love, 736. their duty pointed out, ibid. to such who are assured their time has been a time of love, 737. how these ought to conduct themselves, ibid. to these who have enjoyed God's presence, 745. to such who know nothing of it, 746. to these who never yet came to Christ, 768. to such who are coming, ibid. to these who know something of his doings, 785. to such who know nothing of them, and are unconcerned thereat, 786. See Exhortations.

Adherence to, and perseverance in, the faith necessary, 669.

Admiration, the wonders of redeeming love, considered in its height, freedom, power, and wisdom, ground of admiration, 718. See Love, Love of God.

Adolphus Clarebachius, a martyr, some of his last words recorded, 782.

Advice to such who never met with a time of love, 719. to those who have enjoyed a time of love, 733.

Affliction, what ground the Lord's people have to sing when they meet with affliction, 100. the difference between the afflictions of the godly and the wicked, 720. the godly may lay their account with such afflictions as the wicked meet with, 721. what love-designs he may be carrying on by them, ibid. what love appears in them, ibid. what instructions we ought to learn from them, 722. their suffering and afflicted circumstances not inconsistent with his love, 723. who they are, whose afflicted circumstances are inconsistent with the love of God, 724. evidences of those whose time of affliction has not been a time of love, 725. of those whose time has been a time of love, ibid. evinced from the gracious effects of them, ibid. from the particular usefulness of them, 727. eight particular afflicting cases of the saints mentioned, and all shewn to be a time of love, 730, 731. the time of love ought to be remembered in all afflicting and distressing times, 737. See Trouble.

Age, how to know if the period of middle-age, and old-age has been a time of love, 727, 728.

Agricolaus, deputy to Licinius, a wicked persecutor of the Christians in the third century, 349.

Amphilochius, bishop of Iconium, lays a stratagem, in order to induce Theodosius, the emperor, to revoke his edict in favours of the Arians, and succeeds therein, 772.

Anger, seeming anger and wrath-like dispensations may notwithstanding be a time of love, 720. in what respect they may be so, ibid. what love-designs may be carrying on by these wrath-like dispensations, 721. what love is there in these dispensations, ibid. what instructive lessons we should learn from them, 722.

Anointing, of Christ's anointing, 342. the measure, duration, and efficacy thereof, 344.

Antinomianism, the friends to the doctrine of grace falsely charged with it, and the unjustness thereof refuted, 70, 149, 150, 178, 190.

Apostacy, unbelief the mother of it, 243. receiving Christ the best antidote against it, 220. an evidence of perilous times, 666.

Appearances of God in behalf of his church and people, eight remarkable instances thereof, 678.

Application, as there is a particular application of the law-threatening, so there must be of the gospel-promise, 402, 685.

Apprehensions of God, Satan tempts to unworthy ones, 771. how to conceive aright of him, ibid.

Approach, what kind of an approach Christ made to God as our Surety, 172 See Engagement. His joyful approach chearfully welcomed by the church, 704.

Appropriation, in the nature of faith, 52, 60, 193, — 195, 218, 221, 295, 296, 324, 360, 376, 381, 394, 402, 491, 569, 685.

Arguments, six different ones which faith makes use of with God, 250.

Arianism, robs Christ of his glory, 322. prevailing much in Britain, 322, 347, 793. is damnable blasphemy, 454. what is the best antidote against it, 582.

Arminians, maintain universal redemption, 60. that God loves his people on account of foreseen faith, 77. make the efficacy of the gospel to depend upon man's free-will, 793.

Assembly, the conduct of the general assembly, concerning the Marrow of Modern Divinity, laid open, 70, 149. concerning Professor Simson's affair, 322, 454. concerning patronage in the year 1732. 631, 648, 670. concerning the process carried on against Mr. Ebenezer Erskine, and his adherents, 661. make unscriptural and unwarrantable acts and terms of communion, 701. indulge Arians and blasphemers, destroy Reformation-principles, and injure the favourites of heaven, ibid.

Assent, a particular and cordial assent given to the word of God, 685.

Assurance, the difference between fiducial and evidential assurance, 194, 195, 295. the difference between the assurance of faith and the assurance of sense, 394.

Atheism, from whence its strength arises, 516.

Attributes, the harmony of the divine attributes displayed, 112. what these attributes are, 113. their several claims, 114, 115. when and where they met, 116, — 118. what kind of a meeting they had, 118, — 120. for what reasons they met together, 120, — 124. how they are glorified, 176, 369. how dishonoured by unbelief, 241. in what respects expressive of the name of God, 592.

Augustine, a quotation from him concerning the tyranny of sin, 503.

Authority, the fountain of all ministerial authority to preach the gospel and administer the sacraments, 559.

B.

BAPTISM, it seals to the visible church, a common and general right to God's covenant, 477.

Bar, all mankind, in their lapsed state, barred out from the presence of God by a threefold bar, 170. these bars broken by Christ, ibid.

Battle, God will not leave his own in their most extreme need and last battle, 717.

Beasts, what spiritual beasts are many times apt to increase upon the believer, 487.

Beginners in religion have sometimes to battle with the devil, 766, 767.

Believer, his freedom from the law, as a covenant of works, 59. what place his obedience hath in the covenant of grace, ibid. what motives should influence his obedience, 59, 85. and his taking the law out of the hand of a Mediator, 60. hath all things in Christ, ibid. his love to Christ described from the nature, kinds, degrees, dimensions properties, effects, object, and grounds of it, 79, 83. his character and dignity, as a receiver of Christ, delineated, 188.

Believers, their comfortable and happy state, 36, 392. wear a black and white garment, 107. their happiness, ibid. sundry marks of true ones, 109, 126. what they have in Christ, 146. have much ado with him, 220. under no obligation to obey the law as in the hand of God Creator, out of Christ, 222. nor under the yoke of the law, as a covenant, ibid. have a staff to lean unto in their journey, 232. the seasons of their progressive gathering to Shiloh, 306. children of the promise as Isaac was, 369. what their being children of the promise supposes, ibid. the nature of the promise of which they are children, opened up, 370. See Promise. Their happy state, 392. their particular duty, viz. to apply the promise in every case, 392, 393. how they differ from unbelievers, 396. liberated from the legal power of sin and legal pennance of works, 420. freed both from the command and curse of the law, 432. their life many times rather a life of unbelief than faith, 434. what grounds of consolation they have, 464. what spiritual beasts are many times like to increase upon them, 487. their multiplied and various experiences, 483, 484, 485. and the reason of them, 490. where their strength lies, 490. their ΕΠΙΝΙΚΙΟΝ, or song of triumph and victory, 496. in what respects freed from the strength of sin, though sensible of the prevalency of it, 529. the duty of those who are delivered from the law as a covenant, 532. their obligations to Christ, 537. what the strength of sin, that still remains with them while here, is, 537. and what it serves for, ibid. what it excites to, 538. under no obligation to the penal sanction of the law by their new sins, 432, 541. how they ought to walk, 585. what respect they have to God's covenant of grace and promise, 681. their happiness in that God hath a great respect for them, 682. they have the begun possession of heaven while here, by union to Christ, and communion with him, 697. will never be left of God, 697, 698. may be assured that God will never leave them till he has performed his word to them, 698, 699. the most happy persons, though seemingly the most miserable, 700. ought to be joyful in the promise and fruitful in the work of faith, 703. known by their holy desire, 731. mount up with wings as an eagle, 748. what these wings are wherewith they mount up, 749. the things wherein they do not mount up, 750. what these things are wherein they do ascend, ibid. the particular seasons hereof, 751. the manner in which this is done, 752. the reasons of it, ibid. what believers have above, 753. evidences of mounting believers, ibid. a genuine mark of true ones, 768. what reason they have to be humble and long for heaven, 783.

Bethel, the place where God signally appeared to Jacob, and gave him a glorious interview with himself, 690. who are thus privileged, 691. what is to be understood by Bethel-visits, ibid. they include a manifestation of his glory and a communication of his mind, ibid. are excluded from no place, may be when not sensibly known, usually quicken the soul, and fill it with a holy awe of God, 692. the ordinary circumstances attending such visits, ibid. many dark days and dismal nights may follow upon these Bethel-discoveries, 693. several of these condescended upon, ibid. how God speaks to his people, when they have a Bethel-visit of him, 695. the manner how he accomplishes what he hath spoken to them, ibid. when he will will do what he hath ſpoken, 696. in what reſpects he may be ſaid to leave them, and wherein he will not leave them, 697, 698. thereaſonsofthis a ſſigned, 698, 699.

Blaſphemy, it is blaſphemy for any to affirm they are believers in Chriſt, and yet not lovers of God, 86. Satan tempts to commit it, 769. how this ought to be repelled, ibid.
Bleſſings, what perſons are the greateſt to a church or nation, 700. all ſpiritual bleſſings are from God, thro' the mediation of the Lamb, 757. are all everlaſting, ibid. an enumeration of ſome of them which are ſo, ibid. ſpiritual bleſſings compared to water, 758. the giving of them a part of Chriſt's royalty, 759. built upon a ſure bottom, 760.
Blood, the nature of Chriſt's blood ſhed by the ſword of juſtice, 33. is a fountain for cleanſing, ibid. the qualities of that blood, ibid.
Bond, the beſt bond; or, the ſureſt engagement, 167. See Engagement.
Breathings, what the eſtabliſhing breathings of the Spirit are, 676.
Bridegroom, Chriſt the bridegroom, and believers the bride, 1. See Match, Marriage.
Bulwarks, what bulwarks are uſed in beſieging the church, 641. what bulwarks are uſed againſt theſe who are without Chriſt, 650. See City.
Burgeſs, (Mr. Antony) a ſaying of his concerning idolatry, 228.

C

CALAMITY, the Lord's people have all a refuge in the time thereof, 729. what that refuge is, ibid.
Call, who are included in the goſpel-call, 286.
Calumny caſt upon the goſpel, a cauſe why people think ſo little of Chriſt, 358.
Camel, going through the eye of a needle, the ſignification thereof, 192.
Campbell, (profeſſor in St. Andrews) his ſentiments of the laws of nature, 671.
Canaan, the heavenly Canaan viewed in its types, epithets, parts, and properties, 473. what enemies and oppoſitions are in the way to it, 474. evidences of thoſe who are bound for it, 491.
Caſes, a variety of them condeſcended upon, and how the promiſe is adapted to them, 685, — 689. eight perplexing caſes of the ſaints mentioned, and all ſhewn to be conſiſtent with love, 730, 731. See Conſcience.
Catechiſm, What think ye of Chriſt? the main queſtion of the Chriſtian catechiſm, 336. the import of the queſtion opened up, 340, —352. Ten reaſons aſſigned, why it is the main queſtion, 352, —354. See Queſtion.
Cauſality, our beſt works have no cauſality in obtaining life, 222.
Caution, ſeveral cautions concerning the right uſe and application of the promiſe, 421. how the believer is to manage his ſpiritual enemies, 488. what ſentiments to entertain concerning the law, &c. 523. God's ſaving for his name's ſake, yields no encouragement to ſin, 598.
Caveats to fortify the Chriſtian againſt ſwerving from the truth, 187.
Centre, the Lamb is the centre of all the glory that ſurrounds the throne, 655.
Ceremonies, approving of aboliſhed ceremonies inconſiſtent with walking in Chriſt the ſubſtance, 207.
Chamber, a ſix-fold chamber in Chriſt for gathering his people into, 287.
Chaſtiſements of the godly, wherein they differ from the afflictions of the wicked, 720. what love appears in them, 721. what leſſons we ſhould receive from them, and how we ought to behave under them, 722. See Afflictions.
Children, whoſe children unbelievers are, 426.
Children of God, where their ſafety lies, 700.
Children of promiſe brought forth, and deſcribed, 367. the nature of the promiſe opened up, 370. their character, or, in what reſpects believers are the children of the promiſe, 378. after what manner they become ſo, 380. the compariſon ſtated, and the parallel run in ten particulars, between them and Iſaac, evincing that they are, as he was, children of the promiſe, 382. The reaſons why the promiſe hath ſuch prolific virtue for begetting children to God, 386. why God will have his children to be ſo by the promiſe, 887. why them, and them only to be ſo, 389. all the children of promiſe freed from the law, 391. wherein the children of promiſe and the children of the bond-woman differ, 403. evidences of the children of promiſe, 405. what the children of promiſe are freed from, 420. whoſe children the children of promiſe are, 428. See Promiſe.
Chriſt, God's fellow, 22. and in what reſpect he is ſo, 23. why he behoved to be ſo, 24. He is the man that is his fellow, and what kind of a man he became, 25. why our Redeemer muſt be a man, ibid. what need there was for his being both God and man in one perſon, 26. He is a ſhepherd, and what kind of a ſhepherd he is, ibid. why the Lord of hoſts calls him his ſhepherd, 27. the ſword of juſtice awaked againſt him, 28. the qualities of that ſword, ibid. the manner of its awaking, 30. the ſpecial hand Jehovah had in its awaking, 31. the reaſons why it did awake, ibid. the qualities of the blood ſhed by it, 33.
Chriſt the people's covenant, 47. called of God to be ſo, and given to the people as ſuch, 48. remarks concerning the covenant in general, 49. that the covenant of works was broken, and the covenant of grace provided, ibid. there is an oneneſs and identity betwixt the covenant of grace, as made with Chriſt, and as made with us in him, 50. Chriſt is the centre, in whom all the lines of the covenant meet, ibid. how Chriſt is the covenant, and in what reſpects he bears that name, 51. the covenant is radically, relatively, ſubſtantially, eminently, meritoriouſly, and efficaciouſly in him, ibid. and ſo called the Mediator, Meſſenger, Witneſs, Surety, Servant, and Performer thereof, ibid. for whoſe benefit he is a covenant, 52. denominated from their more general name, the people; from their more ſpecial name, Gentiles, dark and blind, bound and impriſoned, 53, 54. by what authority Chriſt is the covenant of the people, 55. ordained thereto of the Father, ibid. the import of the Father's ordaining him, and himſelf as ordained, ibid. the glorious manner of the ordination, and what is implied therein both negatively and poſitively, 55, 56. the gracious motive, ground, and reaſon of this ordination, 57. the reaſons why he is given for a covenant of the people, ibid. given to all in the goſpel-offer, and to ſome in actual poſſeſſion, ibid. the attributes of God glorified by Chriſt's being given for a covenant, 58. the duty of all the people to take hold of God's covenant, 63. conſiderations inforcing this, 64, 65.
Chriſt, the meeting-place of the divine attributes, 116. a very wonderful perſon, 124, 169. willingly approached to God in the work of our redemption, 168. The great duty of receiving Chriſt and walking in him, opened, 186. receiving him, and believing in him, equivalent terms, 188. how faith acts when it receives Chriſt, ibid. to what kind of perſons Chriſt is offered in the goſpel, 189. upon what grounds, 190. for what end, 191. what this act of receiving Chriſt conſiſts in, 193. the qualities of this act, 193, 205. the object of it, 195. conſidered doctrinally and perſonally, ibid. the capacities in which the object is received, 197, 206, 207, 208. what is received when Chriſt is received, 217, 239. What of God is in him, 237, 328. how maltreated by unbelief, 242. what kind of a remedy he is to ſinners, 243. See Receiving, Walking.
Chriſt, how Shiloh ſignifies Chriſt, and of the gathering of the people to him, 276, 277. what place there is in Chriſt for them, 287. what excellent things are in him to induce a gathering to him, 314. what pieces of work he performed for them, 316. what relation he ſtands in to them, and what he is ſent to be to them, 329. and what kind of a houſe he is for them, 331. what place there is in him for gathering to him, 332. See Shiloh, Gathering.
Chriſt, the main queſtion of the Chriſtian catechiſm, What think ye of Chriſt? 336. the import of the queſtion opened up, by conſidering it objectively, actively, formally, and ſubjectively, 340, — 352. ten reaſons aſſigned why it is the leading queſtion in the Chriſtian catechiſm, 352, 353, 354. See Queſtion.
Chriſt, the ſum of all Chriſtian knowledge is depoſited in him, 354. Though Arians think nothing of his Godhead, Arminians of the power and freedom of his grace, Papiſts of the merit and imputation of his righteouſneſs, Socinians of the ſacrifice of his death, Quakers of his word, Atheiſts of his Spirit, Deiſts of his revelations, 357. reaſons why the world think ſo little of Chriſt, ibid. what right thoughts of Chriſt are, 359. what it is in and about Chriſt our thoughts ſhould go out upon, 340, —344. 361, —366. the duty of thoſe who have right thoughts of him, 367. evidences of thoſe who have true love to Chriſt, 87, —90. 413. who are partakers of Chriſt by the promiſe, in his death, life, righteouſneſs, ſtrength, boldneſs, 415.
Chriſt, the ſaving ſight; or a view of God in Chriſt, 440. of the oneneſs betwixt him and the Father, 441. that there is ſuch an oneneſs, proven, 442 negatively, wherein this oneneſs doth not conſiſt, ibid. poſitively, wherein it doth conſiſt, ibid. ten remarks opening up the nature of ſeeing Chriſt, 443. in what capacity Chriſt is to be conſidered when we ſee the Father in him, 447. in what reſpects they who ſee Chriſt ſee the Father, 448. in what manner the Father is ſeen in Chriſt, 451. reaſons why the Father is ſeen in Chriſt, 452. the danger of denying him, and how fearfully he was humbled, 454. the excellency of Chriſt in being one with the Father, 455. his mediatory actings infinitely valuable, his infinite ability to ſave, not alone in the work of redemption, his glorious excellency in being adorned with all divine perfections and one with the Father, 455. his preciouſneſs, 457. an honour to be conformed to him, 458. dangerous to ſlight him, 459. marks to know if we have ſeen this great ſight, 460, —468. is the true and eternal God, 509. his glorious dignity and everlaſting excellency, 560. all honour and pre eminence to be aſcribed to him, becauſe it is God's great deſign to exalt him, ibid. compared to all things, and brought off with ſuperior excellency, 561. his followers have no reaſon to be aſhamed of him, ibid. the nature of his kingdom, 562. where he is to be ſeen, 563. who are his enemies, 563. what it is to come to him, 567. to whom his power is beneficial, 569. how he manifeſts himſelf to ſinners, 574. the means thereof, ibid. the manner of the manifeſtation, 575. the effects of it, 575. the reaſons of it, 580. makes a great and marvellous change, 583. how it may be known, ibid.
Chriſt, all things given into his hand, 601. the truth hereof demonſtrated, 614. ſome of theſe all things mentioned, 603. the import of the expreſſion, 604. the advantage of having all things in his hand, and what we may be ſure ſhall be effectuated, in conſequence thereof, 609. how precious he ſhould be to us on this account, ibid. the miſery of theſe who want him, and the happineſs of theſe who have him, ibid. the beauty of this diſpoſure of all things in his hand, evinced, 615. the extent of this ſtore enquired into, 617. the manner how all things are in his hand, 620. motives and conſiderations ariſing from this truth, 621. ſuitable directions offered, 623. repreſented as a Lamb in the midſt of the throne, 651. his enemies have ground to be afraid, 657. what kind of a ſeat he is to the ſoul, 676.
Chriſt's joyful approach chearfully welcomed by the church's echo of faith, 704. a fourfold coming, viz. in the fleſh, in the clouds, in the word, and in the Spirit, joyful both to him and them, 705. what makes his coming joyful to him, 706. what makes his coming joyful to his people, 707. what expreſſions of joy are imported in theſe words, Lo, I come! Behold, he cometh! 708. whence this conjunction of joys proceed, 709. evidences of his having come joyfully to his people, 711. on what account they may expect a meeting with him, 713. in what capacity they ought to give way to him, 722. what Chriſt is in himſelf, conſidered either in his natures, divine and human; or, in his perſon, viz. the union of theſe two natures, 734. what he is to God, particularly as his darling and repreſentative, ibid. what he is to ſinners, eſpecially the relation he ſtands in to them, what he has done for them, and ſtill doing, 735. has the fulneſs of the Godhead dwelling in him, 759. this fulneſs is a communicative fulneſs, ibid. the import of coming to him, 766. he is to be conſidered and honoured in his threefold office, of King, Prieſt, and Prophet, 772. when it may be ſaid, in a ſpiritual ſenſe, that he ſtoops down and waſhes his diſciples feet, 784. the import of coming to him, and the capacity

we

we are to view him in, when we come, 790. by what means gathered to him, viz. the blowing the great trumpet of the everlasting gospel, 791. the efficacy of these means, 793.
Christians, wherein the being and well-being of a Christian consists, 225. their walk laid open, 256, 259. the properties of the way, 260,—266. the excellency of it, 266. may grow evangelically, when they do not grow morally, 437. have no ground to be ashamed of a crucified Christ, 656. mount up with wings as an eagle, 748. what these wings are, 749. the things wherein they do not mount up, 750. what these things are wherein they do mount up, ibid. the particular seasons when they mount up, 751. the manner in which they mount up, 752. the reasons of it, ibid. evidences of these who are mounting up, 753.
Chrysostom, a saying of his, 325.
Church, order and stedfastness in the faith, denote the good constitution and temperament of a right church, 187. the judgment of the church of Scotland to be gathered from her standards, not from particular acts relative to doctrine, 224. The church militant and triumphant, the gathering places of the saints, 288. reforming, covenanting, confessing, suffering, and backsliding times, have been gathering times in the church, 302. Visible church, their privilege, 489. the invisible church, their special privilege, ibid. not safe to be without the church of God, 634. The church compared to a little city, 640. both besieged and delivered, 641, 642. her despicable case and dangerous circumstances, 646. who disturb her peace and destroy her foundations, 647. quite safe, because the Lamb is in the midst of the throne, 656. where her strength lies, 663. how dangerous her case, when not stedfast in the faith, 676. who are the greatest blessings to her, 700. the different state of the church visible and invisible, ibid. chearfully welcomes the Saviour's joyful approach, 704. when the Lord is absent from her all goes into confusion, 707. what would make happy days with her, 761. need not expect to be exempted from clouds of darkness, 783. the scattered church of Israel shall be gathered again to Jerusalem, 787. from what place, in what manner, by what means, and for what end, ibid.
Circumstances, the sinning circumstances of God's people, not inconsistent with his complacential love, 722. who these persons are whose sinning circumstances are inconsistent with his love, 723. the suffering and afflicted circumstances of the Lord's people not inconsistent with his love, ibid. who they are whose afflicted circumstances are inconsistent with his love, 724.
Citizens, their ingratitude and proneness to forget their deliverer, 645. the nature, object, universality, and reasons of this forgetfulness, ibid.
City, the little city besieged, and delivered, 639. Remarks, shewing in what respects the church is compared to a city, and a little city, 640. why to a city of men, and few men in it, 641. of the great siege laid against it, ibid. who the great King is, that besieges the city, and what bulwarks he uses, 641, 642. the deliverance of the city, and the raising of the siege, 642, the deliverer described, in his humanity, divinity, humility, destination, ibid. how the deliverance is effected, 643. wherein the matter of this great work consisted, ibid. the manner how it was brought about, 644. the ingratitude of the citizens, 645, 648.
Clarebachius, his last words when brought to the stake to be burnt, 782.
Clouds, what clouds are gathering in our sky, 326. Christ's coming in the clouds both joyful to him and his people, 706. clouds and darkness befal both the church and people of God in this world, 783.
Coloss, the church of the Colossians commended for their stedfastness in the faith, 187.
Combination and conjunction of joys, between Christ and his people, 704. whence these arise, 709. See Joys.
Comer's conflict: or, the beginner's battle with the devil, when essaying to come to Christ, by faith, 766, wherein this conflict consists, 767. an evidence of a true comer, 768.
Comfort to believers who praise God, 108. who have seen the glory and harmonious meeting of the divine attributes, 127. to those who are on the field of battle with their spiritual enemies, 494. to these who see all power in heaven and earth in Christ, 564. to the lovers of the Lamb, 661. to the mounting Christian, 754.
Commands of God, a child of God acknowleges himself a breaker of them all, 407. Sin is a transgression of all the commands, 498.
Commendations of Christ, what gives rise to them, 572. the matter of them, 577. the manner of them, 578. how this disposition may be known, 583. with what temper of soul we are to commend him, 587.
Commission of sin, Satan tempts thereto, 771. considerations to fortify against this, ibid.
Communicants, who are worthy and who unworthy communicants, 274. marks and characters of worthy ones, 657, 762.
Communion, the foundation of all true communion with God, 125. what is imported in having communion and converse with God, 740. includes his presence, vicinity, and amity, ibid. mutual intimation, commendation, counsels, confidence, care, assurances, and dedication the result of it, 741. evidences of those who enjoy communion with him, 744.
Communion-day, what would make a sweet and agreeable one, 710.
Communion-work, what is a fit and proper exercise before it, 685.
Comparison, Christ excells every thing he is compared to, 359.
Conformity, what it is of Christ the believer is to walk in conformity unto, 203.
Congregation, the happy congregation, 276. See Shiloh.
Conjunction and combination of joys between the Saviour and his people, 704. whence this proceeds, 709. See Joys Connexion, between receiving Christ and walking in him, 213. the reasons of this order, why Christ must be first received and then walked in, 215.
Conqueror, the conqueror of Israel's enemies described, from his name Jehovah and his relation to them, 474. the sole vanquisher of their enemies, 485.
Conquest, the gradual conquest; or, heaven won by little and little, 471. seven nations that must be conquered before heaven be obtained, 474. and four terrible kings must be subdued, 475. The conqueror of these nations and kings described from his name and relation, 476. the import of this relation, 478. the manner of the conquest, viz. powerfully and effectually, visibly and remarkably, and the import of both, 479.; gradually, and the meaning of his putting them out by little and little, 480. by what steps and degrees the conquest is carried on, both by Israel's Captain, in his own person, and by him in his soldiers, 481. the different fields they are led through, ibid. the warfare carried on by little and little, till the day of death, 483. the sad experiences believers have of the enemy's making dreadful sallies and successful excursions upon them, ibid. what sweet experiences they have of fresh succours and supplies from heaven, whereby the enemy is driven out and vanquished, 484. the reasons why the conquest is obtained alone by Israel's Captain, and why he vanquishes the enemies gradually, and not all at once, 485. what beasts would increase upon them if it were not so, 487. evidences of those who have commenced war with the nations, 491. See Nations.
Conscience, not pacified with inward graces and good qualifications, nor by outward duties, 527.
Conscience, several cases of conscience, concerning the absolute and conditional promises, stated and answered, 375. several other cases stated and solved, 381. concerning believing the promise, 382. Fifteen cases concerning the right use, improvement, and application of the promise propounded, and judiciously answered, 422. How Christ is made and can be a blessing, when God made him to be sin and a curse for us, answered, 468. Concerning coming to God and embracing Christ, 510. What resisting of sin is consistent with the dominion of it; and what prevalency of it, with being freed from the strength thereof, 528.
Consolation, to believers to whom the vail of the temple is rent, 18.
Contrast, betwixt the law, the gospel, and faith, 377.
Conversation, a gospel one commended, 751.
Conversion, the saints need to be oftner converted than at first, 490. in itself an inward miracle, 508.
Conviction, to the ungodly, 464. to those that are at peace with sinful nations of lusts, 493.
Convictions, when the Lord brings a person to embrace the offer of the gospel he causes him to pass under three convictions, 191. the difference between the convictions of the Spirit and the temptations of Satan, 767, 768.
Coronation, Christ's two coronation-days, 557.
Counsel, to those that are in league with their spiritual enemies, 493. and to those that are engaged in battle against them, 495. to the hovering soul, whether sinner or saint, 755.
Course of sin, the danger thereof, 675.
Covenant of works, originally made with the first Adam and his seed, and consisted of a precept, promise, and a sanction, 49. broken and cannot save us, ibid. four things of principal moment in it, viz. the tenor, the breach, our concern in it, and fatal effects of the breach of it, ibid. the difference between the covenant of works and grace, 61, 85, 634. the precept, promise, and penalty of it, 134, 135, 148, 160. not to be blended with the covenant of grace, 221. The covenant of works allegorically compared to Ishmael, 368. the security of it, 397. all unbelievers under the commanding power of it, 539.
Covenant of grace, what is, and what is not the condition thereof, 36. covenant of grace may be considered either in its original transaction from eternity, or in its actual manifestation in time, 49. none fit to perform the condition of it, but Christ, 50. how the grace of God is manifested in this covenant, ibid. an oneness betwixt its being made with Christ, and us in him, being in one and the same covenant, ibid. all the blessings of it first promised to him, and then to us in him, because he is the centre in whom all the lines of it meet, ibid. how Christ is the covenant, and in what respects he bears that name, 51. he is so radically, relatively, substantially, eminently, meritoriously, and efficaciously, 51, 52. and therefore, called, Mediator, Messenger, Witness, Surety, Servant, and Performer of it, ibid. For whom Christ is a covenant, viz. the people, 52. there are two copies of this covenant or charter, the original recorded in heaven, with all the names of the church invisible in it; and the extract of it writ in the Bible, ibid. for whom Christ was given for a covenant, 53. ordained of the Father to be so, 55. the glorious manner of his ordination, ibid. and the gracious motive and ground of it, 57. the reasons why he was given for a covenant, ibid. the difference between the covenant of works and grace, 61, 85, 634. and the covenant of grace and the covenant of duties, 62. the transcendent excellencies of the covenant of grace, pointed out from a view of some of its qualities, 62, 71. the duty of all to embrace it, 63. motives to persuade to it, 64. answers all objections, 65. a warm expostulation to comply with it, 65,—70. difficulties solved, 70, 71. allegorically compared to Isaac, 368. absolutely free and unconditional to believers, 373. all the graces and blessings of it free, 391. the basis of its security, 397. two dispensations of it, 477. Faith's plea upon God's covenant, 678. what covenant it is he will have respect unto, 679. the various names and designations given to the covenant, ibid. what is it for God to have respect unto the covenant, and when it may be said he hath it, ibid. the import of his having respect unto the covenant, ibid. what it is in the covenant God hath respect unto, 680. and what kind of a respect he hath to it, ibid. why he will have respect to it, ibid. In having respect to the covenant he hath respect to himself, and all his perfections; to Christ, and all his purchase; to the Spirit, and all his offices; to his people, and all their circumstances, 680, 681. what kind of respect believers have to the covenant, 681. how it suits the different cases, both of saints and sinners, and how these ought to plead upon the covenant in the various circumstances they may be in, 682, 683. it contains all salvation, as a covenant of grace, 683, 684. all the blessings of it eternal, and built upon a sure foundation, 758, 760.
Covenanting, public and national, the duty and honour of a land, 62. once the glory of Scotland, ibid. our defection therefrom much prevailing, though still obligatory, ibid.
Covenanting, personal, what meant thereby, 62. what is prerequisite to personal covenanting, 178. Wherein the true nature of it consists, 418.

Covenants, the breach of our covenants, national and solemn league, the disgrace of our nation, and ground of humiliation, 178, 419. what is necessary to reviving of them, 179, 419. binding upon posterity, 62, 303. to disparage them more criminal than to break, burn, and bury them, 489.
Curse, all men by nature under it, 403.
Cyrus, was a type of Christ, 788. proclaims liberty to the captive Israelites, ibid.

D

DAVID, was a strong believer, 684. how his faith wrought, ibid.
Day, the day of the believer's espousals and consummation, 3. Christ's two coronation days, 557.
Death, law-death, gospel-life, 131. the nature, object, and means of this death, 132. the necessity of the believers dying to the law, in point of justification, in order to living to God in point of sanctification, evinced, 133, 145. what the law is, he is dead to, 134. what it is in the law he is dead to, 135. the import of this death, 136. the qualities of it, 137. the means of it, 138. the influence it hath on living to God, 145,—149.
Death, the day of death a gathering day to the saints, 312. wherein death external, internal, and eternal consists, 505. what these things are that death cannot divest a person of, 664. how a person may know if their time of death will be a time of love, 728, 729. the second death described, 789.
Death of Christ, how to be viewed, viz, in the cause, severity, sufficiency, and acceptableness of it, 447. satisfied justice to the full, and paid all the debt the law could crave, 449. what made it so dreadful to him before he suffered, 506.
Debt, Christ paid, by his obedience, the immense debt to divine justice, 735.
Definition, viz. of mercy in God, 93. of faith as it is a receiving Christ, 193, 209, 221, 569. of repentance, 308. of the gospel, 404. of saving faith, 491. of holiness, 628. of divine worship, 794.
Deliverance of the church when besieged, by the great king, 642. See City.
Demonstrations proving that all things are in Christ's hand, 614.
Desertion, what ground the Lord's people have to sing when deserted, 101.
Designs, what love-designs may God be carrying on by wrath-like dispensations of providence, 721. what glorious and merciful designs, 723.
Desire, when may the believer's desire be said to be holy, 731. how their desires operate, 81, 751.
Devil, throws a kind of fascination and deception over our eyes, 678. knows God and Christ, but has no love to them, 750. pride was his ruin, ibid. assaults those who come to Christ, 767. a cruel enemy to immortal souls, ibid. an enemy to true faith, 768. fix of his horrid temptations condescended upon, and arguments laid down to fortify against them, 769, —774.
Dialogue, one between a Christian and a Gentile, 771.
Directions, how to live unto God, 165. how to walk in Christ, 272. to gather to Shiloh, 333. to plead the promise, 428. to live upon the promise, 434. to inlist with Christ, 493. to engage our spiritual enemies, 495.
Discoveries, what the gospel discoveries are, 545. the means by which saving discoveries of Christ are brought about, 574. the manner of them, ibid. the effects of them, 576. the reasons of them, 580. very rare, 582. evidences of them, 583. partial in this life, but perfect in the world to come, 781.
Dispensation, the New-testament one excells that of the old, 477. the great advantage of a clear gospel-dispensation, 524.
Dispensations of providence, wrath-like ones may notwithstanding be times of love, 720. in what respects they may be so, ibid. what love-designs may be carrying on by these wrath-like dispensations, 721. what love appears in them, ibid. what instructive lessons we should learn from them, 722. God's dispensations may be sometimes very dark and mysterious, 775, —779.
Distress, persons in coming to Christ for help may have their distress grow upon their hand before their deliverance come, 766. this illustrated from scripture instances, ibid. in what respects they may grow worse, 767. the reasons of this dispensation, viz. to shew the wisdom and power of God, check unbelief, raise our esteem of his mercies, and try our faith, ibid.
Division, outward church-division and inward heart-division, causes why Christ is so little thought of, 358. an evidence of perilous time, 666.
Doctrine of grace, why opposed by the devil, 150. the dangerous and damnable influence of legal doctrine, 531.
Doctrines, fundamental, few and clear, 188. several false doctrines refuted, 221. the dangerous influence of new doctrines of a legal strain, 539. what false doctrines are abounding, 666.
Dominion, the difference between the power of prevalency, and the power of dominion of sin, 492.
Doubters, two sorts of them, viz. waking and mourning, sleeping and slumbering, 736. relief and comfort tendered to both, ibid. their duty pointed out, viz. to hear God's loving cries after them, ibid. a variety of these love-cries mentioned, ibid.
Duty, the duty of the Lord's people, to sing of mercy and judgment, 109. joyfully to receive the news of the divine perfections harmonizing, 128. of those who have right thoughts of Christ, 367. of unbelievers, under the power of sin, and believers, who are delivered from the strength of sin, 532. of saints, to sit down and rest upon a God in Christ, 676. and sinners, to sit still and abide in Christ by faith, ibid. of both saints and sinners, to plead that God may have respect to the covenant, 682. of unbelievers, to consider their dangerous state, and fly from the wrath to come, 701. of believers, to be joyful in the promise, and fruitful in the work of faith, 703. to come and take the waters of life freely, inforced by several considerations, 763. The duty of these towards whom the Lord's way is hid and unknown, 785. of such who never knew any of his ways, 789. The duty of people to pray for ministers, and receive their message, 796.
Duties of religion, no just ground to blame them, 768. Satan tempts to the omission of them, 770. how he ought to be foiled herein, ibid. prompts to heart-wandering in them, ibid. advices to fortify against this, ibid.

E

EAGLE, the mounting Christian; or, eagle-winged believer, 748. Christians mount up with wings as eagles, 749. what the wings are wherewith they are mounted up, viz. the influences of the Spirit, ibid. the wings wherewith they mount up, viz. faith and love, 750. a negative and positive view of the things wherein they do not, and wherein they really do mount up, ibid. the particular seasons of it, 751. the manner of it, like an eagle, 752. the parallel stated, ibid. the reasons why they mount up with wings like an eagle, ibid. evidences of these who are mounting up on wings like eagles, Elect, the certainly of their conversion, 61.
Eloquence, human, quite insufficient, without the power of God, to reach the heart, 723.
Encouragements to receive Christ, 217, 239.
Enemies, who are Christ's enemies, 563. they may have a quaking heart, 657. their proper duty, 660.
Engagement, the best bond; or, the surest engagement, 167. what engagements Christ, as our Surety, came under when he engaged his heart to approach unto God, 171. what kind of an approach he made when he thus engaged, 172. how God is to be viewed to whom he engaged to approach, ibid. in what station he engaged to approach God, 173. the singularity of this engagement, 174. the manner of it, ibid. the reasons thereof, 176. the sufficiency of the Engager, 170. How sinners ought to engage to duty, and approach to God, ibid. considerations inducing to it, 181. the misery of those who are not engaged to him, 183. evidences of those who have engaged, 185.
England, did not reform so purely as Scotland, 303. her dangerous circumstances on account of the spreading of innumerable errors, 666.
Enmity, where it may be got slain, 86.
Enoch, his character, 204, 227, 298, 751.
Errors, several doctrinal errors refuted, 221. sundry practical errors reproved, 224, 357. what errors are abounding in Scotland and England, 666, 671.
Espousals, the day of, when it takes place, and how consummated, 3.
Esteem of Christ, a fourfold lodging where it resides, 347. what good reason there is for it, 657.
Eternity, the thoughts of it ought to engross our attention, 733.
Examination, marks of these who are espoused to Christ, 5. of those who have the vails of a broken covenant, the injured perfections of God, and sin, rent to them, 15. of such as have that love to God which is a fruit and effect of his love to them, 86,—90. Evidences of these that are dead to the law in point of justification, 153. of those that are living to God, 155. of those that have received Christ, 225. and are walking in him, 229. of those who have right thoughts of Christ, 359. of those who have got a saving sight of Christ, 460. of those who have the spiritual life commenced, and progressively going forward, 491. of those who are delivered from the law of works as it is the strength of sin, 542. of those who have got saving discoveries of Christ, 583. of those who are saved for his name's sake, 599. of those who are members of the house of God, 636. of those who are in a safe state, 649. of those who are the true seed of Jacob, 701. of those who have had a joyful meeting with Christ, 711. of those who have shared of the wonderful love of God in Christ, 718. of those whose time of trouble has been a time of love, 724. of these who have enjoyed the presence of God, and communion with him, 744. of these who are mounting up to God upon eagle's wings, 753. of such as have heard God's voice in the trumpet of the gospel, 796.
Examination, self, the best rule for self-examination, 353.
Exhortation, viz. to match with Christ as our Husband, 7. to be suitably exercised for the vail of the temple being rent, 20. to embrace the man that is God's fellow, 37. to all to take hold of the covenant first, and then the seal thereof, 63. to seek a view of God's love, and render him love for love, 90. to these that are alive to the law, and those that are dead to it, 163. to unbelievers who have not received Christ, 233. to believers who have received him, 255. to sinners who have never gathered to Shiloh, 327. to these who have gathered to him, 334. to embrace Christ, and to entertain right thoughts of him, 366. to sinners to flee to their hope, 397,—400. to these who are, and are not, children of the promise, 426,—438. and then to all in general, 438. to unbelievers to come and see the Father in Christ, 465. to believers who have seen him, to prove it and improve it, 467. to sinners in general, to throw themselves on Christ for salvation from the strength of sin, 509. to believers who have fled to Christ from it, 512. to unbelievers who are under the law, and so under the commanding and condemning strength of sin, 546. to believers who are not under the law, and so delivered from the strength of sin, 547. to come to Christ, to be interested in his power, 565,—568. to believers, who have got saving discoveries of Christ, 585. to unbelievers, who are yet strangers to him, 588. to sinners and believers, on account of God's saving for his name's sake, 600. to come to Christ as a full and sufficient Saviour, 613. to these who are without the house of God, 637. to these who are within it, 638. to close with Christ, 650. to match with the Lamb of God, 659, 660. to embrace him in whom all the promises are, 702. to welcome Christ's Lo I come! with a Behold he cometh! 712. to those whose time never was a time of love, 733. to these whose time has been a time of love, 736. to these who have enjoyed his presence, 745. to such who know nothing of his presence, 746. to these who never mounted up to God, 754. to these who are tempted and torn of the devil, 769. to all sinners, who are yet in their lost state, 797.
Extremity, the time of the saints greatest extremity, the very time when the Lord shews himself most graciously, 716.
Exoneration, in what respects we are to exonerate ourselves, 675.

F

FACULTY, a fourfold one, viz. intellective, elective, prosecutive, and retentive, 347.

Faith, the saving nature and essence of justifying faith, 36, 394, 457, 491, 569, 684. faith and repentance, may be called gospel-commands, if you speak of the dispensation of the gospel; but viewed as duties, are commanded in the law, 60. the nature of faith, and its appropriating quality, ibid. the ground of faith that all the hearers of the gospel have, ibid. is a fruit of God's love, 77. the harmony of the divine attributes, a ground for its boldness, 126. has its acts in receiving Christ, 188. something supposed that it relates to, ibid. something imported that it consists in, 193. the nature of this act unfolded, by viewing the qualities of it, 193, 205. the object of it considered, 195, 206, 218. the capacities or respects in which the object is received, 197, 207, 239, 242, 244. the nature and excellency of it, 218. never alone, but joined with gospel-obedience, 220. the doubtsome faith of the papists exploded, 194, 221. the modern Independents notion of it, (which is a popish one,) in rejecting the appropriating act, refuted, 218, 221, 296, 582, 685. the difference between saving and justifying faith, 198, 218. justifying faith, not merely an assent to the truths of the gospel, 221. a definition of it, ibid. fiducial application in the nature of justifing faith, 194, 221, 296, 582, 685. justifying faith preceeds sanctification, 222. the nature and evidences of saving faith, 225, 611, 711. particularly how it was created by the Spirit, 225. how it was acted in the soul, 227. what is the food of it, 228. how it differs from sense, 245, 295, 394. advances the believer to the highest dignity, ibid. quickens every other grace, ibid. excites to duty, 246. promotes communion with God, ibid. what means are necessary to advance it, 247. and how they are to be used, 248. what the impediments of faith are, ibid. wrong objects of faith, 249. six different pleas or arguments that faith uses with God, 250. of the priority of faith to repentance, 300, 582. runs through the whole of the believer's life, ibid. what are, and what are not the proper grounds of it, 308. not the condition of the covenant of grace, 373. a contrast betwixt the law, the gospel, and faith, 377, 402. both the weakest and the strongest thing in the world, 392. the proper object of it, ibid. the difference betwixt faith and spiritual sense; or, the assurance of faith and the assurance of sense, ibid. the difference between faith and hope, ibid. faith and repentance to be considered three ways, and whether gospel-commands, or not, 395. whether the gospel promises life upon condition of faith, 395, 428. the trial of faith, by stating the difference between the believer's faith, and Abraham's, 410. a fourfold faith, that does not amount to a genuine one, ibid. evidences of those who live by faith on the promise, 412. the excellency of a life of faith, 431. what glory faith brings to God, and what way it glorifies him, 433. the object of it great and glorious, 454. the grounds of it not to be confounded with the effects of it, 511. justifying faith, the root of a holy life, 525. the genuine nature of it, 562. carries a particular persuasion of salvation in it, ibid. not a necessary condition of salvation, 598. what is the ultimate refuge of it, ibid. what is the surest ground and strongest encouragement for faith, 606,—626. nothing to impede our matching with Christ by faith, 611. how faith comes, 623. the nature of stability in the faith opened, 667. four degrees of denying the faith, 668. what it is to know the word of faith, to have the grace of faith, to make a profession of faith, and to yield the obedience of faith, ibid. an adherence to the faith, and a perseverance in it enjoyned, 669. a six-fold work of an established faith, 673. eight evidences of a strong faith, 676. its plea upon God's covenant, 678. wherein lies the suitableness and force of faith's plea upon God's covenant, 680, 681. how both saints and sinners ought to plead upon the covenant in their various circumstances, 683. faith works by believing God's word, and acts by pleading the accomplishment of the promise, 684, 685. [See Covenant.] its plea upon God's word, 684. it is the business of faith to take God at his word, ibid. to put him to his word, to do as he hath said, 685. in what manner it takes the word of God, and how it pleads the accomplishment of the promise, ibid. what arguments it pleads upon, ibid. the reasons why it is the business of faith to take God at his word, and put him to it, ibid. how the word of promise is adapted to the circumstances of the sinner, 685,—689. the ground of faith immutable, 700. See Word.

Father, his love antecedent to the merit of Christ, 268. of the oneness betwixt the Father and the Son, 441. this oneness viewed both negatively and positively, 442. in what capacity the Father is to be considered when we see him in Christ, 447. in what respects they who see Christ, see the Father, 448. in what manner the Father is seen in Christ, 451. reasons why those who see Christ see the Father, 452. how we may know if we have seen the Father in Christ, 460, 468. See Sight.

Fathers, some of their sayings, 333, 503.

Feast, on what account may the Lord's people expect that Christ will come to the sacramental feast, 713.

Feathers, the mounting Christian throws off the feathers of self-righteousness and self-conceit, 753, 754.

Feet, in what respects it may be said, that Christ condescends, in a spiritual sense, to wash his disciples feet, 784.

Fellow, Christ God's fellow, 22. in what respect he is so, 23. why it behoved him to be so, 24.

Fellowship with God, the harmony of the divine attributes the foundation of it, 125. the sweetness of fellowship with God in Christ, 711.

Female preacher, 572. See Preacher, Woman, Samaria.

Flesh, Christ's coming in the flesh both joyful to him and his people, 706.

Food, how the Lamb feeds his church and people, 655. what kind of food it is he feeds them with, ibid.

Followers of Christ have no reason to be ashamed of him, 561. what comfort and encouragement is afforded them, 563.

Forgetfulness, the nature of it, 645. the object thereof, ibid. the universality of it evinced, in a variety of instances, ibid. the reason from whence it flows, 646.

Formality in religion, an evidence of unstable times, 667.

Freedom, what the receiver of Christ is freed from, 239.

Fulness, in Christ there is a fulness of authority, Spirit, righteousness, yea, of all divine relations, perfections, names, offices, promises, blessings, and all things, 237, 448, 449, 551,—555, 603, 604, 763. this fulness a communicative fulness, 759.

G

GARMENT, a two-fold gospel garment, viz. the imputed and imparted righteousness of Christ, 266, 545.

Gathering, of the gathering of the people to Shiloh, 276. of the persons gathered, the place, manner, and certainty of their gathering, 278. remarks opening up the nature of this gathering, 279. different kinds of gatherings, certain gatherers, sundry places from whence the gathering is made, and several things supposed and imported in gathering to Shiloh, 279,—284. what kind of people are gathered, 284. to whom they are gathered, 287. in what respects they are gathered to Shiloh, 289. in what manner, 290. by what means, 291. The qualities of this gathering, 292. (1.) On God's part, ibid. (2.) On the peoples, 294. what they gather to him for, 301. the seasons of their gathering, 302, 303. with respect to the church in general, ibid. the initial gathering of sinners in particular, 305. the progressive gathering of believers, 306. the consummate gathering of saints, 312. See Shiloh.

Generation, the present one delineated in eight particulars, and the greatest part shown to be rejecters of Christ, 238.

Gentiles, of whom descended, 58. Christ given as a covenant to them, 47, 52. their name described, and displayed, 53, 54. their gathering to Shiloh, 284. [See Shiloh.] God's sovereign mercy to the Gentile nations, 320.

Gift, two excellent ones given to men, Christ and faith, 233.

Glasses, the saints have several of them that they view themselves in, 585.

Glory, how Christ's absolute, comparative, and relative glory is manifested, 4. what glory faith brings to God, and how it glorifys him, 433. how the glory of God shines more conspicuously in Christ, than in all other representations, 734.

God, a display of his goodness, severity, and sovereignty, 34. how agreeably he speaks of and to Christ, 48. the subject matter of his discourse, viz. the great mystery of the covenant of redemption, or grace, ibid. how he loves his people, 75, 89. in what manner he hates sin, 89. ignorance of God the cause of a legal spirit, 160. what of God is in Christ, 237, 328. in what respect man hath to do with God, 370. who are partakers of the promise as it relates to God, 414. what glory faith brings to God, and what way it glorifys him, 433. a threefold distance between God and man, 440. the greatness of his glory and grace, 456. the import of the relative designation, Thy God, 477. nothing so opposite to him as sin, 499. the opposition stated, ibid. God's righteousness, how taken in scripture, 536. the danger of being ignorant, ibid. all his designs are for exalting Christ, 560. His great name, the ground and reason of saving great sinners, 590. [See Name.] His infinite love in giving him to be a sacrifice, 609. his infinite wisdom hath out-witted the policy of the devil, ibid. both a promising and performing God, 690. he will perform what he hath promised in his own time, 690, 691. how he speaks to a soul when he pays them a visit, 695. how he performs what he speaks, ibid. in what respects he may be said to leave his people, and wherein he will not leave them, 697, 698. the reasons hereof, 698, 699. Sinners time of need his time of love, 713. what kind of a time his time of love is, 714.

God-head, dwelling in flesh, the world's wonder, 237. the fulness thereof dwelling in Christ, a communicative fulness, 759.

God-man, the centrical place for God and man to meet in, 225.

God's house, the church is so called, and in what respect it is so, 628. who are the members of this house, and what sort of a house it is, ibid. See Church.

Gospel, a bundle of good news and gracious promises, 60. largely taken for the dispensation of it, hath the whole law in it, ibid. the great difference between the law and the gospel, 125, 367, 394, 404, 711. hath no tendency to licentiousness, 149, 219. ignorance of it the cause of a legal temper, 161. the duty of all who hear it, 37, 180, 392, 563. the nature and excellency of it, 218, 390. the efficacy of it, 320, 390. how impeded by unbelief, 242. who are included in the call thereof, 286. the great mean of gathering sinners to Christ, 291. what it is to believe it, 377. A contrast between the gospel, the law, and faith, 377, 402. The happiness of that nation that hath the gospel, and the misery of those that want it, 405. compared to a great pipe, and the promises to lesser pipes answering the particular circumstances of saints and sinners, 438. no new law, 523. what hinders the success of it, 526. what is in it that strengthens holiness, 545. what the attractive charms of it are, ibid. on whom the virtue and efficacy of it depends, 560. wherein the glory and power of it consists, 761. the duty of all who hear it, 763. compared to a great trumpet, 787. why compared thereto, 791. what sort of a sound it gives, 793. what makes it effectual, 796. evidences of these who have heard God's voice in it, ibid.

—— law-death, gospel-life, 131. See Gospel, Law.

Gospel-believer, wherein he differs from a legal one, 396.

Gospel-commands, whether faith and repentance be so, or not, 395.

Gospel-dispensation, the great advantage of a clear one, 524. the slighting thereof an evidence of unstable times, 667.

Gospel-doctrine, branded with novelty, &c. 70, 149, 178, 198, 384, 531. wherein it differs from legal, 396. much opposed by the devil and wicked men, 531.

Gospel-feast, Christ given for a covenant to the people, the marrow of it, 63.

Gospel-hearers, their duty, 392.

Gospel-holiness, of manifold necessity in the new covenant, 59.

Gospel-hypocrite, how differenced from the legal-hypocrite, 395.

Gospel-liberty, wherein it consists, and wherein it doth not consist, 219.

Gospel-ministry, the great design thereof, 356.

Gospel-obedience, how it ought to be influenced, 59, 85.

Gospel-offer, not to be clogged with legal terms and conditions, 57. Christ given freely to all therein, and to some in actual possession, ibid. the gospel-offer is to all, 61. to whom made, 189. upon what ground, 190. for what end, 191. difficult to be believed, ibid. in what capacity Christ is therein offered, 209. nineteen of them mentioned, 210,—212.

Gospel-principle the foundation of gospel-practice, 186. the reasons thereof, 199.

Goſpel-repentance, wherein it differs from legal, 396.
Goſpel-ſpirit, promotes reformation in the church, 405. and is a ſpirit of liberty, 419.
Grace, a twofold denial of grace, viz. in point of juſtification, and in point of ſanctification, 201. the freedom of it, 391. the ſovereignty of it, 404. the ſtrength of it, in conquering ſin, 508. twelve inſtances of the ſtrength of it, 533. what encouragement grace gives to obey the law as a rule, 547. the marvellous nature of it, in finding out a Saviour, 646. the freedom, power, and wiſdom of it, ground of admiration, 718. a perſon may be in a ſtate of grace, and yet not aſſured of it, 729. the grace of God to ſinners is reigning and enthroned grace, 759.
Graces, an enumeration of the eſtabliſhing graces, 677.
Gratitude, three ways expreſſed and recommended, 418.
Gueſt, what ſort of gueſts ſin and Satan are, 240.
Guide, Chriſt the guide of his people, 231. what kind of a Guide he is to them, ibid.

H

HAGAR, allegorically put for the law, or covenant of works, 368.
Hamilton, (Mr. Patrick,) a quotation of his concerning good works, 223.
Happineſs, Chriſt's perfect obedience the proper condition of it, 135. wherein the happineſs of the ſaints conſiſts, 651, 761.
Harmony, the harmony of the divine attributes diſplayed, 112. [See Attributes.] The harmony of the glorious Trinity, 769. of the church militant and triumphant, ibid.
Haters of God, a word of terror to them, 91.
Heart, what the believer's heart is rent for and from, 16. Chriſt engaged to approach God as Surety with all his heart, 175. and why he did ſo, 176. A contraſt between the heart of man and the law of God, 498.
Heart-wanderings in duty, Satan mightily tempts thereto, 770. gets much aſſiſtance from the evil heart, and the multitude of buſineſs, ibid. how to defeat him in his deſigns herein, ibid.
Heaven, what is the way to it, and what acceſs we have there, 14. what the motto inſcribed on the gates of it is, 75. what a ſweet place it is, and what ſinging muſt be there, 107. Chriſt the way to it, and holineſs the walk, 220. what a happy place it is, 458. won by little and little, 461. what nations are to be conquered before winning to it, 474. a deſcription of it, 697. the reaſon believers have to long for it, 783.
Heaven's grand repoſitory; or, the Father's love to the Son, and depoſiting all things into his hand, a ſtrong encouragement to faith, 601. See Father, Son, Love.
Help, the Lord Jeſus the mighty One on whom the help of ſinners was laid, 536. help in time of need, ſecured to all God's people, 736. rules to be obſerved in ſeeking help in time of need, ibid. ſecret ſupport may be given, yet ſatisfying help may be delayed for a time, ibid. the cauſes of this are both relative to ourſelves and the public, 738, 739.
Holineſs, cannot be ſatisfied without a complete obedience, 10. a fruit of God's love, 77.
Holy Ghoſt, wherein the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt conſiſteth, 242.
Holy of holies, of the believer's acceſs thereinto by the death of Chriſt, 8. this acceſs is two-fold, incohative and conſummative, 12. what underſtood by the moſt holy, 627. remarks opening up the privilege of acceſs to the moſt holy place, 632. this acceſs obliges all to be a moſt holy people, 634.
Honour, all pre-eminence and honour to be aſcribed to Chriſt, 560.
Hope, the difference between faith and hope, 394. the Father's giving all things into Chriſt's hand, the ſureſt ground and ſtrongeſt encouragement for hope, 606.
Houſe, what kind of a houſe Chriſt is to his people, 331. the law of God's houſe, 627. in what reſpect the church is God's houſe, 628. who are the members, and what ſort of a houſe the church is, ibid. how holineſs is the law of the houſe, 630. the import of the ingemination, ibid. the extent of the law of holineſs, 630, 631. God's houſe not lawleſs, 633. in what reſpect the law of the houſe is violate, 634. See Church.
Houſhold of God, few appear to be of it, 634.
Humiliation, a fruit of faith, 582. the difference between humility and pride ſtated, 586. two-fold humiliation of Chriſt, 623.
Hypocrites, for the moſt part, cannot be differenced from the ſaints, 86. the difference between the legal and goſpel hypocrite, 225, 395. hypocrites may reſiſt ſin, and yet remain under the dominion of it, 528. becauſe ſin is never broken in them, ibid.

I

IGNORANCE of God, the law, the goſpel, and Chriſt's righteouſneſs, cauſes of a legal temper and ſpirit, 160. and the reaſon why the world thinks ſo little of Chriſt, 357.
Illumination, ſaving, the beſt antidote againſt Arianiſm, 582.
Indenture, the articles of that one between God the Father, and Chriſt the Son, concerning redeeming mankind ſinners, 48.
Independents, getting footing in Scotland, 634. the modern ones denying the appropriating act of faith, refuted, 194, 281, 221, 296, 324, 360, 402, 491, 569, 685.
Indulgence, when granted, and by whom accepted, 529.
Infidelity, the principles of, too much upon the increaſe in Scotland, 671.
Influence, dying unto the law hath a phyſical and moral influence on living unto God, 146.
Ingratitude, the church's matchleſs ingratitude to her deliverer, 645, 646, 648.
Impediment, what the impediments of faith are, 248.
Improvement, what improvement the believer is to make of Chriſt in walking in him, 203.
Inſtability, unbelief the mother of it, 243. dangerous in perilous times, 666. the evil and diſadvantage of it, 674.
Interceſſion, what Chriſt's interceſſion, founded upon his oblation, is an antidote againſt, 343.
Iſaac, Sarah's ſon, allegorically repreſents the covenant of grace, 368. is a child of a gracious promiſe, 382. the parallel ſtated in ten particulars, ſhewing that believers, as he was, are children of the promiſe, 382, — 386.
Iſhmael, Hagar's ſon, allegorically ſets forth the law, or covenant of works, 368, 384. all Iſhmaelites, and legaliſts, want to be ſaved by their works, 406.
Iſrael, the true Iſrael of God characteriſed, 472. ſeven mighty nations that vex them in their way to the heavenly Canaan, 474 four terrible kings that muſt be ſubdued, 475. the parallel betwixt the church of Scotland and Iſrael, 486. the ſcattered church of Iſrael ſhall be gathered together and brought back to Jeruſalem, 787. from what place, in what manner, by what means, and for what end they ſhall be gathered, ibid.

J

JACOB, his verdict of the tribe of Judah, and his foretelling that the ſceptre and giving of the law was to remain with that tribe till the coming of Shiloh, 276. on what account called Iſrael, 473. obliged to fly from his father's houſe, on account of the wrath of his brother Eſau, 690. had a ſignal interview with God at Bethel, ibid. in what ſenſe it is ſaid the Lord will not leave Jacob, nor his ſpiritual ſeed, till he hath done what he hath ſpoken to them of, 697, 698. how and when he performs what he promiſes, 695, 696. the reaſons why God will not leave them till he hath performed his promiſe, 698, 699. God confirms his new name and promiſe, 740.
Japhet, the origin of the Gentiles, 58. the great promiſe to Noah concerning him, ibid.
Jehovah, and Jehovah-Elochim, the ſignification thereof, 476.
Jeruſalem, the city of, threatened by Sennacherib, 663. antiently the place of public worſhip, 795.
Jeruſalem, New, the meaning thereof, 368.
Jeſus, what it is to receive Chriſt as Jeſus, 197, 207. his glorious dignity and everlaſting excellency, 560 poſſeſt of a glorious imperial throne, and a glorious mediatory fulneſs, 763. See Chriſt's Lord.
Jews, of whom deſcended, 58. a heavy chrage exhibited againſt them, 245. their notion that the Meſſias is not come, refuted, 277. their doleful ſtate at preſent, 319. ſeek a ſign from Chriſt, 677.
Jewiſh church, the moſt remarkable event that befel her of old, 714.
Job, had four terrible meſſages brought to him ſucceſſively, 747.
Joy, the qualities of a heavenly and ſpiritual joy, 709.
Joys, the combination and conjunction of joys; or, the joyful approach of the Saviour, chearfully welcomed by the church's echo of faith, 704. what expreſſions of joy, in the Saviour, is imported in theſe words, Lo, I come! 708. what expreſſions of joy is imported in the echo, from the church, Behold, he cometh! 709. whence is this combination and conjunction of joys, ibid
Judgment, of ſinging of mercy and judgment, 93. the various acceptations of judgment, 97. what judgments the Lord's people meet with, 68. what it is in or about judgment that is matter of a ſong, 99.
Judgment, the day of, a gathering day to the ſaints, 311. a ſeparating day between the ſheep and the goats, 313. the awfulneſs thereof, 459. what will be the rule of it, 469.
Juſtice cannot be ſatisfied without a complete ſatisfaction, 10. the ſword of juſtice awaked againſt God's fellow, 22. what kind of a ſtroke this ſword gave, 28. the qualities of this ſword, ibid. the manner how it awaked, 30. the ſpecial hand that Jehovah the Lord of hoſts had in its awaking, 31. the reaſons why it did awake, ibid. juſtice exhibits a charge againſt man as a rebel, 511. viewed as retributive and vindictive, 592. nothing ſatisfactory thereto but the abſolutely perfect obedience and meritorious righteouſneſs of Chriſt, 735, 772.
Juſtification, the difference between it and ſanctification ſtated and cleared, and the priority of the firſt to the laſt evinced, 85. the popiſh and Baxterian notions thereof, 156. Chriſt's righteouſneſs alone the ſole ground of a ſinner's juſtification, 198, 490. what faith unto juſtification is, 227. no juſtification by the deeds of the law, 490, 523. nor by any new or milder law than the law of works, 523. nor is juſtification partly by the law, and partly by the goſpel, 524. is the root of ſanctification, 525. a ſure foundation for it in the blood of Chriſt, 657.

K

KEYS, what keys hang at Chriſt's girdle, 555.
King, a great king beſieges the little city the church, 641. this great king conſidered as the Great God, the devil, ſin, and death, 641, 642.
Kings, four mighty kings that oppoſe the true Iſrael of God in their way to the heavenly Canaan, 475. what theſe four kings are, ibid. See Conqueſt, Canaan.
Kingdom, the nature of Chriſt's kingdom, 562.
Knowledge, the ſum of all Chriſtian knowledge lies in Chriſt, 354. how a perſon may know if their knowledge of Chriſt and the goſpel be of a ſpecial nature, 408. two kinds of knowledge, ſpeculative and practical, 583. a knowledge of the word of faith, and grace of faith, neceſſary, 668. four properties of ſaving knowledge, 732. ſingular in reſpect of the object, author, and ſubject of it, ibid.

L

LAMB in the midſt of the throne, 651. four periods wherein Chriſt is repreſented as a Lamb, 652. the deſcription given of him as a Lamb, ibid. a fourfold view of the throne on which he is ſeated, 653. on what account it is called a throne, ibid. how he comes to be upon the throne, ibid. what is imported in his being in the midſt of the throne, 654. the benefit of feeding that iſſues from his being there, 655. the duty of ſinners who hear the Lamb in the midſt of

of the throne, viz. to come and see him, and match with him, 658. what they see in him, and what kind of a match he is, ibid. an address to the enemies of the Lamb, 660. a word of comfort and advice to the lovers of the Lamb, 661, 662.
Lamb, the river of life, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb, 757. the import hereof, 759. See River.
Lamentation, that Christ hath so few brides, 5. over doctrinal and practical legalists, 156. over Christ-despisers, 366. over the disorders and irregularities of the house of God, 634. over the church as a besieged city, 647. for our forgetfulness of Christ, 649. for not mounting up to God, 753.
Lamentations, the book of, the remarkable manner in which it is wrote, 732. what is signified thereby, 733.
Law, only to be taken out of the hand of a Mediator, 60. one great difference between the law and the gospel, 125, 367, 711. ignorance of it the cause of a legal spirit, 160.
—— Law death, gospel-life, 131. the necessity of the believer's dying to the law in point of justification, evinced, 133, 150, 151. what that law is that he is dead to, 134. what it is in the law he is dead to, 135. the import of being dead to the law, 136. the qualities of this death, 137. the means by which it is brought about, 138. The law of itself can neither justify nor sanctify, 151. the misery of being alive to it, 152, 163. evidences of those that are dead to it, 153. and living to God, 155. A contrast between the law, the gospel, and faith, 377, 402. the difference between the law and the gospel, both in their nature and effects, 394, 395. when a person desires to be under it, 396. wherein legal and gospel-doctrine and legal and gospel repentance differ, 396. whether a person be begotten to a profession of religion by the power of the law or by the power of the gospel, 409. who are at liberty from the bondage of the law, 419. a contrast between the heart of man and the law of God, 498. law, taken more largely, for the whole revelation of God's mind; more strictly, for the old covenant-rule of perfect obedience, 513. viewed in its distinction, viz. formally, as a covenant of works; and materially, as a rule of life, ibid. considered in its parts, viz. the command, and sanction; in its properties, as holy, just, and good, 514. viewed in its revelation, as a broken law, a violated covenant, ibid. no justification by the deeds of the law, 490, 525. any new law, 523. who have underhand dealing with the law, 526. can never pacify the awakened conscience, ibid. nor heal the disease occasioned by sin, 532. has a standing force and binding power over all that are under it, by virtue of its command and curse, 535. all unbelievers under the gospel under this law, 539. requires more of the sinner than of sinless man, 540. believers not liable to the penal sanction of it by their new sins, 541. freedom from it obtained only by the absolutely perfect, and meritorious obedience of Christ, 735.
—— The strength of sin is the law, 496. what law is so, 497, 513. as sin took justifying strength from the law, so the law gives condemning strength to sin, and a commanding power over the sinner, ibid. what strength it gives to sin, 514. is the strength both of orignal and actual sin, 515. what actual sins it is the strength of, in eight particulars, 516. in what respects it is the strength of sin, in eight particulars, 518. four reasons why it is the strength of sin, 521. impedes the success of the gospel, 526. See Sin. Strength of Sin.
—— The law of God's house, 627. what law it is that is called the law of the house, 629. a threefold law that the house of God hath always had some concern in, viz the law of works, the law of faith, and the law of love, 629, 630. how holiness is the law of the house, and the import of the ingemination, 630. the extent of this law of holiness, 630, 631. in what respect the law of God's house is violate, 634. what the law of the house is with reference to these that are without, 637.
Law-charge, what it is, 377, 402.
Law-work, a few pieces thereof condescended upon, 139. the necessity of it, 150.
Legalist, a legal spirit condemned, 36. doctrinal and practical legalists reproved, 156. several legal errors in doctrine refuted, 221, 539. and legal-practices condemned, 224. their making their good works either the moving, meritorious, procuring, or instrumental cause of salvation, unhinged, 409. a legalist is the greatest enemy to the law, 531. cannot feed upon Christ and his righteousness, 656.
Licinius, a great persecutor of the Christians in the third century, 349.
Life, of the believer's life who is dead to the law, 132, 140. a negative and positive view of that life, 140, 141. Scriptural designations of it, 142. the import of its being called a life in general, where the parallel between natural life, and living to God, is opened up, 143. the import of its being called a living unto God, 144. evidences thereof, 155. a sure foundation laid for the hope of life in the blood of Christ, 657. the time of natural life, short and uncertain, 720.
Life of faith, the excellency of it, 431. how expressed in scripture, and the advantages of it, 664.
Life-time, how a person may know, if the particular periods of their life-time, as youth, middle age, old age, has been, and if the time of approaching death will be, a time of love, 727, 728, 729.
Light, four properties of saving light, 732.
Little, the little city besieged, and delivered, 639. See City.
Lord, what it is to receive Christ as a Lord, 197, 208. He will perform what he hath promised, 690. what he promises to do his people, 695. what he speaks of to them, 704. when absent from a church, all goes into confusion, 707. how he moulds sinners into conformity to himself, viz. preparatively, by the law; and effectively, by the gospel, 731. by what means carried on, ibid. the Lord's way of dealing towards his people may be many times dark and unknown to them, 774,—779. in what respects it may be so, 781. the reasons hereof, 788. the special seasons wherein he makes himself known, 781,—783.
Love, the Father's love to the Son evinced, 602. in what respect, and upon what account he loves him, 602, 603. the qualities and effects of his love, 603. his love evidenced, by giving all things into his hand, ibid. the import of this expression, 604. what love appears in this, 605. why he thus manifests his love to him, ibid. how this is a ground of faith, 606. how we ought love Christ, 609.
Love, the sinner's time of need, God's time of love, 713. what is to be understood by the love of God here, 722. what kind of a time God's time of love is, 714. most clearly evidenced at the time of the greatest need, 176. this is matter of the greatest wonder and admiration, 717, 718. evidences of those whose time of need has been a time of love, 718, 719. seeming anger, and wrath-like dispensations, may notwithstanding be a time of love, 720. in what respect they may be so, ibid. what love-designs may be carrying on by them, 721. what love appears in them, ibid. what lessons we may learn from them, 722. the sinning and suffering circumstances of his people not inconsistent with his love, ibid. how to know if the particular periods of our life, such as youth, middle-age, old-age has been, and the period of approaching death will be a time of love, 727, 728, 729. eight particular distressing cases mentioned, and all shewn to be consistent with a time of love, 730. what are the remarkable parts of it, 731. how this time of love commences, viz. preparatively, by the law; effectively, by the gospel, ibid. by what means it is carried on, ibid. no love like Christ's love, 735. several properties of it, 739. See Time of Need, Time of Love.
Love of God, the greatness of it to poor sinners, 59. A description of it, from the act, subject, object, and quality, 74. four observations concerning love, ibid. what things create love, 75. four remarks concerning the love of God, viz. that the fountain of it, is God the Father, the channel of it, Jesus Christ; the streams of it, are vastly great; the vessels into which it is poured, are sinners of mankind, ibid. the import of the expression, He first loved us, opened, 75. implying that his love is eternal, consisting of a love of destination and approbation, ibid. the object of the former, is every elect soul; the object of the latter, is every believer united to Christ, 76. his love is antecedent, first in point of time, and first in point of order of time, ibid. it is absolutely free; free, without force, reluctancy, merit, price, conditions, ibid. it is preventing love; preventing with respect to the object of it, the time of it, the dawning of it, and fruits and effects of it, 76, 77. prevents our holiness, faith, repentance, and prayers, 77, 78. the saints love to God evidenced by the nature, kinds, degrees, dimensions, properties, effects, extent, and grounds of it, 79,—83, 91. God's love to the saints the cause of their love to him, evinced by four considerations, 83. the influence his love has upon theirs is twofold, moral and physical, 84. the difference between God's love to the saints and their love to him, ibid. God's love can both kill our enmity, and quicken our love, 86. what kind of a love God bears to his people, 89. the duty of all to seek a view of God's love, and to render him love for love, 90, 91, 733. a word of comfort to the lovers of God, 92.
Love of Christ, a full feast to the believer, 13. qualities of a pretended love to Christ, 347. evidences of a true love to him, 413. the wonders of redeeming love, ground of admiration, 718.
Love-calls, love-visits, love-glances, love-tokens, given to the soul, in the time of God's love, 714, 715.
Love-cries, a variety of God's love-cries mentioned, 736. ought to have an echo, or loud cry made in return to them, 737. what these responsary cries are, ibid.
Love-feast, the sacrament of the supper one, 74.
Lover, of the promise and of Christ, evidences thereof, 413.
Lovers of God and of the Lamb, a word of comfort and advice to them, 92, 661, 662.
Lukewarmness, unbelief, the mother of it, 243.
Luther, sayings of his, 36, 385. concerning justification by grace, 531. concerning preaching the gospel, 560.

M

MAN, Christ the man that is God's fellow, 22. what kind of a man he became, 25. why our Redeemer must be a man, ibid. what need there was for his being both God and man in one person, 26.
—— The poor wise man, the many instances of his kindness apt to be forgotten, 645. the nature, universality, and reason of this, 645, 646.
—— Four things that a man comes to Christ for, 301. two sorts of men compared by the apostle to dogs and swine, reject Christ and despise the gospel, 359. a fourfold capacity wherein man hath to do with God, 370. his foolish pleas for salvation exploded, 406. naturally ignorant of God, 456. the blind man cured by Christ, 677. the Pharisees drag him from court to court, and excommunicate him, ibid.
Manifestations, all saving ones of God, made of God relatively, and not essentially, 354. their usefulness, effects, and distinguishing qualities, 677. the manner of the Lord's ushering these in, 692. may be succeeded by a very dark night, 693. some have been left to sin grievously, after manifestations, 694. the particular seasons when the Lord is pleased to favour with them, 781, 782, 783.
Marriage, the incomparable one between the Creator and the creature, 1. this marriage-relation confirmed, ibid. the nature of it opened up, by considering the parties married, ibid. the terms of the marriage, 2. the properties of it, ibid. the effects of it, ibid. how it was carried on, ibid. in what manner concluded, 3. and when, ibid. with the reasons thereof, 4. evidences of these who are married, 5.
Martyr, a short saying of one, 103. a saying of the forty martyrs that suffered under Licinius, 349. a remarkable saying of Adolphus Clarebachius, when brought to the stake to be burnt, 782.
Match, the best match; or, the incomparable marriage, 1. [See Marriage.] What kind of a match Christ is, 659.
Meditation, the best rules for it, 353.
Mediator, the law to be taken out of his hand, 60. Christ, as Mediator, did not work without a reward, 469. his power in heaven and earth, 548. all that was given him as Mediator, was the gift of the glorious Trinity, 549. what power resides in him, 551.
Means, what means tend to promote stability in the faith, 677.
Mens state, Christ the best judge of them, 355.
Meeting with Christ, how it may be known, and the effects of it, 583, 584.

Mercy in God, a definition thereof, 93. wherein it is manifeſted, 93,—96. the properties of it; or, what in it affords ground of ſinging, 96, 97. her plea in behalf of the ſinner, 114. to whom the glory of experienced mercy is due, 598. infinite towards periſhing ſinners, 795.
Mercy-ſeat, ſignified Chriſt the great propitiation, 14, 116.
Merit, the fruit of Chriſt's merit, and the fruit of his power go together, 525. what they are, ibid.
Meſſage, four terrible ones abiding every one in a natural ſtate of death, 747.
Middle-age, how a perſon may know if it has been a time of love, 727.
Militant's ſong, or the believer's exerciſe while here below, 92. See Song.
Milk, the milk of the word, ſome properties thereof, 379.
Miniſters of the goſpel, what ought to be their great buſineſs and chief aim, 59, 321, 404, 460. ought ſome times to meddle in public matters, 664. ſhould be zealous in reproving ſin, and earneſt that people ſecure ſomething that death cannot take from them, ibid. ſome have a greater and ſome a leſſer meaſure of the Spirit, 761. theſe who are not miniſters of the Spirit, but of the letter, ought to be diſcouraged and diſcountenanced, ibid. their great work, viz. to blow the trumpet in Zion, 795. a twofold trumpet they are to blow, the trumpet of the law, and the trumpet of the goſpel, ibid. ſhould preach always Chriſt, whether in the law or the goſpel, ibid. ſome better qualified for blowing theſe trumpets conjunctly than others, and therefore ſome reſemble Boanerges, others Barnabas, 796. the duty of people to pray for them, ibid.
Miniſtry, the great deſign of a goſpel-miniſtry, 356. dangerous to deſert it, when it is the miniſtration of the Spirit, 761.
Miſery, the great miſery of theſe who are ſtrangers to the covenant, 682. God hath no reſpect to their perſons, tears, ſouls, duties, nor ſalvation, ibid. the miſery of ſinners pointed out, 714.
Mockers of the goſpel, their ſad ſtate, 406.
Mortification, not by the means of the law, 490. but by the power of God, ibid. the difference between goſpel and legal mortification, 542.
Motives to receive Chriſt, 236. and walk in him, 266. to gather to Shiloh, 327. to live upon the promiſe by faith, 429. to render Chriſt love for love, 90, 91, 733. and to let their love flow out to him, 734.
Mounting Chriſtian, 748. he mounts with wings as an eagle, 749. what wings he is mounted up with, viz. the influences of the Spirit, ibid. what wings he doth mount up with, 750. a negative view of the things wherein he doth not mount up, ſuch as airy ſpeculations, ſinful curioſity, ſelf-conceit, and ſtarts of devotion, ibid. a poſitive account of the things wherein he really aſcendeth up, as ſpiritual-mindedneſs, high intentions, holy deſires, pious inclinations, a goſpel converſation, and a heavenly walk, 750, 751. the particular ſeaſons when he more eſpecially mounts up, 751. the manner in which he mounts up, 752. the reaſons of it, ibid. evidences of theſe who are mounting Chriſtians, 753. an addreſs by way of terror to ſuch who never mounted, 754. of comfort to the mounting ſoul, ibid. and counſel to the hovering one, 755. what impediments are in the way hindering the mounting Chriſtian, 755, 756.
Murder, Satan frequently tempts to ſelf-murder, 722. ſelf-murder contrary both to the light of nature and the expreſs letter of the law of God, ibid. conſiderations to fortify againſt this monſtrous and inhuman ſin, 772, 773.
Myſtery, the myſteries wrapt up in Chriſt's engaging to approach God as ſurety, 174.

N

NAME, God's great name the ground and reaſon of ſaving great ſinners, 590. what we are to underſtand by the name of God, 591. what it is for God to ſave for his name's ſake, 593. what deſigns he has in view in ſaving for his name's ſake, 594. what it is in the name of God he has ſuch a regard to, when he ſaves for his name's ſake, ibid. what ſalvation he works for his name's ſake, 595. what the conſtituent parts of eternal ſalvation are, ibid. what are the means by which it is brought about, 596. over what impediments, on the ſinner's part, ſalvation is brought about for his name's ſake, ibid. reaſons aſſigned, why he ſaves for his name's ſake, 597. evidences of thoſe who are ſaved for his name's ſake, 599. how the name of God ought to be improved, 600. two parts of God's name, the ſaving knowledge whereof conveys life, 765.
Nation, who are the greateſt bleſſings to a church or nation, 700.
Nations, ſeven mighty nations that oppoſe the true Iſrael in their way to the heavenly Canaan, 474. where the ſtrength of theſe nations lies, 479. the miſerable caſe of the nations that know not God, and are enemies to the people of God, 490. evidences of thoſe who have commenced war with the nations, 491. an addreſs to unbelievers that are at peace with theſe ſinful nations, by way of conviction and counſel, 493. and to believers who are at war with the nations, and that both for comfort and counſel, 494. See Conqueſt.
Nature, divine, what it is to be a partaker of the divine nature, 414. the dreadful depravity of man's nature, while in a natural ſtate, 532. See State.
Natures, a view of Chriſt in his two natures, divine and human, 734.
Need, the ſinner's time of need, God's time of love, 713. the ſinner's time of need deſcribed, 714. what God's time of love is, ibid. moſt conſpicuous in the time of the greateſt need, 716. will not leave any then, 717. this condeſcendency moſt wonderful, ibid. evidences how a perſon may know if their time of need has been a time of love, 718, 719, 725, 726. See Time of Need, Time of Love.
Night, the ſweeteſt diſcoveries of God are uſually uſhered in with the darkeſt nights, 692. and are readily accompanied with dark nights, 693. ſeveral of theſe dark nights enumerated, 693, 694.
Noah, walked with God, 751.

O

OATHS, what oaths were impoſed on Scotland in the perſecuting period, 427.
Obedience, what place the believer's obedience hath in the covenant of grace, 59. what are the motives that ſhould influence it, 59, 85. union to Chriſt the root of true obedience, 279. not influenced by legal hopes of heaven, or ſlaviſh fears of hell, 222. goſpel-obedience, what, 229. the obedience of two put together to make up a perfect one, vain, 524. true obedience, what, 525. obedience of faith requiſite, 668.
Obedience, legal, the inſufficiency thereof laid open, in ſix particulars, 162.
Obedience of Chriſt, abſolutely perfect and meritorious of eternal life, 135, 735. the proper condition of eternal happineſs, 135.
Object of faith, what, 195, 218. great and glorious, 454.
Oblivion, the nature, object, univerſality, and reaſon of it, 645, 646.
Objections, about a perſon's name being in the covenant, 52, 53. different objections made by the exerciſed ſoul againſt receiving Chriſt; ſuch as from the greatneſs and multitude of ſins, the juſtice of God, the ſinner's unworthineſs, Chriſt's willingneſs, the ſinner's unpreparedneſs, the day of grace being gone, long continuing in ſin, jealouſing his right to receive Chriſt, from the power of ſin, and the weakneſs of the creature, &c. 38,—40. 251,—255. that unbelievers under the goſpel, are not under the commanding power of the law, as a covenant, refuted, 539. that believers by their new ſins are liable to the penal ſanction of the law, overturned, 541. that God hath a power, but his will doubted of, anſwered, 568. ſalvation not founded upon our believing and repenting, 598. a variety of objections ſtated and ſolved, 612. how can a child of God take comfort, when he finds the Lord hath left him, anſwered, 708. ſeveral objections about Chriſt's coming to the ſoul propounded and anſwered, 713. a variety of objections of the hovering ſinner, and hovering ſaint, ſtated and anſwered, 755, 756. the objection, How can one come to Chriſt for life, who hath no life, anſwered, 765.
Offers of Chriſt, a tender of him to thoſe who have miſpent their time of life and time of love, 719, 720.
Offer of the goſpel, to what kind of perſons made, 189. upon what grounds, 190. for what ends, 191. requires the almighty power of God to concur, in order to its being believed, ibid. in what capacity Chriſt is offered therein, 209, 210, 211. nineteen of theſe capacities mentioned, ibid.
Offices, Chriſt to be received in all his offices, particularly in his threefold office of Prophet, Prieſt, and King, 209,—213, 227. to be glorified and honoured in his threefold office, 269, 772.
Old-age, how a perſon may know if it has been a time of love, 728.
Oneneſs, of the oneneſs betwixt the Father and the Son, 441. that there is an oneneſs, evinced, 442. but this oneneſs is not an oneneſs of perſonality and humanity, ibid. but an oneneſs of nature, properties, work, honour, will, felicity, intereſt, affection, authority, ſupreme Deity, &c. 442, 443. what inſtructing leſſons may be learned from this oneneſs, 454. the foundation of the honour conferred on Chriſt, 459.
Ordinances, ſolemn ordinances and goſpel-ſolemnites, both teaching and ſealing, gathering times to Shiloh, 310. what ought to be the great deſign of gathering to them, 312. on whom the efficacy and virtue of them depend, 560.
Owen, Doctor, a quotation from him concerning faith and obedience being a condition of the covenant, 62. a quotation of his concerning faith, 298. concerning the idolatry of Britain, 427. of the law as a covenant, 513.

P

PARABLES, the ſcripture is full of them, 749. the reaſon thereof, ibid.
Papiſts, talk of their merit of congruity and condignity, 76. their notion of juſtification exploded, 156. their doubtſome faith refuted, 194.
Parents, the firſt ſin committed by our firſt parents, a moral evil, 534.
Paſſover, no ground to be aſhamed of our Chriſtian one, 656.
Patronage, a grievance in the church, 631, 635. the origin of it from the Pope, not warranted from the ſcripture, 648, 662, 670. contrary to the acts of the church of Scotland in her beſt times, 662.
Peace, the healing overture propoſed by peace to reconcile the Creator and the creature, 115.
People, of the gathering of the people to Shiloh, 276. of the place, manner, and certainty of their gathering, 278. what kind of people are gathered, 284. how they act in gathering to him, 294,—302. See Gathering.
People of God, their duty both to hear what miniſters and God ſays to them, but eſpecially what God ſays to Chriſt, 47. how ſweetly God ſpeaks of him and to him, when treating with him, 48. their ſinning and ſuffering circumſtances not inconſiſtent with his complacential love, 722. have all a refuge in time of calamity, 729. their duty when they have met with him in the ſanctuary, 748. their exerciſe and privilege, 749. their duty to pray for miniſters, and receive their meſſage, 796.
Perfections of God, glorified in the children of promiſe, 389, 429. all ſeen in Chriſt, 448.
Perſecution, the ordinary lot of the children of God, 385.
Perſeverance in the faith requiſite, 669. in the preſent and leaſt truth injoined, ibid. that of the ſaints ſecured, 698, 699.
Perſon, Chriſt firſt to be received in his perſon, and then his benefits, 228.
Perſons, who theſe perſons are whoſe ſinning circumſtances are not inconſiſtent with the love of God, 722. a diſcovery of theſe whoſe ſinning circumſtances are indeed inconſiſtent with his love, 723. who theſe are whoſe afflicted circumſtances are not inconſiſtent with his love, ibid. a deſcription of theſe whoſe carriage in afflicted circumſtances is indeed inconſiſtent with his love, 724. who theſe perſons are whoſe time of trouble is evidently no time of love, 725. and who they are whoſe time of diſtreſs has been a time of love, ibid. See Affliction.
Perſuaſion in the nature of faith, wherein it lies, 85, 195, 218, 22 562, 582. a twofold perſuaſion, a fiducial and evidential, 295. t difference between them, ibid.

Phariſe

Pharisees, interrogate Christ with several questions, 337. their character, 350. drag the poor blind man, whom Christ cured, from court to court, and at last excommunicate him, 677.
Philip, his request, 441.
Philosopher, a remarkable saying of a heathen one, 34. one of them demand first a day, then a week, then a month to tell what God is, and then declared it was impossible, 353.
Pipe of the promise, suited to every particular case either the saint or sinner can be in, 438.
Pillars, the two in Solomon's temple, their names and signification, 664.
Power, the Mediator's power in heaven and earth, 548. the degree of that power, ibid. what right he hath thereto, 549. what things were given to Christ, which carry in them the gift of all power, ibid. what that power is, that is delegated to, and resides in the person of Christ, 551. considered in its kinds and parts, ibid. viewed in its acts and properties, 551, 552, 553. the extent of this power, being all power in heaven and in earth, 554. the divine donation of this power, 555. four periods when this power was given to him, ibid. the manner how all power was given him, 556. by whose pleasure, by what means, and with what solemnity was it given him, ibid. the reasons why all power in heaven and earth was given him, 557. who are interested in his power, 565, 571. the difference between his power and willingness cleared up, 568. his power suited to the different cases of the sinner, 569.
Prayer, what it is to pray the Father in Christ's name, 609.
Prayers, our prayers a fruit of God's love, 78. what is remarkable in the prayers of these whose time is a time of love, 733.
Praying times, usually gathering and sealing times, 309.
Preacher, the female one, 572. her subject, ibid. how she treats it, 573. See Samaria.
Presence, a twofold one of Christ with his people, 364, 365. what ground there is to expect his presence, 657.
—— sensible presence, sudden absence, 739. remarks concerning the finding and missing his presence, 741. in what respects they may miss his presence, where they enjoyed it, 742. they may miss him in the duties of his appointment, in their frames, in their best and their worst cases, in the words of grace, in the instruments whereby they have found him, in the society where they have met with him, and places where they have enjoyed him, 742, 743. the reasons of this dispensation, 743. evidences of these who enjoy his presence, 744. their duty pointed out, 745, 746. how his presence ought to be improven, 746. an address to those who know nothing of his presence, ibid. four terrible messages abiding such at death, 747. a fourfold wo denounced against them, ibid. warranted to close with Christ, ibid.
Preventing love; or, God's love to us the cause of our love to him, 74. in what respects it is preventing love, 76. preventing as to the object of it, the time of it, the dawning of it, and the fruits and effects of it, 77. prevents our holiness, faith, repentance, and prayers, 77, 78.
Prevalency of sin, the difference between the power of prevalency and the power of dominion, 492.
Pride, a cause why people think so little of Christ, 357. wherein spiritual pride lies, 586.
Principles, many good ones abused in the world, 199. infidel and deistical principles prevailing in Scotland, 671.
Prison, what kind of a prison sinners are in, 239.
Profession of the faith, both verbal and practical, active and passive, injoined, 668.
Promise, the pregnant promise, with her issue, 367. the nature of the promise opened up, by considering the subject or author of it, 370. the matter of it, or the good contained in it, ibid. and what promises believers are children of, 371. the qualities or properties of it, 372. the object of it, or to whom it belongs, 374. for whom it is designed, by whom it is possest, to whom it is presented, ibid. several questions proposed and answered, concerning the absolute freedom and conditionality of the promise, 375. the promise presents a suitable remedy to the sinner's malady, 377. in what respects believers are the children of the promise, 378. in what method and order they become so, 380. the comparison stated, and the parallel run in ten particulars, between believers and Isaac, and the truth evinced, how they are, as Isaac was, the children of promise, 382. the reasons why the promise hath such prolific virtue for begetting children to God, 386. why God will have his children to be so by promise, 387. why them and them only to be so, 389. all the children of promise freed from the law, 391. in what cases they should apply the promise, 393. religious duties, outward blessings, &c. nothing without a promise, 405. evidences of the children of the promise, both negative and positive, antecedent and concluſive, 407, 421. who are descendants of the promise, 408. who are begotten to the profession of religion by the promise, 409. who are special believers of the promise, 410. a fourfold faith that does not amount to a belief of the promise, ibid. who live by faith on the promise, 412. and are true lovers of the promise, 413. what the children of promise are liberate from, 420. both believers and unbelievers are apt to mistake concerning their being children of the promise, 421. fifteen cases concerning the right use and application of the promise, 422. whose children they are who are not the children of the promise, 427. and whose children they are that are the children of the promise, 428. all the attributes of God in the promise, 429. the excellency of the promises and a life of faith upon them, 429,—433. directions how to live upon the promise by faith, 434. how to improve the promise, 436. what means are necessary to be used in order to living on the promise, ibid. what connexion there is between applying the promise, and applying Christ, 438. the promise adapted to every case a person can be in, ibid. the import of that promise, John xii. 32. laid open, 659. how and when God performs his promise to his people, 695, 696. in what respects he will and will not leave them, 697. no promise to exempt any from the cross, 721.
Promises, some are constitutive, others are executive of the covenant, 63. the excellency of them pointed out, from their author, object, price, reality, immutability, and fulness, 429. a catalogue of the promises recommended, and the manner how to do it, proposed, 435.
Promising God, a performing God, 690. how and when he performs his promise, 695, 696, 697.
Properties of the love of God, 81, 91. See Qualities.
Prophecy, the present state of the world is a visible performing of scripture-prophecies, 689.
Propitiation, the mercy-seat signified Christ the great propitiation, 14. all the divine attributes meet in Christ as the propitiation and atonement, 116.
Propositions for clearing the nature of salvation, 590. for evincing the Father's love to the Son, 602.
Protestants, some of them too far symbolize with Papists, in substituting conditions in place of merit, in the matter of our justification, 76.
Providence, an over-ruling one, making all things co-operate for good to the hidden remnant, 106. providence may sometimes seem to contradict the promise, 778.
Providences, dark ones cleared in due time, 774. the Lord may be many times very near his people, and doing many great and precious things for them, which they cannot dive into, and must in a great measure be ignorant of, till he explain all his mind to them, 775. this verified in a variety of instances, both from the Old and New Testament, ibid. the Lord's dark and mysterious way of dealing with his people, may both respect their outward state in the world and their inward spiritual state, 778. an enumeration of these dark and mysterious dispensations of God's providence that he is pleased to cover with a cloud of majesty, that his people seldom know what he is doing with them, ibid. in what respects his people may be ignorant and in the dark about his work towards them, 779. the matter, manner, causes, beauty, excellency, necessity, usefulness, changes, and design of his work may be all unknown to them for a time, 779, 780. the reasons why the Lord takes this mysterious way with his people, viz. to display himself, discover his enemies, search out the latent corruption of the heart, manifest and exercise their graces, and learn to fear and reverence him, 780, 781. the seasons when he makes them afterwards know what now they are in the dark about, 781, 782. sometimes very soon after the work is over, and sometimes deferred for a long time, ibid. there are some circumstances of time that he observes in making them know what was dark and mysterious to them before, such as, when in private, when attending public ordinances, exercising their graces, performing duty; sometimes just before death, other times just at death itself, 782. sometimes when they are longing and hoping, and even when they have almost lost hope, at the lowest ebb, 783. how to know something of what he has been doing, 784. the duty of disciples who may be in the dark about what he is doing in his providential dispensations, 785. directions to these who know something of his dispensations, ibid. an address to sinners who know nothing of the dispensations of his grace, and are unconcerned thereat, 786.
Punishment, partakers in sin must be partakers in punishment, 721.

Q

QUALIFICATIONS, none necessary in order to a sinner's coming to Christ, 764.
Qualities, of the sword of justice that awaked against Christ, 28, 29. of the blood of Christ shed by that sword, 33. of the covenant, 62, 71. of the law, 81, 513. of the love of God, 81, 91. of the believer's militant song, 103. of his death to the law, 137, 138. of Christ's engagement as our Surety, 174. of faith as it is a receiving Christ, 193, 205. of the way in which the believer walks, 260. of the believer's walk, 220, 229. of God's gathering power, 292. of the sacrifice Christ offered up, 343. of seeing and commending him, 445, 387. of the promise whereof believers are the children, 372. of the strength of sin, 500. of the power given to our Lord Jesus Christ, 553. of the Father's love to Christ, 602, 603. of God's manifestations, 677. of the river of life, 758, 763. of the sound of the gospel-trumpet, 793.
Question, What think ye of Christ? the main question of the Christian Catechism, 336. the persons to whom it was proposed, 337. the emphasis of the question pointed out, ibid. the import of the question opened up, by considering it objectively, formally, actively, and subjectively, 340,—352. the import of the question, what think ye of Christ? objectively, or with respect to the matter of our thoughts, viewed in a fourfold light, viz. what think ye of his righteousness, pedigree, person, anointing, teaching, priesthood, kingdom, authority, ability, fulness, savour, beauty, preciousness, usefulness, 340,—344. what think ye of his station, travels, treasures, thoughts, words, works, gospel, service, and wages, livery, love, loveliness, blessing, everlasting glories, tabernacles, cross, crown, friends, enemies, &c. 361,—365. the import of the question actively considered, viz. what know ye, believe ye, love ye, esteem ye, of Christ? 345,—348. the import of the question formally considered, viz. what good think ye of him, what glory think you is in him, what use and worth think you he is of? 348. what price he is to be bought for, and what rate sold at, 449. the import of the question subjectively considered, viz. as put to the Jews in general, the Pharisees, Sadducees, and every individual, 349,—352. ten reasons assigned, why this is the leading question in the Christian Catechism, 352.
Questions, select questions on some of the most interesting points in divinity; such as, what is that nearness to God, and access to him, that a man hath in time, when brought within the vail? 12. how persons may know if they have that love to God, which is a fruit and an effect of his love to them? 86,—90. several ones relative to the absolute freedom, conditionality, particularity, &c. of the promise, 375. about faith and repentance being gospel-commands, 395. the conditionality of faith, ibid. a believer's desiring to be under the law, 396. whether a person's knowledge of Christ and the gospel be of a special nature? 408. if he is a descendant of the promise? ibid. whether he was begotten to a profession of religion by the power of the

the law, or the power of the promise? 499. if his faith be of a right sort, and he a special believer of the promise? 600. a fourfold faith that does not amount to a belief of the promise, ibid. how one may know if they live by faith on the promise? 412. who are true lovers of the promise? 413. and a true lover of Christ? ibid. how persons may know if they have the Spirit of promise? 416. fifteen cases propounded and solved concerning the right use and improvement of the promise, 422. what glory faith brings to God, and what way it glorifies him? 433. what means to be used to the living by faith on the promise? 436. what connexion there is betwixt applying the promise and applying Christ? 438. how a person may know if he hath seen Christ, so as to see the Father in him? 460. how a person may know if the spiritual warfare is commenced and progressively going forward? 491. how to know the difference between the power of prevalency and the power of dominion of sin? 492. what resisting of sin is consistent with the dominion of it? 528. and what prevalency of it, with being freed from the strength thereof? 529, 530. what the strength of sin is which remains with the believer, and what it serves for? 537. what it excites to? 538. who are these in whom the rule and strength of sin remain unbroken? 542. how persons may know if it be by the gospel or by the law they mortify sin? ibid. who are they who make their duties their righteousness? 543. who are they that have renounced their righteousness? 544. what is it in the gospel that contributes to the strength of holiness? 545. whose names are written in God's book? 568. if a person believes that Christ hath power to save him? answered, 569. if a person, who hath not the Spirit of God, nor a renewed conscience, be able to discern his own vileness? answered, 583. what it is in the name of God he hath such a regard to, when he saves for his name's sake? 594. how a person may know when God's rod hath done its work? 599. how God's saving for his name's sake is a ground of faith to all, seeing these whom he designs to save are only the elect, and these whom he actually saves are only believers? answered, 600. who are the members of God's house? and what sort of a house the church is? 628. how a person may know if ever Christ has come to him? 711. are there any signs of his coming? 712. may God leave his own in their most extreme need, and last battle? 717. why he chuses to make the time of greatest need, his time of love? ibid. in what respects he may seem to be angry with these whose time is notwithstanding a time of love? 720. what love-designs he may be carrying on by these wrath-like dispensations? 721. what love appears in them? ibid. what instructive lessons we may learn from them? 722. when is the desire holy? 731. when is a person made truly willing? 732. what is remarkable in the prayers of these, whose time is a time of love? 733. the question, Where, Lord? answered, 748. when may Christ be said, in a spiritual sense, to stoop down and wash his disciples feet? 784. why is it promised, that a number of outcasts ready to perish shall come, when the gospel-trumpet shall be blown? 794.

Quotations, one from Luther, concerning an absolute God, 36. from Dr. Owen, concerning faith or obedience being a condition of the covenant, 62. from —— concerning matching with Christ, 78. one from Mr. Patrick Hamilton, concerning good works, 223. one from Anthony Burgess, concerning idolatry, 228. from Dr. Owen, concerning faith, 298. from Chrysostom, concerning the sun, 325. concerning the forty martyrs that suffered under Licinius, 349. from Luther, about the world, 385. from our Standards, concerning the believer's freedom, 432. from Augustine, concerning the tyranny of sin, 403. from —— comparing sin to a spider, 504. from Augustine, concerning the life of the creatures, 505. from Dr. Owen, concerning men being under the power of the law as a covenant, 513. from Luther, concerning justification by grace, 531. from —— concerning seeking life by the law, 534. from Prof. Compbell, concerning the laws of nature, 671.

R

REASON, carnal, a cause why people think so very little of Christ, 358.

Rebellion against God, when people may be said to be guilty of it, 665.

Receiving Christ, the great duty of receiving and walking in him opened, 186. what it is to receive him, 193. how faith acts in receiving him, 188, 205. in what respects it receives him, viz. as Jesus and Lord, 197, 206. the connexion between receiving Christ and walking in him, 213. the order of the connexion; or, the reasons why receiving Christ precedes walking in him, 215. and why there must be a walking in him after he is received, 216. what is received when Christ is received, 217, 239. evidences of those who have received him, 225. how that faith was created by the Spirit that receives Christ, ibid. in what manner it was acted in the soul when he was received, 227. motives to urge a receiving of him, 235. who do not receive him, 238. what comes along with Christ when he is received, 239. what is received when Christ is not received, 240.

Reconciliation, a threefold one to be seen in Christ, 469.

Redeemer, why our Redeemer behoved to be God's fellow, 24. why he behoved to be a man, 25. and what kind of a man he became, ibid. why both God and man in one person, 26. he is a glorious and well-qualified Redeemer, 33.

Redemption, a wonderful concurrence of all the three persons of the Trinity therein, 34. all the three persons observe a distinct œconomy therein, 760. wherein that distinct œconomy lies, ibid. the glory of each person shines therein, 761.

Reformation, in Scotland, carried on by degrees, 489. the gospel successful then, 531.

Refuge, the children of God have all a sure one in time of calamity, 729.

Regeneration, the necessity of it, 508.

Rejecters of Christ, a description of these who are so, 238.

Relation, there is an antient and present fœderal, as well as a special relation between God and his people, 477. the import thereof, 478.

Religion, a test of the true religion, 59. true religion, the sweetness of it, 107. a mystery to the world, 152. the root of it, 219. is a qualified motion, ibid. no just ground to blame it, 768. always some thing savoury accompanies the sedulous exercise of it, 770.

Remarks, concerning the day of espousals between Christ and the believer, 3. concerning the covenant of works and grace, 49, 50. concerning becoming dead to the law in point of justification before we live to God in point of sanctification, 145. concerning man's thoughts, 338. concerning seeing Christ, 443. concerning the most holy place, 632. concerning the church, 640. shewing in what respects God may be said to leave his people, and wherein he will not leave them, 697. evincing that the sinning circumstances of his people are not inconsistent with his love, 722. that their afflicted circumstances are not inconsistent with his love, 723. concerning finding God's presence, 741. concerning the blessings of eternal life, 757.

Remedy, Christ is a needful, suitable, near, easy, seasonable remedy, 243.

Rent, the vail of the temple rent, 8. See Vail, Temple.

Repentance, the gift of God, and a fruit of his love, 78. a principal part of sanctification, and doth not precede our justification, 222. is not before but a fruit of faith, 300, 509, 582. a definition of it, 308. whether or not it is a gospel-command, 395. wherein legal repentance differs from gospel-repentance, 396. repentance a part and not a condition of salvation, 598.

Repository, Christ heaven's grand repository, 601. See Father, Son, Love.

Representation of the divine glory in Christ, exceeds all others, 734. in what respects it does so, ibid.

Reproofs, viz. to these who praise not the Lord, 108. to all legalists, 196. and other erroneous persons, 221. particularly Latitudinarians and Libertines, 225. to those who are filled with unworthy thoughts of Christ, 357.

Rhetoric, human, quite insufficient, without the power of God, to reach the heart, 723.

Revelation, the necessity of a divine one, objective and subjective, 455.

Righteousness, exhibits a charge against the sinner, 115.

—— God's, how taken in scripture, 536. the danger of being ignorant of it, ibid. a threefold view of it from the scripture, ibid.

—— The righteousness of Christ, as it is the righteousness of God, is a full, sufficient, perfect, law-biding, law-magnifying, justice-satisfying, truly meritorious, and everlasting, 10, 135, 138, 221, 341, 527, 561, 562. is every way profitable, 138. the sole ground of a sinner's justification, 198, 227, 490. the nature of it, being a perfect righteousness in point of merit, to justify, and of Spirit to sanctify, 222. wherein the faith of both these consists, 227. both active and passive righteousness imputed, 239. all the saints partakers of it and arrayed with it, 325, 416. no justification partly by it, and partly by our own, 524. who reject this righteousness, and establish one of their own, founded on their duties, 543. who have renounced their own righteousness, and rely on Christ's, 544. the excellency and acceptableness of it, 561. perfectly meritorious of eternal life, 735. perfumes all our duties and services, 772.

Righteousness, legal, every way unprofitable for justification, 138. ignorance of Christ, and his righteousness, the great cause of it, 161.

River of life, 757. what understood thereby, ibid. some of the streams of this river mentioned, ibid. a description of this river from its qualities, viz. the abundance, purity, virtue, and splendor of it, 758. the import of its being said to proceed out of the throne of God and of the Lamb, 759. the reasons why it thus proceeds, ibid. the excellency of these waters, 763.

Rod, how a person may know when God's rod hath done its work, 599. God has many rods that he afflicts his people with, 723.

S

SACRAMENT, the nature and end of it, 40. who stand debarred from it, 40, 42. is a love-feast, 74. the design of it to set forth Christ in his death and sufferings, 447. what ground the Lord's people have to expect that Christ will come to this feast, 713.

Sacrifice, who despise Christ as a sacrifice, 41. who truly value him, 42. properties of the sacrifice he offered up, 343.

Sadducees, propound a question to Christ, 337. their character, 350.

Safety, where the safety of God's people lies, 700.

Saints, their love described from its act, subject, object, and source, 74. considered in its nature, 79. viewed in its kinds, common and special, 80. considered in its degrees, as a love of desire, complacency, benevolence, and beneficence, ibid. viewed in its dimensions, viz. height, depth, breadth, and length, 81. considered in its properties, as free, sincere, ardent, active, uniting, solicitous, bold, persevering, conjugal, assimulating, and extatical, 81, 82. viewed in its effects, as it vents itself in prayer, praise, wonder, obedience, &c. ibid. considered in its object and extent; it loves Christ in his person, natures, offices, relations, righteousness, and purchase, ibid. viewed in the grounds of it, as founded on Christ's excellency and undertaking, the Father's love to him, and his love to them, 83. God's love to them the cause of their love to him, evinced from four considerations, 83. what influence his love has upon theirs, viz. a moral and physical one, 84. the difference between God's love to the saints, and their love to him, ibid. God's love to the saints sufficient both to slay their enmity and quicken their love, 86. evidences of the saints love to God, 87,—90. all ought to seek a view of God's love, and render him love for love, 90, 91, 733. a word of comfort to the lovers of God and Christ, 92. their happiness, 107. their summer times of refreshment, 306. their winter times of adversity, ibid. their spring time of spiritual duty and gospel diligence, 308. their consummate harvest, 312. their portion, 397, 400. the various articles of their portion, and where it is treasured up, 400. the reason they love Christ, 460. the weakest of them have perfectly satisfied the law in Christ, and freed from its commanding and condemning strength, 524. why they confide in God and trust in his name, 598. wherein their happiness consists, 651. their duty to sit still and abide in Christ by faith, 676. their perseverance secured, 698, 699. their time of greatest need and pinching extremity, the time of the Lord's gracious opportunity to help them, 716. this matter of the greatest wonder, 717.

Salvation, impossible without a perfect and complete righteousness, 49. what salvation is, 197. justification and sanctification, the two principal cipal branches of it, 518, 534. all the parts of it the offspring of the promise, 391. wholly of grace, and neither for, in, by, or according to works, 409, 468. what is the rule of it, 469. to whom to be ascribed, 508. how much upon the heart of God and Christ, 560. six propositions opening up the nature of it, 590, 595. what are the constituent parts of that salvation he works for his name's sake, 595. what are the means by which it is brought about, 596. over what impediments, on the sinner's part, this salvation is effectuate, ibid. the gospel-method of salvation quite free, 598. yield's encouragements to sinners, 600. to be viewed in a threefold light, viz. as salvation decreed, obtained, and exhibited, ibid. whom he has purposed to save, 713.

Samaria, the woman of Samaria's sermon to the men of the city, 572. how Christ discovered himself to her, ibid. the influence thereof, 573. the means by which it was brought about, 574. the manner and kind of it, 575. the effects of it, 576. she commends the Saviour, 577. the matter of her commendation, ibid. the manner of it, 578. the reasons thereof, 580. the properties of it, 587.

Sanctification, the difference between justification and sanctification, stated and cleared, and the priority of the first to the last evinced, 85. the influence that dying to the law, in point of justification, hath upon promoting sanctification, 132, 133. Christ to be received as a Lord to promote it, 197, 208. natively flows from justification, 221, 524.

Sanctuary, the duty of these who have seen something of his glory therein, 748.

Sarah, allegorically put for the covenant of grace, 368.

Satan, what kind of a guest he is, 240. how a person may know, when a promise comes into the heart, whether it be presented by Satan or the Lord, 424. his great design is to blind the eyes of men, 458. assaults these who come to Christ, 767. a cruel enemy, ibid. the difference between his temptations and the convictions of the Spirit, ibid. six kinds of his temptations condescended upon, 769. he tempts to blasphemy; how such ought to conduct themselves, ibid. he tempts to heart-wandering; advices offered to fortify against this temptation, 770. he tempts to the omission of duty; considerations to fortify against this temptation, ibid. he tempts the sober to commission of sin; considerations to guard against this temptation, 771. he tempts to unworthy apprehensions of God; considerations offered how to conceive aright of God, and repel this temptation, ibid. he tempts to self-murder; advices offered how to withstand this horrid temptation, 772. all such warmly expostulated with to come to Christ, 773, 774.

Saviour, the strength of sin evinces itself in his sufferings and death above all other things, 505. his joyful approach, chearfully welcomed by the church's echo of faith, 704. a fourfold coming joyful both to him and them, 705.

Sceptre, of the departure of the sceptre from Judah, 276.

Scheme, the popish and Baxterian scheme of justification exploded, 156.

Scotland, early visited with gospel-light, 303, 320, 489. reformed more purely than England, ibid. solemnly entered into, and frequently renewed their covenant with the Lord, ibid. what they are by national descent, 427. in what respects they resembled Israel of old, 489. errors and corruptions taking place, 634. some good thing remains, notwithstanding all her evils 636. how the church in it hath been many ways besieged, and still hitherto delivered, 647. what errors are abounding in her, 666. two things very sad in her, 667. the principles of infidelity much upon the increase, 671. how dangerous her circumstances are, 676, 701. her ruin but beginning, 707. immerced in all manner of wickedness, 761. and grievous defections, 796.

Scriptures, faith and practice the two principal things taught therein, 205.

Seasons, the special seasons wherein people gather to Shiloh, 302,—314. the remarkable gatherings in the church in general, 302. the initial gathering of sinners, 305. the progressive gathering of believers, 306. and the consummate gathering of the saints, 312.

Seat, no seat for a weary soul to rest upon but a God in Christ, 676. what kind of a seat Christ is, ibid.

Secession, the origin of it, 631. the manner of it stated, 634. the grounds and reasons of it, 635, 636, 648, 661, 670.

Seeing, a threefold seeing that is to be separate from faith, 346.

Self-conceit and self-justification, why so prevalent in the visible church, 581.

Self-examination, the best rule for it, 353.

Sense, the difference between faith and sense, 245, 295, 394.

Sent of God, Christ so denominated, 330. what he is sent to be unto the people, 330, 331.

Separation from a church, in what cases lawful, 631, 634.

Servants of God, have been put to great hardships through the rage of persecuting brethren, 690

Shem, the origin of the Jews, 58. Japhet's dwelling in his tents, a clear prediction of the conversion of the Gentiles, ibid.

Shepherd, how Christ comes to be called a Shepherd, and what kind of a Shepherd he is, 26; 212. why the Lord of hosts calls him his Shepherd, 27.

Shield, what kind of a shield the Lord is to his people, 478.

Shiloh, of the gathering of the people to him, 276. the different acceptations of the word Shiloh, 277. how it signifies Christ, ibid. what is supposed and imported in the peoples gathering to Shiloh, 279,—284. in what respects they are gathered to him, 289. in what manner, 290. by what means, 291. the qualities of the gathering, 292,—302. the seasons thereof, 302, 303. with respect to the various degrees of gathering of the church in general, ibid. the initial gathering of sinners in particular, 305. the progressive gathering of believers, 306. the consummate gathering of saints, 312. six reasons why Shiloh must be a gathering of the people, 315. six reasons why to Shiloh must the gathering of the people be, 316. evidences of those who have been gathered to Shiloh, 322. what they are gathered to who are gathered to Shiloh, 328. exhortations to gather to him, 327. to gather more closely to him, 334.

Siege, the church besieged by a great king, and what bulwarks he besieges with, 641, 642.

Sight, the saving sight; or, a view of God in Christ, 440. A threefold distance that mars our sight of God, ibid. the different glasses by which he is seen, 440, 446. ten remarks opening up the nature of this sight, viz. that there is a mental, spiritual, and wrathful, common and saving sight of him, 443. the light in which he is seen, the eye by which he is taken up, the different periods wherein he is viewed, the certain seasons wherein he is beheld, and the various respects and degrees of this sight, 444. the several properties of it, the means whereby, and the glasses wherein Christ is seen, with the glorious, full, and extensive object, 446. in what respects they who see Christ see the Father, viz. in his nature, relation, perfections, names, and glory, 447,—450. in what manner the Father is seen in Christ, 451, the reasons why they who see Christ see the Father, 452. what instructions may be learned from this truth, 456. what are the blessed effects of this sight, 459. evidences to examine if we have seen this glorious sight, from a consideration of the object of the sight, 460, 468. from a view of the fruit and offspring of it, 461. the excellency and necessity thereof, 465. where this great sight is to be seen, ibid. and how it is to be attained, 466. how to be proved, 467. what those who see Christ see in him, 468. how it ought to be improved, 470.

Similitudes, earthly similitudes useful to represent spiritual mysteries, 188.

Sin, the infinite malignity and dreadful demerit of it, 34. how God hates it, 89. the dreadful evil of it, 124. what kind of a guest it is, 240. wherein the sin against the Holy Ghost consisteth, 242. is enmity against God, 455. the difference between the power of prevalency and the power of dominion, 492. how the law is the strength of it, opened up and unfolded, 496. the grand evil that ruins all mankind, 497. its grand quality and accidental source, ibid. took justifying strength from the law, ibid. its virulent nature appears principally in its being a transgression of the holy law, and an opposition to God the Law-giver, 498. wherein the strength of sin lies, 499. ten qualities of the strength of it, 500. the degrees of its strength viewed, positively, comparatively, and superlatively, 501, 502. what strength it hath from the law, 514. what sins the law is the strength of, 515. in what respects the law is the strength of sin, 518. reasons why it is so, 521. sin, under the gospel greatly aggravated, 524. hath a reigning power over the ungodly, and a prevailing one over the godly, 527. what resistance of sin is consistent with the dominion of it, 528. what prevalency of it is consistent with being freed from the strength thereof, 529. the woful nature and infinite evil of it, 534. the dreadfulness of a stedfast course therein, 675. sin and suffering, how connected, 723. no little or small sin properly speaking, 771. the nature of every sin, objectively considered, is an infinite evil, ibid. See Law, Strength of Sin.

Sing, what ground to sing may a child of God have when sin is a part of their judgment, 102.

Sinner, cannot be justified without a complete righteousness, 10.

Sinners, four particular seasons when they are gathered to Shiloh, 305. their hope, 397. different sorts of them called to fly to their hope, 398. the greatest may receive hope of mercy, 581. their duty to look unto and to receive Christ, and to rest upon him, 460, 509, 676. their miserable thraldom without him, 508. their deplorable condition by nature, 532, 789. under both the command and curse of the law, 535. how Christ manifests himself to sinners, 572. the means thereof, 574. the manner of it, 575. the effect that follows, 576. the reasons thereof, 580. God's great name the ground and reason of saving them, 590. [See Name.] A door of hope opened for them in the gospel, 598. their great duty, to come to Christ, 612. encouragements to do so, ibid. the benefit of matching with him, 658. their time of need and misery pointed out, 714, 734. their worst time the very juncture he shews his love, 716. this matter of the greatest admiration, 717. motives to induce sinners to love him, 734. sinners of all sorts warranted to come to him, 747. an address to such who know nothing of his ways, 786. their miserable circumstances, as outcasts, ready to perish, delineated, 789. their duty in this case, viz. to come to Christ, 790. what this coming imports, ibid. in what capacity we are to come to him, viz. as Redeemer and Jehovah, ibid. the means by which he gathers them, 791. the efficacy of these means, 793. the end for which they shall come, 794.

Socinians, their notion of God's pardoning sin, 36.

Son, the Father's love to the Son evinced, 602, 603. in what respect and on what account he loves him, ibid. some qualities and effects of his love, 603. how his love to him is evidenced, ibid. See Father, Love.

Song, the militant's song, 92. what is it to sing to the Lord, 103. the qualities of this song, ibid. the import of it, 104. the reasons of it, 105. how we are to sing it, 109,—111.

Soul, the manner in which the soul acts in receiving Christ, 227.

Spirit, how the Spirit of God operates in creating that faith in the soul which receives Christ, 225. six degrees of unbelief as it bears a reference to the Spirit, 242. the difference between the Spirit's working by his common motions and as a living principle, 294. evidences of those who are partakers of the Spirit of promise, 416. how the Spirit carries on his work in the soul, 490. Christ's coming in the Spirit joyful both to him and his people, 706. the Spirit and all spiritual blessings and comforts proceed from God in Christ, 757. the Spirit in scripture frequently compared to a river, ibid. the giving of the Spirit a part of Christ's royalty, 759. the Spirit essentially one with the Father and the Son, 760. the difference between his convictions and Satan's temptations, 767, 768.

—— the malignity of an antichristian, Socinian, libertine, Arminian, and legal spirit, 36, 152. evidences thereof both in the unconverted and regenerate, 156. causes of it, 160. and the danger thereof, 161.

Spring, the believer's spring-time of spiritual duty and gospel-diligence, and the various fruits that indicate a gathering time, 308, 309.

Stability in the faith, the church's strength, 663. the nature of stability in the faith opened, 667. it is a duty both commanded and commended in the word, ibid. what it supposes, viz. that we know the word of faith, have the grace of faith, make a profession of faith, and yield the obedience of faith, 668. what this stability in the faith includes, viz. an adherence to the faith, and a perseverance in it, 669. what it excludes, viz. fainting at the sight of the cross, hesitation about the truth, presumptious persuasion, wavering, doubtfulness of mind, sinful compliance, sinful silence, sinful debates, 669, 670.

670. what this ſtability in the faith infers, with reſpect to the object, cleared up in ten particulars, 671. what it infers with reference to the exerciſe of the duty, laid open in ten particulars, 672. what is the work of an eſtabliſhed faith, 673. ſtability in the faith is peoples ſtrength and ſafety, 674. the evil and diſadvantage of inſtability, ibid. the good and advantage of ſtability in the faith, ibid. eight evidences of a ſtrong faith, 676. ſtability conſidered as a privilege and a duty, 677. how to attain ſtability in the faith, viz. to labour after eſtabliſhing graces, improve eſtabliſhing means, ſeek after eſtabliſhing manifeſtations and breathings, to take heed to theſe things which hinders ſtability, and to be jealous of ourſelves and watchful, ibid. encouragements to this duty of ſtability, and the advantages of it, 678.

Staff, a fivefold ſort of a ſtaff the believer hath to walk with, 232.

State, a Chriſtleſs ſtate is a burdened, loathſome, poor, enſlaved, wrathful, curſed, miſerable ſtate, 247, 714. our natural ſtate groſs darkneſs, 456. who are in a ſafe ſtate, 649. a perſon may be in a ſtate of grace, and yet not aſſured of it, 727. the ſad ſtate of ſinners by nature, 789.

Stedfaſtneſs in the faith commended and recommended, 186, 667. [See Stability in the faith.] Such have need to be exhorted to walk in Chriſt, 213. ſtedfaſtneſs in a courſe of ſin the dreadfulneſs of it, 675.

Sting of death, what, 497.

Strength of ſin, how the law is the ſtrength thereof, opened up and unfolded, 496, 513. the command of the law the ſtrength of it occaſionally, and the curſe the ſtrength of it effectively, 535. ten qualities of its ſtrength, 500. the degrees of its ſtrength, viewed poſitively, in eight particulars, 501. viewed comparatively, in ten reſpects, ibid. and ſuperlatively, in eight inſtances, 502. how the ſtrength of ſin diſcovers itſelf, 503. ten particular ſeaſons wherein it doth ſo, ibid. by what ſad effects it evinces its ſtrength, 505. particularly in the death of the ſinner, and the death of the Saviour, ibid. whence the ſtrength of ſin comes, and wherein it lies, in four particulars, 507. no eaſy matter to be delivered from it, ibid. what kind of ſtrength ſin hath from the law, in ſix particulars, 514. what ſin the law is the ſtrength of, in eight particulars, 517. what ſin is the ſtrength of in, in eight particulars, 518. four reaſons why the law is the ſtrength of ſin, 521. in what reſpects believers are freed from the ſtrength of it, though ſenſible of the prevalency thereof, 529. what that ſtrength of ſin is that ſtill remains with them while here, 537. and what it ſerves for, ibid. what it excites to, 538. evidences of thoſe in whom the rule and ſtrength of ſin remain unbroken, 542. See Law, Sin.

Suffering, the godly need take no ſinful ſhift to ſhun it, 107.

Sufferings of Chriſt, how to be viewed, 447. how the ſtrength of ſin diſcovered itſelf in them, evinced, 505. what made them ſo dreadful to him before-hand, 506.

Summer, the believers ſummer-times of refreſhment, 306.

Sun, profeſſors compared to the ſun, both in his retrogade and progreſſive courſe, 213.

Supremacy, the king's, when eſtabliſhed and how reliſhed, 529. inconſiſtent with the ſcriptures and our ſtandards, 636.

Surety, Chriſt as Surety came to fulfil the righteouſneſs of the law, only as it is a covenant of works, 540. how he acted as our Surety, in yielding a perfect obedience to the law, paying our debt, liberating us from priſon, freeing us from the curſe, delivering us from the wrath to come, 735.

Sword, the ſword of juſtice awaked againſt God's Fellow, 22. why called a ſword, 28. and what kind of a ſword it is, ibid. in what manner this ſword did awake againſt Chriſt, 30. what ſpecial hand Jehovah the Father had in making this awful ſword to awake, 31. the reaſons why the ſword of juſtice did awake againſt his Shepherd, the man his Fellow, ibid. ſeven qualities of the blood ſhed by this ſword, 33.

T

TABLE of the Lord, who are debarred from it, 40. the character of thoſe who have a right to approach unto it, 42, 681, 762. in what manner they ſhould come to it, 44. how they ought to be exerciſed at it, 45. what reaſon they have to expect that Chriſt himſelf will come to the feaſt, 713.

Tables of the law, unbelief is a breach of both, 236.

Temper, four evidences of a legal temper in the ungodly, 156. and twelve evidences of it in believers, 157. four cauſes thereof, 160. the evil and danger of it, 191.

Temple, the vail of the temple rent, 8. the ſignification thereof, 9. what theſe vails are that are rent, 10, 18. how the death of Chriſt rent them, 10. in what manner the vail of the temble was rent, 11. for what end, 12. evidences of its being rent, 15. antiently the place of public worſhip, and a type of Chriſt, 765.

Temptation, what ground the children of God have to ſing when they meet with temptation, 100. the time of general temptation from men and devils, a dark and dangerous hour, 666. how to diſtinguiſh the temptations of Satan from the convictions of the Spirit, 767, 768. ſix temptations of Satan condeſcended upon, 769,—774. See Satan.

Terror, to unbelievers who enter not into the holy of holies by the rent vail, 17. to all the haters of God, 91. to all who have not felt the harmonious meeting of the divine attributes, 127. to the enemies of Chriſt, 563. to theſe who mount not to God, 754.

Teſtament, the glory of the New-teſtament diſpenſation above the Old, 14.

Teſtimonial, when faith is acted it receives a teſtimonial from God, and gives one to him, 227, 298.

Theodoſius, the emperor, makes an edict in favour of the Arians, 772. Amphilochius biſhop of Iconium, lays a ſtratagem to induce him to revoke it, and ſucceeds, ibid.

Things, all things given into Chriſt's hand, 601, 614. ſome of theſe all things mentioned, 603. the import of the expreſſion, 604. the advantage of having all things into his hand, 609. The beauty of this diſpoſure, in regard the Father's property, the Son's title, the ſecurity of the treaſure, the fulneſs of the truſtee, the pleaſure of all parties, and the honour of all concerned, have been conſulted, 615, 616. The extent of this ſtore enquired into, by ſhewing that all attributes, all the reins of providence, all offices, all relations, and all bleſſings are in his hand, 617,—620. the manner how all things are in his hand, viz. ſubſtantially, communicatively, ſufficiently, efficiently, unchangably, eternally, 620. motives and conſiderations ariſing from this truth, 621. ſuitable directions offered, 623.

Thoughts, ſome remarks concerning man's thoughts, 338. what right thoughts of Chriſt are, 359.

Throne, the Lamb in the midſt of the throne, 651. what kind of a throne it is, 653. why called a throne, ibid. how the Lamb comes to be upon the throne, ibid. what is imported in his being in the midſt of the throne, 654. the benefit ariſing from thence, 655. needs not be terrible to us, 657. what view we ought to have of, and what virtue is to be found in the belief of the Lamb's being in the midſt of the throne, ibid. the duty of ſinners who hear this doctrine, 658. what they ſee who ſee the Lamb in the midſt of the throne, ibid. the river of life proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb, 757, 759. no penurious throne, 762.

Throne of grace, erected for a time of need, 724.

Time, the conſideration of it ought to employ moſt of our thoughts, 733.

Times, reforming, covenanting, confeſſing, ſuffering, backſliding times of the church, gathering times to Shiloh, 302. believing, repenting, praying, waiting, longing, attending times, with believers, gathering times, 308. what theſe times are that may be called perilous times, 665. times of rebellion againſt God, carnal counſel, carnal confidence, and inſtability, are ſigns of them, 665, 666. times of error, temptation, apoſtaſy, diviſion, ſlighting the goſpel, formality in religion, ſecurity, and careleſs indifference, evidences of unſtable times, 666, 667. eight ſignal appearances of God in perilous times, 678.

Time of love, what kind of a time it is, 714. moſt conſpicuouſly evidenced in the time of need, 716. particular periods of life condeſcended upon that are made times of love, 728, 729. particular troubles enumerated and [illegible] be times of love, 730. the time of love may be known by the remarkableneſs of that time, 731. by the remarkable parts of it, viz. the commencement and the [illegible] of it, ibid. by the attendance and properties of it, 732. theſe whoſe time has been a time of love, [illegible] love, 90, 91, 733. conſiderations enforcing it, [illegible] theſe who doubt if their time has been a time of love [illegible] who are aſſured their time has been a time of love, 737. ber the time of love, in the time of diſtreſs, very ſer[illegible] ibid. thoſe who have enjoyed a time of love from God, [illegible] it to make all their time a time of love to him, 736. See Love, Time of Need.

Time of need, a time of love, 713. the ſinner's time of need deſcribed, 714. the time of need, God's time of love both to ſinners and ſaints, 716. this moſt wonderful and admirable, 717. a throne of grace erected for a time of need, 724. how a perſon may know if their time of need has been a time of love, 725. the particu[illegible] of our time of need condeſcended upon, and the enquir[illegible] they have been times of love, 727. if the time of youth [illegible] age has been ſo, ibid. if the time of old-age has been, and [illegible] of death a-coming will be, a time of love, 728, 729. eight [illegible] cular times of trouble mentioned, and all ſhewn to be conſiſtent with a time of love, 730, 731. the rememberance of the time of love in the time of need, very ſerviceable, 737. ought to embolden us to come to the throne of grace in all future times of need, 738. what rules to be obſerved about help in time of need, ibid. See Love, Time of Love.

Tokens, God's time of love to the ſoul, a time of love-tokens, 715. tokens antecedent to the marriage, concomitant, and conſequent of it, ibid.

Traveller, the parallel ſtated in eight particulars between the ea[illegible] and heavenly traveller, 231.

Trial, uſes of trial. See Examination.

Trinity, the wonderful concurrance of the perſons thereof, 34. every thing that Chriſt hath, as Mediator, is the gift of a glorious Trinity, 549. they obſerve a diſtinct œconomy in the work of redemption, 760. wherein that diſtinct œconomy conſiſts, ibid. an eſſential unity and glorious harmony amongſt the reſpective perſons thereof, ibid. a glorious Trinity to be ſeen in every ſpiritual bleſſing, ibid.

Trouble, ſix ſorts of ſinners whoſe troubles are inconſiſtent with God's love, 723. a deſcription of thoſe whoſe carriage in trouble evidence that it is ſo, 724. who they are whoſe trouble is no time of love, 724, 725. who they are, in general, whoſe trouble and diſtreſs has been a time of love, 725, 726. particular troubles condeſcended upon, and the enquiry made if they have been times of love, 729. See Affliction.

Trumpet, the great trumpet of the everlaſting goſpel, 787. the jubilee-trumpet, the blowing of the great trumpet, and the feaſt of trumpets, what meant and typified thereby, 788. why the preaching of the goſpel is compared to the blowing of a trumpet, and why to a great trumpet, 791. what kind of a proclamation it makes, 792. and what are the qualities of the ſound it gives, 793. the efficacy hereof for gathering ſinners to Chriſt, ibid. both the trumpet of the law and the goſpel ought to be blown by miniſters, 795. great ſkill requiſite to blow them aright, 796. how perſons may know if they have heard the voice of God in the trumpet of the goſpel, ibid.

Truth, her appearance in favours of God againſt man, 114.

Truth, but ſimple and one, but error many, 187. ſeveral caveats offered not to ſwerve from it, ibid. the loſs of the leaſt truth dangerous, 223, 311. all goſpel truth centres in Chriſt, 322. is not to be relinquiſhed, though oppoſed and controverted, 667. cannot be held many times without fighting for it, 668. the preſent truth and the leaſt truth to be adhered to and perſevered in, 669.

Types, Chriſt the ſubſtance of all the Old-teſtament types, 51.

U

UNBELIEF, the malignity of it, 125, 241. twelve ſigns thereof, 234. breaks all the commandments of both tables of the law, 236. the ſinfulneſs of it evinced, in ſix particulars, 241. by its diſhonouring

DATE DUE

GAYLORD

PRINTED IN U.S.A

fBX
8915
E7
v.1
47555